Light the way to anniversary

Frosty air, apple cider and the lighting of Jesse Hall dome usher in celebration.

University of Missouri

150

1839 - 1989

Jack Allen design

The Jesse Hall dome will be lit for the first time in its 92-year history Oct. 1 to kick off sesquicentennial planning activities. The University's 150th birthday will be observed in calendar year 1989. "The 150th anniversary of the founding of the University of Missouri presents an opportunity for remembering that education can open doors to success for all our citizens," says Chancellor Haskell Monroe. "The brightly lit dome atop Jesse Hall will remind all Missourians of their rich educational heritage and light the way for them to reach new goals in the future."

Festivities will begin downtown in front of the Boone County Courthouse columns at 7 p.m. A ceremony including Columbia Mayor Rodney Smith, Reps. Ken Jacob and Chris Kelly and Sen. Roger Wilson will give way to a procession headed by the ROTC flag unit and Marching Mizzou. Tiny lights strung on trees will illuminate and guide the procession down Eighth Street, called the Avenue of the Columns, to Francis Quadrangle.

As the procession enters Francis Quadrangle at 7:40 p.m., it will be greeted by the University Singers performing the alma mater. Speakers including University President C. Peter Magrath, Monroe and history Professor Arvarh Strickland will address the crowd from a lectern believed to have been used by Samuel Clemens (Mark Twain) while receiving an honorary doctorate at Mizzou in 1902.

The lighting of the columns and the Jesse Hall dome will be followed by a fireworks display. The lighting is scheduled to begin at 8:50 p.m. with apple cider and pumpkin cake being served afterward. "It's the University's chance to showcase history, achievement, quality of programs and quality represented by faculty and staff," says Chris Koukola, assistant vice chancellor for University Relations.

Phil Shocklee, assistant director of communications in Campus Facilities, says the lighting should have a dramatic impact. Twelve 1,000-watt bulbs will light up the dome exterior. Inside, three bulbs totaling 750 watts will create a soft lighting effect. After the official dome lighting, the dome lights will be on a timer to turn off automatically at dawn.

Inside Jesse Hall, two exhibits will be displayed, "Why Tigers?" and "History of Architecture and Design of Francis Quadrangle." Prepared by the Missouri Cultural Heritage Center, "Why Tigers" covers the history and background of the Tiger mascot.

Those who attend the celebration are asked to show their spirit by wearing black and gold. In case of bad weather, the lighting ceremony will be held Oct. 15.

"With the dome lighting we officially begin the celebration of this institution's proud history," Monroe says. Other events in the coming year might include exhibits, lectures, art shows and a costume ball. "This is an isolated instance that says we're getting ready," says Don Haskell, director of University Events. "It's just a small taste of the celebrating we're going to be doing for a whole year."

New director wows crowds

P.T. Barnum was the mastermind behind the "greatest show on earth." His three-ring spectacles thrilled thousands and made him a showbiz legend. Barnum's one-of-a-kind theatrical flair has a fan in Don Haskell. He appreciates the great showman's genius that kept the crowds coming back for more, and envies the job with entertainment as its goal.

It's fitting then that Haskell is Mizzou's first director of University Events and Projects. It's a job in which he'll have plenty of opportunities to wow the crowds.

His first production is the University's 1989 sesquicentennial celebration, beginning with the Oct. 1 lighting of Jesse Hall's dome. Additional responsibilities for the newly created position within University Relations include commencement, faculty recognition and other special University events.

Before coming to Mizzou this August, Haskell was assistant dean of fine arts and acting head of the department of drama at the University of Arizona. He has directed more than 100 college and professional musical productions, experience that should come in handy when he's coordinating the players for the University events.

Professionally, he's known for his lighting designs for stage and screen productions, including a recent Public Broadcasting Service special "Minnelli on Minnelli: Liza

Mizzou's first director of University Events and Projects is Don Haskell.

Remembers Her Father," a tribute to Vincent Minnelli, starring his daughter. "That was part of my life. It wasn't unusual for me to catch a non-stop flight from Tucson to Los Angeles to work on a project," Haskell says. "I'll probably miss something like spending 16 hours with Liza Minnelli. It will be my job to create some of that magic here."

He's confident that can be done. "Part of what attracted me to this job was the opportunity to work with people who didn't instantly say, 'No, it can't be done.'" The first test of that can-do spirit is the dome lighting. And as the day of the event draws close, Haskell, who will move the event along from start to finish, predicts success. He's already working on future sesquicentennial projects, and he welcomes any suggestions from faculty, staff and students. After all, they're all part of the cast.

$100 deductible option to be offered

Employee Benefits is offering a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity for employees.

During the Nov. 1 through 15 open enrollment change period, when you can change benefit deductible plans, anyone currently enrolled in the $500 deductible may switch to the $100 deductible without showing proof of good health. Any changes made will be effective Jan. 1, 1988.

The one-time exception will be granted to give employees the opportunity to take advantage of the preferred provider financial incentives offered to those in the $100 deductible plan. (See Sept. 22 Mizzou Weekly.)

Currently, employees who want to change from the $500 deductible medical benefit plan to the $100 deductible plan must show evidence of good health. That policy will again be effective following this one-time exception.

PRE-CONCERT BUFFETS SCHEDULED

The Hawthorn Room in Memorial Union is serving buffets before some Concert Series performances this season. Just show your Concert Series ticket, and you may dine for $8.

The buffets will be served before performances of the Los Angeles Piano Quartet Oct. 4, the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra Oct. 11, the Murray Louis Dance Co. with the Dave Brubeck Quartet Oct. 31, the New York City Opera Feb. 17 and Murray Perahia March 4.

For information on serving times or reservations call 882-7405.

RECEPTION HONORS VGR COORDINATOR

A reception honoring Betty Cook Rottmann, coordinator of Visitor and Guest Relations, upon her retirement after 29 years of service at Mizzou will be held from 4 to 6 p.m. Oct. 8 in Memorial Union's Faculty-Alumni Lounge.

The event is co-sponsored by University Relations and Women Studies.

MVP PROGRAM PLANS RECEPTION

A reception to introduce more faculty and staff to Mizzou's Visiting Professionals program, or MVP, will be held from 4 to 5 p.m. Oct. 7 at the Alumni Center. Chancellor Haskell Monroe, an MVP volunteer, will speak.

MVP participants may volunteer to be the Mizzou liaison for their high-school alma mater, a member of the MVP speaker's bureau or to teach a class at a high school.

For more information on the program, call Joyce Lake, outreach committee chair, at 882-6611. If you wish to attend the reception, call Lake by noon Oct. 5.

LEARN HOW TO DOUSE THAT FIRE!

A hands-on fire extinguisher training session is scheduled from 1 to 3 p.m. Oct. 9 at the Research Park Development Building as part of Environmental Health and Safety's observation of Fire Prevention Week.

The session, prepared in cooperation with the Missouri Fire and Rescue Training Institute, will feature a film followed by practice using various kinds of extinguishers.

To register call Ray Morrison, safety representative, at 882-7018.

Staff Council plans protest of statements

Staff Council will protest recent statements by University curator Sam Cook and the University's Faculty Council. The group met Sept. 24 at the Hearnes Center.

The council voiced its dismay at a statement in the Sept. 22 issue of Faculty Forum, which began, "Recognizing that the faculty are the University" and continued by outlining the Faculty Council's plan to attain higher faculty salaries. "I wish them well, but I don't want them to get a big piece of the cake and we're left behind," said council member Harold Lynch, senior audiovisual/television production technician with the School of Medicine's Educational Resources Group.

The council agreed to invite Faculty Council Chair John Bauman, professor of chemistry, to an upcoming meeting to discuss the apparent division between faculty and staff on campus and to suggest ways the groups could work together to attain improved benefits for all employees.

The council also agreed to draft a letter to newly appointed University curator Sam Cook of Jefferson City. At the Sept. 10-11 Board of Curators meeting in Columbia, Cook supported salary increases for faculty only rather than for both faculty and staff, whom he referred to as "non-essential."

The council will send copies of the letter to UM President C. Peter Magrath, Gov. John Ashcroft, Chancellor Haskell Monroe, Rep. Chris Kelly, D-Columbia, and Sen. Roger Wilson, D-Columbia.

Council Chair Jo Pflieger, administrative assistant in veterinary microbiology, said she had received several calls from administrators and staff members asking the council to take action on Cook's comment.

Pflieger also reported that Magrath had replied to the council's petition voicing its concern about low salary increases. The president said he appreciated the council's concern and was committed to increasing salaries for all University employees, as reflected in the .9 increase approved at the Sept. 10-11 curators' meeting.

In other business, Toni Gordon, assistant manager of University Hospital's Sameday Surgery and co-chair of the council's historical committee, urged committee chairs to keep their notebooks up to date to ensure an accurate record of council actions. Gordon also suggested the council celebrate its 10th anniversary in 1988 by incorporating a reunion of past council members into Staff Recognition Week.

She credited former council member Jim Bonuchi, mechanical trades specialist at University Hospital and Clinics, with the idea. "Jim thought the group could get together and brainstorm for ideas that the council could work on in the years ahead," she said. The council unanimously supported the idea.

Dean of medicine accepts position at Washington

Michael E. Whitcomb, dean of the School of Medicine, has been appointed dean of the University of Washington School of Medicine in Seattle. His resignation is effective Jan. 1, 1988. Whitcomb came to Mizzou June 16, 1986.

Provost Lois DeFleur says an interim dean will be appointed, and the search for a new dean will begin immediately.

The University of Washington School of Medicine is the second-largest medical school in the United States, ranking among the top five in the country in federal research support. "The decision to accept the position in Washington is made with mixed emotions," Whitcomb says. "My respect and admiration for the faculty and staff have grown with each month that I have been dean. I also have great respect for the medical students and their commitment to their own education."

BUSINESS SERVICES SEMINARS SET

Business Services is conducting a series of seminars Oct. 6 through 8 to explain some of the intricacies of running the University.

Seminar topics Oct. 6 are payroll, telecommunications, environmental health and safety, and procurement/materials management. Oct. 7 sessions cover mail services, business services, printing services and record management. Accounting services-forms and accounting services-AM090/91 are Oct. 8 topics. For details see the Calendar on Page 7.

For a registration form call 882-4859.

HAVE QUESTIONS ABOUT INSURANCE?

Edward King, director of UM's Risk and Insurance Management program, will meet with Mizzou employees from 1 to 4 p.m. Oct. 7 in S4 Memorial Union to answer questions regarding the University's property/casualty insurance programs.

A 15-minute presentation on commercial and self-insured programs will be followed by a question-and-answer period. For more information call Pat Higgins, manager of business/fiscal operations, at 882-7254.

EXAMINING FUTURE OF RURAL AMERICA

The College of Public and Community Services will sponsor a forum on "The Future of Rural America: Innovation, Intervention, Resignation,....?" from Oct. 5 through 9 in Memorial Union Auditorium.

A panel discussion on the "Status and Trends in Rural America," featuring experts in banking, research and sociology, will begin the seminar at 1:30 p.m. Oct. 5.

Other fields to be represented during the forum are management and technology, publishing and politics.

WORK OUT KINKS WITH A MASSAGE

The Student Physical Therapy Association will sponsor its annual therapeutic massage day from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. Oct. 2 in 137 Clark Hall.

Massages include back and neck massage and cost $3 for 15 minutes. You may walk in or buy tickets in advance. For tickets or information call 882-7103.

James traces Mizzou roots

Editor:

I thought it would be of interest in preparing for the 150th anniversary of the founding of the University of Missouri that a descendent of a member of the first Board of Curators is employed here at this time. William Lientz, my great-great-grandfather, served on the first Board of Curators in 1839 and also was a member of the building committee to receive bids for the completion of the building according to plan and specifications.

Montgomery P. Lientz, my great-great grandfather, son of William Lientz, donated $125 to aid in the initial financing of the school. William A. Lientz, my great uncle, son of Montgomery P. Lientz, graduated from Mizzou in 1868. He was distinguished as delivering the commencement salutary address in Latin. He won the Stephens Prize Medal as the best orator in the contest. Oratory skills were very important in those days and much influence was placed on this achievement.

This information is authenticated in Switzer's "History of Boone County." Needless to say we are very proud of this heritage and it would be interesting to know just how many descendents are still around, especially ones connected with Mizzou.

We plan on attending the dome lighting ceremony at Jesse Hall Oct. 1 to honor the founders of the University, and it gives us a good feeling to know that our ancestors had the foresight to contribute even a small part in the founding of this great institution. We definitely will have a lump in our throats when the lights go on at Jesse!

Departments: file PAFs promptly

There's a piece of paper on campus with the power to affect your health benefits and put you on the payroll. You're an unknown to Employee Benefits and Payroll until a copy of the Personnel Action Form, or PAF, arrives in those offices.

"We've had employees show up at our office with their enrollment cards ready to start their benefits, but if their PAF hasn't been processed we have no evidence that they are a benefit-eligible employee," says Mary Ann Tipton, manager of UM Employee Benefits.

Tipton says the problem is a daily occurrence. She advises taking first things first. "The PAF is initiated by the departments. Before they come to see us, employees should talk with the person in their department who handles the paperwork to ensure the PAF process has been initiated. We're concerned because we see employees who suffer the consequences of a delay in the process," Tipton says.

Part-time employees who move up to a 75 percent or more FTE post also run into trouble if a PAF indicating the change is not filed. "They know they're eligible for benefits because they moved into the full-time position, but if we don't have a record of the change, we can't initiate their benefits," Tipton says.

Jim Robinson, manager of Cashiers/Payroll and Student Accounts, calls the delay "an age-old problem at the University. Typically, appointment forms don't arrive on time (for the employee to be paid on that first pay day.)

"The payroll system is tightly scheduled. But, if the appointment papers miss one of the times we draw the checks, we have what we call a hand-drawn check process," Robinson says, explaining that his office will write payroll checks for employees whose PAF has not yet arrived.

"Considering how many employees we have, I'd say we do a pretty good job. Processing the PAF is always our top priority," says Sadie McFadin, administrative manager for the College of Arts and Science. Paperwork for 420 faculty members, some 600 other teaching staff and 150 staff members passes through her office. But, McFadin acknowledges that there are some unavoidable delays, such as the new immigration law that requires departments to determine that all its employees hired after Nov. 6, 1986, are eligible to work in the United States.

"This is money to you," Tipton says. "We should be just as concerned when our benefits start as we are about our salaries. But, without a PAF on file the benefits office can't determine an employee's eligibility or effectivity."

Equipment update

Elevators may be on their way up...er, out at University Hospital and Clinics.

The Board of Curators is expected to consider bids for elevator renovation at the hospital, says Jim Cleveland, associate hospital administrator. Also on the curators' agenda will be a new electrical distribution system for the hospital. The board's next meeting will be Oct. 29-30 in Columbia.

At the Sept. 10-11 meeting, curators approved the sale of $8.4 million in hospital revenue bonds. Money from the bond sales will be used to pay for both projects, including a $1.2 million debt-service reserve.

The elevator modernization will cost $1 million, Cleveland says. Seven of the hospital's 13 elevators will get a new control system and cabs. Those seven are the original, eight-story elevators installed when the hospital was built in the early '50s. Work will begin on the elevators in August 1988. Because the hospital depends heavily on vertical transportation, he says, the elevators will be revamped one at a time. Therefore, the project will last approximately 42 months.

The electrical distribution system also is of 1950s vintage, Cleveland says. The new $6.2 million state-of-the-art system will increase the hospital's electrical capacity from 2,000 kilovolt ampere to 4,000 kilovolt ampere. It also will increase emergency-generator capacity by 25 percent. The upgrades are necessary because of advances in medical technology, Cleveland says.

"In 1955, you didn't have intensive care or laser units. You didn't have a lot of high technology. But our needs have grown accordingly, with technology. For the hospital to stay in a high-tech mode, it's important we keep mechanical and electrical systems in optimal condition. We're planning for the next 25 years."

The hospital will begin taking bids for the electrical system in October. Construction will begin in January 1988 and should be completed in 24 months, Cleveland says.

FOR THE RECORD

HEARING: Act now if you wish to speak at the Board of Curators' Oct. 13 hearing on the University's investment policy in South Africa. Those who wish to speak must send written requests to Catherine Hunt, secretary to the board, 316 University Hall, by Oct. 1.

VAN POOL: The University van pool from Boonville, Mo., to campus has an opening for two riders. Current riders work from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Call Marsha Root at 882-2778.

Q&A

Q. KBIA broadcasts from University premises on University equipment; it is licensed to the curators of the University, staffed by University personnel, and the largest segment of its funding comes from the University budget. So, except for the one announcement at 5 a.m., how come station identifications no longer mention this connection with the University? Are they ashamed of us, or what? In fact, I actually heard twice in recent days, "KBIA, 91.3 FM, Jefferson City." What is going on?

A. "It's erroneous to say we only mention our University connection at 5 a.m.," says Mike Dunn, KBIA general manager. "We don't say it as much as in the past, but we do say it at least once an hour."

Dunn says the station is not "ashamed" of its University connection and acknowledges that the bulk of its funding comes from the University. "But, market research shows that if listeners constantly are reminded that we receive University funds, they will be less likely to support the station. A lot of people think the University has plenty of money. That's why we are emphasizing that we are a member-supported station, in addition to University support, to encourage listeners to support us."

The station is using dual call letters to expand its appeal. "Columbia is our home base, but KBIA is a regional station," Dunn says. "We're the only station in Columbia that reaches as far as we do. We can be heard in 10 or 11 counties around Boone County." The station uses Jefferson City in the call letters because, next to Columbia, it is the largest city where KBIA can be heard and because it is the state capitol. "We want listeners to know we're not just a Columbia news station, but a regional news station. We need to expand the station as much as we can."

Q. I thought there were going to be parking meters on the top level of the University Avenue garage. Is that still the plan?

A. "The parking meters have been ordered and will be installed as soon as they arrive," says Jim Joy, director of Parking and Transportation Services. Once the meters are installed, students and visitors will be allowed to park on the top level of the garage.

Q. Why can't the faculty use the traditional University seal on stationery, visiting cards, etc.? The president does; the seal even appears on sweatshirts and pennants. Almost all the great universities use a seal; logos are for businesses and second-rate colleges. How about this one small step for Mizzou pride?

A. "The seal is used by the Board of Curators and its officers, including the president, general counsel, secretary and treasurer. Otherwise, everyone uses the logo," says Bob Mussman, director of UM University Relations. "That's our official University policy as adopted by the board. (The writer) is correct in saying that other universities use their seal, but not all. Several major universities use a logo in their printed material."

The logo was adopted in 1974 to provide a unifying design. According to the handbook on use of the University symbol, "The image the University projects through its printed material must be clear, forceful and memorable. In the past a hodge-podge of designs has distorted the overall University image. These designs included a variety of type styles, unrestricted use of the University seal and an absence of coordinated graphics."

The handbook also includes guidelines on the use of the seal. They read as follows: The University symbol does not replace the official seal of the University approved by the Board of Curators in 1903. However, the seal has a more restricted, formal use. Its appropriate use is on official and legal University documents, diplomas, certificates, the University flags and in official ceremonies.

The rules officially adopted by the curators governing the use of the seal include:

- the seal may appear on printed matter which is considered "official." Examples are diplomas, official records, certificates and formal invitations from University officials.

- use of the seal in printed materials should be reserved for special documents rather than routine subjects.

There are "unofficial" uses of the seal, such as on sweatshirts and pennants. In most of those cases, use of the seal has not been approved by the University.

Q. Your Sept. 15 issue indicated that a preferred provider organization had been approved for most employees and that one of the benefits would be elimination of the annual $100 deductible. Which employees are eligible to participate? Will there be a deductible reduction for those in the $500 plan? If, as I suspect, the answer to the second question is no, I wish to protest. This is a change which would have influenced my choice of plan had I known about it.

A. "All enrollees in the University's medical benefits plan will automatically be part of the PPO. The $100 deductible has not been eliminated. Only when an employee who is enrolled in the $100 deductible plan uses a preferred provider is the $100 deductible waived," explains Mary Ann Tipton, manager of UM Employee Benefits. "If an employee chooses to use a medical provider not in the PPO, both the $100 and the $500 deductibles will apply."

"Employees enrolled in the $500 deductible will receive the significantly discounted rates offered by preferred providers. Those in the $500 deductible do not have access to the financial incentives offered to those in the $100 deductible because they pay approximately one-half of the annual premium of those in the $100 deductible. And, furthermore, anyone in the $500 deductible plan may switch to the $100 deductible by furnishing evidence of good health."

This fall, however, employees can take advantage of a break in that rule. In response to the PPO incentives, Employee Benefits is offering a one-time open enrollment option for those in the $500 deductible who want to move to the $100 deductible. During the Nov. 1-15 open enrollment period, you may switch plans without showing evidence of good health. See story on Page 1.

Q. What's the deal? Campus Facilities trucks now have reserved parking spots in the University Avenue garage. I understand that they pay to park in that garage, but so do I. Gee, can I have a reserved spot, too?

A. Campus Facilities has reserved parking spots in the garage as part of its maintenance facilities housed there. "The garage is a supply point. And the electricians and plumbers who work out of that shop need to have easy access to their vehicles so they can get what they need and get back out on campus," says Jim Joy, director of Parking and Transportation Services. Campus Facilities is paying rent to have the shop located in the garage. According to Joy, that rent more than compensates for the reserved spots.

Whom would you like as your representative to Staff Advisory Council? Now is the time to speak up. The council is accepting nominations for its fall elections when five new members will be elected. Members of Staff Council serve three-year terms and act as an advisory board for the chancellor.

The council is composed of 16 members, four from each of the following job classifications: administrative/professional, crafts/maintenance, secretarial/clerical and technical/paraprofessional.

To nominate someone, fill out the form at left and return it by 5 p.m. Oct. 16 to Suzanne Schoonover, 215 Agricultural Engineering Bldg. You may nominate employees from any of the four job classifications.

A slate of candidates will be prepared from the list of nominees. Ballots will be mailed in November to all eligible staff. Election results will be announced in November.

For more information about Staff Advisory Council, call Suzanne Schoonover, administrative assistant in Agricultural Engineering, at 882-2369; Harold Lynch, senior audiovisual/television production technician with the School of Medicine's Educational Resources Group, at 882-6919; Linda Holsinger, executive staff assistant I in the College of Agriculture, at 882-3752; or Roger Casadei, janitor with Campus Facilities, at 882-6648.

Welcoming new students to Mizzou

Minority Mentor Program links faculty and staff with new students to ease the college blues.

Paulette Grimes struck a sympathetic chord in Carol Waits when she initiated the Minority Mentor Program.

"When I look back on my own college days, I remember that I didn't have any real close friends or associates whom I could talk to either professionally or personally," Waits says. A personnel associate in Personnel Services, Waits volunteered as a program mentor to help students over those rough spots and to ease that inevitable sense of isolation. She has been with the program since it began in 1982.

When Grimes, director of the Office of Minority and Special Student Programs, developed the volunteer program, she saw it as a way to help students feel at home on campus and, in turn, to increase the retention rate of minority students. The Minority Mentor Program matches incoming minority students with faculty, staff and older students who can share their campus experiences.

Mentors brush-up on their knowledge of campus resources. They learn about groups on campus that the student can join and where to turn if the student is having academic or emotional problems, including the singular stresses facing a minority student on a predominantly white campus.

Although helping their students make the grade is important, the emphasis isn't completely on academics. "Nothing is engraved in stone," Grimes told a group of new mentors at an orientation session earlier this month. "Take your student out to dinner. It's not all academics and tough stuff. Sometimes they just want to talk."

In the summer, Grimes writes a letter inviting all incoming minority students to join the program. This year 67 students are in the program and 88 faculty, staff and students volunteered as mentors. Grimes assigns mentors to students. It's up to the mentor to contact the student and to get the relationship started.

For Sandra Gautt, associate professor of special education, it was a relationship that lasted throughout her first student's college years. "I followed her through until her graduation last May," Gautt says. "It's another dimension to my teaching and advising role. I can form a relationship with a student that lasts over a longer period."

PARKING AND TRANSPORTATION SERVICES

107 SWALLOW
882-4568

The organizational meeting of the Campus Parking Committee is scheduled for September 28 at 3:40 p.m. in S110 Memorial Union. This meeting is open and attendance is encouraged.

A topic that will be considered by the Campus Parking Committee this year is motorcycle parking on campus. We would like responses to these questions:

1. Would you be in favor of establishing concrete pads for motorcycle parking for employees and students?
2. Should there be a charge?
3. Should the pads be located next to buildings or in parking lots?

Written comments should be sent to 107 Swallow Hall.
