The singleness of purpose which drives the compulsive personality from the moment of the decision to enter the field of Medicine is occasionally known to flag, sometimes at singularly unpropitious moments.. (The night before the Physiology final, . . . The morning after the "A-Review," . . .When the third multip of the evening precipitates in bed . . .); and yet the cycle persists, the momentum of each footstep-dragging weary day upon its successor somehow brings the bleary-eyed student to his goal: The Herb Green Gown and the "M.D." that shall hereafter embellish his name, and hopefully, all of his future endeavors.

Now unleashed, the inner furies of a broadening self drive toward the ever-expanding, ill-defined and generally nebulous concept of "the mature and integrated personality" . . . The Compleat L.M.D. . . .

And so, other goals fixed, a new cycle begins; one which will eventually lead some to frustrating obscurity, many others to dedicated and useful though perhaps unspectacular lives, and perhaps one or two into the company of the immortals: Halsted, Osler, (or closer to home) Batson, or McDowell.

The avowed theme of this, the Second Edition of MUTation, is twofold: the first is to present the Herb Green of the physician's robe; the second is the Physical Growth and Progress so evident at U.M.M.C.

"Turning the accomplishment of many years
Into an hourglass; for the which supply,
Admit me Chorus to this history;
Who, prologue-like, your humble patience pray
Gently to hear, kindly to judge . . . . ."

The Oath of Hippocrates

I Swear by Apollo, the physician, and Aesculapius, and Health, and All-heal, and all the gods and goddesses, that, according to my ability and judgment, I will keep this oath and stipulation: to reckon him who taught me this art equally dear to me as my parents, to share my substance with him and relieve his necessities if required; to regard his offspring as on the same footing with my own brothers, and to teach them this art if they should wish to learn it, without fee or stipulation, and that by precept, lecture and every other mode of instruction, I will impart a knowledge of the art to my own sons and to those of my teachers, and to disciples bound by a stipulation and oath, according to the law of medicine, but to nourish others.

C. I Will follow that method of treatment which, according to my ability and judgment, I consider for the benefit of my patients, and abstain from whatever is deleterious and mischievous. I will give no deadly medicine to anyone if asked, nor suggest any such counsel; furthermore, I will not give to a woman an instrument to produce abortion.

C. With Purity and with holiness I will pass my life and practice my art. I will not cut a person who is suffering with a stone, but will leave this to be done by practitioners of this work. Into whatever houses I enter I will go into them for the benefit of the sick and will abstain from every voluntary act of mischief and corruption; and further from the seduction of females or males, bond or free.

C. Whatever, in connection with my professional practice, or not in connection with it, I may see or hear in the lives of men which ought not to be spoken abroad, I will not divulge, as reckoning that all such should be kept secret.

C. While I Continue to keep this oath unviolated, may it be granted to me to enjoy life and the practice of the art, respected by all men at all times, but should I trespass and violate this oath, may the reverse be my lot.

An Editorial

To summarize the past year's events at the Medical Center would be rather like giving a blow-by-blow commentary on the changing Missouri weather. We, too, have had our heavy clouds, as the memorial pages attest, but there have been silver linings to even the darkest of these. Some of us have had their glimpse of rainbows too, and have gone off to seek their pot of gold.

Shafts of bright sunshine have burst forth in many unexpected directions, from the dimples seen with the smiles of our new Dean to those to be discovered on the knees of the svelte stenographers whose hemlines follow high fashion. (Which reminds us to petition the President to have the new parking regulations keep the girls' cars in the breezy lot down by the Arkansas border where the students park.)

A detailed list of all the gusts which have eddied through our long corridors during the past four seasons would sound like so much hot air. Suffice it to say, then that there has been a little blowing down and a lot of blowing up. The only literal icy blast we could complain of came from the new research wing at that odd stage reached in all public building where the workmen greet the first frost by tearing great holes here and there in the walls and floors, and then leave for Union conventions in Florida. The more recent tendency is rather the opposite. Possibly to cut down on the thin wind. Empire-conscious departments are beginning to plug up their corridors, with small secretarial emboli. The resulting tea-wave changes all but inundate the coffee--shop when they arrive.

Other notable weather phenomena, such as the hot glare reflected from the score board four hundred yards away during the home games this fall; the Ray of southern sunshine trapped on the fourth floor, or that thinner Ray who hopes to escape this summer; the many stars in ascendency, the novae and their attendant wise men, are on our map, showing each other warm or cold fronts, and indulging in occasional depressions.

And if you don't like it, just wait a minute!

History of the University of Missouri School of Medicine

With the graduation of twenty-one physicians on June 8, 1957 a new chapter was added to the long and rather eventful history of the University of Missouri School of Medicine. The third-year curriculum had been established in the fall of 1955 and on September 16, 1956, the new Medical Science Building and University Teaching Hospital were opened. Thus, a significant development had occurred in the 113 years since the first President of the University of Missouri, John H. Lathrop arranged an affiliation with the McDowell Medical School located in St. Louis. This affiliation was approved the following year by the Board of Curators in 1846 and the University had officially committed itself in the interest of medical education.

This affiliation with McDowell Medical College (after the Dean who founded it in 1840) was the first Medical School established west of the Mississippi River. It was a successful relationship. The diplomas from the medical department were signed by the president of the University and by professors of the medical faculty. (The professor of chemistry, for example, divided his time between the Columbia and St. Louis campuses.) One of the well recognized names among the students of that period was William Worrall Mayo, father of the famous Mayo brothers, who came to study with one of the teachers and to earn a second M.D. degree.

Following President Lathrop, the active interest he had shown in the Medical School lagged. For the first time, financial support was sought for the Medical School from the eighteenth General Assembly. The appropriation request of $10,000 was denied and an effort to permit each county in the state to send one student to the Medical School with payment of fees was defeated.

In commenting on this action in a speech to the Missouri State Medical Association in April, 1956, President Elmer Ellis suggests that, "---it is reasonable to assume that its failure marks a missed opportunity in the best of medical education in this state." Other delays and missed opportunities were to follow over the years. On July 4, 1856, the connection between the Medical School and the University ceased. It was not until December 11, 1872, that the Department of Medicine was established in the University of Missouri by vote of Board of Curators. Following a convocation address by Dr. John H. Duncan, a curator representative, instruction was formally opened February 17, 1873. After originally requiring two years of instruction the course was increased to three years in 1890 and a fourth year added in 1899. By 1886 a relationship with McDowell Medical School, now called Missouri Medical College, was re-established and students were encouraged to take their final or third year in St. Louis in what was called "Section two of the Medical School of the University of Missouri." During this fourteen year period from 1872-1886 Dr. Joseph G. Norwood served as Dean, the first Dean of the School of Medicine.

The first graduating class of the School of Medicine at Columbia received the M.D. degree in 1874. There were five graduates in this class. (Andrew Conway, John Duncan, Woodson Moss, Wilson Ragan and Willis Smith.) Only a total of thirty-nine degrees in the entire University were granted that year. The class of 1887, 1888, 1889 and 1890 listed graduates from Division I (Columbia) and from Division II (Missouri Medical College, St. Louis.)

In 1909, after failure of the legislature to appropriate sufficient funds, the third and fourth years were dropped, "temporarily." Thus the Medical School became a school of basic medical sciences for almost forty years except for an effort in 1930 when the Board of Curators embarked on an endeavor to again teach the full four-year curriculum at the University. The announcement of 1932 lists six junior students but with the depression this effort to rebuild the Medical School was abandoned.

Dean Norwood, a chemist, was succeeded by Dr. Andrew W. McAlester, Professor of Surgery and Obstetrics, who had been active in founding the school in 1872. He served as Dean from 1890-1909. Dr. Clarence M. Jackson served as Dean from 1909-1913. It was during those years that a medical research policy was established that gave the school a degree of national recognition. From 1913-1930, Dean Guy L. Noyes served. He was followed by Dr. Edgar Allen (1930-1933) until he was called to the Chair of Anatomy of Yale University. Dr. Dudley Steele Conley assumed the deanship in 1933 and served during the war years and until his retirement in 1948. Dr. T. H. Stubbs was appointed Dean from 1948-1951. Dr. M. Pinson Neal was then appointed acting Dean until the appointment of Dr. Roscoe L. Pullen in 1953. Dr. Vernon E. Wilson has served as Dean from 1959.

Over a period of years the entrance requirements have gradually been increased. In 1899 they were raised to require a high school diploma; in 1906, one year of college premedical training was added. In 1910 this was raised to include sixty credit hours and in 1928, to three years, or ninety hours. It is now recommended that a student obtain an A.B. or B.S. degree before entering medical school.

With the expansion of the Medical School the entering Freshman class was enlarged to include seventy-five students in 1956. In 1959 these students reached the senior year and the Medical School was at capacity. With the growth of the Medical School the departments of Anatomy, Microbiology, Physiology and Pharmacology, Biochemistry and Pathology have expanded and have developed strong graduate programs.

Likewise the clinical facilities in the teaching hospital have expanded and a wide variety of excellent clinical material is seen in the hospital. Residency programs for physicians have been fully approved in Medicine, Surgery, Pediatrics, Obstetrics and Gynecology, Anesthesiology and Pathology. Consultation service has been made available in most of the various specialties. Postgraduate teaching efforts have been promoted both on the campus and in various communities about the state.

Investigative work in support of research in the basic medical sciences as well as in the clinical areas, has been increasing in quality and in intensity. A large number of grants in support of this work have been given. Considerable instruction for students enrolled in other divisions of the University is given in the Medical School. The Nursing School has been graduating an increasingly large number of students to help alleviate the acute shortage of nurses. A Preceptorship program has been established. Instruction for training of technicians has been developed.

The major portion of all teaching for medical and nursing students of the University of Missouri is centered in the new Medical Center on Stadium Road. The Medical Center consists of three connecting units--the 441 bed University Hospital, the Medical Sciences Building and the Nurses' Residence Hall.

The University Hospital, eight stories high, contains the elements for both in-patient care, the offices, classrooms and research laboratories of the various clinical departments of internal medicine, surgery, the surgical specialties, obstetrics and gynecology, pediatrics, radiology, pathology, physical medicine, psychiatry, and related fields. The four-story Medical Sciences Building houses the administrative offices of the School of Medicine and the School of Nursing, the offices, teaching and research laboratories of the School of Nursing, the Departments of Anatomy, Biochemistry, Physiology and Pharmacology, Microbiology, Pathology, the Central Animal Quarters, Central Experiment Shop, classrooms and laboratories designed to accommodate one hundred students each. It is connected to the University Hospital by a two-story corridor containing an auditorium seating 342 persons and equipped with modern audio-visual aids, and the Medical Sciences Library. Offices and laboratories for clinical investigation are also located in this connecting corridor. The Nurses' Residence hall accommodates 107 student nurses and three house-mothers. It is connected to the University Hospital by an underground tunnel. More recently a powerful underground X-ray therapy unit has been added. An $800,000 five story research addition has recently been completed.

In addition to these facilities, the School of Medicine maintains teaching affiliations with the Ellis Fischel State Cancer Hospital in Columbia, the Student Health Service of the University of Missouri, the State Psychopathic Hospital in Fulton, the Children's Mercy Hospital in Kansas City, the Kansas City Receiving Hospital for psychiatric patients, and the St. Louis State Hospital in St. Louis. Other teaching affiliations can be consummated by special arrangements including the preceptorships in smaller and rural communities of the state of Missouri during the senior year in medical training.

In addressing the members of the Missouri State Medical Association on April 10, 1956, President Elmer Ellis (first University President to do so) reviewed the history of the Medical School and outlined the functions, goals and services of your Medical School in an address entitled, "What the University of Missouri School of Medicine Should Mean to the State." He concluded by stating, "The most vital factor in the success of the University of Missouri's School of Medicine in the next decade will be the degree to which it is able to deserve the enthusiastic support and the full co-operation of the practicing physicians in the state. A good medical education is expensive--far more expensive than the public realizes. Probably only physicians and medical educators realize the long and difficult and expensive preparation necessary for the practice of modern medicine. It is going to require considerable work on the part of a great many people if the new school of Medicine receives the kind of support that is absolutely essential to the kind of program the state desires and deserves. For that kind of understanding we look confidently to the Medical Association of the state as partners with us in this enterprise.

With two distinguished medical schools in the state already, and at least one in a nearby state, which supply a great many of our physicians, a new school must necessarily fit in and accommodate its program to the needs of the state that are not now being adequately met. That is the primary function of the medical school at the University of Missouri.

The message I want to leave with you tonight is the plea for your co-operation in this program. Without your help we cannot succeed; with your help we cannot fail."

On November 10, 1956, the Medical Center was formally dedicated.

Dear Colleagues:

A relatively small number of individuals are privileged to participate intimately in the unfolding of a new educational program; an even smaller number in one dedicated to the education in the professions of the healing arts. Among the several rewards which accompany this privilege is that of establishing traditions.

The publication of Mutation last year pointed the way to a fine traditional activity of the student body; the present edition establishes the fact that this is indeed a needed and worthy cause which has the support of the student body and faculty. Thus, an important part of the life of your medical school is now entrusted in the hands of the dedicated individuals who have made this dream a reality.

With the trust so placed in the hands of each yearly staff goes a tremendous challenge; the challenge to truly reflect the atmosphere, spirit, vitality and goals of a great profession as they are exemplified at M.U. The impressions received by many interested friends and families will be derived in great part from this book. The memories retained of our activities will be even more intimately sharpened and determined by its editorial policies.

The challenge then to this and succeeding staffs is simple yet sobering; to depict the humor, warmth, problems and dignity of the growth and development of new members of the great professions of healing arts. An auspicious start has been made and we look forward to the future with the confident expectation of seeing each edition of Mutation come a little closer to its ultimate goal of perfection as an important instrument of human history at M.U.

Best wishes,

SCHOOL OF MEDICINE

"There are tremendous potentialities at the Medical School of the University of Missouri. This conclusion is based upon an uninterrupted series of precedents--precedents which enable one to predict that any project sponsored by the Sovereign State of Missouri has the brightest possible future. As a consequence, I have no doubt that the new hospital and the new school are destined to be a giant of progress, a model to be imitated, and a hallmark of the finest in medical practice. The citizens of Missouri are building a lasting monument to Science and Service."

The Green of Medicine

At graduation ceremonies spectators and participants alike recognize green as the color of medicine. This now a generally accepted relationship, but its origin is shrouded in mystery. Indeed, green is an ambivalent color.

To the Pleistocene Cro-Magnon man green had a religious quality and small stones of this color were often placed between the teeth of the dead. In Pre-Dynastic times (5000 B.C.) the Egyptians worked out an elaborate sequence of events that connected green with immortality. Immortality means prolonged good health and this belief may well have exerted an influence on the selection of green as the color of medicine. Some ancient peoples even used green ointments to treat sores and wounds. According to the Egyptians stars dropped tears of malachite (the source of the first green dye and paint) into the pools which fed the Nile for its annual life-giving floods. Horus, the Immortal God, was directly associated with this process. When the waters of the Nile rise each year they take on a green appearance for several days. The present green of medicine undoubtedly also has some connection with the symbolism for faith, hope, promise, and resurrection. Dante referred, in the "Paradiso", to the disappearance of green when he reached his goal because in Heaven all desires are fulfilled. However, green has sometimes been looked upon as the color of the devil, and many stories from Asian and European mythologies emphasize this. Scottish lore is rife with examples of green bringing misfortune with it.

Academic robes developed from those used by the Church. On the Continent and in Great Britain a gradual trend toward color drew the academic robes away from the early clerical black. No set pattern is apparent. Doctors of theology were wearing green at several universities in the Fifteenth century while Doctors of Medicine at Paris and Oxford wore red and those at Coimbra wore yellow. Yellow, through its connection with the sun which, according to the astrologers, exerted considerable influence on diseases still has some medical significance as the color used for warning flags in quarantined areas.

Interest in academic costume, especially in its color and form, reached a peak in this country in the late Nineteenth century. After several meetings of representatives from colleges and universities an Intercollegiate Bureau of Academic Costume was incorporated in New York in 1902. This Bureau, the recognized authority in the field, designated green as the color of medicine, and this decision was reinforced during a review of the situation in 1932.

New wearers of the green of medicine may draw (from the better side of this color "tree") several analogies with the aspirations of those who practice this profession. The color of divine assistance to the people, of hope and of promise, of prolonged good health - what better badge for a physician.

THE BALLAD OF THE BREECH

I started in life a diminutive speck,
 A zygote, and firmly embedded
 In the wall of a womb which was cozy and warm
 And whose owner was legally wedded,
 By a process of fission I grew and I grew
 And soon became quite recognizable
 As an embryo human with torso and limbs
 And a head which appeared much too sizeable.
 I developed a nose and a couple of eyes
 But no sense of sight or of smell;
 For I lived an aquatic existence, you see,
 In a cavity darker than hell.
 I floated around with hardly a care
 Though sometimes I got a bit bored
 Till suddenly one day it shook me to find
 That my navel was fixed to a cord.
 Where did it go to? I had to find out
 For to me it became a tormentor;
 So hand over hand I shinned up that cord
 Till I bashed my head on my placenta,
 About this time too I discovered my ears
 And noises became quite specific
 I thought borborygmi, a sonorous burp,
 And the passing of flatus terrific.
 Snoring I hated and when Ma let rip
 I'd kick out like someone insane
 And she'd whisper to Pa, as she rolled off her back,
 "Our Darling is stirring again."

As I increased in size I'd no room to move
 And just had to squat on my rudder
 With hands on my chest supporting my chin
 In a pose reminiscent of Buddha.
 About the eighth month I received a rude shock
 A jolting I feared might prove fatal,
 From what I could hear it was something to do
 With a knock-about called "antenatal,"
 My arms and legs were seized in a grip
 As if someone was trying to knot 'em
 And my tummy was squeezed like a dentifrice tube
 Whilst something hard prodded my bottom.
 But worse was to follow the very next day
 Such a bashing I thought I was dead
 I was pushed, I was pushed, I was twisted and twirled
 Till I finished up heels over head.
 Now up-ended like this I feel such a fool,
 Of discomfort I've more than enough
 But unable to move I just stand on my head
 Like a Yogi who's doing his stuff.
 How long will it last? Well, who is to say
 But God give me strength and persistence
 To hang on to life till I'm shoved through the os
 And I start on a separate existence.

Class Officers

It is with an extra bit of sadness that I have to leave the U.M.M.C., because we are closer friends than most, having grown up together.

On the day before yesterday, I was an undergrad - marching on the R.O.T.C. drill field, and the U.M.M.C. just an empty lot covered with weeds and assorted trash. More than once I tried to picture myself walking down those as yet unbuilt halls in my white coat.

As quickly as I advanced toward applying to med school, did that school take shape. Only a skeleton of steel one month - slowly covered with brown brick - then suddenly training Doctors. And then, was it only yesterday? - I was accepted. There were long hours, and late hours, before I was really walking down the still brand new halls in my brand new white coat. We were both growing up and adding new things every day.

Today, my white coat has been mended several times - and looks well worn - and another coat of paint has been added to some of the halls. It has only been a few short years, but we are both so much wiser. The years ahead offer only growth - for both of us.

The Platypus

My child, the Duck-billed Platypus
 A sad example sets for us:
 From him we learn how Indecision
 Of character provokes Derision.
 This vacillating Thing, you see,
 Could not decide which he should be,
 Fish, Flesh or Fowl, and chose all three.
 The scientists were sorely vexed
 To classify him; so perplexed
 Their brains, that they, with Rage at bay,
 Called him a horrid name one day,-
 A name that baffles, frights, and shocks us,
 Ornithorynchus Paradoxus.

The Medical Library, now in its 57th year, grew out of a gathering together of departmental libraries. The two major collections which combined in 1903 were that of the Department of Anatomy (from the old Medical Building) and of the Practice of Medicine and Surgery (from the Hospital). The Medical Library's first home was a room in the "New Medical Building" (McAlester Hall), with a stenographer from the Dean's office in charge. She was replaced the following year by the first in a series of student assistants.

Efforts were made in the next few years to strengthen the research collection. In 1907-08 the Library had a collection of 2200 bound volumes and about 50 journals. The Library grew slowly and the 5,000 mark was passed in 1911.

In 1921, for the first time, a full-time assistant was put in charge. Two years later the Library moved into larger quarters in the new extension to McAlester where it remained until 1956.

In 1932 the Library's collection reached 10,000 volumes. The first trained librarian was appointed in 1941. Two years later the collection reached 15,000 and in 1951 the Library had 20,000 bound volumes. The first librarian with a graduate degree in library science was appointed in 1951.

The Library moved into its present comfortable and well-planned quarters in September, 1956. The stacks have room for 100,000 volumes. The collection consists of slightly more than 32,000 bound volumes, and approximately 800 journal titles are received regularly.

The announcement of the School of Medicine in 1917-1918 states "A good medical library is also very expensive, but is necessary for the best work in instruction and absolutely essential for research." This is just as true today as it was then.

FLASH! MEDICS GO UNDEFEATED!

Led by the mound artistry of Ed "The Whip" Brundick, the flawless fielding of Tom "Rabbit" Anderson, the base running wizardry of Steve "The Gimp" Plax, and the tape-measure power of Gary "Home Run" Robinson, the home forces went through the entire softball season (two games) undefeated as they vanquished their foes from the "The Flaw on the Kaw" (Kansas U.) in a home and home duel, 5-4 and 7-6. Individually, the boys were frankly no damn good. But backed by weeks of tedious practice, guided by inspired coaching, driven by sheer determination, the boys congealed into a spirited, eager, determined, homogenously functioning symphony of the diamond which was frankly no damn good. But as some great philosopher said, "It's not how you play the game, but whether you win or lose." And somehow, the boys managed to win.

Medical Dames

The year of '60-'61 has been one of fun, activities and achievement for Medical Dames.

It started in September with a tea honoring freshman's wives and new wives. This enjoyable tea, under the direction of Mary Elaine

Heilman and Amy Case was so successful that it will probably be an annual event of the Medical Dames.

Throughout the year, after the regular business meetings and the entertaining programs, there is a coffee hour. During this time the young women are given a chance to become acquainted with other student wives and discuss their mutual interests.

In addition to the regular monthly meetings, there are interest groups; bridge for beginners, intermediate, and advanced, with a bridge tournament in the spring, under the direction of Renee Pavey. Some of the members join together to bowl once a month.

Other activities of Medical Dames include a Christmas party with a gift exchange, and the making of Christmas items to sell at the December meeting of the Women's Auxiliary. Dixie Ozenberger headed this committee, and with much work, a profit was made. February 25th was the day for the Rummage and Bake Sale. A large committee of girls worked diligently to make this a gigantic money making project. A fashion show in May, with student wives modeling creations they had made, was directed by Eleanor Hogan.

As for achievements, Virginia Thomas, our President, worked with Miss Polly Brummett, director of volunteer work at the hospital, to set up a volunteer program for the Medical Dames. A group of forty wives are participating and are finding the work in the Pediatrics department most rewarding. A representative from each class, with the senior representative acting as chairman, is in charge of scheduling the working hours for the members of her class. The representatives are: Senior-Jane Washburn; Junior-Joan Hollerback; Sophomore-Mary Lou Benjamin; and Freshman-Virginia Pogue.

Climaxing the year is the gala Medical Dames banquet honoring the Senior Student wives and their husbands. One of the highlights of the evening, spent dining and dancing, is the awarding of P.H.T. awards to the senior members. With this event another year of Medical Dames comes to a close.

Tau Chapter Of Phi Beta Pi Medical Fraternity

Another year has rolled by, making it forty-five years ago that our chapter of Phi Beta Pi was founded. During this time certain events have become traditional; and these, in addition to the more spontaneous get-togethers, resulted in a full, fun-year at the Phi Beta house.

The rush party at the beginning of the year was a good opportunity to meet the new students as well as renew old acquaintances over a "cool one." Halloween brought out all the spooks and goblins for a party at the house. As the Yuletide season approached, we had our traditional Christmas party at the house, complete with roaring yule logs and a jolly Santa. The Spirit of Christmas filled the house as we became filled with Christmas cheer. The biggest social event of the year was, as always, the Anatomical Revue. Our pre-party warm-up and dinner was held at the new Holiday Inn and the faculty and members present had a high time. Initiation of new members present was a solemn affair, with the party following being anything but solemn. To end the year on a happy note we had our annual Epple's Farm and Phi Beta Pi Picnic.

All isn't partying, though, at the Phi Beta house. Our annual Phi Beta Pi Lectureship brought an outstanding speaker, Edgar Burns, M.D., Chief of Urology at Charity Hospital.

So this year, as in the forty-five past, Phi Beta Pi has served its members as a home for some, an educational opportunity for many, and a social gathering place for all.

"Just a minute, Santa; I think she wants to give it back."

Mu Sigma Chapter Of Phi Chi Medical Fraternity

Mu Sigma of Phi Chi's year, 1960-61, was filled with a wide variety of activities. September began with a general house cleaning and purple passion punch party, while October heralded our Halloween costume party. November was the month of the "straw festival" and December beckoned snow for our Christmas party. January was "beatnik-time"; February and the pre-A-Review were a welcome break, and at the Founder's Day Banquet in March, Dr. Duncan spoke on alcoholism. In April we had a party in the main ballroom of the chapter house and in May we had our traditional pre-final picnic.

But parties were only the light side. Our monthly professional lectures warranted our "professional fraternity" label. Finally, we have our alumni association, to which all of us hope to someday belong. We all look forward to receiving The Phi Chi Quarterly so that we can compare our activities to those of other chapters. Good news! Helen is going to cook good things to eat for another year.

University of Missouri School of Nursing, 1956-

As you look at this yearbook in the future you will be reminded of many good times and many accomplishments during your "student days." You have been aware of and will see in the future, many changes in the School of Nursing programs. During this past year, the enrollment in the School of Nursing was the highest in the history of the school. Early in 1960, both the Basic Degree Program and Supplemental Program for Graduate Nurses were approved for full accreditation by the National League for Nursing, and for the first time in 1961 the program for all those graduating included field experience in public health nursing.

Graduates of today's baccalaureate programs in nursing must be prepared for staff positions in both hospital and public health nursing, be able to progress with experience to positions requiring beginning administrative skills, and have foundation for continuing development through self-directed study or graduate education. The faculty feels that graduates of this school are prepared to fulfill these expectations. The programs of the School of Nursing have developed as the needs of society for nursing have changed. The future for each of you will hold many challenges including the opportunity to influence the future developments in nursing according to changing needs.

Director, School of Nursing

Faculty

The faculty of the School of Nursing believes that nursing as a profession makes a contribution of major importance to the welfare of society. It believes professional nurses are those who are capable of rendering skillful, understanding nursing care, carrying out the medical treatments delegated by the physician, and assisting with prevention of disease and promotion of health for all people. They have the responsibility of continuous direction and supervision of those who assist them in meeting the nursing needs of the patient in hospital and community; of cooperation with other health professions; of functioning as members of a democratic society; and of contributing to the improvement of the nursing profession. The faculty believes the experience of education in a university setting--which offers a variety of intellectual, social and cultural opportunities--best prepares persons to meet these responsibilities.

The faculty ascribes to the belief that education is a continuous process which develops the whole person through patterning the teaching-learning process to provide for progressive change in behavior. The ability to think critically, be self-directing and self-motivating are desired outcomes of such education.

OUR CAPPING OCTOBER, 1958

On a September day, 1957, fifty-four Freshman nursing students gathered together for the first time. This was the beginning of the Class of '61. That year was a time of many beginnings; the first year of college, the first year of nursing, and, for most, the first time of living away from home. Thirty-eight returned to be capped the following October, 1958. This was the beginning of the novitiate; the first tastes of bedside nursing care followed rapidly after we donned our caps.

Experiences in the clinical areas were now ours; the Medical and Surgical services came first, followed by considerations of Maternal and Child Health, Public Health, and Psychiatric Nursing. Gradually we moved from one to another with an ever enlarging concept of nursing care and philosophy before us. Gradually we gained experience and grew in our profession.

Before us lies the pinning ceremony to mark our beginnings as graduate nurses. Before us also lies the vista of nursing care for others in many ways and places. While six of us graduated in February, nineteen now stand on the threshold.

"How do you like your eggs in the morning?"

Angels of Mercy

"But, honey! Why don't you like my pajamas?"

"Is this what Florence wore?"

Just a little somethin' we learned in preventives.

"We are not snowed in!"

"Chug-a-lug!"

"I didn't come to this party to play cards!"

"I bid 6 aces!"

"Bottoms up!"

Student Nurses' Association

All students enrolled in the School of Nursing of the University of Missouri are members of the Student Nurses' Association upon payment of dues.

The University of Missouri Student Nurses' Association was organized in 1953. The main purpose was to further student interest in the profession of nursing through organization activities. With approval of our Constitution we joined the Missouri State Student Nurses' Association as District #6. Meetings were originally held in the Nurses' Dormitory Lounge; however with the growth in membership from 25 to 140 a classroom in the Medical Science Building is being used.

Activities during the past year included: Freshman Orientation,

Old and New Presidents display Student Nurse Week Proclamation.

New executive board takes over.

Merry-Go-Round booth, picnics, Christmas caroling party, various speakers, attendance at Fall Workshop, attendance at State Convention, and participation in Missouri Student Nurse Week.

Officers for the year, 1961, are: Sandra Kibler, president; Martha Hopkins, 1st vice-president; Louise Lee, 2nd vice-president; Lorna Adams, recording secretary; Lou Ann McGee, corresponding secretary; Sharon Oldham, treasurer; Karen O'Sullivan, historian; Eleanor Baker, Faculty advisor. # S.N.A. Activities

You're supposed to be a Clinical Instructor?

All state officers have tired blood.

We have such lovely meetings.

Communication--That's the big word!

See what Governor Dalton did for us.

The old Martin residence at University Avenue and Ninth Street was built in 1890 by Alexander Martin, second dean of the School of Law. It was bought by the University in 1924, and was turned over to the School of Nursing in 1928 when it was used as a residence until 1947. In 1952 it was used for classrooms and offices by the Department of Nursing Education. In 1956, the new nurses' residence on Stadium Road was completed, and the Martin residence became a fraternity house. McHaney Hall isn't just a place to live, but a home for the students in the School of Nursing. Here we've had pleasure for three of the most important years of our lives.

"This is a hell of a way to get a urine specimen."

"That's all the blood we have left to replace the heart-lung machine?"

"We must, we must, we must develop our _____."

"Maybe if I put it in slowly it won't hurt."

"Just call me 'Big Daddy'."

"The way to get a broad bottom is to sit on it."

"Maybe if I just pinch her....."

"Did he kiss her? Did he kiss her?"

"I don't mind the rest of this garb, but I wish mother wouldn't still make me wear diapers."

Occupational Therapy

Hollywood is still waiting.

Fifty students! We only have forty patients!

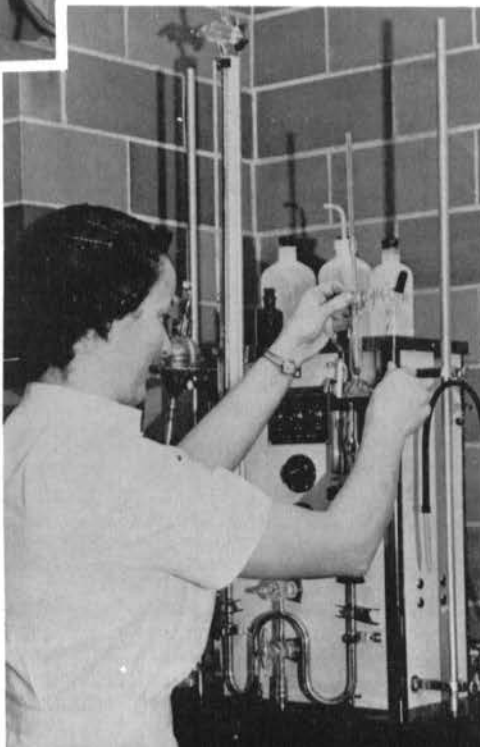

"He finally kissed me!"

Will there always be urine?

Nurses of Tomorrow!

"Don't worry - we'll find your meal ticket."

"But, the rectal tube goes in the other end!"

"Oh, boy! Here comes the Med. Students!"

Glorified prison meeting.

"Don't tell me! I know the answer!"

T.L.C.

"Now, dears. This is a thermometer."

"Organization - that's our motto."

"That last comment really floored me!"

"Not 'stress' again!"

"I'm gonna bust you in the mouth!"

"Call the M<sub>4</sub>, stat!"

"Good morning, Dr. Davis!"

"We use Gillette Blue Blades"

"Who do you think he favors?"

Guess who A'ced the final!

Did you ever feel that life was closing in on you.

We all gotta go sometime.

"Feet up - pat 'em on the popo!"

Proctoscopy line.

Beauty, is only skin deep.

"If she wants to reduce, all she has to do is melt."

Back to the womb.

"Look, Doc., no stirrups!"

"Come as I am.....?"

Alka Seltzer here we come!"

"Now, dear. This is the way it should be done!!"

"Aren't there better ways of blotting lipstick, ..Oh! Sa-a-am.....!"

"These students kill me!!"

"I can't hear you - I've got carrots in my ears!!"

"Polish 'em again!!"

Ain't she cute?

"Do you remove facial hair too?"

"They said they wanted a warm specimen to the central lab!!"
