4.9% increase recommended

Governor's proposed budget may mean some belt-tightening during slim fiscal year.

Gov. John Ashcroft's recommended budget for fiscal year 1989 falls drastically short of the University's request and the recommendation of the Coordinating Board for Higher Education. Under Ashcroft's proposal, the University's general operating appropriation would increase 4.9 percent, from $249 million to $262 million. The University requested a 15.6 percent increase, or $288 million. The CBHE, which recommends budgets for all state colleges and universities, called for a 13.9 percent increase, or $284 million.

Ashcroft's recommendations came as part of the state's first-ever $7 billion budget. Nevertheless, state agencies are expecting a lean budget year, as approximately $220 million in state revenues will go toward court-ordered desegregation in Kansas City and St. Louis. The state will spend another $68 million for debt service. Meanwhile, tax receipts have been lower than expected. Fiscal 1989 will begin July 1, 1988.

Regarding specific Mizzou program improvements, the governor suggested $150,000 for veterinary medicine, compared with the University's request and CBHE recommendation of $850,000. Neither Ashcroft nor the coordinating board recommended revenue for such requests as scholarships for minority education; funding for teacher education; improving undergraduate and professional education, including strengthening programs in journalism, law, and arts and science; and improving libraries. The governor also recommended no funding for the operation of new buildings.

While Ashcroft indicated his support for improvements in Food for the 21st Century and molecular biology, two Mizzou eminence programs, he did not earmark funds for them. Instead, any money for these programs would be taken from the general operating budget, which also funds salaries and equipment.

Regarding operating funds for University Hospital, the governor proposed a .9 percent decrease; the University requested a 6 percent increase. Under Ashcroft's proposal, the hospital would be expected to offset the lower appropriation with additional Medicaid revenues.

The University requested $197 million for capital appropriations. The CBHE recommended 30 percent of that request, or $59 million. Ashcroft's proposal of $3.9 million would be confined to maintenance and repairs on the four campuses. He indicated no funds for renovation and code compliance and capital equipment replacement.

The governor's spending plan calls for financing two Mizzou projects with revenue bonds rather than capital appropriations. Proceeds from the bonds would pay 80 percent of construction costs of a renovated and expanded engineering laboratory and classroom, and a veterinary medicine addition. State general revenue would be used to repay the bond debt in future years. The proposal has been questioned in several quarters, as revenue bonds typically are used to finance a revenue-generating operation.

Chancellor Haskell Monroe discussed the proposed budget at a Jan. 15 meeting with faculty and staff. "I do not see our closing the gap of where we are and where we want to be with this budget," he said. Monroe said the lack of funds for the veterinary school, the operation of the new Law School building and for eminence programs is distressing.

"This state cannot afford not to support this campus well. We are the only pre-eminent institution in this state," he said. "It will take decades for any other institution to become what we are today, and by that time we will have advanced to another level."

The house and senate joint budget committee will review the governor's proposed budget before making its recommendation. Ashcroft has final approval on the budget.

Barbecue spices up celebration

More than 1,000 Aggies expected to return for Mizzou's 25th annual Ag Science Week Jan. 31 through Feb. 6.

Pull up a chair and sit down to a feast at the 25th annual Ag Day Barbecue Feb. 3 at the Trowbridge Livestock Center. The noon barbecue is part of Mizzou's Ag Science Week Jan. 31 through Feb. 6, the longest Ag Week celebration in Mizzou's history.

More than 1,000 agriculture alumni and friends are expected to return for the barbecue. The $9 meal includes slow-cooked beef loin barbecue, baked potato, vegetables and dessert. Tickets will be available at the door.

A benefit auction following the barbecue at 1:30 p.m. Feb. 3 will feature agricultural products such as herbicides, fertilizers, jackets and caps. Proceeds will go to the Agriculture Leadership of Tomorrow program.

Along with good food and good fun, participants in Ag Science Week can expect to get good advice about farming alternatives that can boost farm income, says Roger Mitchell, dean of agriculture.

The week will begin with the first business meeting of the Missouri Grain Sorghum Producers Association. The group hopes to gather the latest information on production and marketing practices, and to more effectively promote its products. Corn, farm electrification, soybean and irrigation conferences are among those scheduled during the week.

For details on Ag Science Week activities, see the Semester Calendar in this issue or call 882-4245.

For 25 years, Harold Hedrick, food science and nutrition professor, has been a chef for the Ag Week barbecue.

Brouder named key adviser

Gerald Brouder, vice provost for budget and academic personnel, has been appointed deputy to Chancellor Haskell Monroe effective Feb. 1.

In his new job, Brouder will be responsible for operation of the chancellor's office and will serve as a key adviser on issues. He is the first person to hold the position.

"Dr. Brouder will serve as my principal colleague in this office and will join me in dealing with the many responsibilities of the chancellor's office," Monroe says. "Dr. Brouder is highly regarded by faculty and deans and has first-hand knowledge of the health and medical divisions."

Brouder has worked for the University since 1977, spending the last seven years in administration. He has served as interim nursing dean and interim provost.

Brouder, currently the campus chairman of the University-wide planning council, holds a bachelor's degree from the University of Illinois, a master's from Northern Illinois University and a PhD from the University of Texas-Austin. "I look forward to the opportunity of working closely with the chancellor and playing a greater role in the direction and leadership of the University," he says.

MAGRATH REPORTS ON ACHIEVEMENTS

Copies of President C. Peter Magrath's annual report for 1986-87, "Meeting Today's Challenges Through Education, Research and Public Service," are available from UM University Relations, 828 Lewis Hall.

This supplementary report focuses on the University's research mission. It is part of the annual audited financial reports on all UM units and investment funds. A complete set is available in the general reading room of Ellis Library.

WHAT'S YOUR NET WORTH?

The first of the year is a time for annual health and car check-ups, but too few people consider a financial check-up, says Pat Lieurance, extension family economics and management specialist at Mizzou.

"A family should be a profit-making organization," she says.

If you'd like to figure your net worth, an extension publication titled "Your Valuable Papers" may help. To receive a copy send a $1 check to University of Missouri Extention Publications, 115 S. Fifth St.

HEIN TO RETIRE AFTER 16 YEARS

General Stores will bid farewell to Wilbur Hein, an attendant who has worked for the University for 16 years. Friends are invited to attend his retirement reception from 2 to 4 p.m. Feb. 2 at General Stores, 113A General Services Bldg.

ACCESS WEEK TOPICS SOUGHT

The Access Office for Students with Disabilities is preparing for the 1988 Access Awakening Week April 11 through 15. Activities will be designed to make the campus community aware of issues of importance to persons with disabilities.

If you have ideas about topics or events for that week, call Carma Messerli, student services coordinator, at 882-4696.

Studying UM agenda

The University's long-range plan was at the top of the agenda at the Jan. 21 Faculty Council meeting.

John Bauman, professor of chemistry and council chairman, told council members that President C. Peter Magrath has requested that 10 Mizzou faculty serve on an intercampus subcommitte of the UM long-range planning committee. Eight of the faculty will consider the objectives outlined in the president's agenda for action presented to the Board of Curators Jan. 10 and 11. The other two will study telecommunications and the reallocation of funds in the University system.

Bauman also presented council members with a draft of a letter in response to Magrath's message to the council last week regarding the long-range plan and salaries. The council continued discussion of the letter and the long-range planning subcommittee in a closed session.

In a progress report on assessment, Vice Provost Jeff Chinn said that all assessment plans have been approved. "The program is well under way," he said. "We won't have feedback until the first of May."

Chinn also informed council members that a random sample of 800 Mizzou juniors will participate in general educational assessment. The test, administered by the Educational Testing Service, will be given Feb. 18 and 19.

In other action, council standing committees reported on their agendas for the upcoming semester. Included were:

- general education requirements
- admission requirements
- evaluation procedures for annual faculty salary adjustments
- formation of association of faculty chairmen.

Focus groups suggest changes for personnel

Working from suggestions of employee focus groups, Personnel Services will add a personal touch to its services.

Carol Krause, manager of Patient and Physician Services at University Hospital and Clinics, served as a consultant for the project. She talked to three small groups — employees, those wanting to transfer between departments and applicants — to uncover their experiences with the University's employment process.

"What she found is a perceived lack of personal attention," says Connie Wood, associate director of Personnel Services/Employee Relations. "Applicants think it is difficult to get beyond the front desk."

To change that perception, the department plans to add a personnel associate to meet with and answer questions of first-time and transfer applicants. "We'll have someone there on the front line for immediate access if the applicant wants to talk with someone," Wood says. Personnel Services received almost 20,000 applications for full-time and part-time positions in 1986-87.

Focus groups also reported a perceived lack of priority treatment for staff members seeking transfers between departments. Wood says the department will try to improve communication with those staff. Personnel Services is planning lunchtime seminars on the transfer process.

The department will consider other concerns raised by the focus groups as it works to improve communication with applicants and employees. One new service already is in place. The union eligible/service maintenance vacancy list is available by telephone for the use of union eligible employees with seniority bid rights. The number is 882-7200.

Retirees feted

By Robert S. Daniel

The chancellor's luncheon for retired faculty and staff will be held from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. April 20 at Hearnes Fieldhouse. Our experience in moving this annual event from Memorial Union in 1987 was very favorable. The retiree group had become too large for the Union ballrooms. Hearnes is spacious and provides ample parking nearby. The area we use is at ground level, so there are no stairs or long distances to walk.

The chancellor's advisory committee for retired faculty and staff is planning an attractive program for this year's luncheon. In addition to brief presentations of interest to retirees, we will be entertained with a concert by the Hickman High School international champion choral group directed by Marty Hook. Again Campus Dining Services will provide a delicious luncheon.

Please mark your calendar now for April 20. There will be a social period preceding the luncheon and program. Reservation forms will be mailed the first week in April to retirees living in Boone and surrounding counties. If you live beyond this area and would like to attend, you may request a reservation form by writing to me at 210 McAlester Hall or calling me at 442-7193 or 882-6268.

While many retirees live in central Missouri, the University sends retirement income checks to all 50 states and 19 countries. As of Dec. 31, 1987, University retirees had a total monthly payroll of $1.2 million going to 3,469 retirees.

As tax time approaches, here's a reminder for retired faculty and staff. University retirees who receive pensions, annuities, retirement or deferred income needing to be reported to the state, are required to make individual estimated tax payments to the state of Missouri. As of March 1, 1987, the University, at the request of the state, no longer accommodates requests for the withholding of Missouri state taxes from retirement income. Individuals needing information on making the estimated tax payments may write to the Missouri Department of Revenue, P.O. Box 555, Jefferson City, Mo. 65105.

If you have concerns as a retiree, the retiree advisory committee may be able to assist you or to refer you to a service that can do so. Let us know.

Daniel, a professor emeritus of psychology, is chairman of the retiree advisory committee.

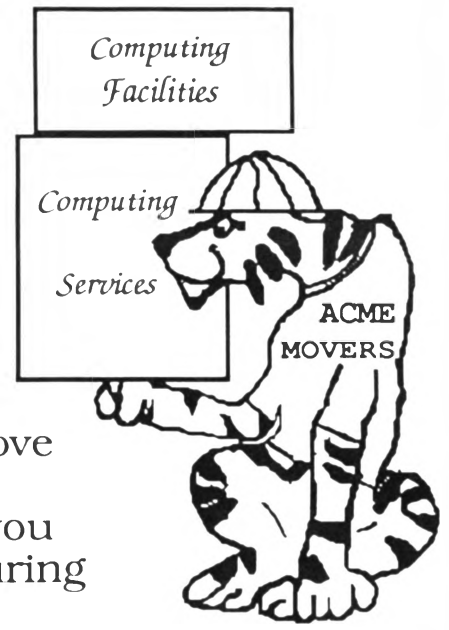
SUN Noon-Midnight

We accept department IDOs, checks or cash.

===> Let's Compute!_

Computing Services and Computing Facilities will be moving into our new home at the Heinkel Building during the month of February.



Things may get hectic during the move and we apologize for any inconvenience you might experience during this time.

The Help Desk phones, 882-5000, will be answered. The 107 Lefevre Hall lab, however, will be closed while it is moved to its new location in the basement of the Heinkel Building. If, for any reason, you are not able to reach the Help Desk by phone, please call the desk in 8 Middlebush, 882-3570, for assistance.

We will keep you informed of further details as they become known.

1839-1989 A Sesquicentennial Plan

Mizzou's master plan is an ongoing process that began in 1980 to study the use of campus land and buildings for optimum efficiency and aesthetic appeal. It is called the Sesquicentennial Plan in honor of the University's 150th anniversary in 1989.

This supplement summarizes the plan's accomplishments, shown on the map inside, and the next steps in the process. Readers' comments are welcome—feel free to write in the margins and return the supplement to the campus planning committee, % Professor Osmund Overby, chairman, 109 Pickard Hall.

A videotape on the Sesquicentennial Plan may be borrowed by calling 882-4098.

"Comments and reactions have helped to shape the plan," says Jack Robinson, consultant to the campus administration who works with the campus planning committee, which includes faculty, staff and students. The committee advises the vice chancellor for Administrative Services on campus planning issues.

In forming the plan, more than 20 public hearings were held for the campus and community in the past three years. They included slide shows and status reports on space needs and specific projects. In addition, progress reports are presented annually in open meetings. "New ideas always are welcome," Robinson says.

He describes the master plan as building on Mizzou's traditional campus to create a unified, efficient environment that is both inviting to students and conducive to teaching, research and support services. It also seeks to strengthen ties of cooperation between the campus and neighboring Columbia.

"Building projects and adequate parking are under constant study and modification," Robinson says. "For a successful total campus, however, they should be developed within a strong, handsome sequence of major open spaces and of major cross-campus pedestrian ways. Mizzou's system of quadrangles, courtyards, malls and playing fields can be linked, improved and extended to help unify the total campus."

The general objectives for the plan (see box) are intended to help test the plan concepts and proposals, and specific projects as they are developed. The objectives, Robinson notes, are consistent with the Board of Curators' 1981 policy statement, which includes as a goal "to maintain and make more efficient and attractive the University's physical plant."

Academic Hall was the focus of the campus in 1875.

THE PLAN BUILDS ON TRADITION TO CREATE AN INVITING CAMPUS.

The objectives have helped to shape projects recently completed and those now in process. "The interesting story is not in any one project, but in the way in which they reinforce each other," Robinson says. With the plan's overall guidance, he says, campus improvements should blend in with their surroundings so well that they will appear to have been there from the start.

Robinson hopes that the sesquicentennial will provide an impetus for improving the plan and for completing projects. "The anniversary is quickly approaching, but it is also far enough away to permit us to be a bit visionary. Nevertheless, all the suggestions are intended to be consistent with University assumptions for limited funding, a limited construction program, a stable population and a permanent campus of great importance."

A Sesquicentennial Plan drawing appears on the next two pages.

University of Missouri 150 1839 - 1989

PLANNING PRINCIPLES

- PRIDE OF THE STATE: visual and functionally expressive of the importance of this campus to the state of Missouri
- RECRUITMENT-RETENTION AID: environmental qualities which help attract and hold faculty, staff and students
- STRONG "SENSE OF PLACE": distinctive and memorable to entering freshmen and visiting scholars alike
- UNIFIED TOTAL CAMPUS: the totality of the campus revealed and clarified to all observers, dominating component parts
- DIVERSITY WITHIN THE UNITY: clarifying and expressing the variety of activities, of people, of inheritance from the past
- PEDESTRIAN DOMINANCE: visual and functional pedestrian dominance over vehicles within the campus
- VEHICLES RECOGNIZED: the needs of an automobile-oriented society accommodated as gracefully as possible without being permitted to dominate pedestrians within the campus
- FUNCTIONAL ADEQUACY: each activity of the campus with facilities appropriate for its purposes; not constrained, not lavish, but adequate
- PROXIMITIES ENHANCED: activities located close to each other whenever required or potentially beneficial
- EXPANSION OR RELOCATION PROVIDED: clear identification of at least one logical way for expansion (or relocation) of an activity, should such a change be desirable
- RESPONSIVE TO CLIMATE: careful design of building and of landscape so as to serve as models for others in similar climates
- RESPECT FOR INHERITANCE: accenting and continuing the topographic and architectural history of the best parts of the campus
- RESPECT FOR NEIGHBORS: avoiding adverse impacts and cooperating wherever possible to achieve civic objectives

Comments and questions should be sent to the campus planning committee, 109 Pickard Hall. Revised edition scheduled for January 1989.

The Law School building, under construction south of Tate Hall, is expected to be ready for occupancy in July.

A master plan is an overall guide. It does not describe specific projects or design details, but rather establishes the larger context for them. Since the Sesquicentennial Plan focuses on campuswide issues, specific projects are dealt with separately.

At any one time, more than 700 campus improvement projects are in process. The funding for these projects comes from many public and private sources, often in complex combinations. The master plan helps ensure the value of the expenditures and the success and long life of the projects.

Much improvement has come to the campus in the past few years, with much more under way. Great changes have come to the campus and to the city of Columbia in the past 30 years, and more change is likely in the coming decades. As the city grows and changes on all sides of the campus, Mizzou must plan carefully for the best use of every square foot of its land, because increased land holdings are not expected.

Independent studies by outside consultants have identified space needs for many parts of the campus. Program planning for colleges, schools and services helps develop the best match between programs, people and facilities. As with campus land, campus buildings are under continuing study for optimum efficiency and attractiveness.

The plan seeks to identify the campus's enduring features of design, which are expected to remain unchanged as Mizzou continues with the constant adjustments to facilities that are characteristic of a large university. The recommendations result from an effort to secure maximum campuswide improvements as simply and quickly as possible, in a manner consistent with University assumptions for limited funding, a limited construction program, a stable population and a permanent campus of great importance. Most complex issues are located in the center of campus, which also offers the greatest opportunities for improvement. Therefore, it has been the focus of attention so far. Other areas will be studied more fully as the planning process continues.

NEXT STEPS

1. Your comments on this draft Sesquicentennial Plan are requested. Please mark up this supplement and send to the campus planning committee, c/ Professor Osmund Overby, chairman, 109 Pickard Hall.
2. Watch for the schedule of new slide-show open hearings for the University and the community in March. The hearings will include a progress report on planning and status reports on specific projects.
3. The master plan video may be borrowed for meetings by calling 882-4098.
4. This publication is expected to be updated each year; your comments on how to make it more effective are welcome.

See questionnaire published elsewhere in this issue.

CAMPUS PLANNING COMMITTEE

The campus planning committee advises the vice chancellor for Administrative Services on the facility needs of the campus. Members for 1987-88 are:

Chairman:

Osmund Overby, professor of art history and archaeology

Faculty:

Calvin Ahlbrandt, professor of mathematics
Bill Bondeson, professor of philosophy
Howard Marshall, associate professor of art history and archaeology and director of the Missouri Cultural Heritage Center
Laurie Mills, assistant professor of veterinary medicine and surgery
Dana Weaver, assistant professor of surgery

Staff:

Rosemary Lewis, administrative associate I in agriculture
Kay Stone, administrative assistant in Campus Facilities
Dick Turner, police sergeant with University Police

Students:

Timothy Bahr, Mike Bloss and Jim Givens

Ex officio:

Roger Fisher, director of Residential Life
Carma Messerli, coordinator of the Access Office

CAPITAL REVIEW GROUP

The capital review group reviews campus planning and project issues for recommendation to the chancellor. Members are:

Chairwoman:

Lois DeFleur, provost

Members:

Roger Gafke, vice chancellor for Development, University and Alumni Relations
Kee Groshong, interim vice chancellor for Administrative Services
Norman Moore, vice chancellor for Student, Personnel and Auxiliary Services
Robert Smith, executive director of University Hospital and Clinics
Alan Warden, assistant vice chancellor for Administrative Services (Campus Facilities)

ADULT DAY CARE RECEIVES GIFT

A $10,000 pledge brings plans for mid-Missouri's first licensed adult day-care center a step closer to completion.

The pledge comes from the Kermack-Parker trust fund set up by a group of Columbians to support care for elderly women.

Lois Long, assistant professor of health related professions and future director of the Eldercare facility, says contributions still are needed. The center will provide day care for frail elderly men and women.

For more information contact Long at 882-7070.

RESEARCH OFFICE REORGANIZED

The Office of Research has published a directory listing the location and telephone numbers of research office staff. It also provides information needed to choose the person to best assist you.

The directory was published because a recent reorganization caused some office changes, with staff being located in Lewis and Jesse halls.

During this reorganizational period the research office invites your comments. Call John P. McCormick, associate graduate dean for research, at 882-9500.

PLANNING FOR A GREAT WEEKEND

Parents' Weekend 1988 is scheduled for Nov. 4 to 6 when the Tigers will take on Colorado.

If you plan to schedule special events during Parents' Weekend, the Office for Student Development would like to know. With questions or suggestions about the weekend call Allyson M. Tanouye, Parents' Weekend intern, at 882-3621.

CHECKING FOR FIRE SAFETY

Within the next four months, campus buildings will be inspected to make sure they meet University life and fire safety code requirements.

The inspections, conducted by the Department of Environmental Health and Safety, have started on the white campus, says Director Jim Beckett. Buildings inspected so far have met requirements.

Beckett says inspectors will try to avoid disruption of each building's normal operation.

Q&A

Q. I received a letter at my office from Prudential Insurance Co. Did the University sell its mailing list to Prudential? I get enough junk mail at home and certainly do not want to get it at work, too.

A. In June 1987, the University began its new information release policy. That policy expressly states "in no case will computerized listings of employee information be provided to individuals or organizations for the purpose of soliciting business or promoting commerical services." According to Connie Wood, associate director of Personnel Services/Employee Relations, that policy has not changed and the mailing list has not been sold for such purposes.

However, state law requires that University employees' names, home addresses and salaries be published biannually in the Official Manual of the State of Missouri. Businesses also may purchase a campus telephone book to get employees' campus or home addresses.

The information release policy grants an employee the right to restrict the release of his or her home mailing address and home telephone number for any purpose other than disclosure by law. Employees can keep their home address and telephone number out of the campus phone book by checking the appropriate box on the Change of Address Form and the Personal Data Form.

Send your questions about campus matters to Mizzou Weekly, 1100 University Place. You must include your name and phone number so we can reach you, if necessary. All questions remain anonymous. Mizzou Weekly will not answer unsigned questions.

Education gets glowing accreditation

The College of Education received the highest possible rating during its recent reaccreditation evaluation.

The National Council for the Accreditation of Teacher Education (NCATE) unconditionally renewed all degree programs through September 1994. Unconditional reaccreditation signifies the college met all 476 NCATE standards.

"The faculty, staff and previous dean deserve a great deal of credit for having met the NCATE standards," says education Dean W.R. Miller. "The challenge we now face is to meet the even higher standards the council has set in spite of our marginal resources. We must be even better in 1994."

An NCATE accreditation team visited the college in March. The final report cited the programs' attention to multicultural education as one of its primary strengths. The college was commended for clarity in the structuring of its departments, a good working relationship with local school districts and the state education agency, and a well-planned system for assessing faculty productivity.

The college also received unconditional approval as a teacher education program from the Missouri Board of Education.

FOR THE RECORD

LOGO CONTEST: Design the lucky 1988-89 Recreation and Intramurals logo and receive $50. Contest rules and suggestions are available in 106 Rothwell Gymnasium or call Sandy Falloon at 882-2066.

RESOURCE ASSISTANT PROGRAM: Faculty are urged to alert students to apply for resource assistant positions through the Student Conservation Association.

Participants, who must be 18 years old or older and out of high school, volunteer their services to help manage and conserve the nation's parks, public lands and natural resources. There are no tuition costs. In lieu of salary, participants receive a travel grant, free housing, a stipend for food and basic living expenses, and a uniform allowance. The selection process for summer positions begins March 1. To apply, write The Student Conservation Association Inc., P.O. Box 550C, Charlestown, N.H. 03603, or call (603) 826-5206.

Sesquicentennial Plan Questionnaire

Campus planning is an ongoing process that benefits from broad participation. Campus planning committee members have a regular opportunity to meet with planners and administrators to review the plan. It would be a great help to them in their effort to represent the interests of the University community if you would complete this questionnaire after you have had the opportunity to look over the draft sesquicentennial plan included in this issue. Public hearings on the plan will be held March 28 and 29. Watch for details in Mizzou Weekly.

1. You are: ☐ faculty, ☐ staff, ☐ student, ☐ other

2. In general, do you:
   ☐ favor the plan ☐ oppose the plan
   ☐ need more information

Please rate the following items as envisioned in the draft plan on a scale of one to five where five is best.

3. The overall consistency of the plan with prior goals and aesthetics. 1 2 3 4 5

4. The landscape design and provision for open space. 1 2 3 4 5

5. The provisions for recreational facilities. 1 2 3 4 5

6. Pedestrian needs and the design of walkways. 1 2 3 4 5

7. Vehicular access, remembering the goal of preserving the center as a pedestrian campus. 1 2 3 4 5

8. Parking. 1 2 3 4 5

Your specific suggestions for improvements in the above:

What do you like best about the draft plan?

What do you feel most needs further attention?

How could we improve general participation in the planning process?
