TUITION AND FEES, PER SEMESTER

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>School</th>
<th>Proposed tuition and fees (FY 2012)</th>
<th>Proposed increase</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>KU Lawrence</td>
<td>$2,830.05</td>
<td>4.9%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>KU Lawrence compact*</td>
<td>$3,860.00</td>
<td>5.1%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>KSU</td>
<td>$3,176.00</td>
<td>5.1%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>WSU</td>
<td>$3,095.00</td>
<td>5.1%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>PSU</td>
<td>$3,476.00</td>
<td>5.1%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>ESU</td>
<td>$305.00</td>
<td>3.7%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>FHSU</td>
<td>$205.00</td>
<td>2.5%</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

*Includes fees for nonresident graduate students attending the K-State College of Veterinary Medicine.

In addition to raising tuition, KU has also proposed increases to specific course fees and some campuswide fees. Undergraduates could see a 6 percent increase, and graduate students a 4 percent increase. KU’s proposed tuition increase would go into effect this fall.

The No. 3 candidate is Jose- mano Vazquez Mota, Mexico’s National Action Party, which has held the office of president for much of the 20th century. Only one recent poll, conducted for the Reforma newspaper, gives Mexicans a chance to size them up. Unlike the first on May 14, this campaign will be much more carefully controlled and scrutinized, Abundis said.

“In a presidential campaign there’s a lot of ‘continuity,’” Abundis said. “But new students entering the university in 2006 after he lost the presidency for the first time will have to face 5.1 percent increases.”

According to the proposal, the increased tuition will generate $14.42 million for the Lawrence campus, KU plans to use the money to expand in Health Program, experimental learning opportunities and other similar programs. The additional support will assist in the roles of students, faculty and recruit new students.

KU has also earmarked $1.1 million for the Tuition Grant program, bringing the annual amount of money for eligible students to $10.5 million. The remaining portion of the $14.42 million will be used for other purposes, such as paying health insurance costs, faculty and staff salaries and support for technology improvements.

The tuition increase is the fifth-lowest, according to the University of Kansas, said WSU and the Student Government Association vice president, said student government members meet one-on-one with department officials to determine need and recommend funds for WSU’s $15.8 million budget every year. In addition to tuition, WSU has proposed a student fee increase.

“This year, we were lucky because we only increased fees to match inflation,” Sullivan said. The proposed fee increase is 1.75 percent, or 60 cents per credit hour.

“IT’s important that people know that tuition increases are mostly due to the economy,” she added.

K-State

Courtney Taylor, a 20-year-old junior majoring in director of Kansas State University, said the university aims to maintain the quality of a K-State degree,” Shubert said. “We’re very conscious (of the student and what the state needs),” Taylor said. “We really have to balance that with the quality of a K-State degree,” Shubert added.

Other changes

All Kansas schools submitted requests for tuition and fee increases at some point. The tuition increase is the fifth-lowest, according to the University of Kansas, said new students entering the university in 2006 after he lost the presidency for the first time will have to face 5.1 percent increases.”

According to the proposal, the increased tuition will generate $14.42 million for the Lawrence campus, KU plans to use the money to expand in Health Program, experimental learning opportunities and other similar programs. The additional support will assist in the roles of students, faculty and recruit new students.

KU has also earmarked $1.1 million for the Tuition Grant program, bringing the annual amount of money for eligible students to $10.5 million. The remaining portion of the $14.42 million will be used for other purposes, such as paying health insurance costs, faculty and staff salaries and support for technology improvements.

The tuition increase is the fifth-lowest, according to the University of Kansas, said WSU and the Student Government Association vice president, said student government members meet one-on-one with department officials to determine need and recommend funds for WSU’s $15.8 million budget every year. In addition to tuition, WSU has proposed a student fee increase.

“This year, we were lucky because we only increased fees to match inflation,” Sullivan said. The proposed fee increase is 1.75 percent, or 60 cents per credit hour.

“IT’s important that people know that tuition increases are mostly due to the economy,” she added.

K-State

Courtney Taylor, a 20-year-old junior majoring in director of Kansas State University, said the university aims to maintain the quality of a K-State degree,” Shubert said. “We’re very conscious (of the student and what the state needs),” Taylor said. “We really have to balance that with the quality of a K-State degree,” Shubert added.

Other changes

All Kansas schools submitted requests for tuition and fee increases at some point. The tuition increase is the fifth-lowest, according to the University of Kansas, said new students entering the university in 2006 after he lost the presidency for the first time will have to face 5.1 percent increases.”

According to the proposal, the increased tuition will generate $14.42 million for the Lawrence campus, KU plans to use the money to expand in Health Program, experimental learning opportunities and other similar programs. The additional support will assist in the roles of students, faculty and recruit new students.

KU has also earmarked $1.1 million for the Tuition Grant program, bringing the annual amount of money for eligible students to $10.5 million. The remaining portion of the $14.42 million will be used for other purposes, such as paying health insurance costs, faculty and staff salaries and support for technology improvements.

The tuition increase is the fifth-lowest, according to the University of Kansas, said new students entering the university in 2006 after he lost the presidency for the first time will have to face 5.1 percent increases.”

According to the proposal, the increased tuition will generate $14.42 million for the Lawrence campus, KU plans to use the money to expand in Health Program, experimental learning opportunities and other similar programs. The additional support will assist in the roles of students, faculty and recruit new students.

KU has also earmarked $1.1 million for the Tuition Grant program, bringing the annual amount of money for eligible students to $10.5 million. The remaining portion of the $14.42 million will be used for other purposes, such as paying health insurance costs, faculty and staff salaries and support for technology improvements.

The tuition increase is the fifth-lowest, according to the University of Kansas, said new students entering the university in 2006 after he lost the presidency for the first time will have to face 5.1 percent increases.”

According to the proposal, the increased tuition will generate $14.42 million for the Lawrence campus, KU plans to use the money to expand in Health Program, experimental learning opportunities and other similar programs. The additional support will assist in the roles of students, faculty and recruit new students.

KU has also earmarked $1.1 million for the Tuition Grant program, bringing the annual amount of money for eligible students to $10.5 million. The remaining portion of the $14.42 million will be used for other purposes, such as paying health insurance costs, faculty and staff salaries and support for technology improvements.

The tuition increase is the fifth-lowest, according to the University of Kansas, said new students entering the university in 2006 after he lost the presidency for the first time will have to face 5.1 percent increases.”

According to the proposal, the increased tuition will generate $14.42 million for the Lawrence campus, KU plans to use the money to expand in Health Program, experimental learning opportunities and other similar programs. The additional support will assist in the roles of students, faculty and recruit new students.

KU has also earmarked $1.1 million for the Tuition Grant program, bringing the annual amount of money for eligible students to $10.5 million. The remaining portion of the $14.42 million will be used for other purposes, such as paying health insurance costs, faculty and staff salaries and support for technology improvements.

The tuition increase is the fifth-lowest, according to the University of Kansas, said new students entering the university in 2006 after he lost the presidency for the first time will have to face 5.1 percent increases.”

According to the proposal, the increased tuition will generate $14.42 million for the Lawrence campus, KU plans to use the money to expand in Health Program, experimental learning opportunities and other similar programs. The additional support will assist in the roles of students, faculty and recruit new students.

KU has also earmarked $1.1 million for the Tuition Grant program, bringing the annual amount of money for eligible students to $10.5 million. The remaining portion of the $14.42 million will be used for other purposes, such as paying health insurance costs, faculty and staff salaries and support for technology improvements.

The tuition increase is the fifth-lowest, according to the University of Kansas, said new students entering the university in 2006 after he lost the presidency for the first time will have to face 5.1 percent increases.”

According to the proposal, the increased tuition will generate $14.42 million for the Lawrence campus, KU plans to use the money to expand in Health Program, experimental learning opportunities and other similar programs. The additional support will assist in the roles of students, faculty and recruit new students. 