The summer has been a pleasant one here in Columbia, and our register is proof that the Alumni from all parts of the country have spent a few hours here. One of the pleasantest duties of our office is trying to answer their questions about you. Yes, that's right. They continue to ask the whereabouts of fellow classmates, and our job of keeping them informed, of course, depends on you. So do tell us any news of yourself.

I experienced a heart throbbing sensation this summer at the graduation exercises; it was one of those things that seem routine and yet was really big.

This feeling came to me during the business of each graduate walking across the stage to receive his degree personally. Naturally to each graduate his call is of great importance, but when you have no personal interest, you marvel more at the graduating class as a group.

However, when Giles Derwood Carnes of Neosho, Mo., was called forward to receive his diploma, you realized that here was an individual worthy of much more than a diploma. As he walked confidently across the stage, you could sense that each member of the audience felt proud for him. He out of all other graduates received the silent best wishes from each of the audience.

Probably the proudest of any in the room was his seeing eye dog, who has been his constant companion.

How do you like the new Alumnus? Mary Paxton Keeley, our new managing editor, brings wide journalistic experience to our office. We never forget, however, that the Alumnus is yours. Your criticism, even more than your compliments, is always welcome.

*Powell B. McHaney Tells Alums How To Serve
Their University*

Some one has said that there are three basic ways in which an active, interested and organized alumni can be of tremendous value to their Alma Mater. They can help immeasurably to obtain for the university, "Friends, Freshmen, and Funds."

This is true of Missouri University. It is important to the welfare of Missouri University that it enjoy the respect of the citizens of this state; that it possess "prestige" as a fine, progressive institution of higher learning.

Informed and interested alumni located in every community in the state who know the objectives of the university, who have a knowledge of its problems, who are aware of important events affecting the academic and social environment on the campus can exert a positive and healthy influence in interpreting the university and news about it within their own communities. Such activity creates public understanding essential to favorable public relations. Those who understand are not quick to condemn when some incident unfavorable to the good name of the university is reported (and these occur inevitably on all campuses). With understanding, such an incident assumes proper perspective. Equally important, when the university is engaged in an effort to increase the measure of its service, to advance the cause of education, to improve its performance, public understanding makes easier the accomplishment of its objective.

To help create public understanding is, therefore, a concrete and invaluable contribution that the individual alumnus and the alumni association can make to Missouri University. Think how many friends could be made throughout the state if in every county there flourished an active and interested Missouri University Alumni Club!

These groups would provide valuable sounding boards, unofficial advisory committees, to which university officials could turn for discussion and lay consideration of problems affecting the institution. By the same token, these groups would make available an avenue of direct communication of public opinion to the academics which they undoubtedly would warmly welcome if proffered constructively and unselfishly.

Student enrollment is another important field for activity by alumni groups. Properly motivated by a knowl-

THE PRESIDENT ENDORSES

"It requires the combined efforts of many people to open and secure the required support for a large university. When a university does its job well, there still remains the important task of securing from the citizens of the state the support necessary for it to furnish staff and facilities comparable to those of the other outstanding universities of the nation. If we all realize that the primary requisite for securing and keeping the people's support is that a good job done and secondly, we let the people know what we are doing.

"The alumni of the institution play a very important role here. Scattered over the state and the nation, they keep in touch with the institution and keep others informed about its program. Since the alumni are organized as a separate, independent organization, they can do many things that the institution cannot accomplish. But they will work effectively only when they are kept fully informed about the University. The recent reorganization in the Alumni Association has been carried out in order that the active, interested alumni may receive more current information about the University's program and its needs than has been possible in the past."

Association's Mission

Before we begin this discussion of our alumni organization, its purpose and objectives, it might be well to look at the general alumni organization of plans throughout the country.

This business of alumni relations is a very young subsidy of higher education. Nineteen twenty-two was the first year a full time position was created for alumni relations, and that was at the University of Michigan. Reference is made now to several books which have been printed since, and all express this general philosophy existing at that time.

For the most part, administrators looked upon alumni as necessary evils, who were never present except to raise Cain about something or to cause trouble over university affairs. This feeling on behalf of the administrators was well founded, for the alumni were poorly informed groups. They knew very little about the real problems of school administration and therefore were often "out of bounds." They were disorganized mobs each with an individual complaint and not enough knowledge of pertinent facts to arrive at a constructive conclusion.

About 1930, the nation-wide picture begins to change, and you can recognize the private institutions' attempts to embrace their alumni under a new philosophy, one which boils down to this: an educated group of alumni, well-informed on university affairs, could be a very constructive aid to the administration. Nothing can erase that feeling of pride and allegiance from the hearts of the graduates, so let's reorganize their allegiance and solicit their aid in problems concerning the welfare of the university. For the most part, small, private institutions are responsible for the next expansion. State universities just prior to 1940 began to move more and more toward this philosophy, and now evidence of alumni participation in collegiate life is distributed throughout the continent by membership in the American Alumni Council which can boast of member schools in every state in the Union and three provinces of Canada.

Types of Financial Subsidy

In general there are three types of organizations:

(1) Those who solicit no membership dues, and the total expense of the organization is financed by the institution.

(2) Those who solicit dues, upon which the total financial program of the association is based.

(3) Those who solicit dues and also receive varying amounts of financial assistance from the institution.

Method number one is very much in the minority. It is used primarily by small private schools who are willing to invest in such a program in hopes that they will receive substantial gifts. It is easy to see what a terrific expense such a program would be in an institution where the alumni body numbered even a conservative 30,000. Expensive, of course, if your objective is a well-informed group, for then you need to correspond regularly with these alumni.

Method number two has been predominant in the past ten or twenty years. In order however, to give the alumni a good program the association had to be constantly "contribution happy." The result usually was that many alumni became ill at ease with the institution continually seeking financial support.

Method number three is a relatively new arrangement on the alumni horizon. Many colleges and most state institutions now either have changed or are changing to this type of organization, which seems to be more free of pitfalls and most conducive to happy relations between both the alumni body and the institution.

Type of Organization

With few exceptions each alumni association is a separate organization. Many of them are incorporated and thus able to receive and expend gifts, property, etc., separate and apart from the institution. The affairs of these organizations are handled by boards of directors and officers elected or appointed by various methods as prescribed by their individual constitution or bylaws.

Objectives of Alumni Organizations

Detailed objectives of various associations are, of course, subject to many differences, but in general here are programs which practically every association sponsors:

(a) A monthly magazine sent to all subscribers or active members so that the alumnus may keep in touch with his fellow classmates, job opportunities, fellow alumni accomplishments, campus activities and the institution's accomplishments.

(b) A fund program to which any alumnus may contribute. These programs vary from a few hundred dollars to Harvard's one million.

(c) A membership program which continually tries to bring advantages of the association to more individuals.

(d) A public relations program which may interpret the institution's contributions to the field of education at all levels and to the communities it serves.

Aim of the Association

The aim of the University of Missouri Alumni Association is to promote and further education in the State of Missouri by aiding, extending and calling to public attention the work of the University of Missouri in all of its departments, and by supporting, maintaining and directing to educational ends the alumni activities of alumni and former students of the university.

Varied Interests

Every alumnus wants his university to rank high in all fields. Since there are varied interests among alumni and since they usually show a particular interest in only one or two areas, programs of varied interests must be available for participation. It is the goal of your association to supply programs of interest to each alumnus regardless of age, geographic location, interests, and financial status.

The association plans to meet this challenge by offering such programs for participation as athletics, alumni fund, public relations and membership. Through such areas, young and old alike may find their particular area, and engulfing the total program will be the constant contact with the university and other areas of alumni interest in various clubs as well as personal contact with other alumni. This contact will be maintained through such mediums as "The Missouri Alumnus" which will be circulated by the organization.

Alumni Clubs

The presence of so many alumni clubs throughout the country and the suggestions of these members have been instrumental in the association's attempt to construct a more active, cohesive alumni body. A glance at the map will show the distribution of alumni clubs throughout the nation. However, the number of letters coming into the Alumni office indicates much more interest than the map shows. Meeting with these clubs constitutes some of the most pleasant moments enjoyed by the secretary. It is indeed a heartwarming experience to meet these clubs, some attendants having gone to considerable effort to reach the meeting place.

The statewide organization could easily encompass every county in Missouri. There are about 94 paper organizations out of the 114 counties. About 10 of these are active, growing clubs. Our goal is to activate all of these counties and to be able to supply them with programs and activities of their choosing.

The Athletic Interest

So many of our alumni are interested in Missouri's athletic program, and it so well depicts the nature of good, sound alumni support that it is worthy of discussion. A feature article on Missouri's athletic program was laid out in detail in the last May issue of the "Alumnus" so there is no need for detail here. Your association services the athletic interest in many ways. Films furnished by the athletic staff are used in club meetings, staff members themselves attend various alumni meetings and the alumni body is represented in the planning of the program by the University Athletic Committee of which two members are alumni.

Alumni Advisory Committee

The Alumni Advisory Committee is a general committee which recommends to the athletic committee many suggestions of importance. In this day of highly commercialized athletics, all of us are indebted to our athletic administrators on the campus for a well-conceived educational athletic program. As proof of the level of our program—look at the record. Not at the won and lost column alone, but at the number of athletes who graduate in respectable fields, their progress over the years, the sane method of granting scholarships by the university and other really important areas. You can truly be proud of this area of alumni interest.

Need for Reorganization

Throughout the years the University of Missouri Alumni Association has failed to keep pace with other alumni groups. Ohio State, Kansas, Michigan, Illinois, Nebraska, Oklahoma and others have sound progressive organizations. Their alumni are different? Not at all—their organization is different. They have presented to their members the type of objectives wanted. We have been an isolated individualistic organization in comparison with these other groups. From start to finish, we had no organizational plans that would afford any accomplishment of objectives through subsequent "chain of commands." All other institutions have utilized a membership organization where an alumnus voluntarily pays annual dues of from three to six dollars per year, for which he receives various benefits.

Problem of Organization

By having no membership dues, our problem in the general association office has been this. We have been unable to locate individual alumni who might be interested in our program. A person to person basis with 60,000 people is a very cumbersome attack and inefficient when statistics prove only about 1/5 of the overall groups is consistently able to maintain an interest. We have wasted time, expense, and effort in soliciting support of our program.

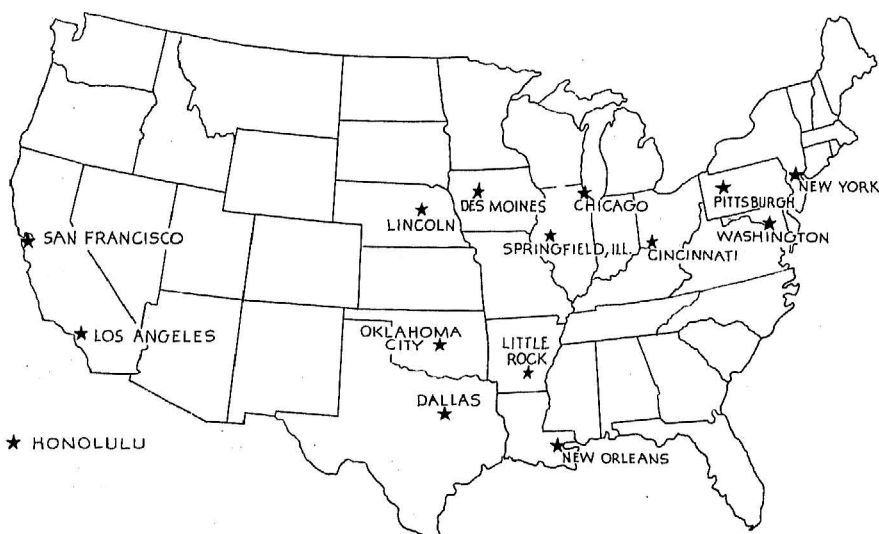

Other schools have progressed while we have struggled to maintain contact by means of cumbersome inefficient techniques. The competition of their progress and contribution to their institution far overshadows what we have been able to meet.

Alumni Committee Met

To cope with this problem, a committee of interested alumni met in Columbia last spring for two full days. Detailed discussions on other associations and organizations were held, and a suggested program was submitted to the Board of Directors. The board endorsed the recommendation and proceeded to effect such an organization that would create greater possibilities of association achievements. Through this program our association can meet the challenges and competition of

Diemer Appointed Chief

Walter Diemer '11, was appointed head of the largest domestic water supply system in the world when he was named general manager and chief engineer of the Metropolitan Water District of Southern California.

The water district was formed in 1928 to bring water from the Colorado River to southern California. It includes 457 miles of distribution lines and provides water for four million persons in 44 incorporated cities.

Neel Heads Art Dept.

Francis Lee Neel '42, who paid a call at our office, is one of the first members of the Alumni Association to join under the new plan. He returns to Missouri several times a year, and this August won a major award in the Art Department of the Missouri State Fair.

Neel is acting head of the Eastern Carolina College, Greenville, N. C., where he has taught for five years.

Stan Plays Lead "South Pacific"

Stan Grover, known on the University campus as Stanley Nienstedt, has been chosen for a leading role in the touring company of "South Pacific" which stars Janet Blair. He will play the romantic juvenile lead, Lt. Cable.

A 1949 graduate of the University, where he majored in music, he played leads in Missouri Workshop productions of "Green Grow the Lilacs" and "Pursuit of Happiness."

Since graduation, he was winner of an Arthur Godfrey show and sang in the New York production of "Seventeen."

Pageant Features Connell on TV

John Connell, B.J. '50 was featured in the August Pageant Magazine in an article "How To Get a Job on TV." He was shown in a series of pictures as he applied for and was tested for the male lead in "The Web."

Secretary Sawyer Decorates Kessler

Daniel W. Kessler '08, recently received the silver medal for "service of unusual value to the Department of Commerce." It was presented to him by Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer in a special ceremony at the Department of Commerce auditorium.

Before joining the staff of the National Bureau of Standards, he worked for two years for the United States Weather Bureau. He is now chief of the building stone section of the NBS mineral products division.

As an authority in his field he has written a number of papers on the physical properties of stone, and he has devised original test procedures for stone and invented various machines for testing stone and holds a patent for hardening and coloring concrete floors.

His award was based on his achievement as a nationally known expert in the field of natural stones and the ingenuity of his research.

He is called on by many departments of the government as a consultant on such problems as the renovation of the White House, the preservation of the marble in the Folger Library, and the restoration of the Campanile Towers at the University of California.

The American Battle Monuments Commission, the Federal Trade Commission the Munitions Board, and many others interested in stones and abrasives rely on Mr. Kessler.

Portrait Presented To YMCA House

Russell Wiggfield and Marvin Samberger with picture of G. E. Huggins at YMCA house

A picture of G. E. Huggins was placed in the YMCA-YWCA House, 720 Missouri, this summer, the gift of his widow, at the time the house was named for him.

Huggins, a University graduate of the class of 1898 and a Phi Beta Kappa, was responsible for obtaining the Y. house on the University campus. He was a lifelong member of the YMCA and was active in Y work in New York City for many years.

Mr. Huggins was born in Bellville, Ill. in 1887. After he was graduated from the University he set out for Harvard to study philosophy under Prof. Yerkes.

After four years at Harvard, he went into business in New York, and business to him was such a challenge that his advice to young men was always, "Get a job which you are glad to meet every morning."

The Institute of Textile Technology in Virginia and a program of Public Relations for the Industry were organized by him.

He advanced in the textile industry until he became president of Catlin-Farish in 1930; president of Manufacturers Commercial Company; and president of Martel Mills, Inc. of South Carolina. He was a member of the American Economic Mission to China and Japan in 1935.

Huggins never tired of recalling his campus life here, and he took pleasure in telling of student pranks.

His interest in the West started when he taught school in Idaho and had to ride an outlaw horse, and this interest later led to his buying a sheep ranch in Montana, which he built up to 144,840 acres.

Of him Harry Emerson Fosdick says, "This man kept his faith, he loved the fight of life; he looked for hard things to do and did them well. He was no conscript; he was a volunteer. He believed in life and lived it to the full."

Gentry Scholarship Awarded

This year for the first time the Sara Gentry Elston Scholarship was divided between two junior women, Barbara Jean Bertrand, St. Louis, and Patricia Ann Redhage, Union. The committee was unable to determine that one co-ed had a better record than the other. The scholarship, which is financed by the Association of Women Students, is awarded on the basis of scholarship, service, and high moral character. It is named after the second woman to be graduated by the University.

German Students Here

The University has accepted the enrollment of five German students who are being sent here to study agricultural journalism. They have been selected by the State Department and arrive in Columbia this month.

These students are sent over to aid the German government in the establishment of an agricultural information bureau.

When this bureau was organized, it was found there were no journalists trained especially for agricultural journalism.

Halls Christened For Governors

The names of the first fifteen governors of Missouri are to be used in naming the floors of the men's residence halls.

They will be lettered over the doors of the entrance to each floor, and a short biographical sketch of each governor is to be placed on the bulletin board of that floor.

The names follow—Defoe: 1st floor, McNair House; 2nd floor, Bates House; 3rd floor, Miller House.

Graham Hall, ground floor, Dunklin House; 1st floor, Reynolds House; 2nd floor, Edwards House; 3rd floor, King House.

Cramer Hall: ground floor, Price House; 1st floor, Polk House; 2nd floor, Stewart House; 3rd floor, Jackson House.

Stafford Hall: ground floor, Fletcher House; 1st floor, McClurg House; 2nd floor, Brown House; 3rd floor, Woodson House.

Student Leaders Trained by Dean

Dr. Jack Matthews, dean of students, worked out a new plan this summer for training student leaders to guide and counsel freshmen and other new students.

After selecting and screening 120 campus leaders, Dean Matthews brought them back to the campus for training six days before New Student Week, Sept. 11-15. These student counselors aid in orientation during this week, which was inaugurated last year and was such a success that it was worked out more fully this fall.

The new students are divided into groups of about 15 according to the college or school they are entering. A student leader from each college is in charge.

Union Previewed

The October issue of the ALUMNUS will feature the Student Union and its informal opening during freshman week. The formal opening will take place at Homecoming, Nov. 22.

Even those who have watched the building go up are amazed at its beauty and spaciousness. When they enter the Memorial Hall, they pause and catch their breath, and as they enter the great lounge, with its sweeping lines and skillfully blended colors, they gasp in admiration.

The soda fountain with its cozy booths and ample dancing floor space is the long awaited gathering place for dating, and its terrace with the gay umbrellas and lawn chairs invites the daters.

In the basement is the enormous cafeteria and its kitchen, equipped as is the most modern hotel.

That's just a glimpse at the first floor. We'll cover the rest in our next issue.

Ground Clearing for New Med School

The four year medical school, which now has become an established fact on paper is in its preliminary stage. A site has been selected by a university committee. The ground on the north side of the Stadium Road between the men's residence halls and Crowder Hall has been chosen. This has been used for temporary barracks during the rush of veterans. This ground is being cleared now.

The architect's plans have to be completed and bids let and then the ground can be broken.

The factors that influenced selection of the site was the proximity to the men's residence halls and to other facilities, the parking space available and other considerations.

The state has waited even longer for its four year medical school than the University has waited for its Union.

OUR STOREHOUSE OF MISSOURI PLACE NAMES by Robert L. Ramsay, 160 pp. University of Missouri, 1952.

It is not often that a scholarly publication is entertaining, much less amusing. Indeed to the true scholar, anything scholarly that is sprightly is suspect. Graduate students who dare insert a bit of lightness into the gloomy reaches of their theses are usually frowned upon by their faculty committee. But Dr. Ramsay, professor emeritus of English, is so seasoned a scholar that he gets away with being highly entertaining as well as funny in his new book.

This place name study is so amusing that every Missourian ought to enjoy it. Yet it is based on the most impressive scholarship, as it took 18 years to collect the material, and 18 Master's theses in the University library have contributed to it.

If no other section of the book is read, the one on Humorous Names should be read and enjoyed. The place names of Hardscrabble Licksillet, Bragadosio, Smackout, Pulltight, Buzzard's Roost, as well as Who'd a Thought-it, as a little place in Pemiscot County is ironically known, are accounted for as the dubbing of pioneer pranksters.

The nicknames for some of our schools, says Dr. Ramsay, sound as if they had been conferred by Tom Sawyer or Huckleberry Finn: Buzzard's Glory, Devil's Hall, Hoop Pole College, Heel-string School, and Crackerneck School. Many of the names in the lead mining district here, says Dr. Ramsay, sound as if the Californians had brought their picturesque nomenclature from Missouri. He cites Skin-town, Whisky Diggins, Pucky Huddle. "Life must have been fast and furious in those days in Missouri to judge by their place names, even though they mined lead instead of gold." He bemoans the fact that no Bret Harte rose among us to celebrate the romance of our early places.

The place name study would be a monument to the scholarship of any man, but Dr. Ramsay has another work to his credit equally monumental. The Mark Twain Lexicon, was under his direction, and it took nearly as many graduate students and as much time to complete it as the place name study.

Dr. Ramsay has done a real service to our state in writing this book and the University of Missouri has made its contribution in publishing it.

Callahan Forecasts

It's that time of year again. Over the nation, the athletic pulse beat of the old grad quickens this month as September boots the bouncing football across the sports pages.

Touchdowns . . . first downs . . . upsets . . . up-rights . . . booming punts and long passes . . . end runs and line bucks. . . They're all part of the autumn madness which annually coaxes the faithful and fervent alumni back to the campus.

Typically, Missouri's sports-minded "alum" has a pig-skin-hued outlook 'bout now—no doubt wondering what's the football situation at Columbia gonna be this year. He's hankering for a come-back in Tigerland, even though a quick look at the schedule is enough to give him cold chills.

Well, now, what is the football outlook, podnuh, he wonders? Anything worth watching down there this season? Those Tigers gonna be able to sneak up on some of the stronger teams? Been reading about powerhouses at Oklahoma, Maryland, Kansas and California—sounds like Coach Don Faurot's club is moving in awful fast company!

SPORTS

Easy now, let's take those questions one at a time. Just pull up a chair, and we'll try to tell you about the Tigers' grid prospects.

The overall forecast is for an improved Mizzou football team. The dopesters figure that Faurot's 15th production of the Gold and Black should feature a stronger backfield—one that's definitely better fixed for size, speed and experience. There's hope, too, that an abundance of sophomores—groomed in "B"-team or varsity competition last year—will contend hotly for positions. . . . A healthy situation, indeed.

More dubious is the defensive outlook, for it appears the Missourians may lack size in both the line and secondary. Last year, team defense simply was not the club's trademark—and over the ten-game schedule opponents rammed 292 points—or an average of five touchdowns per game—down the Tigers' throat.

Essentially the same personnel, minus the graduates, must staff the defensive ramparts again this year. They'll be more seasoned, naturally, but the holdover linemen as a group are not rugged, agile defenders . . . and practically the whole defensive secondary must be remodeled.

Four additions to the squad are expected to give the Bengals a substantial lift. Two are transfers—fullback Bill Rowekamp and center Vic Stefanides—while the other two graders—halfback Nick Carras and end Don Hanners—are rejoining M.U. ranks after service in the Army.

Rowekamp, a swift 190-pound senior, formerly attended West Point where he lettered as a defensive end. Stefanides played freshman football at Purdue.

Presence of Rowekamp and Carras, both sturdy 190-pounders, is a boon to backfield hopes. Rowekamp impressed tremendously in his switch to the key fullbacking post last spring, while Carras—a three-year letterman—neatly fills the void at left halfback created by the graduation of Junior Wren, all-conference workhorse.

At quarterback, the Tigers have a pair of talented lads in Jim Hook and Tony Scardino, sophomore passing ace, plus a stout No. 3 field boss in Vic Eaton, hefty sophomore. The latter could figure in a move to right halfback. This trio has the stuff to direct the attack off either the Split T or Spread formations. Hook possibly has more overall versatility, while Scardino—off his spectacular passing performance against Oklahoma last year—could be a key figure in Mizzou's attack.

The right-half scrap may involve Bill Fessler—a two-year veteran—and sophomores Eaton, Jack Fox and Guy Rose. Berths in the defensive backfield are wide open—except for Bob Schoonmaker's lien on one of the halfback posts, or the safety spot—depending on where the coaches decided to use his tackling skill.

In the line, sophomores may have to take up much of the slack—which would indicate that Tiger coaches will be working with green material to some extent. . . . But players such as end Jim Jennings, tackles Charlie Bull and Terry Roberts and guard Jim Martin are comparative newcomers—who must show the way.

Lettered linemen are available at all positions except center. Here, Lloyd Brown—a junior—and Stefanides shape up as likely replacements for the departed Bill Fuchs and Roger Kinson, who jointly handled the offensive-defensive burden for two years.

Twenty-two lettermen were included in the group of 70 candidates who reported to Coach Faurot and his staff on Sept. 1.

Coach Don Faurot announced the changeover in assignments as September drills began. Simmons, who previously had been freshman football coach, will continue as Missouri's chief scout.

In a compensating move, Chauncey Simpson—backfield coach—has been named freshman football coach, Faurot said. Both Simpson and Simmons came to Missouri in 1935 with the incoming Faurot regime, and Simpson was interim head coach of the Tigers from 1943-45 while Faurot was in the Navy.

Clay Cooper, former halfback and three-sport athlete at Missouri, now fills Simpson's post as backfield coach. Cooper joined the staff in 1947.

Handling the linemen will be Coaches Huston Betty and Harry Smith. Betty was first hired at Missouri in 1940, spent the next five years in service, and rejoined the staff in 1946. Smith came to Columbia in 1941.

ATHLETIC SCHOLARSHIP TO FIVE LETTERMEN

Five University football players have been awarded Walter Robinson memorial scholarships for the coming year.

The awards, based on scholarship, citizenship and football ability, are the top athletic scholarships offered at the university and are in keeping with Big Seven Conference limits on financial aid to athletes.

The scholarships were approved by the Board of Curators for senior Donald Rutter, Shelbina; junior Bob Schoonmaker, Lebanon; and sophomores Vic Eaton, St. Joseph, Herman P. Ekern, Mexico, and James Jennings, Crystal City.

The grants, offered for the first time this year, were set up from a fund bequeathed to the University by the late widow of Walter Robinson of Marshall, an avid football fan, who died several years ago.

The bequest amounted to approximately $20,000 and will be used for at least a five-year period for football scholarships.

Recipients will receive all tuition and fees, their required text books, meals, and a room at dormitory prices.

GRANTLAND RICE

PRAISES MU

Grantland Rice, the Dean of sports writers in September LOOK says, "Don gave football the split T, but his program is more important. And remember, Missouri recruits its boys from within the state, a sane practise." Then he outlines his plan and recommends, "Faurot's plan should be adopted by many over liberal powerhouses. It could be adopted by Yale and Harvard, which aren't liberal enough. The main thing to remember is this: College football must return to the idea that fair play and hard play are more important than the final score."

Pippin Accepts Olympic Trophy for Team

When the United States basketball team won the Olympic title at Helsinki last month, a former University of Missouri cage standout accepted the trophy on behalf of his all-victorious teammates.

DAN PIPPIN

Dan Pippin, a three-year Tiger letterman on the court, was the player to whom the trophy presentation was made. A native of Waynesville, Mo., Pippin captained the U. S. Olympians—and was consistently outstanding in the championship games.

Until last season, Bill Stauffer set a new career scoring record at Mizzou, Pippin had held the old mark of 802 points. He played for Coach George Edwards' 1944 Tiger team, and then returned from service to play under Coach Sparky Stalcup from 1947 through 1949. He was twice an all-conference choice.

After leaving Missouri, Pippin joined the Diesel Caterpillars' firm in Peoria, Ill. He qualified for the Olympics by playing with the Caterpillars' A.A.U. championship cage squad, which defeated the University of Kansas in the Olympic playoff finals. Five members of the Peoria team, seven K. U. cagers and two players chosen at large made up the U. S. Olympic basketball entry.

Coaching Mizzou's ends, and helping with team defense, will be the dual responsibility of Coach John "Hi" Simmons as the Tigers move into 1952.

Alumni Mission Explained

neighboring alumni groups, and in keeping with Missouri tradition not only catch up with but surpass their accomplishments.

Details of the reorganization boil down to this. Every graduate and former student of the university are constitutional members of the association and as such should feel perfectly free to maintain contact with the association and the university by writing or visiting the association's office. Here he may request information about other alumni or university affairs at any time and the association will comply with such requests.

Any constitutional member may become an active member by remitting $4.00 annual dues. Active members will receive "The Missouri Alumnus" 10 times a year, four brochures on university affairs each year, the opportunity to vote for association officers, University of Missouri news four times per year, Don Faurot's athletic letters, and other benefits as prescribed from time to time by the Board of Directors.

Active members will constantly receive news of the association's objectives which will be carried out through such alumni committees as Athletic Advisory, Public Relations, Membership, Fund, and others as may be prescribed.

The decisions of these alumni who are serving on responsible committees have not been made with snap judgment. In the past six months much serious thought has been given to this subject. The information is presented to you so that you will know what plans are being made. Naturally, the effectiveness of any worthwhile organization is dependent upon its members. Your support and cooperation in this program is what will make your group worthwhile.

You are an active member of the association and all benefits of this membership will reach you this year. As an "Alumnus" subscriber through the years you automatically become an active member until the expiration of your subscription. You will be notified of your expiration date and, of course, will receive our gratitude for your continued support of the association.

Calling All Shutterbugs

The ALUMNUS is offering a prize for the best picture taken and sent in to us by an alumnus during the current year.

Each picture that we can print will be given a credit line, and the others will be pasted in our office scrap book.

The pictures we want are of two kinds; (1) you and your family and (2) pictures of other alumni who are doing interesting things.

The snapshot above is of BLAND KIRK POLSON setting out for her new job as owner and manager of the Book Store at Kline's, Kansas City. It was taken by your editor, who is an ardent shutterbug, but who will not be eligible for the prize, which will be a year's paid up membership in the Alumni Association.

McHaney Urges Membership

edge of university affairs, the alumni organization can be of great assistance in encouraging Missouri students to attend their own university. This can be done by not only contacting the prospective student but his teacher as well. Too many teachers of high school students are encouraging their pupils to leave the state for their higher education. A strong alumni association can assist in this problem.

No organization of any kind, least of all a non-profit educational institution, can function without funds. Missouri University, unlike privately endowed universities, does not depend upon private philanthropy. It does depend upon appropriations from the State Legislature. The most its alumni disseminate accurate information about the University, its purposes, its accomplishments, and its needs, the more readily will adequate funds be appropriated. Our legislature has never provided as bountifully for our state university as have the legislatures of several of our neighboring states provided for theirs. This may, in large part, be due to a lack of public information concerning the university which alumni groups could do much to dispel.

RADIO? No comedians, news, symphonies, dance bands, no radio—without electricity.

TELEPHONE? Electricity carries your voice along the wires and rings the bell.

X-RAY? The X-ray itself is actually a special kind of electricity—and that's no rib!

MOVIES? Electricity makes 'em move and talk, and even keeps the customers cool!

How many of these need electricity?

You're right. All these and many more. For electricity has become so much a part of our everyday life . . . that we take it for granted. We seldom realize how many uses we make of electric service, how often we use it, how much we get for our money. Yes, its many time and labor-saving devices make life easier and more enjoyable. And, best of all, good electric service is available to almost everyone . . . at low cost.
