Spring Returns to

"It offered independence, security, unlimited earning possibilities"

As an undergraduate at the University of Michigan during the early years of the war, I was not too immediately concerned about a career. I knew that Uncle Sam would soon solve that problem for me.

However, I had always been favorably inclined toward life insurance, for my Dad had been associated with New England Mutual for almost 20 years. And his satisfaction with his career has been evident in his everyday life and in the home he has provided for our family.

So when the Army sent me to a training camp near Boston, I looked up some of the men in New England Mutual's home office. At the same time, I met the girl and married her, and naturally I began to think more definitely about a post-Army career. Together we cataloged the advantages and disadvantages of many different careers.

But each time we came back to life insurance. It offered—in a way no other career seemed to— independence, security, public service, and unlimited earning possibilities. As a result of these deliberations, I enrolled in New England Mutual's basic training course while I was still in the Army Air Corps.

After the war—in April of 1946 to be exact—I joined the New England Mutual agency in Denver. In addition to extensive training here in Denver, I have had two courses at the home office in Boston. I have also attended several inspiring regional meetings and have enjoyed and profited from my 4-year association with this company.

I have made a much better living than would have been possible in a salaried job, and I have saved a substantial fund for future needs. At the present time, I am spending half my time working with the new men in our agency, helping them find the same satisfactions that I have enjoyed as a career life underwriter.

Recent graduates of our Home Office training course, although new to the life insurance business, earn average first-year commissions of $3600—which, with renewal commissions added, brings the total yearly income average to $5700. From here, incomes rise in direct proportion to each individual's ability and industry.

If you'd like information about a career that gives you a business of your own, with no slow climb up a seniority ladder and no ceiling on earnings, write Mr. H. C. Chaney, Director of Agencies, 501 Boylston Street, Boston 17, Mass.

The campus of our University this month is abuzz with many activities, both curricular and extra-curricular. Bill Hackett, a student in the School of Journalism, gathered material for us concerning the School of Business and Public Administration, and we are indebted to him for the time spent in our interest.

With a friendly greeting and a familiar cigar, Dean Bradshaw has many friends and acquaintances among alumni of Missouri. "Out of the many come the few," and "Bill" Bradshaw's story is the story of years of work with the many in order to develop the few—a pattern of careful planning, infinite painstaking effort, and plain hard work. His educational record reads: Warrensburg Normal School, '15; University of Missouri: B. S. in Ed. '17, M. A. '24, and his Ph.D. from the University of Iowa in 1930. He has taught in the Olean, Missouri, high school, Warrensburg State College, University of Puerto Rico, and the University of Missouri.

Dean Bradshaw's doctoral work was done on the Missouri county court system, and in this work he interviewed approximately 100 judges to get their point of view on changes in county government. Harry S. Truman, then presiding judge of Jackson County court, was interested in Bradshaw's study. When the dissertation was printed, Truman ordered a dozen copies for Jackson County, where he was a leader in county reorganization.

Dean Bradshaw has a hobby, or maybe we should say, a weakness for historic old homes of famous political figures. His favorite relaxation, aside from his cigar, is to visit such an old home, steeped with history and shadows of the past, and to learn what he can of those who have lived and labored there.

Mrs. Bradshaw, the former Doris Crump, is also a graduate of the University of Missouri, B. J. '25. Their son, William L. Bradshaw, Jr. is fifteen years of age, and their foster son, John, is thirteen. Both are students of the University Laboratory School.

Sincerely,

Journalism Week

Two noted newspaper publishers will speak at the banquet highlighting the forty-second annual Journalism Week to be held at the University of Missouri School of Journalism May 1-6. Arthur Hays Sulzberger, president and publisher of the New York Times; and Oveta Culp Hobby, wartime head of the Women's Army CORPS and now executive vice-president of the Houston Post. Mrs. Hobby is also the retiring president of the Southern Newspaper Publishers' Association. The banquet will be held Friday evening, May 5.

K. Armstrong (Marjorie Moore), of Springfield, Mo., formerly associated with a religious publishing firm; and L. Mitchell White, president of the Mexico (Mo.) Ledger.

Joe T. Cook, editor of the Mission (Tex.) Times and president of the National Editorial Association, will speak at the Saturday of the Missouri Press Association.

Dean Mott said several speakers are to be added to the program and they will be announced later.

Another Journalism Week feature is the presentation of Honor Medals for Distinguished Service in Journalism. The awards will be made Friday afternoon, May 5.

Members of the Missouri Writers' Guild will be guests May 2, when special writing will be discussed by speakers. May 3 will be devoted to advertising. Photo journalism will be featured on May 4, when awards will be made in the seventh annual international picture contest sponsored by the School of Journalism and the Encyclopedia Britannica.

Attentions Journalism Alums.

Alumni of the School of Journalism will combine their annual business meeting and a picnic supper on the University campus during Journalism Week.

The business session will be held at 4:30 Thursday afternoon, May 4, in Jay H. Neff Hall, and will adjourn about 5 o'clock for the picnic supper on the lawn immediately north of the building.

Miss Jean Baker of Blue Springs, Mo., a senior in the school of Journalism, was crowned Scoop Queen at the annual University School of Journalism dance Saturday night, March 25.

HOWARD R. LONG

Named Dean in Columbia, S. C.

Dr. Howard Rusk Long, former manager of the Missouri Press Association and professor of journalism at the University of Missouri, has been named dean of the School of Journalism of the University of South Carolina in Columbia, S. C. Dr. and Mrs. Long and children, Nancy and Joseph, plan to move to South Carolina this fall.

Law School Day

Rich in tradition, and vibrant with the feeling of responsibility to teach and to preserve the sound principles of law, the School of Law of the University of Missouri again becomes of paramount interest on the campus when alumni, students and faculty of the School will celebrate the 78th anniversary of its founding with the annual Law School Day program held this year on Saturday, April 29.

Spring events of Law School organizations will be scheduled throughout the program, which will begin with the annual Law Foundation dinner on Friday evening, and conclude with the annual banquet in Rothwell Gymnasium Saturday evening.

An innovation in the Law Day program this year will be an alumni dinner Friday evening for all former students and friends of the school returning to Columbia early. Informal and without speeches, this dinner will serve as a reunion for members of the class of '35, who have invited to join them their schoolmates of '33, '34, '36, and '37.

The enrollment of the School of Law reached its peak in 1948 and 1949. Since that time the number of veterans enrolled has been decreased rapidly. In 1948 less than 10 percent of the enrollment was non-veteran. In 1949 this percentage increased to 20 percent. In 1950 the veteran enrollment is 196 while non-veteran number 54. Along with this change come also changes in the teaching programs, and the law school is making adjustments, just as they met the problems of the post war enrollment, to direct these students who have not yet gained the sense of responsibility and the maturity that came with the G. I. enrollment.

Of the students enrolled this year, 36 come from outside of Missouri. Of the remainder, 19 are from Kansas City, 17 from St. Louis and suburbs, 12 from Springfield, and 4 from Joplin. This leaves 162 students attending the school who come from other places in the state. A glance at the home towns of law students gives some indication of the wide distribution of the student body, and it helps to explain the relative success of the graduates in recent years in locating themselves in the practice, since many of them go back to their own communities. The number of opportunities for the placement of graduates has recently decreased, yet there are good opportunities for graduates who open their own offices in the smaller communities.

The length of the curriculum of the law school, and the addition of new courses which have been added in recent years, add to the perplexities of administration. A few schools have lengthened the course to four years. The School of Law of the University of Missouri continues to lay emphasis on the pre-legal background so that the student may come to his professional studies with more maturity and a greater capacity which will enable him to take on the work in the law school in a more effective way within the three years, and in a more effective treatment of the law school subjects.

Soil Expert Awarded Trip to Europe

Arnold W. Klemme, widely known extension soils specialist of the University of Missouri, was presented a $1,200 check for a trip to Europe at a banquet of alumni and former students of the College of Agriculture last month.

The presentation was made by Cordell Tindall, associate editor of the Missouri Ruralist, who acted as treasurer for a group of Klemme's friends who wanted him to make the trip. The gift is in appreciation of his services to Missouri farmers. He will be a delegate to the International Congress of Soil Science at Amsterdam, Holland. The two-week congress will begin July 24, and will be followed by a two-week tour to study European soils.

Others from the University of Missouri who will attend the congress on their own expenses are: Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Albrecht, H. H. Krusekopf, C. E. Marshall, C. M. Woodruff, Fred Koehler, and Lloyd Doane.

M. U. Guests

Special guests of the University of Missouri at the annual Law Day banquet to be held in Rothwell Gymnasium April 29 will be University alumni and former students who are serving in the office of Prosecuting Attorney in various counties of Missouri, and those who are affiliated with the office of the Attorney General of Missouri. In 70 of the 114 counties of this state, the elected prosecuting attorney at one time attended the University, and almost all of these received their legal education at the Law School.

Alumni Meeting— School of Nursing

Graduates and former students of the School of Nursing of the University of Missouri are invited to attend a meeting to be held in the classrooms of the Student Health Building on Saturday, April 29, 1950. The meeting will consist of a tea to be held from four to five-thirty in the afternoon, and a business meeting at 7:30.

Rare Bible to Library

A rare and valuable edition of the Bible has been added to the Frank Lee Martin Memorial Library at the School of Journalism. It is a gift of David M. Warren, B.J. '18, of Panhandle, Texas.

The Bible, of which only 975 copies were printed, took four years to produce. The task of binding alone required six months. The designing of the Bible was by Bruce Rodgers, whom Ralph H. Parker, University Librarian, calls the "dean of book designers."

Sound Replaces Call Cards

By WILLARD HACKETT

Dr. Ralph H. Parker, University Librarian, has devised a new method of recording book loans by sound which has already demonstrated a saving in time, labor, and money for the library.

The new system, which employs a regular "Sound Scribe" office dictaphone, records all transactions in chronological order and eliminates the business of filling out, filing, and checking call cards for short-term loans.

Dr. Parker and Stewart Smith, head librarian of the St. Louis County Library, began developing the system simultaneously, unknown to each other, about two years ago. At present the Missouri State Library at Jefferson City and the St. Louis County Library are the only other libraries known to be using the new system.

The new system was tested on a small scale in the Periodical Room of the University Library during January and more extensive use of it has been employed in the Social Science Reading Room during the winter semester. Dr. Parker says the system is especially adapted to short term loans and open shelf departments.

Transactions are conducted orally. The attendant speaks the name of the book into the microphone of the recorder and the loanee repeats his name and address. Each transaction is numbered and a corresponding numbered card is time stamped and placed in the back of the book.

Each disk records up to 130 loans and after all loans have been checked in, the disk may be "erased" and reused up to 25 times. Cost of materials for loans is thus reduced to less than five cents per 100 loans, less than the cost of printing the cheapest call slips. The Missouri State Library has found the system especially useful in transacting the loan of books by mail. One person is now able to handle the clerical work which formerly occupied three in the mail loan department.

The novel system of recording loans arouses curiosity and sometimes apprehension in the loanees. "Mike fright" is not uncommon and the attendant sometimes has to repeat the loanee's name and address. The new system seems to promote promptness in the return of books for there appear to be fewer overdue books loaned through the sound method. Students were so intrigued with the idea of making a voice recording that the hand control on the loan desk had to be replaced by a foot control behind the desk.

The sound system appears to have limited application to university library use. Since long-term loans are subject to recall if necessary, the sound system cannot replace the card-filing system now in use for these books. Although still in the experimental stage, the new system testifies to the alertness of Dr. Parker in providing a more efficient and economical service for the University Library.

Miss Alma Bennett, librarian in the Social Science Room of the University Library, demonstrates to Joy Kelley, student assistant, a new sound machine which will eliminate the use of call cards.

The School of Business and Public Administration

The spotlight of campus interest was turned this month on the school of Business and Public Administration of the University of Missouri when Business Week, which originated as "Derby Day" back in the 1920's, was held on April 13 and 14. Although the activities actually took place from 2:00 P. M. on April 13 and ended at midnight on the 14th, the name Business Week, as used during the recent war, is now used.

Unique in being entirely a student affair, organized and planned by a B. and P. A. Council chosen from the student body, this "institution" is a judicious combination of pure circus and serious work. The carnival spirit reaches its peak of the week at the election of an "ideal boss" and an "ideal secretary". An organized election campaign comes to culmination in a student rally, held this year in Brewer Field House from 2:00 to 5:00 P. M. on April 13. Musical numbers, skits by student and faculty, and the introduction of candidates are staged at this time. The ideal boss and ideal secretary are crowned at the "Bosses' Ball," held in Rothwell Gymnasium on the second evening of the Week.

A more serious atmosphere is lent to the main assembly programs and to the panel discussions of the second day. This year, featured on the assembly program from 8:30 to 11:30 on April 14, were Richard H. Demuth, Washington, D. C., an official of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, who discussed the role of the world bank; Richard F. Clement, vice-president of Ely & Walker Dry Goods Company of St. Louis, and James T. Blair, Jr., Lieutenant-governor of Missouri. A luncheon for students, faculty, and speakers was held at noon, April 14. In the afternoon, nationally known speakers presented subjects for panel discussion under the seven major topics of accounting, marketing, government, management, statistics, finance and insurance.

From official University records it appears that the School of Business and Public Administration of the University of Missouri had its beginning with a meeting on December 6, 1913, of a preliminary faculty appointed by President A. Ross Hill. This special faculty group agreed on the essentials of a statement of aims and purposes as presented by Professor of Economics Herbert J. Davenport. Subsequently, the School of Commerce was officially established in January, 1914, and the first faculty appointed in February with Professor Davenport as Dean.

The name of the school was changed to Commerce and Public Administration on May 31, 1916, and to Business and Public Administration January 23, 1927. In 1926 the School became a member of the American Association of Collegiate Schools of Business. The Association has a membership of sixty-five in 1950, only fourteen of which were established earlier than that of the University of Missouri.

The aim of the early school was to give the student a thorough understanding of the general principles of business rather than specific vocational skills which could be acquired readily on the job. This aim remains essentially unchanged. There has been a growing emphasis on the practical, and a changing interpretation of cultural and theoretical values. It is now recognized that practical courses may also have cultural significance.

The original Commerce Building was the north part of Swallow Hall on Frances Quadrangle. On January 29, 1927, the School transferred to the former quarters of the law school when the lawyers moved to Tate Hall. This present home is called the Business and Public Administration Building. Today this building needs to be four times its size to accommodate the present enrollment and curriculum. Before the war, when the University enrolled approximately 5000, the peak enrollment of B. & P. A. was 376. Last year its peak was 1112, of the approximate 11,000 enrolled. When the enrollment of the University doubled, that of B. & P. A. tripled. Today their major problem is the inadequate space; a shortage of classrooms, class facilities and office space. Several of the large classes use rooms in other buildings, the courses in Economics being scattered in some twenty buildings over the campus, which means much inconvenience to both teachers and students. It means much loss of time, and it limits the use of teaching aids which have to be transported over the campus. Night classes are held in Accounting and Statistics in order to make the best use of the laboratory space in keeping the classes small. A B. & P. A. student in his senior year commented that he has a class this semester in the B. & P. A. building, the first one in that building during his college career. This June the School of Business and Public Administration will present for graduation the largest number of graduates from any school or college of the University at Columbia—350 plus—which will be more than 12 per cent of the entire class.

The School was established as a senior college, the professional training to be preceded by two years of academic work in the College of Arts and Science or its equivalent. A few years ago the faculty voted to accept two years in Engineering as an equivalent of work in Arts and Science.

President Frederick A. Middlebush became dean of the School of Business and Public Administration on February 1, 1926, resigning when he became president of the University July 1, 1935. Professor Roy Emerson Curtis, a member of the department of economics and finance since 1928, succeeded President Middlebush and served until World War II when he entered the government service in Washington, D. C. Dr. Harry Gunnison Brown acted as dean prior to the appointment of William L. Bradshaw as B. & P. A. Dean June 10, 1946.

Dean William L. Bradshaw, a native of Barnett, Morgan County, Missouri, and a graduate of the University '17 and '24 is known for his studies on local government and political parties, and as a leader in reshaping the state constitution of Missouri. He came to the University faculty as an instructor in political science in 1927, and became a professor in 1941. Dr. Bradshaw is the author of "Missouri County Court," and co-author of "Township organization in Missouri," as well as numerous articles on subjects relating to political science and public law. In November, 1945, he received the distinguished service award of the Missouri State Teachers Association in recognition of his contribution to public education in the writing of the new state constitution and in securing its approval.

Curricula in Marketing and Industrial Personnel Management have been added since the war, and recently Real Estate and Insurance curricula were added. The School cooperates with the College of Agriculture in offering special training for bankers. The annual Bankers' Conference has just recently been held on the campus. Another cooperative interest is with the Adult Education and Extension Service of the University in holding the Annual Industrial Conferences in October. Special curricula, also, are arranged to meet the special needs of students, as, for example, hotel and restaurant management, home economics, chemistry, geology, animal husbandry and other professional fields.

In answer to a demand from citizens of this area, particularly state merit and federal civil service employees, classes are being offered at night during the current semester in statistical analysis and punch-card methods in statistics. These courses include laboratory work involving the use of modern calculating and office machines.

The Department of Accounting and Statistics of the School has been approved by the New Jersey Department of Education. This approval means that University of Missouri graduates with majors in accounting may receive the New Jersey qualifying certificate for accountancy. In New Jersey such a certificate is required before an applicant may take the CPA examination. Similar recognition was given the business curricula to the B. & P. A. school by the State of New York in 1948. This approval means that the department meets educational requirements, which are higher in New York than elsewhere, and that graduates are eligible to qualify through examinations as certified public accountants in New York state.

Ten of the twelve full professors in the School of Business and Public Administration are listed in the new Who's Who in America. In the department of Accounting and Statistics, they are R. D. M. Bauer, H. P. Hartkemeier, and DR Scott. In Economics and Business are Russell S. Bauder, H. G. Brown, S. G. Wennberg and Elmer Wood, and in Political Science, Dean William L. Bradshaw, Martin L. Faust and J. G. Heinberg.

Honor Ozark Cage Team

Alumni and friends of the University of Missouri in Christian County, Missouri, and surrounding territory gave a basketball banquet in Ozark April 12 honoring the Ozark, Mo., high school team which won the state Class B Championship recently. Wilbur "Sparky" Stalcup, head basketball coach at the University, spoke and showed motion pictures of some of Missouri's football and basketball games of the past season. Alumni director Herb Bunker was also present and spoke to the Missouri alumni who organized an active Christian County Alumni Association.

Air Medal Presented

Captain Charles E. Schroder, United States Air Force, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles O. Schroder of Maywood, Missouri, and a graduate of the School of Business of the University of Missouri, '47, was presented the Air Medal on March 15, 1950 by Captain Wilbur M. Hackett, Commanding Officer of Flight "D", Fifth Rescue Squadron, Selfridge AF Base, Michigan. The medal was awarded to Captain Schroder by direction of the President for meritorious achievement while participating in aerial flights during the emergency made necessary by the Berlin Blockade. Among his other decorations are the Berlin Airlift Clasp and the Medal for Humane Action.

After graduation from the University, Captain Schroder was a civilian pilot with Delta Airlines for a year before being called to active duty with the Air Force and being assigned to the Berlin Airlift, commonly known as Operations "Vittles." Upon return from the airlift he was assigned to Flight "D", Fifth Rescue Squadron, where he is now serving as Operations Officer within the organization.

MISSOURI HEADLINERS

"The Chicken of Tomorrow"

Research processes are varied and interesting. H. L. Shrader of the animal husbandry department of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, B.S. in Agriculture, '14, thinks there may be a possibility of bringing the colored Easter chicks which heretofore delighted the children to a product equally delightful to all, a chicken of the future with eight generous slices of white meat on each side of the breast.

A dentist loaned his drill to bore a tiny hole in the shell of the egg, then Mrs. Aya Kiss of the Wene Chick Farms of Vineland, N. J. injected special dye, patent No. 247752, into the egg before it is incubated. The result; red, yellow pink or green chicks, normal except for their vividly dyed down, legs and toes. Mrs. Kiss says the feathers will eventually assume the natural colors but the legs will retain their exotic coloring.

Mr. Shrader, an old hand at the poultry business who claims to be the world's champion turkey carver, says he and his boys have used some dyes in chicks and checked by flouroscope the disposition of food to the various parts of the body. They have used this research in studying the kinds of foods that will make bigger breasts and fatter legs in poultry.

The new dye is also an answer to the cruelty-to-animal complaints prevalent when stores formerly offered dyed chicks at Eastertime.

M. U. $15,000

Dr. Harry Shaefer, retired physician who died March 20, left $15,000 to establish a scholarship at the University of Missouri. Dr. Shaefer was a resident of Long Beach, California, for thirty years, and a graduate of the University of Missouri in 1898. He was born in Huntsville, Missouri.

Alumni—Eight

Jim and Mary Lawrence of Wilmington, Delaware, write us that they will be unable to attend the reunion in June, but they have sent us a substitute—the picture on this page of the Lawrence family, taken last August at Jean's wedding in Moylan, Pennsylvania. All are alumni of the University of Missouri except Virginia, and we feel sure her loyalty is with us nevertheless. Virginia "entered" in 1943, but an attraction at Annapolis must have been stronger, for in June, '44, she married the guy—Wm. R. Campbell. However, we still insist on a count of eight, because Mrs. Ian M. Lawrence, the former Margaret Koch of Kansas City, Mo., received her A. B. degree at Missouri in '46.

Of the six Lawrence children, only two, the oldest and the youngest, live near their parents. However, "Pop" Lawrence's education is not complete, for there are also ten grandchildren who will teach him lore that is not in the books.

Boudoir or Broodoir?

Friends of Sherman Dickinson here in Missouri, especially those friends who have had a bit of poultry experience, have often wondered how Mr. Dickinson, even with the help of his very capable family, could care for all the turkeys they produce on Roads End Ranch, 6685 Sonoma Hiway, Santa Rosa, Californai. A note from his desk dated March 24, 1950, gives us the answer. This year, in order to nurse along the 10,000 baby turkeys which start moving in about the middle of April, the Dickinsons have bedrooms fixed in the brooder houses, so there will be nothing primitive about the nights that have to be spent near the baby turks on that part of the farm.

Mr. Dickinson, a member of the faculty of the University of Missouri for twenty-two years, resigned as head of the department of agricultural education in 1946 to become a specialist and consultant in agricultural education to the Brazilian government. In 1948 the Dickinsons returned to California and established this turkey farm.

The four Dickinson children are alumni of the University of Missouri, Elizabeth Ann Warner, '36, Storm, '37, Larry, '42, and Lena Louise Loffer, '43. Larry is associated with his father in the turkey industry.

Engineering Alumni Reorganize

At the Annual Meeting of the Engineering Alumni Association held in Columbia on March 18, a completely revised Constitution was adopted. The objectives of the new constitution are pointed toward making the Association a vital part of the College of Engineering and the engineering profession.

Officers elceted for 1950 were: President, Paul Ogden of Columbia; Vice-President, O. P. Minnick of Kansas City, A. M. Finley of St. Louis, F. D. Harris of Jefferson City, and H. E. Roberts of Joplin; Secretary-Treasurer, E. W. Mellow of Columbia; and Representative to the General Alumni Association Board, L. W. Helmreich of Jefferson City.

Immediate plans include printing of the new Constitution and mailing of copies to all Engineering Alumni whose addresses are known. In the near future, efforts will be made to organize alumni within the state of Missouri, and it is hoped that some additional groups outstate can be organized similar to the Chicago and Schenectady groups.

To Name Building for Alumnus

The Wildlife Conservation building of the University will be named for the late E. Sydney Stephens of Columbia, Missouri, who received his A. B. degree in 1903. Stephens, who died in 1948, was first president of the Conservation Federation of Missouri, which sponsored legislation setting up the present conservation commission, and served as first chairman of the commission. One of the commission's first acts was to participate in the cooperative wildlife research program which the university carries on in the building to be named for Stephens.

Chairman St. Louis Public Relations Society

Thomas W. Parry, head of Thomas W. Parry and Associates, public relations counsel, has been elected president of the newly-formed St. Louis Chapter of the Public Relations Society of America. Mr. Parry received his Bachelor of Journalism degree from the University of Missouri in 1923.

Among the charter members of this organization are two other alumni of the University of Missouri. They are Robert A. Willier, who is head of Robert A. Willier and Associates, public relations counsel, and who was graduated from the University of Missouri in 1931 with a degree of Bachelor of Journalism; and James R. Hanson, an associate of Missouri with a Bachelor of Arts, who graduated from the University of Thomas W. Parry and Associates with a Bachelor of Journalism degree in 1935.

Mrs. Parry will be remembered as Exie Mitchell Grey, who received her B.J. degree in 1923.

He returned in March from Western Europe after coordinating an advertising and public relations program of the eighteen Marshall Plan nations which will exhibit products of their industries at the Fair.

His European tour required able presentation in Paris, of facts, figures and purposes before the Council of the Organization of European Economic Cooperation in Paris. This council was composed of delegates of the Marshall Plan nations. Additional presentations were made before industrialists and officials in Rome, Milan, Geneva, London, Frankfurt, the Hague, and Brussels.

Merchandise from all over the world, from more than 40 different nations, will be displayed with that of the United States to create in Chicago, a center for international trade.

Advanced degrees were awarded to three graduates of the University of Missouri at the winter quarter convocation of Ohio State University in Columbus, recently.

Doctor of Philosophy degrees were received by Everett T. Halbrook, B.S. in Agri. 1930; Robert B. Holden, A.B. 1944; and David R. Rodney, B.S. in Agri. 1940.

School Goes to Tommy

By HAZEL STEWARD MURDOCK

Most children go to school, but when a boy or girl enters the University Hospital at Columbia for treatment under the State Crippled Children's Service, school comes to the hospital. The patient, let us say, is an eight year old boy named Tommy. He was a normal healthy farm boy until last spring. He and his three brothers were burning trash when his shirt caught fire. He was badly burned about the neck. When, after painful weeks, the flesh burns had healed, he was left with contracture scars which bound his chin so close to his neck that he could not raise his head.

Tommy's parents worried. They thought his trouble could be corrected by plastic surgery, but the treatment would be long and expensive. They were able to keep up the current expenses for the family of six, but they could not afford a large hospital bill. The district field nurse of the State Crippled Children's Service found Tommy in August and advised his parents about getting free plastic surgical treatment for him under the Missouri State Crippled Children's Service.

"But what about school?" his mother asked. "He might get a whole year behind his grade."

"Maybe we should wait until next summer," his father suggested.

Tommy entered the University Hospital in November. After breakfast the first morning he noticed some of the boys and girls getting out their school-books. He took out of the metal cabinet beside his bed the books he had brought with him. At nine-thirty a large man with silver streaks in his hair came up to Tommy and talked to him about the pictures in his books, and Tommy showed him where his last lessons had been. The man told him that a teacher would teach him every day, so that he could keep up with his classmates in his home school.

During the fiscal year ending June 30, 1949 some 567 children were hospitalized one or more times during the year at the expense of the Missouri State Crippled Children's Service, receiving a total of 26,446 days of care. A total of 13,083 days of convalescent home care was provided for 122 children, and 1606 children received 5,163 out-patient visits from the Service. It will be seen that the average length of hospitalization was approximately a month and a half, and that convalescence required, on the average, three and one-half months, a total average of five months time for hospitalization and convalescence—more than half a school year.

The need for school instruction of these children is, obvious. The physically handicapped child needs a good scholastic background and graduation from high school as a basis for specialized vocational training. The financing of this instruction has presented a real problem, since no federal or matching funds can be used for this purpose. House Bill 126, providing for the Education of the Handicapped Child, does not apply to the hospitalized child.

When the ward for crippled children was reopened at the University Hospital in 1945, after being closed during the war years, there was no organized instruction of these patients, since no funds were available to pay for it. In November 1949 the Boone County unit of the Missouri Society for Crippled Children, of which Mrs. Frank E. Dexheimer, Columbia, is chairman, agreed to provide the sum of $880.00 to pay a graduate assistant for the school year 1949-50 who would organize and supervise this instruction.

The program of instruction is now in full operation under the direction of Mr. Hershel Rowland, a graduate student majoring in elementary education, specializing in the teaching of reading. He received the degree B.S. in Education from the University of Missouri in February '50. Nine student teachers from the School of Education work under his supervision, instructing the children. Patients may range in age from birth to the twenty-first birthday, so the range of instruction is from kindergarten through high school.

Instruction in the ward occupies the hours 9:30 to 11:30 in the morning and 2:30 to 3:30 in the afternoon. When a new patient enters the ward, Mr. Rowland receives from the Medical Social Service Office his name, date of birth, grade classification, diagnosis of his ailment, and the estimated length of time he will be hospitalized. On the basis of this information, Mr. Rowland assigns a student teacher to instruct the patient. Because of the variety in age, mobility, texts and progress, most of the instruction is on an individual tutorial basis. It is reported that these patients fit back into their classes, when they return home, without loss in progress or quality of school achievement.

This worthwhile project is operating smoothly in every respect except for the difficulties of financing it. The total sum of approximately $1,000.00 per year is required to pay the supervisor, to provide incidental school supplies (pencils, notebooks, etc.) and to pay for correspondence courses to establish high school credit in cases where the crippling ailment prevents entirely the patient's enrolling in the public school.

At the present time a patient at the University Hospital, sixteen years old, is enrolled in a correspondence course in Algebra. He completes regularly one lesson per day, the maximum which will be accepted. His ailment prevents entirely his attending the public schools. He hopes to complete three other courses during the year, establishing four units of high school credit to form his freshman year's work. The boy's only problem in this connection is financial. His family is unable to pay the cost of $12.50 per unit for the correspondence work.

NEXT YEAR'S PROBLEM

Where will the money come from to finance the instruction program in the hospital next year? This year the University Hospital received its funds for this project from the Easter seal sales of the Boone County Society for Crippled Children. In addition to this, there are still many other needs of the crippled patient which may be provided for only through private gifts. Any person or organization wishing to contribute to the fund to provide instruction for crippled children pa-address: Medical Social Service Office, University Hospital, Columbia, Mo., tents in the University Hospital should designating the gift for The Crippled Children's School Fund.

VOLUNTEER SERVICES

Mrs. Ruth Hartman, medical social worker at the University Hospital, has organized an inclusive program of activities and entertainment in substitution of the normal social contacts of the home, school and community. This program is carried on by non-paid volunteer workers who are townspeople or college students. The volunteer must promise his services for at least a semester, and preferably for a year, since continuity is important in establishing rapport with the patient. The volunteer becomes a friend of the child and provides a substitute or proxy relation for the absent parent.

Volunteer workers are oriented to the hospital situation through preliminary lectures on these subjects: Administrative Aspects of the Crippled Children's Program; a brief description of the Diagnosis and Treatment of the Orthopedic Patient; a lecture on Orthopedic Nursing Care by a field nurse; Hospital Ethics and Etiquette, including the role of the volunteer in hospital service and the medical-social aspects of orthopedic and crippling handicaps.

An aftercraft hour is provided by volunteers from Stephens College and the University Y. W. C. A. Movies are shown after supper every Tuesday evening. On other evenings there is a story or game hour.

An interdenominational Sunday School hour is sponsored by the Students Religious Council and Superintended by Mrs. Elliott B. Scherr (Ruth DeLano, A.B., B.S., '26).

Volunteer groups provide a party hour on Saturday afternoons and holiday occasions. Alpha Pi Omega, a service sorority of young matrons, sponsors a party for the children one Saturday afternoon each month, providing entertainment and refreshments. Homemade cookies and candy are a treat which the children look forward to. This group decorated the sun-porch of the ward and provided drapes for the ward reception room. Mrs. Marvin Gray is the present president of this group.

Mrs. B. D. Simon, Jr. (Joan Frances Johnson, B.S. in Ed. '40) has rendered unusual service by providing transportation to a downtown shoe store every Tuesday morning, clinic day, for children who need to be fitted with special shoes. She takes sometimes as many as twelve to fifteen children and has them fitted with shoes which need corrections which are prescribed by the orthopedist and made by the brace man.

CLOTHING NEEDED

Since no federal or matching funds are allowed for clothing, the patients must be clothed from the ward store-room supplied by clothing gifts from interested groups and persons. Clothing, at this time, is especially needed for the older children: boys and girls 12 to 16 years of age. Wash trousers and cotton dresses are needed. Dresses which open down the front facilitate the dressing of the patient who is encumbered by braces, casts and other appliances.

GIFTS

The ward recently received from Mr. Lloyd B. King, '25, and friends a combination radio-phonograph which has added greatly to the pleasantness of the ward. The employees of the Boone County Electric Company gave six loud speakers to carry the sound from the radio-phonograph to individual parts of the ward. Several large portable blackboards which were badly needed for the school instruction were given by the Columbia Lions Club.

SPORTS

Baseball

Back from a spin through the sun-tan league, Missouri's baseball team moved into its Big Seven schedule midway in April after four win-less starts abroad.

The Tigers were due to open their home schedule against Nebraska at Columbia on April 14-15.

Except for a 20-11 loss to Southern Methodist, the Missourians lifted the lid on the 1950 season in creditable, if not winning, fashion. Swinging south, after one week of outdoor workouts, they bowed to Arkansas, 4-7, and lost a pair to T. C. U., 2-3 and 4-6. Given capable pitching by his two veteran pitchers, Coach John "Hi" Simmons' gang conceivably could have managed an even-split for the trip.

The Mustangs were playing their fourteenth game of the season against Mizzou's once-tried nine, and Texas Christian had already been in twelve contests when the Tigers moved into Ft. Worth.

All of which means that Mizzou's baseballers are not the incompetents that an opening 0-4 record would suggest. On the plus side, there was evidence that the Gold and Black horse-hiders would be much handier with the stick than they were a year ago. They batted .241 as a team for the four-game stint—a mark some 60 points higher than the final 1949 team average.

Captain Bill Eatock, pint-packaged shortstop at 5-ft. 6-inches, paced the early assault with a .412 batting mark.

Rookie-outfielder Walt Ulmer was next-high with .363. Jack Frier, veteran first-sacker, was away to his best season at the plate with a .333 average.

Of most concern to Simmons was the inept mound work exhibited by his seasoned pitchers, Roger Englert and Bob "Lefty" Smith. Englert failed to stick around in two successive starts, while Smith was pummeled by S. M. U. Relieving in the second T. C. U. game, Smith did look more like his old self, however.

But the pitching outlook was not altogether bleak. Sophomore Floyd Eberhard tossed a five-hit effort against S. M. U. in the one-run loss. The recruit right-hander made only one mistake, but it proved costly. He fed the Mustangs' cleanup hitter a home-run ball in the first inning, and three runs counted on the blow.

The Old Order Changeth

Missouri's athletic department began collecting its household effects this month, preparing to desert the old, familiar places in Rothwell gymnasium for more spacious quarters in the new gym addition.

Migration was due to begin possibly sometime this month—and by June at the latest. Forsaking their old hang-outs, Tiger department heads and coaches no longer will be doing business in the same offices which their predecessors were using as far back as 1906.

The new layout, which tacks 110 feet on the south side of the gray-stoned gymnasium, will be complete with ten new individual offices, and improved overall facilities for varsity athletes. It will locate the athletic department family on the basement level of the wing, with entrance to these offices on the Hillcrest Avenue side. The physical education department will inherit the quarters formerly used by the athletic department, transforming these into additional offices, classrooms and storage rooms.

Offices in the new plant will have acoustic ceilings, asphalt tile floors, fluorescent lighting and convector-type steam radiators. Each will be completely furnished with new office equipment. Staff offices will surround an expanded locker room, which will provide 278 lockers for varsity athletic squads. New or improved features will include a coaches' conference room, for staff meetings and study of movies, a meeting room for varsity athletes and a dressing room for visiting coaches and teams.

COACH JOHN SIMMONS . . . southerners made it rough.

Floors in the more commodious training, equipment and locker rooms will be tiled.

The business and ticket office will be readily accessible to all customers. It is situated just opposite the main entrance. Athletic Director Don Faurot, however, will be forced to relinquish his title as "official greeter" of all callers at the gymnasium. His new headquarters will be at the southeastern corner of the new addition.

TRACK

Most cheering news in the Tiger track camp this month was Coach Tom Botts' pronouncement that sprinters Randy Vanet and Bob Schuster and hurdler Bill Self would compete in the opening dual meet against Oklahoma at Norman on April 15.

This trio missed all, or most of the 1950 indoor campaign. Readiness of Vanet and Schuster assured Mizzou of sturdy quarter-mile representation against the Sooners' first-class entries, and they were likely to need it . . . O. U.'s Jerry Meador won the indoor 440 event, and the Sooner quartet took the mile relay title.

Self lends more depth to the hurdles races, notably in the highs where Frank Bardot carried the indoor load.

Finishing one stride ahead of Missouri in the indoor carnival, Coach John Jacobs' Oklahomans will field a Star Studded contingent. The Sooners' elite tracksters are headed by Bill Carroll, indoor pole-vault champ and record-setter; Merwin McConnell, shot put; Jim McConnell, broad-jump; Dick Jones, high jump; John Jacobs, middle distance ace; Jim Finley and McConnell, hurdles; and R. C. Slocum, two-mile.

The Tigers will go to the post, counting heavily on sophomores Harold Carter and Charlie Schranck in the hurdles; Byron Clark in the sprints; and Bob Gorden in the high jump. Elsewhere, veterans Gil Phillips and Elmer Klein will be 220 and 440 entries; Jean Madden and Bill McGuire in the 880 and mile; and Phil Brusca, Kelly Pelts and Laddie Stovall likely to figure in points in the field events.

Missouri will send a squad to the Kansas Relays on April 22, and to the Drake Relays the following weekend. The Tigers have two duals with Nebraska and Kansas, before taking part in the Big Seven meet at Lincoln on May 19-20.

Wynne M. Casteel, Tiger half-back of the mid-20s, represented the University at the inauguration of Dr. Paul Alexander Wagner as president of Rollins College in Winter Park, Florida, on February 18.

"Jimmy Shuck's Kick"

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second in a series of flashbacks about Missouri's athletic past, as recounted by Chester L. Brewer, former director of athletics at the University of Missouri, and one-time head coach of Tiger football, baseball and track.)

Throughout Missouri's football history, the legendary heroes almost without fail have earned their special niche by outstanding performances in the Missouri-Kansas game. Such is the saga of Glenn Bernard "Jimmy" Shuck, whose drop-kick in the waning minutes of the 1911 Tiger-Jayhawk game gave Mizzou a 3-3 tie with the Missouri Valley champions.

Shuck, "Chuck" Lewis and Al Lincoln were a few of the Tiger immortals to come along at various junctures in those early days. There were others, too, but this story concerns Shuck, the frail end from Brookfield who died quite suddenly in June of 1915. Hardly a Tiger oldster is now alive who won't look back on that epic boot in retrospect, and still feel a warm glow.

Certainly, Chester L. Brewer never has forgotten it. That feat closed his first coaching season at Missouri on a pleasing note, even though his overall record was only two won, four lost and two tied . . . Kansas was tied. What else mattered? Whenever the Jayhawks were tied by an under-manned Mizzou squad, or beaten—that was the whole season.

The draw in 1911 was accomplished in the face of great odds, and in a highly dramatic setting. Captain-elect Ted Hackney had fractured his shoulder in the Rolla game and was lost for the rest of the schedule. Without Hackney, the Tiger squad was just a mediocre entry at best. The game itself was the first of the MU-KU series ever played in Columbia—and the first Homecoming event on record; indeed, it marked the official birth of the "M" Men's Club, for all former lettermen were urged to return that weekend, with a huge pre-game steak dinner as an added inducement. It was Columbia's first "big-time" weekend. The new concrete stands, constructed at Rollins field earlier in the year, were filled to overflowing as some 9,000 fans turned out for the game.

Tracing the story of Jimmy Shuck, Brewer recalls that the 1911 season opened on a fairly optimistic note.

"Just to name a few of the players," he says, "we had Shuck, Jack Mills and Gene Hall playing the ends; Hackney and Billy Blees as quarterbacks; 'Cap' LeMire and 'Dobbie' Knoble at the halfbacks; and 'Chuck' Wilson at center. It was a little runt of a team, but a fighting outfit. When we lost Hackney though, it looked like we were down-and-out, and I guess we were—pretty near. He was our passer and kicker, and a great captain.

"Shortly after Hackney was hurt, Shuck came up to me one day and very modestly said, 'I kicked a little in high school, coach; if you need me, I think I can drop-kick for you in a pinch.'

"Here was our 'Frank Merriwell,' as events were to prove," Brewer continued. "Right there we worked out a plan for Jimmy to report early to practice each day and try 50 drop-kicks from all angles on the field. There were no student managers—not even a water-boy—in those times, so we hired some boys to shag the balls for Jimmy.

"After that, Shuck was always the first to arrive on the field, and he practiced those kicks religiously. As the season went along, he also was named field-captain in Hackney's place. Against Ames, he made one of his drop-kicks good—but he didn't put his best foot forward until the Kansas game.

"The Jayhawks were leading, 3-0, on Delaney's third-quarter field goal—and only three minutes of playing time remained. Kansas had stopped our last drive on about the 25-yard line when Shuck—who had played a whale of a game—fell back to kick.

"The odds were stacked against him pretty heavily. It was a difficult, angular try. A steady rain had made the field soggy and heavy. Both the football and his footing were slick—but he kicked that ball right where it had to go, and the score was tied."

(Ed. Note: The Savitar account of Shuck's kick went like this: "The ball was near the side-line, and the kick looked impossible for our captain. But Jimmie was as cool as if he were only practicing . . .")

The Jayhawks came back fighting mad, Brewer relates, and almost scored again. Their big fullback, Capt. Ammons, ripped through the Tiger line and would have gone all the way had not little Billy Blees tackled him in the open-field.

"That tackle by Blees—he was carried unconscious from the field after making it—and Shuck's kick," Brewer concedes, "saved the day for us."

Brewer still remembers how downtown quarterbacks accused him the next day of being lucky to tie the game.

"Shuck hardly ever kicked a ball before yesterday's game," they said. "You certainly were carrying a rabbit's foot."

"I told them that if ever a boy earned a goal, Jimmy Shuck did in that game," Brewer says, "His long hours of persistence and practice were repaid in full."

Some 25 years later, an enthusiastic alumnus cornered Brewer, explaining he was an eye-witness to Shuck's kick.

"You know," the old-grad said, "I can take you to Rollins field today, and point out the exact spot from where Shuck kicked his goal."

To which Brewer responded: "Let me go you one better, sir. I can tell you the exact spear of grass he kicked it from."

Betwixt and Between

Athletic Director Don Faurot along with Tiger alumni and fans came up smiling early last month when Wilbur N. "Sparky" Stalcup, head basketball coach, rejected a proffered post as Michigan State's cage mentor.

Renewing his contract with Missouri, Stalcup conceded that the Spartan offer had been choice enough to warrant serious consideration. However, the M. U. athletic committee's action in promptly hiking Stalcup's salary, together with a rallying cry from alumni groups and friends, over the state were major influences, he said, in his decision to stay at Missouri.

Rumors that the popular "Sparky" was top-considered for the Michigan State job were substantiated by a wire story out of East Lansing, announcing that Missouri's coach had accepted the position.

That news was startling in itself—but particularly so to Stalcup who was still weighing the offer, and had not given the Big Ten school his final commitment.

The air was cleared the next day after the premature release, when Stalcup informed Michigan State officials of his intention to continue as Missouri's basketball coach.

For Your Information

Several alumni have inquired about the relationship of the University of Missouri Alumni Association and the Missouri Quarterback Club. The two organizations are entirely separate but do overlap in membership and in objectives. However, each has an entirely different set of officers.

All former students and graduates of the University are, by constitutional definition, members of the Alumni Association. No dues are assessed for membership in the University of Missouri Alumni Association under the present by-laws.

The Alumni Association publishes and circulates THE MISSOURI ALUMNUS, its official magazine.

ALUMNUS readers pay $3.00 per year for the magazine, and subscription to the ALUMNUS is strictly optional. The office of the ALUMNUS business manager is in the University alumni office, 110 Jesse.

Headquarters for the Missouri Alumni Association is also in the University alumni office, 110 Jesse, and the alumni activity program is under the supervision of Herb Bunker, director of alumni activities and secretary of the Association, and "Bus" Entsminger, assistant director of alumni activities.

Stated in general terms, the objects of the general Alumni Association are: to promote the best interests of the University of Missouri; to promote closer fellowship and cooperation among the alumni and other friends of the University of Missouri; and to assist and support University of Missouri student organizations and other groups whose objects are to further the interests of the University of Missouri, its students, faculty, alumni, and friends. The specific activities through which these objectives are attained are many in number and extremely varied in nature. They all look to the support and advancement of some phase of the University's overall educational program.

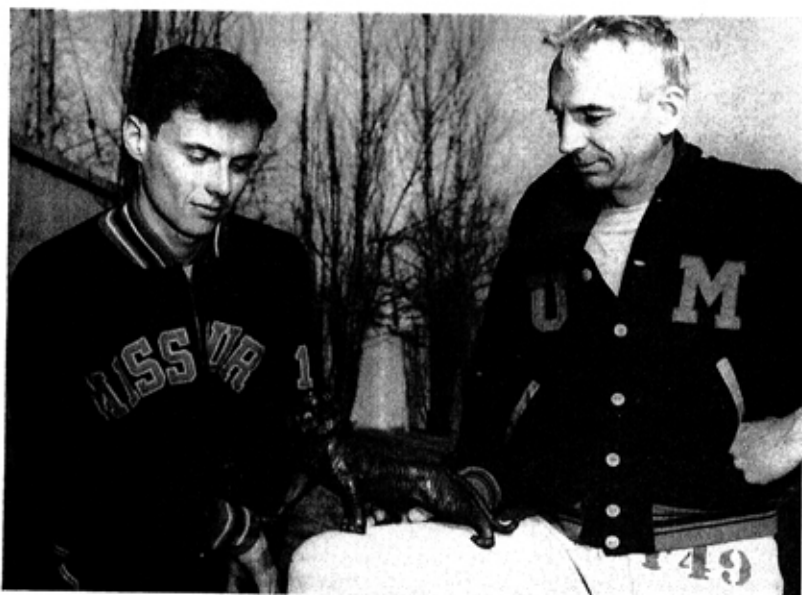

The Missouri Quarterback Club concerns itself with "varsity" athletics at the University, and centers its interests on Missouri football. Members of this organization need not be graduates or former students of the University of Missouri, although most of them are. They pay $12.00 per year membership fees for which they receive, in return, certain special benefits, such as weekly athletic newsletters and football films of all out of town games. Harry Ice, executive secretary of the Quarterback Club, maintains his office and the Quarterback Club headquarters at the Tiger Hotel, Columbia, Mo.

It is to be expected that many alumni and friends of the University of Missouri will be interested in both organizations. To those who are eligible and desire to take part in alumni activities, every opportunity will be offered toward helping in the improvement of the services represented in the total University program. General alumni officers and members of the University alumni office staff welcome and utilize all such assistance. For those desiring to express a real and continuing interest in athletics, the Missouri Quarterback Club furnishes the means of doing so.

It is the purpose of this article to establish a clear understanding of the objectives of the Alumni Association and the Quarterback Club. We point out, too, that participation in the activities of either or both is entirely voluntary. Such participation, however, is welcomed at all times and both organizations endeavor to offer programs that stimulate interest and support of all who seek to advance the interests of the University of Missouri on all fronts.

Alumni throughout the state can aid the State Service by contacting the field nurse in their district about any child needing treatment, and by volunteering their services.

A banquet for University of Missouri alumni of Barry and Lawrence counties was held in Monnett, Missouri on April 14, with Herb Bunker, director of alumni activities, as speaker.

Jenkins Sparks The Chevs

Thornton Jenkins, former Missouri cage mainstay, is still blazin' away in A.A.U. ranks.

In his second year with the Denver Chevrolets, "Jenks" led his club to the semi-finals of the A.A.U. tournament held in Denver late in March. He was one of ten players selected on the all-tourney team.

Over the regular season, the Chevs won 27 games, and lost 15, with the ju-z-chinned Jenkins showing the way. In 34 games, he tossed in 352 points. His 117 field goals and 118 free throws were tops in both departments.

Jenkins will have an extended basketball season this year. His Chevrolet team has been booked to play a series of exhibition games through South America.

A four-year letterman at Mizzou, Jenkins played for the Tigers in 1943, '46 '47 and '48. He captained the squad in his junior and senior years, and was an all-conference choice in both those campaigns.

R. A. Graham, president, and Charles N. Barnard, secretary, of the New York chapter of the Missouri Alumni Association send us reports of their meeting on March 8 when a representative group of about fifty met at the Phi Gam house for cocktails before attending the St. Louis Symphony concert at Carnegie Hall. Included in this attendance were several members of the February graduating class.

Tiger Tales

After graduating from the College of Engineering of the University of Missouri, A.B. GRIGGS began an interesting career of railroad work. Fifty-one years ago last month he began work on double track and grade reduction for the Burlington in Iowa. During the first eight years following graduation Mr. Griggs held several different jobs. One year was spent as Instructor in Civil Engineering at Cincinnati University. In 1907 he entered the service of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railway on line and grade reduction work in Texas. In 1915 he was placed in the Valuation Department where he remained for thirty-six years, retiring December 31, 1941, at the age of seventy.

Mr. Griggs mentions the passing of two of his classmates, CHARLES KEITH, who was employed in the Chief Engineer's office of the Burlington at Chicago, and E. P. WEATHERLY, a general contractor in Kansas City.

FRANCES BELL HATCHER retired from active work as a teacher in 1940 because she was needed at home, but found she was also needed for tutoring students from the universities, colleges and high schools in and near Atlanta, Georgia, where she lives at 704 Myrtle St., N. E. Miss Hatcher is still teaching most of the time, although technically "retired."

1903

ERNEST F. ROBINSON is consulting engineer to the government of Venezuela on Harbor Project for the Oil Port of Maracaibo.

1905

HANS WULFF, lawyer, at 422 Title Guaranty Building, St. Louis, Mo., would like to hear from members of the class of '05. He mentions CURTIS WILLIAMS, who lives in Mt. Vernon, Ill., J. R. NAPTON in Marshall, Mo., JOSEPH KENTON in Kansas City, Mo., JOSEPH T. DAVIS,

Washington, Mo., and RALPH FINLEY, St. Louis.

From McKeesport, Pennsylvania, WRAY DUDLEY writes that he keeps an eye on the Tiger fortunes every year, although we know his duties with the Patterson-Emerson-Comstock firm of consulting engineers keep him busy. Mrs. Dudley was the former Mary Alice Hennen. The Dudleys have three sons, all technical graduates, and five grandchildren. Their address is 2020 Bridge St., McKeesport.

JAMES I. MALLOTT retired six years ago after being in charge of the Department of Education in the State Teachers' College of River Falls, Wisconsin. Professor Mallott is a member of many honorary and service organizations, both national and local, and at seventy-five remains active in their programs. Very interesting are his hobbies—refinishing furniture, doing cabinet work and gardening. In his small wild flower garden he has some sixty or seventy varieties of Wisconsin wild flowers, some very rare. His iris garden contains about 75 varieties, and he plants some 350 to 450 gladioli bulbs each year. Add to these varied interests and activities a miscellany of hyanthi, crocuses, daffodils and so forth, and the answer must be a busy and very interesting retirement.

The MALOTTs have one daughter, Mrs. Cyril L. Stout. Dr. Stout is Associate Professor of geography in Western Michigan College of Education, Kalamazoo, Wisconsin.

CHESTER A. MARR is practicing law in Minneapolis, Minnesota, 1400 Northwestern Bank Building. Prior to his removal to Minneapolis in 1924, Mr. Marr served as assistant Attorney General of North Dakota. Mrs. Marr was Nelle Sanford of Holliday, Missouri.

Arter thirty-nine years in the U. S. Army, Col. Foster retired in 1944. The Fosters have lived in Germany with the Army of Occupation after World War I, in the Panama Canal Zone, in six states, and the District of Columbia. They are now at home—670 Forty-second Avenue, San Francisco, Calif.

F. C. IRION, history teacher at Westport High School in Kansas City, Missouri, gives us a little variety to the spice of life by his poetic impulse:

"Have been teaching since 1902,
The same old thing and nothing new.
Have been at Westport since 1911,
Shall join the old gang soon in heaven.
Maybe—"

Who Pays for Federal Electric Power Projects?

YOU DO, Mr. and Mrs. Taxpayer!

Why? Because there just isn't anybody else to do it.

You have to put up the money with which to build the government power project . . . out of the Federal taxes you pay.

And then, if the tax-free public power project forces a business-managed, tax-paying electric enterprise out of business altogether . . . you have to pay some more. Your own personal tax burden becomes greater when the taxes of investor-owned electric companies disappear.

When, for example, $18,393,000 of Federal funds are to be spent by the Rural Electrification Administration to build unnecessary power facilities in Northwest Missouri—

When there is ample power capacity in the area already—

When the large government loan will not extend electric service to even one additional farmer—

When the loan creates a debt equal to $850.00 for each of the present R.E.A. customers in Northwest Missouri, to "save" each customer only 25 to 30 cents per month—

When all taxpayers should welcome some economy in Federal spending—

It's time you faced the fact that, one way or the other, YOU pay the cost of Federal electric power projects!

REDDY KILOWATT

Sincerely,

Reddy Kilowatt
