

MIZZOU WEEKLY

University of Missouri-Columbia

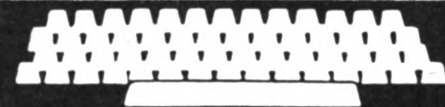

February 22, 1985

Job openings on the Columbia campus and in central administration may be viewed on a public dataset by anyone with CMS computer access.

To access the dataset, log on to CMS and type help jobs. If your terminal is not linked to the campus disk, two additional commands are necessary: Enter link UMCCMS 191 192 RR. Enter access 192 D. Enter help jobs.

The vacancy list is updated each Monday.

A recorded listing of new job openings on campus and in central administration is available by calling 882-4221 after 5 p.m. weekdays and anytime weekends.

Plan covers injuries at work

Injured employees should follow rules to qualify for workers' compensation.

University employees who are injured on the job or incur occupational illnesses must meet certain requirements in order for workers' compensation to pay medical expenses.

Workers' compensation covers all University employees, except those employed jointly by the federal government. The program provides full payment of medical expenses and compensation for job-incurred injuries or diseases.

As of April 1, 1984, UMC and central administration employees must be treated at UMC Hospital and Clinics to be eligible for workers' compensation medical payments.

The restriction does not apply in life-threatening emergencies, or to employees who are injured while out of town on business. When the injured employee returns to Columbia, the program will cover follow-up care only if received at UMC Hospital.

The policy applies only to workers' compensation medical payments. Other aspects of the program, such as compensation for time lost from work, apply even if the employee is not treated at UMC Hospital.

"The state workers' compensation law allows employers the right to designate the health-care provider for employees," says Jim Beckett, director of Environmental Health and Safety. "This allows better control in handling compensation cases and better control over cost containment."

Employees who choose other health-care providers for treatment of work-related injuries "have the potential of incurring substantial medical costs," Beckett says. Unlike workers' compensation, most medical-insurance programs require the patient to pay a deductible and a percentage of expenses. The University's medical-benefits plan provides full coverage of eligible expenses only after the employee's out-of-pocket costs reach $1,000 in a calendar year.

In addition to receiving treatment at UMC Hospital, employees must file an injury report to be eligible for workers' compensation medical payments. If possible, Beckett says, the report should be filed the same day the accident occurred. He urges employees to file a report even if the injury seems minor. "If you fall and then develop a back problem four months later, it is far more difficult to prove it is a workers' compensation case if you didn't file a report." Employees are not required to consult a physician when they file an injury report.

Employees with questions about workers' compensation should contact Beckett or Administrative Assistant Arlis Hanks at 882-7018. "We would be willing to present a program on workers' compensation to any group on campus," Beckett says.

UMC ponders synthetic turf

An artificial turf may replace the natural grass surface of Faurot Field, which is plagued by a recurring fungus problem.

An artificial surface could be installed at Faurot Field in time for next season if a proposal is approved.

Faurot Field may lose its distinction as the only Big Eight football stadium with natural grass.

"We're interested in having something that will make us competitive with other schools," says John Rawlings, assistant director of athletics. "When we won the Orange Bowl in 1969, only one of the other schools had artificial turf."

University officials also are faced with deterioration of the stadium's natural turf. A 10,800-seat structure built at the south end of the field in 1978 caused an airflow problem in the stadium, spawning a fungus growth that affects the root system and creates a slick grass surface.

Inclement weather for most of the Tigers' 1984 home games magnified the problem and prompted renewed consideration of replacing the natural grass field.

The University hired a Kansas City consulting firm, Hellmuth, Obata and Kassabaum, to study the feasibility of installing an artificial turf and to prepare bids.

Alternatives being considered include Prescription Athletic Turf, a self-draining grass field, and several artificial products, such as AstroTurf, Super Turf, All Pro Turf and Omni Turf.

Rawlings hopes that bids will go out in March and be returned in April, so that the Board of Curators could act on a recommendation at its May 2 meeting. If a proposal is approved, work would begin immediately after the Black and Gold game May 4.

Cost of an artificial surface is estimated at $600,000 to $1.2 million, says Dick Bestwick, assistant director of athletics. A $100,000 donation—the largest single athletic donation ever received—from former Tiger tackle Jim Kekeris, BS Ed '51, could help fund the project. The athletic department, a fully self-supported unit, will rely on private donations to fund the remainder over several years.

"The cost factor would be significant, but if approved, the new turf would at least provide our athletes, Coach Woody Widenhofer and his new staff the opportunity to practice and compete under the most consistently ideal conditions," says Athletic Director Dave Hart.

Don Faurot, longtime Mizzou coach and former director of athletics, has offered his endorsement for an artificial turf. The field was named in his honor in 1972.

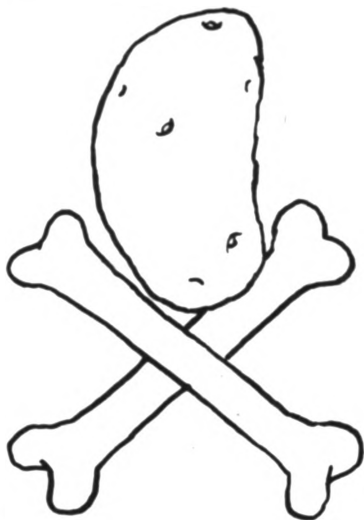

BEWARE OF GREEN SPUDS

A toxin lurks in sprouts and skins of green potatoes.

The compound, called solanine, causes some neurological and intestinal disorders. It can be fatal.

"Potatoes themselves are not dangerous," says Karla Hughes, state extension foods and nutrition specialist. "However, when potatoes sprout or become green due to exposure to light, the level of solanine increases."

To guard against solanine poisoning, trim green areas of potatoes and store the vegetables in a dark place.

STEPFAMILIES NEEDED FOR STUDY

Stepfamilies are needed to participate in a study being conducted by Marilyn Coleman, associate professor of child and family development, and Larry Ganong, assistant professor of nursing.

Those eligible are remarried couples where husband, wife or both have children from a previous marriage. At least one of these children must be between ages 7 and 18 and live with the family most of the time.

People who have been married more than two times are ineligible for the study.

Coleman and Ganong will interview the entire family for 2½ to three hours. All information will be kept confidential.

Participating families will be paid $25 for their time.

Those interested should call Coleman at 882-4360 or 882-4035, or Ganong at 882-6403. Or, in the evening, call 445-4116.

ORGAN DONATION NEEDS KIN'S OK

In Missouri, signing the organ donor card on the back of your driver's license doesn't guarantee that your organs and tissues will be removed for transplantation when you die.

"Although the law states this, it has not been interpreted that way," says Pamala Struessel, organ procurement coordinator at UMC. "The (next-of-kin) must give consent."

She suggests that people who desire to donate organs discuss their wishes with their family in addition to signing a donor card.

1985 Staff Recognition Awards

I'd like to help!

Student, faculty and staff volunteers are needed to read nomination forms and interview candidates for the 1985 Chancellor's Staff Recognition Awards.

Eight to ten volunteers are needed for each of the four employee peer groups: administrative/professional, crafts/maintenance, secretarial/clerical and technical/paraprofessional.

Volunteers will read nominations March 6 and 7. Interviews will be March 12.

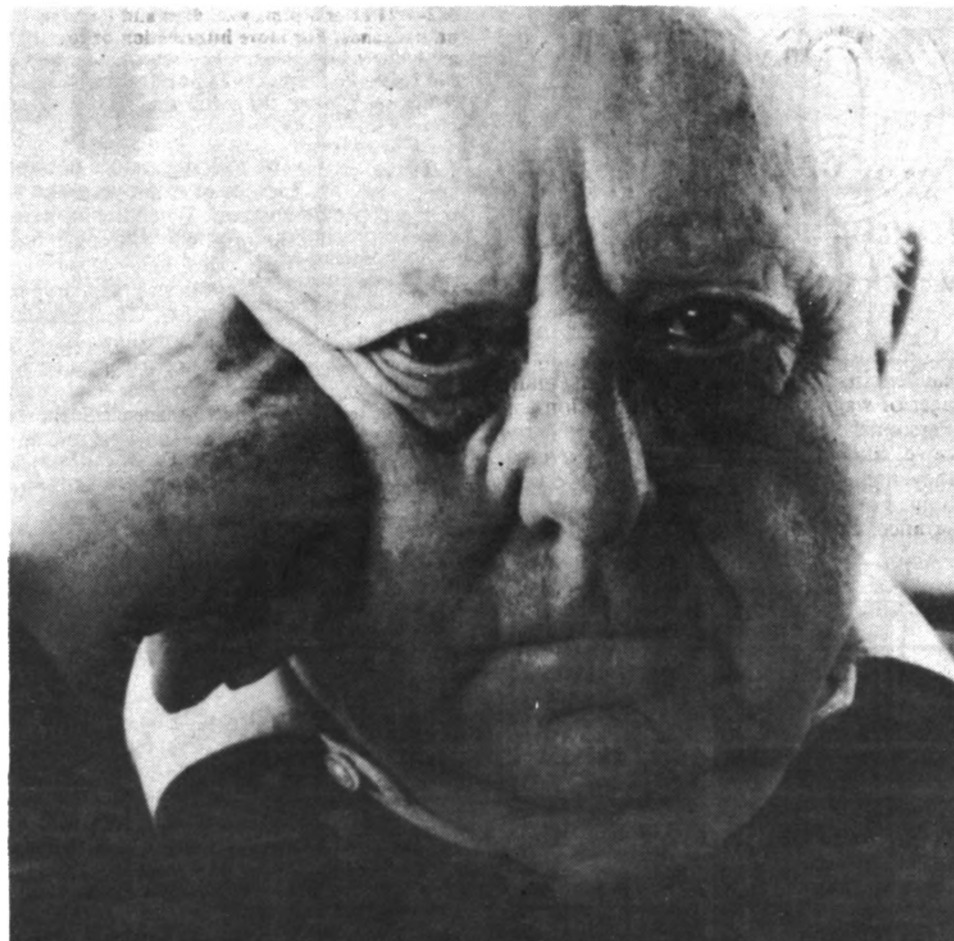

Persons who wish to volunteer should fill out the coupon below.

Pulitzer Prize-winning composer Virgil Thomson will visit campus in March.

One of the greats

As a youngster growing up in Kansas City, Virgil Thomson was a musical prodigy. He played piano and organ and studied the great classical composers of Europe, and then he left to go fight a war. That was the other war. When it ended, his musical career began again and for the last 6½ decades it's been going rather well.

A Pulitzer Prize, a Brandeis Award and a membership in the French Legion of Honor are but a few of the honors Thomson has collected during his prolific musical progression. From March 1 to 3, the 92-year-old will visit UMC as the guest of the Conference of the American Society of University Composers.

Thomson, like many American composers of his time, emulated and lived in the shadow of European composers until World War I. After that, he began to turn his attention to American musical resources, and in the process he has helped shape the course of 20th-century music.

Thomson has written symphonies, concertos, Masses, string quartets and many other works in many forms. His most famous compositions are the operas "Four Saints in Three Acts" and "The Mother of Us All," both to texts by Gertrude Stein.

Besides writing music, Thomson made a name for himself writing about music. In 1940, after living in Paris for 15 years, he became the chief music critic for The New York Herald Tribune. During 14 years at this post, he established himself as one of the major critical writers of the era with his provocative, stylish, bright and opinionated newspaper pieces.

Thomson also was one of the first American composers to write music for film. For "The Plow that Broke the Plains" and "The River," documentary films sponsored by an American government agency, Thomson composed the music using cowboy songs, traditional Southern spirituals and old popular tunes. His musical score for another film, "Louisiana Story," won the 1948 Pulitzer Prize for music.

"Virgil Thomson has played a vital role in shaping the musical culture of this country," says Music Department Chairman Donald McGlothlin. "His visit to the conference adds the interdisciplinary element we're always looking for."

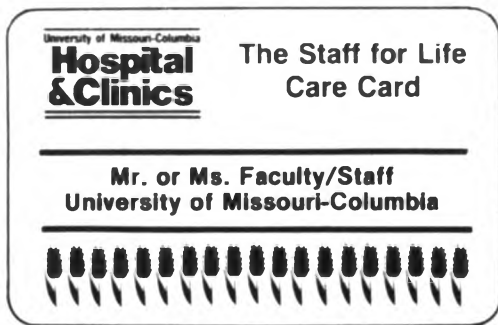

The conference will open with a symposium at 10:40 a.m. Friday in the Fine Arts Recital Hall. Thomson will entertain questions from panel members representing film, theater, agriculture, journalism and music.

At 8 p.m. Saturday, "An Evening with Virgil Thomson" will feature selections from Thomson's compositions performed by members of the music department. Following an address by Thomson, "The River" will be shown.

The premiere performances of "Four Saints: An Olio" and "Mass," two new works by Thomson, will be presented at 3 p.m. Sunday in Jesse Aud.

"We're very excited about the appearance of Virgil Thomson on campus," says McGlothlin. "It should be one of the greatest events at UMC this year."

Freedom from paperwork

The UMC Hospital and Clinics Care Card program frees you from filling out staff benefits claim forms. If you are pre-registered with our Care Card program, insurance claims are automatically filed each time you receive treatment, even if you have insurance other than that offered by the University. Of course, your 10% discount as a UM employee applies.

POLICIES COULD REDUCE DEATHS

Automobile accidents in 1983 claimed 44,600 lives. The toll could be reduced by up to 7.8 percent if three measures were adopted nationally, says James Wilkinson, assistant professor of economics.

From 1976-1980, Wilkinson conducted a study of drunk driving deterrence policies in 47 states. He found that deaths could potentially drop by as much as 3.8 percent nationwide if the minimum legal drinking age were set at 21 in the 22 states that now have a lower legal drinking age.

A 10 percent increase in fines for DWI and reckless driving could reduce highway deaths by 0.4

percent, according to Wilkinson's research.

Rigorous nationwide enforcement of the speed limit could reduce the death rate by 3.6 percent, he found.

He cautions that any new drinking restrictions should receive careful consideration. "Changes in the law or government policy will certainly impose costs on businesses, consumers and taxpayers," he says. "Are we as a society willing to bear those costs in order to save lives?"

STAFF RECOGNITION NOMINATIONS DUE

Nominations for the Chancellor's Staff Recognition Awards should be sent to Rosemary Crane, 213 Physics Bldg., by Feb. 28.

Students, faculty or staff may nominate candidates. Four $750 awards will be presented during Staff Recognition ceremonies April 5 to staff members based upon job performance, relationship with associates and ability to relate their work to the missions and values of the University.

With questions, call Crane at 882-3625 or Donna Turner at 882-4694.

THE CAT'S MEOW

It sometimes seems the world is composed of two types of people: "dog people" and "cat people." In a effort to end species bigotry, extension veterinarian Mar Doering explores the differences between these people and their chosen animals.

Humans lived with and domesticated dogs long before cats. The pack-forming nature of dogs made their domestication relatively easy, Doering says. With their tremendous desire to please their pack leader, dogs easily accepted humans in the leadership role.

But cats are different; the solitary, independent creatures are answerable only to themselves. While dogs historically need their human leaders, self-sufficient cats wish only to co-exist with their owners.

This implies that dog people enjoy the feeling of being needed and having a trainable, affectionate animal to mold in their image, Doering says. Cat people, she says, enjoy their pet's grace and independent, slightly wild nature.

Q&A

Q. Are graduate teaching assistants and graduate research assistants eligible for the staff medical benefits program?

A. GTA's and GRA's who are classified as students are ineligible for the staff medical benefits program, says Roger Jett, manager of wage and salary administration for Personnel Services. Instead, they may receive student health insurance, provided they are enrolled for at least one credit hour. For information on student health insurance, call Patsy Higgins at 882-7254.
