NOTE AND COMMENT.

Have I paid my subscription to the Alumni Quarterly?

One of the innovations this past summer was a Summer School Glee Club, in charge of Dr. W. G. Bek.

3 THE MISSOURI ALUMNI QUARTERLY.

The "Males" are becoming "just too nice for anything." They now have a fund which provides them with ice-water and towels and soap!

A copy of No. 1, Vol. II, of the Quarterly, would be much appreciated by the University's Librarian, Mr. H. O. Severance. It is needed to complete the library's files.

If you are in arrears with your subscription to the Alumni Quarterly, will you not bestir yourself to "settle up," good friend? DO IT NOW.

President Hill has taken hold of his arduous but to him congenial task with his accustomed vigor. That things will "go" we take for granted. That they will go "right" follows, of course.

The "Cosmopolitan Club," with thirty-three members, hailing from ten different countries, which was organized last year as an experiment, is now a regularly chartered institution. Prof. C. C. Eckhardt is the president.

The Summer School students this year, numbering 488, were the most enthusiastic "bunch" ever got together in the hot season. Their loyalty is bound to react for the good of the University.

Former students of the Warrensburg Normal in attendance upon the summer school held a picnic on the golf links during the session. They mustered eighty strong. The spirit at Warrensburg is close kin to the Varsity spirit. The two schools are in close and happy relations.

At the Interstate Live Stock Show held in St. Joseph, Missouri, in September, the University's herds carried off high honors. Halfred Stamp, Hereford bullock, won first in his class and the championship over all classes. Out of a possible six firsts the University's Hereford and Angus steers took five. The Galloways won second.

The new secretary of the Alumni Association and therefore also, by appointment by the Board of Curators, Alumni Recorder, is W. F. Woodruff. His headquarters are in the Alumni room, where he will be glad to welcome all who may revisit their Alma Mater. Be sure to look him up when you come to Columbia.

The Y. M. C. A.'s Employment Bureau last year secured over sixty permanent positions and 600 odd jobs for students. The remuneration for the work thus secured aggregated over $2000.00. This means that probably a hundred men were kept at school by the activity of this bureau last year. "Good work," this.

The Teachers College High School for observation and practice, commonly known as "the Prep" on the Quad, is now housed in the building formerly occupied by the Columbia Normal Academy, where there are ample facilities for handling their ever increasing number of students. The top floor is used as a dormitory for boys and is in charge of one of the instructors.

We again respectfully call the attention of the Board of Curators to the suggestion put forward in a former number, that the prompt official publication of the minutes of their proceedings would be a step in the right direction. It would do more to give satisfaction to the University's many friends, and would more efficiently put the gag upon unfriendly and unjust criticism, than any other little thing that they could do.

We call attention to the statement in President Hill's admirable address at the opening convocation to the effect that the last year the usual number of members of the faculty received flattering and enticing calls to other institutions, only one full professor saw fit to abandon Missouri for another field. This speaks volumes for the new atmosphere, the new spirit of restfulness and of hope for still larger things, that now prevails in the University.

The way St. Joseph goes after the Thanksgiving football fest is a sight. In comparison the K. C. fellows are fast asleep. No wonder the Committee on Intercollegiate Athletics very promptly voted to enter into negotiations with the St. Joe people with the view of locating the big game there. It is a pure business proposition. St. Joe guarantees all expenses—K. C. wants to hold us up for seventeen and one-half per cent of the gross receipts for the park alone. It will cost nothing to play at St. Joe. It will cost the teams about $3,000.00 to play at K. C.

Former students who remember the beginning of the Co-operative store in the little room on the first floor to the right of the southern entrance to Academic Hall, would be surprised to see that enterprise to-day. From a concern that handled pencils and pads and a few books it has grown to an establishment which readily furnishes students and professors with everything necessary and unnecessary in University life, from elastic bands to desks, from gum-drops to the choicest candies, from pendants to the finest jewelry. The store is one of the best equipped of its kind in the country and will this year do a business of not less than $70,000. C. E. Garey, '04, is the efficient manager.

It may remove misunderstanding in some minds if we add that the store has fitted up its present larger quarters in the basement at its own expense; that it pays the State $300 rental per year; that it is taxed like any other business; and that it is therefore a perfectly legitimate business enterprise for the benefit of the student community of Columbia.

The coming session of the legislature will be a crucial one for the University. With a reputed deficit in the State's treasury it will be incumbent upon the Board of Creators to ask not only for the usual liberal support but for even enlarged appropriations. This would be a daring thing to do at any time but is made doubly hazardous by the unfortunate developments of the campaign before last summer's primary election. Up to that time it had been our fond hope that the University had been forever taken out of politics. Not so. It was once more injected into those turbulent waters, tho, and we call attention to this fact, thru no fault of anyone connected with the institution. Let us hope that by the time the Legislature meets this unfortunate feature of the recent political agitation will have been forgotten. But in any event the friends of the University will do well to watch the course of events as wisely as serpents and as harmlessly as doves.

The new professor of Mechanical Engineering is H. Wade Hibbard, succeeding Prof. A. M. Greene. Prof. Hibbard is a graduate of Brown University in 1884, taking the

A. B. degree. After three years of experience in the shops of the Rhode Island Locomotive Works he entered Cornell, where he took the First Sibley prize and was elected to the Society of Sigma Xi. He received the degree of Mechanical Engineer in 1891. He leaves the chair of Railroad Mechanical Engineering in Cornell to accept that of Mechanical Engineering in Missouri. Prof. Hibbard is an author of wide repute on technical subjects connected with his department. He will assume charge in January, 1909.

The new Professor of Equity, in the Law Department, is Thomas Atkins Street. He was born in 1872, —the son of the late Judge Thomas A. Street, of Marshall County, Alabama. His collegiate training was obtained at the University of Alabama, where he graduated from the Academic Department with the degree of A. B. in 1893. The next year he took a post-graduate course leading up to the degree of M. A. Later he graduated as LL. B. from the Law Department of the same University, and began the practice of law at Nashville, Tennessee, in 1895. He continued at that bar until 1903. As a lawyer his practice was largely confined to the Court of Chancery of Davidson County, Tennessee, though in a number of important cases he appeared before the Supreme Court of the State and before the Chancery Court of Appeals.

In 1899, Mr. Street was made Adjunct Professor of Law in Vanderbilt University, in which capacity he served for two years.

In 1903, he became associated with the Edward Thompson Company of Northport, L. I., a well known firm of law publishers. As a member of the staff of this company he wrote several articles for the second edition of the American and English Encyclopedia of Law. Later he wrote, and the same company published, a three volume treatise on "Foundations of Legal Liability" (1896). This work has been received by legal scholars and lawyers with much favor.

Mr. Street's next work was a treatise on "Equity Pleading and Practice in Federal Courts." This is now finished and is in course of publication. It will consist of two or more volumes.

W. J. Monlow, Head Coach.

8 THE MISSOURI ALUMNI QUARTERLY.

Athletically the situation is really very promising, and the friends of the royal game of football among our readers have every reason to expect that the Tigers will give an exceptionally good account of themselves during the next few weeks, even up to and including Thanksgiving day. There is no lack of material. The squad is large, the men are heavy, reasonably fast, and many have had previous experience with the game. A number of "M" men were on the field the very first day, and several more are looked for. If one or two others, who are in school, but have not at this writing reported for practice, would come out, the coaching staff would feel better. But with the facts now before us we predict a successful season in this department of our athletic activities this year—and for the Quarterly a successful season means victory on November 24th. We are relying on coach Monllaw and the team to bring the laurel of victory back this time.

Never has the University enjoyed a more auspicious opening than this year. Students were more numerous than ever before. At this writing, on the fourth day of the session, there were about four hundred and fifty more of them on the ground than at the same time last year. The faculty is larger, better, more complete than at any time during the past ten years. No important positions, with one exception, remain to be filled. And, perhaps best of all, a buoyant, hopeful atmosphere pervades the entire institution. Even the Freshman, persecuted tho he may be by the Sophomore, accepts his lot with keen delight. Boarding and lodging house mistresses look forward to snug balances in the bank. And out on the athletic field, where a grunting, growling, panting and sweating squad of "huskies" is at practice, it is even thought that "we will beat Kansas this year, sure." Altogether "Old Missouri" has never had a brighter outlook than in this, the initial year of President Hill's administration.

The School of Journalism begins its career as a co-ordinate department of the University with Walter Williams, LL. D., as Dean and Professor of the History and Principles of Journalism; Silas Bent, A. B., Assistant Professor of the Theory and Practice of Journalism; Chas. G. Ross, '05, Instructor in Journalism; and two student assistants, Warren H. Orr and Ernest R. Evans. About forty students are enrolled in its classes. The first number of the University Missourian, the school's practice paper, appeared promptly on the very first day of the session. It is a daily. We have only one regret in connection with its publication: it makes a distinctively student publication impossible. The Independent has, therefore, suspended publication. This is, to our way of thinking, a regrettable loss to our student life and activities. But, since it is an ill wind that blows nobody any good, the Quarterly ought to get some comfort out of the situation by an increase of its own subscription list!

Since the above was written large placards, posted throuth the University corridors, announced the immediate re-appearance of the dear departed whose untimely demise we have just been lamenting. And the first issue, in familiar "make up," came out promptly on Saturday evening, September 24. We congratulate the Independent Board upon this decision and wish for their venture the completest success.

It is with real repugnance that we again feel ourselves compelled to talk "business" to our readers.

With this number we begin our fourth volume. We confess that we do not contemplate the prospect with much satisfaction. We have not realized the ideals which we set before us when we, against our best judgment, but yielding to the wishes of others, took up this work. We have the satisfaction of knowing that, under strongly adverse conditions, we have done our best. We began without a dollar, and tho we are just as poor to-day, we have carried the task, for three years almost alone, for two years entirely alone, without that total failure which has always haunted us like a grim ghost.

It has constantly been our fond hope to be able to improve the Quarterly in several ways. But it is a task beyond the powers of one man. What we must have in the future is the active, tangible support of the alumni. They must realize that this is their magazine and that thru its pages they can and should voice their sentiments, speak to and about each other and the University. Why they have not done so is a mystery which we cannot fathom.

In another way also our subscribers in particular can be of great assistance. By a prompt payment of their subscriptions. Do not wait until we "dun" you two, three, four times before you send in your dollar and a half. That involves more labor than we can give, more than we can afford to pay for. If, just now, we had all the money that is due, or were even reasonably sure that we could collect it, we would ask our Board of Managers to make our publication a bi-monthly at once, instead of a quarterly. And what a great gain that would be for all the interests concerned.

THE COLUMNS.

(Words and Music by W. H. Pommer.)
On thy campus, Fair Missouri,
Stand the columns, which of old
Would have charmed the Grecian maiden
Or the Roman warrior bold.
Sentinels at Learning's portal,
Far removed from Care and Toil,
In perennial beauty shedding
Classic rays o'er Western soil.
When I leave thee, Fair Missouri,
Voice will choke and tears will start—
Pray that Time o'ergrow thy columns
With the ivy of my heart!
Grecian maidens, known to Beauty,
Would have hung their heads in shame
In the presence of thy daughters
Who make Fair Missouri's fame.
Roman Warriors' knotted sinews
Would have snapped like bits of thread
In vain efforts at repelling Rushes by Missouri led.
When I leave thee, Fair Missouri,
Voice will choke and tears will start—
Pray that Time o'ergrow thy columns
With the ivy of my heart!

THE NEW CURATOR.

George Blair Dorsey, was born in Macoupin County, Illinois, in 1863, and is therefore 24 years old. In 1889 and 1879 he was a student of the University, Academic Department, and a member of the Athenaeum Society. Leaving the University Mr. Dorsey returned to Maconspie County and became a farmer. In 1883 he was married to Miss Mariah J. Mackie, of Columbia. They have four children, the oldest, Machir J., being a graduate of the Law Department. Five years ago, Mr. Dorsey moved to Columbia. He is vice president of the Central Bank. On July 1, 1908, he was appointed Curator, vice W. Williams, resigned.

JOSEPH MARR GWINN, A. B. '02.

Joseph Marr Gwinn comes of the pioneer blood of Missouri; his grandparents having come out from Kentucky with the Boones. He received a rural school education in Johnson county and at the age of seventeen entered the Normal School at Warrensburg. He was graduated with honors from this school in 1899, having in the meantime taught a rural school. In 1900-1 he was principal of the Ashland, Boone county, school. He was a successful teacher and administrator of school affairs from the start and advanced rapidly in his chosen profession. He spent several summers at the University of Missouri as a student and in 1901 resigned the principalship of the Joplin high school to enter the University where his major work was in psychology and philosophy. After receiving his A. B. degree in 1905 he was recalled to Joplin to be superintendent of schools. In 1908 he became head of the department of pedagogy in the Warrensburg Normal School. In 1906 he went to Columbia University as a graduate scholar in the Teachers College and received his A. M. degree and a diploma in education in June, 1907. Last October he accepted the work of organizing and developing a teachers college in Tulane University. In 1908 he was married to Miss Ellis Williams, of Warrensburg, Mo. They have two children.

THE OPENING CONVOCATION.

When, on Thursday morning, Sept. 15, the faculty, in cap and gown, headed by President A. Ross Hill and ex-President E. H. Jesse, marched into the auditorium, every seat was occupied and the aisles were filled to overflowing. Eighteen hundred people were in the house.

The invocation was offered by the Rev. Dr. W. W. Elwang, '08. Miss Aurora Leedom and Mr. L. L. Silverman rendered, respectively, a piano and violin solo. The students sang "Old Missouri."

President Hill's first public official duty was to confer the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws upon former President Jesse. In doing so he said:

14 THE MISSOURI ALUMNI QUARTERLY.

"President Jesse, because of your service to education in developing this University and in making it a fitting institution in which these youth may spend the crowning years of their formal education; in gathering here a faculty worthy of any university; in raising the standard from that of a small college to equal that of the best universities in the land; in promoting secondary education throughout the State by refusing to have the University compete, through its preparatory department, with secondary schools and encouraging these schools to advance their standards so that their graduates might meet the higher standards of admission at the University; because of the educational ideals you have bequeathed to us which it will be our purpose to realize; because of your constructive educational statesmanship shown throughout seventeen years of the most eventful educational history in Missouri and the Middle West, it gives me pleasure in exercising the authority given me by the Board of Curators, as my first official public act of this session, to confer upon you the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws."

Dr. Jesse received a great ovation upon rising to be invested with the doctor's hood, the audience standing and applauding for fully two minutes.

President Hill then delivered the following address:

President Hill's Address.*

Permit me to thank you for your generous reception and to extend a cordial welcome on behalf of the faculty to students old and new who have come to join this University community. Though you seem to be numerous I can assure you that our hearts and our interests in your welfare, if not our homes and our class rooms, are expansive enough to accommodate you all.

* Summary of the President's address. This must not be confused with his inaugural, which will come later.

The story is well known to you of how President Jesse, after seventeen years of the most arduous efforts to build up this University was forced, last spring, on account of illness which we trust is only temporary, to abandon active service for the institution, and we today sorrowfully take up the broken thread. And having spent four years in the closest association with him, having been, as it were, a member of his cabinet, and a sharer in the responsibilities and honors of his administration, you will not expect me to make any sudden or marked changes in the general policy of the University. Rather you can look forward to the realization, if possible, of plans already matured, and to the working out of details of ambitions as yet only vaguely conceived.

But this is not the time for any extended discussion of University policies or of the relations of the new to the former administration. I shall have opportunity on a later occasion to speak more fully upon such matters. At present it is more appropriate to refer briefly to the work of the year just beginning and to speak about a few matters affecting the work and activities of students for this session.

A question of supreme importance to you is the number and character of changes that have occurred in the Faculty since the close of last session. Happily I can report to you that the changes are for the most part due to additions to the staff. In the earlier stages of President Jesse's administration, when the University had little more than a local reputation, and that hardly State wide, it was impossible to secure men of sufficient training who had already had much experience or who had established reputations, for the most important positions on the staff; and there was only one way to secure a satisfactory Faculty, viz., to bring here young men of excellent training and brilliant promise and trust to the chance of holding them after their reputations were established here. President Jesse's success in selecting such men was truly marvelous, but time and again the University had to mourn the loss of some of the best of them to other institutions whose standing and wealth were superior to ours. But gradually the reputation of this University has been enhanced and the conditions of work here have been improved, so that we are no longer subject to such heavy losses and we are able to attract men of prominence from other institutions. In spite of numerous flattering offers to members of our Faculty during the closing year of President Jesse's administration, I can recall only one resignation from a full professorship at the close of last session, while we have added to the staff several well-known scholars and teachers from other universities to fill chairs that have been vacant from one to four years. Permit me to introduce some of these men to you this morning.

The Chair of Philosophy was not permanently filled since the resignation of Professor Frank Thilly four years ago, though constant search has been made for a worthy successor, till we secured for that position this year Professor A. O. Lovejoy, who leaves the same position in Washington University, St. Louis, to accept the Chair of Philosophy here. He has already done much to further the educational interests of this State during the last decade, has held high rank among his colleagues at Washington, and his brilliancy as a scholar and writer is known to all who read current philosophical literature.

The Chair of Economics has been vacant for over two years, and this has been filled by the appointment of Professor H. J. Davenport, a man of maturity and of marked attainments in his special field. After wide experience in teaching and business administration he took a position on the Faculty of Chicago University, where he rose quickly from Instructor to Assistant Professor and later Associate Professor, and as an author he has established an international reputation.

The Chair of Equity in the Law Faculty was not permanently filled after the resignation of Professor W. W. Cook two years ago. For that we have secured Professor Street, formerly on the Law Faculty of Vanderbilt University, and recently engaged in writing on legal subjects. He is recognized as one of the leading law writers of America.

The Chair of Botany, from which Professor Duggar resigned a year ago, has been filled by the appointment of Dr. C. Stuart Gager, who, after taking his Doctor's degree with honor at Cornell University, made for himself an enviable reputation as a teacher of Biology in the State Normal College at Albany, New York, and for the past four years has been engaged in research and as Director of the Laboratories in the New York Botanical Gardens.

I could go on to mention others, but in the main they will fill recently created positions or hold subordinate appointments and they too are well worthy of places on the Faculty of any university. A local newspaper quoted me as saying that "the Faculty of the University is the best that money can get." The quotation was not correct, but its publication leads me to remark that this Faculty is better than money can secure. The men who have remained with the University of Missouri, in the face of tempting offers, have done so from devotion to their work here and to the institution, their satisfaction with its spirit, and their confidence in its future; and the men who have come to us from positions in other universities have been attracted, not by our salaries, but by the present reputation of this University and the prospects for its development and for favorable opportunities in teaching and investigation.

It must be a matter for satisfaction to my predecessor and it is an occasion for gratitude on my part, that we can begin the work of the University this year with the best Faculty we have ever had and with such favorable conditions generally for carrying out the purposes for which the University exists. I congratulate the students of the University of Missouri upon the opportunities provided by the State for the completion of their fundamental training already begun in the secondary schools, and for the pursuit of special lines of study in preparation for their chosen professions.

But these opportunities bring also responsibilities. The State has done her part, it now rests with the students to do their part; you have responsibilities to yourselves, to the institution, and to the State. The years spent in the University must not be spent in vain if you would do justice to yourselves. You are here to lay the foundations for a life of intellectual insight and satisfaction, to secure a proper sense of values in passing judgment upon men and affairs, adequate social standards, and the ability to pursue some worthy calling. To accomplish these ends the prime requisite is honest work. I have no sympathy with the doctrine propounded in some quarters, perhaps in self-defense, regarding college life that it is better to have come and loafed than never to have come at all. Four years spent in loafing at the University must develop habits of indolence and indulgence that make a poor foundation for a life of usefulness and intellectual achievement.

You have closely allied duties also to the institution. As you are members of this University community the reputation and the honor of the institution are your reputation and honor as well. The reputation of an institution of learning does not, in the long run, depend upon its wealth or the number of students, but largely upon the character and achievements of its graduates and its Faculty. The immediate reputation of the University within the State depends much also upon the conduct of its students now enrolled. Knowing your love for the University and your fine college spirit, I can with confidence appeal to you to find proper ways of displaying that spirit and to so conduct yourselves as to bring credit rather than criticism to the institution.

You also have responsibilities to the State, which maintains the University not to provide you as individuals with better educational opportunities than you could otherwise have, but in order to improve the citizenship and increase the wealth of the State. I have heard the proposition advanced that the University exists for the students, but I wish to take issue with that doctrine, which may be cherished by some of you, and to maintain instead that the University exists for the sake of the State, to enable the youth of the State to become better citizens and, through the training given and the results of investigations conducted here, to improve the health, enrich the life, and increase the wealth of Missouri people.

There are some dangers incident to our life here that I wish to touch upon briefly. I have already referred to idleness and my objections to it as a feature of student life. Now, I know that students generally come to this University with serious purposes, but the personal associations in a university community are so delightful and the charms of this place are so great that some may be tempted to neglect the real purpose of their coming here and waste their splendid opportunities. I am not inclined to neglect the importance for your education of student activities and of personal associations with fellow students.

These tend to develop social judgment, social imagination, and social responsiveness, important elements in character. But the primary purpose of your coming here I take to be the pursuit of truth and the preparation for efficient and rational service. If the State wished to provide a pleasant place for residence, equipped with opportunities for physical recreation and pleasant social intercourse, I believe the legislature could easily found an institution that would serve the purpose quite as effectually as a university. In fact I do not believe our legislators would think of maintaining this University for any such purpose or as a luxury for your personal satisfaction. I believe and in fact I hope that if this Faculty ever permits the University of Missouri to aim primarily at anything of this sort, its support will be withdrawn and some other institution established for the pursuit of truth and for the furtherance of those ends that should naturally call forth our energies at this University. And students of the upper classes can do much to maintain proper ideals here by encouraging those of the lower classes to aim not only at prominence in athletics and other student activities, but at high scholastic attainments and honors as well.

In justice to the students of this University I must state frankly that I see no immediate danger in the directions just mentioned. Yet the danger will face us in future years if the history of other universities is repeated here, and it is well for us to realize the responsibilities of the future and prepare to meet them. And today I think there is a tendency here which may rapidly lead to the one just condemned. This community has grown so large and its life so complex, there are so many student organizations and so much social life incident thereto that for any individual to keep up with his or her work and meet all social demands that are likely to arise is an impossible achievement without injury to health. Not only so, but too many distractions are sure to result in intellectual superficiality and interfere with the growth of true culture. True culture comes from reflection and insight and when one spends four years in college in the midst of constant hurry and strain, its development becomes impossible.

Another danger incident to all class room work as it is ordinarily conducted may be traced to the attitude of both student and teacher. The instructor not only gives instruction but in the course of it also assigns tasks to be performed and makes demands in the form of oral or written tests. The student too easily gets into the habit of feeling a responsibility to make the best showing possible for himself, whereas if the true purposes of the instruction are to be realized the conference with the teacher should be used as an opportunity to show one's ignorance and need of help as well as one's attainments. Only thus can the teacher give the student the best he has to offer in the way of suggestions, guidance, and stimulus.

In general let me appeal to you to help make our University one of idealism and free from all sham and dishonesty. If there is any place on earth where the highest type of human life can be expected to thrive, it is in such an institution as this. Let us seek to keep its ethical standards high in keeping with its great purpose. "Finally, my brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely and of good report," let your minds dwell on these things.

CLASS NEWS

1 THE ALUMNI ASSOCIATION OF THE UNIVERSITY OF MISSOURI

J. C. LEGGETT, '83, Oms, N. Y.	-	-	-	President
R. F. HOFFMAN, '83, Columbia, Mo.	-	-	-	1st Vice President
MRS RUTH HITCH, '83, Oms, Mo.	-	-	-	2nd Vice President
W. F. WOODRUFF, '87, Columbia, Mo.	-	-	-	Secretary
S. F. CONLEY, '92, Columbia, Mo.	-	-	-	Treasurer

The annual meeting is held on the Tuesday preceding Commencement day in the Auditorium of Academic Hall.

All former graduates of the University are members of the Association.

'81.

William Strother Cowherd was nominated for Governor of Missouri in the Democratic primary last August. His most conspicuous opponent, "Dave" Ball, made his campaign on an anti-university platform.

'82.

Leonard H. Otto, of Shelbyville, Illinois, visited Columbia in August. He is a minister of the Christian church.

'83.

Wm. Gerig, who has been Division Engineer on the Panama Canal, has resigned and is now in this country.

'84.

W. T. Conley is president of the Central Bank, Columbia, Missouri. His engagement to Miss Elsie McCloud, of York, Nebraska, is announced.

Jean A. Shaefer (Mrs. N. C. Riggs) can now be addressed 423 Kirtland street, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

J. Otilie Kahn, Phi Beta Kappa, was in Columbia recently. She is teaching in the Canon City, Colorado, High.

'87.

M. H. Pemberton, "Reub"—author and lecturer, was renominated for the legislature from Boone county at the State primary in August. He now lives in Columbia.

'99.

J. C. Edwards, of St. Louis, visited in Columbia this summer.

'00.

Jno. L. Anderson is Superintendent of Schools for Gallatin, Missouri.

'02.

UNIVERSITY OF MISSOURI

Columbia, Missouri

The enrollment of no other State University has increased as rapidly as that of the University of Missouri.

107 Per Cent Increase in Five Years

In the last five years the attendance at the University of Missouri has more than doubled.

Reached 1,000 October 21, 1904.

Reached 2007 February 10, 1906.

Reached 2648 in 1907-08.

At the time the Quarterly goes to press the enrollment is 300 greater than at the corresponding day last year. It is certain that before the close of the session the attendance will reach 3000.

Information concerning the University is published monthly in the University of Missouri News Letter, which will be sent without charge to all alumni. For the News Letter or any other University publication address the UNIVERSITY PUBLISHER, COLUMBIA, MISSOURI.
