Keep writing, keep appreciating your family, and keep crying. Even in front of your kids. Emotional honesty sets a noble example. I am so sorry about your father and your business. Some things aren’t meant for you to fix.