

The Study of Religion at the University of Missouri

Are the students of the University of Missouri interested in the study of religion? The records of the Bible College of Missouri furnish the answer. Nearly twenty per cent of the University graduates have taken courses in the Bible College. Twenty-five per cent of those winning undergraduate prizes and honors, thirty-three to fifty per cent of those winning graduate scholarships and fellowships, and fifty per cent of those elected annually to Phi Beta Kappa, the highest scholastic attainment possible for undergraduates, have taken courses in Bible. The attitude of the faculty and administrative officers of the University is most cordial toward the work of the Bible College. This is manifested by their approving for credit twelve different courses with a total of twenty-nine hours, fourteen of which any student may count toward his Bachelor's degree.

Advantages offered the students of the University of Missouri:

- (1) Religious studies are put on the same plane with all other studies. They are a part of the student's regular course, taught by trained teachers, and are in every way more valuable than the popular voluntary courses taught by earnest but untrained students.
- (2) The student has a wide range from which to choose. These courses cover the entire Bible, its literature, history, and its social and religious interpretation.
- (3) Students find themselves in a distinguished company of fellow students. H. F. Miseswitz, editor of last year's Savitar, Clarence Lockwood, business manager of this year's Savitar, Raymond P. Brandt and Joseph T. Hunt, Rhodes scholars now at Oxford, Eng., Fred Eldean, student president 1920-21, "Chuck" Lewis, captain of 1920 Tigers, Herbert Blumer, captain 1921 Tigers, Herbert Bunker, captain 1922 Tigers have all taken Bible courses. Most of the outstanding leaders in student activities take these religious courses.

A University Education

"---should help you to know a good man when you see him."

WILLIAM JAMES in his essay, "The Social Value of the College Bred," says, "The best claim that a college education can possibly make on your respect, the best thing that it can should help you to know a good man when you aspire to accomplish for you, is this: That it see him." When a man leaves High School the whole world lies before him. At the time he may seem to himself all-sufficient to go out and face the world, and it is not until he reaches the University that he meets with the vast diversities in human life and begins to realize his own shortcomings. It is here that he makes new acquaintances that broaden him and develop his character. Friendships that grow better with the years and by these same friendships he learns things that enable him to go back to his own community better prepared to make it the best and most livable spot on earth. It is at the University that he learns the lore of the ages—and on its campus that he learns his fellow man. The practical value of a university education regardless of whether or not the student specializes in any line is measured by an increased earning power and an increased service to his community. Alumni, urge the young people of your community to attend the University, that they may get the full value life owes them.

Attend Your Own State University

Every year high school students in Missouri seek college educations in other states. After graduation they come back to Missouri to establish businesses, entirely out of touch with their own state and the big men who are doing things.

The University of Missouri grinds out young men and women every year who soon become the leaders in politics, religion and business. What advantage it is, then, to the young college student to come into contact with his own kind. Friendships formed then become big assets in the future. While learning, learn where you can learn the most.

By the way, did you know that 34 per cent of the men students at M. U. earned at least a part of their way through school last year?

The Purposes of the Graduate School

DEAN WALTER MILLER

The Graduate School of the University of Missouri is the highest branch of the state's public school system. To it are admitted only such students as have at least a bachelor's degree from some reputable college or university.

Graduate instruction may rightly be considered the most distinctive work of a real university. For it is only at this stage of the student's advancement, after four years of high school and four years of college training, that he is in a position to sign his declaration of scholarship, and under competent leadership, pursue lines of original investigation and do work involving research. He ceases to be a mental sponge, absorbing information, and strives to become a discoverer of truth, a creator of science; he begins to live according to that greatest law of all study,—that one learns only in order to create; for only through that divine power of creation is man really man. Without it he is at best only a tolerably clever machine.

The Graduate School is not only the cap sheaf in the state's public school system, but it is one of the most important divisions of the University; it brings the teaching of the undergraduate divisions of the University and that offered by the State Teacher's Colleges and endowed colleges of the state into proper relation and lends inspiration to all the educational forces of the state, and beyond the borders of our state, to higher ideals of scholarship and service.

The numbers of the graduate students at the University of Missouri and the quality of the work accomplished by its students and faculty have secured for our University membership in the Association of American Universities. This exclusive association is made up of the twenty-four leading universities of the country, which do the most and the best graduate work that is being done in the world today. Our membership dates from 1908; and since that time

EDITOR'S NOTE

Dean Miller presents in this article a matter of the greatest importance for the consideration of the Alumni. The Graduate School of the University of Missouri needs their united support. Here is a constructive work to do. Will the Alumni of the University of Missouri permit her Graduate School to rank below that of any other institution?

Your comments will be published in an early issue.

our Graduate School has been growing in numbers and power. We enrolled last year 221 men and women, candidates for higher degrees. Our standards are high and the quality of our work is high. We hold that a Master's Degree from the University of Missouri means as much or more than a Master's Degree from any other institution in America. A great many of our masters' dissertations are published as valuable contributions to science and knowledge. This means in many cases that our masters are producing theses that would at least compare favorably with the average doctor's dissertation.

For the encouragement of research the University is offering annually a limited number of University fellowships and Agricultural Research fellowships. These fellowships yield a stipend of $600 a year and are awarded only to advanced graduate students who have demonstrated their ability to render service in the form of original research. A limited number of scholarships also, bearing each a stipend of $200 a year, are offered to graduate students of high promise; but as holders of these scholarships cannot be expected to do research work of great significance the University may require from them such services as may be exacted from a graduate assistant. The fellowships and scholarships are awarded to the best candidates, irrespective of the department of study in which they may choose to work.

As the coordinating center for all higher education in Missouri, the Graduate School deserves the most liberal recognition by the state. The present appropriation for this most important division of the University is $2,500 a year—one-fifth the amount asked for it by the President when he presented the budget to the Legislature last spring.

The time has come when the needs of the state demand that the Graduate School should receive especial and significant recognition by generous support from the state and from individuals for the higher training of teachers, for the prosecution of original research, and for the publication of original investigations. For this last item alone, the publication of the investigations of the Graduate School of the University of California, the Legislature of that state at its last session appropriated the sum of $50,000, while our Graduate School gets but $2,500 for all its needs. We hope that the alumni and friends of the University of Missouri will lose no opportunity to stress the needs of the most advanced division of their Alma Mater. In fact, genuine encouragement of the Graduate School is essential if the University of Missouri is to maintain its position among institutions of the first class.

Lee H. Tate Makes Heroic Sacrifice

Drives Automobile Into Street Car to Avoid Striking a Woman.

By EDWARD B. SMITH

OLD MISSOURI lost one of her most illustrious sons and the State one of her most promising citizens when Lee H. Tate, son of Frank R. Tate of St. Louis, was killed by the crashing of his automobile into a street car in St. Louis on October 21. He died in the City Hospital six hours after the accident without regaining consciousness.

Witnesses of the accident said that Tate deliberately piloted his car into the street car in an attempt to avoid hitting an automobile driven directly in his path by a woman. The position of Tate's machine made avoiding an accident impossible, and he was forced to choose between striking the street car or the automobile.

Expressions of sorrow from all points of the country flooded the Tate home in St. Louis after the accident indicating that the sorrow which touched the hearts of hundreds of intimate friends scattered throughout the country.

Mr. Tate was engaged in the theatrical business with his father, who is an extensive stockholder in several theaters in St. Louis and one of the principal stockholders in the corporation that controls the Orpheum Circuit. At the time of his death he had practically relieved his father of his business burdens and was known in St. Louis as one of her most successful young business men.

Lee Tate was educated in the public schools in St. Louis, and entered the University of Missouri in 1907. In 1913 he was graduated with two degrees, A. B. and LL. B. He was recognized at the University as a social, scholastic and athletic leader about the campus, and few men received as many honors as did he. He was elected president of the Student Senate, president of Phi Delta Phi, honorary law fraternity, president of the St. Louis Scholars' Club and was at the head of his own fraternity, Beta Theta Pi, for two successive terms. During his administration he aided in the erection of the Beta Chapter house, one of the most beautiful on the college campus.

Not only was he popular with his fellow students, but he was held in high regard by the faculty of the University. The instructors in the School of Law were enthusiastic over his scholastic and manly characteristics. Wherever he went he won admirers and friends. Following is an extract from a letter sent by Acting President J. C. Jones to his parents when news of Tate's death reached the University. Doctor Jones was dean of the College of Arts and Science when Mr. Tate was a student in that school, and had become intimately acquainted with him.

"My dear Mr. Tate:

"I have heard with deep distress of the automobile accident which resulted in Lee's death, and I am writing to express to you and Mrs. Tate on behalf of Mrs. Jones and myself our very deep sympathy. We can both sympathize with you in your bereavement in a very real and personal way, for we were both very fond of Lee. In his death we have sustained a personal loss. Lee was a young man of such charming personality, such fine character, and such unusual ability, that his death is a serious loss not only to St. Louis but to the entire state. The value of such fine, stalwart youth to Missouri cannot be measured in any arithmetic that has yet been devised.

"With kindest regards, I am

"Very truly yours,

"J. C. Jones."

During his six years at the University Lee Tate became known to nearly every student. To know him was to respect and admire him. In his own fraternity, Beta Theta Pi, "Circ" Tate, as he was known, was veritably worshipped. When news of his death became known the Tate home at 48 Vandaventer Place in St. Louis was deluged with letters from classmates and fraternity brothers expressing their sympathy and their sense of various departments. His work brought him in contact with the Board of Regents at their monthly meetings, which gave him excellent opportunity to study the needs of the University from the business as well as the academic side.

While a student in the University, Mr. Baird's major studies were Greek and Latin, supplemented by courses in Economics and History, and he is an admirer of the classics and cultural studies. As he was born and brought up on a farm, he is also much interested in agriculture.

Charles Prettyman, Jr., is from Neosho. He was graduated from the law school in 1899. He is a successful banker and lawyer in his home town and has been active in Democratic politics. He is mayor of Neosho.

John Francis Case, representing Missouri agriculture, is reputed to be the only genuine farmer-editor in Corn Growers' Association Mr. Case gained a prominence that led to his employment on the staff of the Capper Farm Papers. For three years he has been president of the Missouri

Charles Baird, chairman of Board of Visitors, is president of the Western Exchange Bank, Kansas City, Mo.

He was graduated from the University of Michigan with the class of 1895, receiving the degree of A. B. and B. L.

He practiced Law in Chicago for several years, and in 1898 returned to Ann Arbor as Athletic Director in Corn Growers' Association. During this time the association has grown from 300 to 1,500 members and has obtained $20,000 in appropriations from the state.

During the years he has been editor of the Missouri Ruralist its circulation has grown from 35,000 to the present list, the largest of any state farm paper in America.

Mr. Case is 45, married and has four children. One daughter, Aileen, is enrolled as a first year student in the University. She hopes to be graduated from the School of Journalism.

Perhaps the most important accomplishment of an active life as Mr. Case captivity. Mr. Case lives near Wright City in Warren County on Shady Lawn Farm where he edits the Missouri Ruralist, a farm paper which goes into 225,000 farm homes. Before taking up this work Mr. Case was editor of the Whitesville Banner, Andrew County. For twelve years he used his newspaper and his personal energies in making Whitesville a live community center.

In that rural neighborhood six miles from a railroad he was the leading personality in a community club of 300 members. He organized and managed a Saturday afternoon baseball league among the farm boys of his township. He was superintendent of two Sunday schools several miles apart—one meeting in the forenoon and the other in the afternoon.

Columbia Churches and the University

WHEN Sherwood Eddy appeared in Columbia last spring to deliver his inspiring addresses to the students of the University, he made the statement that he felt, "the secret of victory or defeat for the Christian forces of America lay in the student bodies." Under this conviction the bulls-eye of attention to him was the state university. It was in this same vein that John R. Mott said a short time ago, "many of the strongest young men and women who go to our institutions of higher learning are going to the state universities and these strategic centers demand Christian statesmanship and foresight."

There are over ninety state universities or schools in the United States today supported by state funds. These institutions have property investments of more than $200,000,000, and an annual yield of $50,000,000. The rapid increase in attendance at these state institutions in the last fifty years is striking evidence of the huge place they occupy in the life of their commonwealths. In 1870, there were less than 7,000 students registered there, in 1880, 10,000, in 1890, 23,000, and in 1920, over 200,000. What will the future be in this ratio?

By American custom the state university is forbidden to teach religion and in order to avoid some of the mistakes of Europe, Church and State are, for us, separate. Throughout our entire public school system from top to bottom the responsibility for religious education rests upon the Church and this lack of religious flavour is being felt in our universities especially. Mr. Warren Brown of the Council of Church Boards of Education remarks that the University of Illinois up to 1917, had graduated 27,000 students and of these, only 90 had entered the ministry. Professor Faunce, in his Yale lectures of a few years ago, characterized this as our great national peril. "It is to be feared," he said, "that the most important task of our generation shall fall in that open space between the churches and the state and be ignored by both." Today educational statesmanship is coming forth in the great boards of the leading denominations and they sense the value of the state university. These boards are finding that the presidents and faculties of the state universities are not atheistic, but sympathetic to the programs of the churches.

At the University of Illinois the Methodist Episcopal Church is putcated last February, a Social Center Building, of fine Bedford stone, costing $325,000, of the lovely architecture of Oxford. Other structures are soon to follow.

The University of Missouri presents a similar and pressing opportunity to the churches. None of the churches, of the city has a structure adequate to its student program, with the possible exception of the Catholics who have a lovely building for their work. Most of the other churches have outgrown their sleeves and their hands are dangling far below their cuffs. The situation created is acute. Scarcely a church of Columbia is not packed to the doors at the Sunday morning service and several of them experience a like condition in the evening. The student bodies of the University, Christian and Stephens colleges are vitally interested in Bible Classes, Christian Endeavor, Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., and virile preaching. Already several of the Columbia churches are setting afoot campaigns for new church buildings adequate to the growing pains of their educational needs.

Here, as in other university centers, the local churches are looking for state assistance of a financial kind. These local churches are in most cases competent to care for the Columbia population and some moral responsibility rests upon the parents of Missouri who send their sons and daughters here. Alumni of these institutions referred to, ought especially to feel a quickening of pulse and a generous impulse when the appeal is made.

There is no spot in all the world today where the Church of Christ needs to be more awake, intelligent, spiritually gifted than in the university centers such as Columbia. Here we ought to have the finest equipment and the most talented ministry. Here is the necessity of the Gospel to spell out its message in alignment with the world's best thought. Here the preacher must face that silly old quarrel between science and religion. Any attempt here to dodge the great illuminating truths of evolution, the universality of law, the historic criticism of the Bible will result in fatalities to the faith of intelligent students. These truths occupy the foreground of educational training in the University class room and the church is pathetic, that tries to contravene them. Our universities are often blamed for upsetting the religious security of young men and women. The blame for this lies only too often with ministers and Bible schools that teach a belated, obscurantist view of faith that cannot be acceptable to an educated mind. Many backward churches are teaching a medieval Calvinism, a pre-scientific view of Creation, endless genealogies and fables, as part and parcel of the truth. The student on coming to the University finds these excrescences untenable and thinks, therefore, that Jesus Christ must go too. The Church in a University must present Christ in terms of Modernism, yes, Ultra-Modernism, for Jesus is always temptingly ahead of our best and latest thinking.

The churches of Columbia and the Bible College of the University of Missouri are doing their utmost to meet this challenge of the mind and the spirit. But our equipment is sadly deficient for our high enterprise. All alumni of this great University of Missouri will do well to assist the church of their communion as it seeks enlarged quarters for the years to come.

Professor A. D. Bissel of Yale has recently published a work entitled, "The Role of Expectation in Music." The book promises to live, for its author is both musician and psychol-

A Visit by the Board of Curators

NEARLY two hundred representative citizens of Columbia gathered in the dining hall of the Daniel Boone Tavern Tuesday noon, December 20, to express by their presence their sincere appreciation to the Board of Curators of the University of Missouri for their steadfast loyalty to the interests of the University, their untiring efforts toward its advancement, and the splendid strides that it has made under their administration.

More members of the Board than have ever gathered in Columbia before during the history of the University attended the luncheon.

Speaking on behalf of the citizens of Columbia, E. W. Stephens, toastmaster, said, "We are here today to express the heartfelt and earnest welcome of the people of Columbia to the members of the Board of Curators. There is no class of men whom the people of this community hold in greater esteem than the members of this Board. We realize that under the non-political administration of the present board the University is entering upon the greatest period in its career."

P. E. Burton, editor of the Joplin News-Herald and vice-president of the Board of Curators, was the first speaker introduced by Mr. Stephens.

"The State of Missouri should establish a mill tax for the support of its state University," said Mr. Burton. "Only when the University has enough money from its appropriations that it will not have to curtail its expenditures will it be able to realize its true destiny. There is no reason in the world why the University of Missouri should not have three or four times its present attendance."

Mr. Burton was followed by E. Lansing Ray, editor, proprietor, and majority stockholder of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

"The city of Columbia measures up to all of the requirements of a good city," remarked Mr. Ray, "and while Columbia is to be congratulated on having located in its midst the University of Missouri, the University is more to be congratulated on having been located in Columbia.

"We, the members of the Board, want to do all that is in our power to help the University. If we do not always do as you think we should, give us the benefit of the doubt and believe that we are at heart working for the best interests of the University as we see them."

The next board member introduced by Mr. Stephens was H. J. Blanton, editor of The Monroe County Appeal, Paris, Mo.

"It is my greatest ambition in life," stated Mr. Blanton, "to make the University of Missouri the greatest educational institution in the West."

Dean Mumford's a Real Dirt Farmer

REAL DIRT FARMER is F. B. Mumford, dean of the College of Agriculture of the University. He was born and reared on a four hundred acre farm near Moscow, Mich. His early education was received in a rural school which, named for his father, was known as the "Mumford School." His high school days were spent in a country village, and then he attended Albion College at Albion, Mich., for three years. Here feeling that he needed something more than "straight farming" in his education he took a Latin scientific course.

He left Albion in 1890 and entered the Michigan Agricultural College at East Lansing and received his Bachelor of Science Degree in 1891. After his graduation he returned to his father's farm and assumed the management. Later he was appointed assistant in the department of agriculture in the Michigan Agricultural College and was made assistant professor of Agriculture there. During his stay he received his Master's Degree. In 1895 he came to Missouri as professor of agriculture.

To a man with the ambitions and hopes of Dean Mumford the Missouri College of Agriculture was a rather hopeless affair in 1895. The average graduating class was composed of two members, the business looked small. There was no library, no buildings and no livestock. At that time the college had five teachers. The only thing that could even be called a library was a collection of four books. One was a treatise on economic plants and three volumes on domestic cats. It was quite the thing for students who were unable to meet the educational requirements for entrance to any of the other schools of the University to take up agriculture. The College of Agriculture was a joke.

Now, more than a quarter of a century later the Missouri College of Agriculture is one of the best not only in the United States, but in the world. The College now has enrolled 1,550 students a year. It owns a herd of 500 pure bred animals. The library has grown from four volumes to 20,000. Those who are employed by the college to carry on the work number 185.

In 1900 Mr. Mumford was granted a year's leave of absence for study in Germany. He attended the University of Leipzig for a term in 1900 and the University of Zurich in 1901.

By CATHERINE MOORE

During his vacations while he was abroad he traveled in Saxony, Bavaria and Switzerland and studied their agriculture from the most practical side. While he was abroad he was sent as a representative from the University of Missouri to the four hundred and fiftieth anniversary celebration of the founding of the University of Glasgow.

After his return to this country the dean was appointed professor of Animal Husbandry in the University and he has kept the title to the present. Between 1903 and 1905 he was acting dean and director of the College of Agriculture in the absence of Dr. Henry J. Waters. In 1909 he was appointed dean of the college. Doctor Waters left the University to become president of the Kansas State Agricultural College at Manhattan.

It must certainly have been with a great amount of optimism that the new dean entered upon his great task; but he has been paid for his great courage and faith in the school. And he is seeing about him all the time the realization of his great dreams and aspirations for the college. He has had the satisfaction of seeing the number of students more than doubled. In twelve years the material resources of his school have increased more than a thousand per cent. In 1908 the enrollment was 341 and today, as it has been stated, the number enrolled is 1550.

Another feather in the plumed cap of Dean Mumford is the organization of the Agricultural Extension Service in 1913. That organization has grown from nothing to a project which employs more than 100 persons. Nearly every county in the entire state now has a county agent and many of them have home demonstration agents also.

According to Dean Mumford the three functions of the college are:

1. To train men and women for the vocation of agriculture.
2. To investigate agricultural problems in the Experiment Station.
3. To carry the results of these investigations directly to the farmers through the Agricultural Extension Service.

These are merely the most brief outline of the work being carried on. To prove in one small way the success of the policy is the fact that 79,945 personal calls for assistance were received last year. The value of products of the Boys' and Girls' Clubs for last year was $181,468.00. This is another realization of Dean Mumford's dreams.

But in spite of these advancing strides in the college the dean has found time to serve other needs. In 1917 Governor Gardner appointed him chairman of the Missouri Council of National Defense. The same year Herbert Hoover appointed him Federal Food Administrator for Missouri. In taking charge of the state council of defense it was only a short time until the entire state was organized. Every county and every township had its own council of defense and there were 12,000 persons in Missouri cooperating with the federal government for the success of the war.

As to his success in these undertakings some headlines in the more prominent papers of the state might indicate the situation.

"Missouri's Food Administrator Outlines Plan to Prevent Extortion by Retail Grocers."

"Must Be Big Saving," Says F. B. Mumford."

"Missouri Administrator Seeking Reduction of Substitutes."

Keep It Up.

Forest C. Donnell, president of the general alumni association of Missouri, has struck the chord of harmony with the committee—he sent in his check for $375 the other day, completing his $500 subscription. Atta boy, Forest! We need this sort of pep, and we sure hope the other folks about the State follow the lead so ably set by their president.

All Missouri alumni know Forest Donnell—received his A. B. in '04, and LL. B. in '07. Since then, he's been a lawyer in St. Louis. And a more ardent booster of Old Mizzou never breathed the air of our great Center State.

Tigers in the East Help.

We had a suggestion from H. A. Fountain, former president of the Missouri Alumni Association at New York City. He asked that the Director of the Fund send out notices in advance, of the dates upon which pledges to the Memorial mature, thus reminding those who have pledged that their installments are due. He also says this shouldn't be necessary in a matter of this nature; but he admits, in a practical way that is valuable, that some form of suggestion is necessary as long as folks deal with folks! This is a mighty good idea, and the Memorial Committee, back here in Columbia, is more than appreciative of the interest those of us who have flown so far away are taking in the welfare of their Alma Mater. The notices will be sent out, in accordance with this idea.

We'd like to get more ideas like this one of Heron's. He is 'way back there in the wilds of the East, yet he doesn't forget the old Missouri Tiger, and his spirit is surely commendable. He's over in Toledo, now, directing the budget for the Edison company. In his letter, he says he would like to get in touch with any Old Missouri grads back there. His address is 2605 Fulton street.

Farmers Right There, Too!

The County Agents of Missouri are an organization that is behind this Memorial heart and soul. They're right on the job with co-operation, and their work out over the State is invaluable in getting the news and the correct attitude to the alumni.

At the state meeting here recently, the County Agents endorsed the erection of the Memorial Union Building for the Agricultural Service of the State. And they handed R. L. (Bob) Hill, alumni recorder, a well-earned compliment, endorsing his work of obtaining all the addresses of the former students at the University. (This is the Memorial Committee's page to edit. . . . Bob didn't have a thing to say about it!)

Here's the way the County Agents put it in a resolution:

We desire to mention two movements at the University of great importance.

1. Under the efficient leadership of R. L. (Bob) Hill, the University is seeking to obtain the present addresses of all Alumni and former students. This is a necessary prerequisite for the organization of the former students in support of the great projects which the University is undertaking for the benefit of the State.

2. Able committees have in charge the securing of funds and the erection of the Missouri Memorial Union Building which shall serve as a memorial for our heroic dead who lost their lives in the Great War, for those who fought bravely and have come back to us, and for that "Missouri Spirit" which sent thousands of men into the conflict from all over this commonwealth.

We desire to express our earnest approval of these great movements and pledge our heavy support of the same.

Kansas City Alumni Boost.

The campaign for the Memorial got a big boost in Kansas City the other day, when twenty members of the alumni association there met in the City Bank Building and discussed the plans for the conduct of the work. From the business-like way they went after organization, it looks as though they are going over the top without a bit of trouble, too.

Crosby Kemper, just elected president of the Kansas City Tigers, appointed a committee of live wires to compile an accurate list of all the alumni and former students of Old Missouri living in Kansas City. They're going to get men and women alike, and then begin a real drive from the word "go". The list is to be ready early in January.

That's the pep, all right, and the spirit that will make the Memorial go over as it should.

And then, another step was taken, that of forming two campaign committees, one to act in an advertising capacity and the second to carry on the great work of soliciting subscriptions. We can't help but feel enthusiastic over the way the Kansas City alumni are getting together on this great project; and we know that this spirit will be manifest all over the country when we start the Big Drive.

Hats Off to the Ladies.

Another payment completed! Here's one for the ladies, too. Miss Amelia C. Palmer, who graduated last spring completed her $100 Life Subscription with a $90 check recently. Miss Palmer who lives in Kansas City is the third to complete payment.

ALUMNI ENDOWMENTS

During his visits with the former students and alumni at the St. Louis and Kansas City rally meetings, Acting President J. C. Jones created unusual interest and provided a topic which is being discussed generally among the alumni, when he spoke of alumni endowments.

The following paragraph taken from his address is worthy of study, and the subject matter should be pondered over by every former student and alumnus of the University of Missouri:

"It is a noteworthy fact that the only building on our campus given by an alumnus, was the gift of a former resident of Kansas City and bears the name of his father, a former distinguished mayor of this city, Jay H. Neff. What more splendid memorial could a devoted son erect to his father? 'More lasting than brass, more enduring than marble,' it will stand on the campus of the donor's foster mother and will be a benediction to scores of students yet unborn. In the universities on private foundation such memorial buildings are numerous. There are also endowed chairs, endowed museums, endowed libraries.

"The time has come when the cost of higher education threatens to bankrupt the states.

"The number of students clamoring for admission to state universities is increasing so rapidly that the cost simply cannot be met from the normal sources of revenue. The last budget of the University of Michigan was eighteen million dollars! One of two things must be done. Either the number of students admitted must be limited, which would mean ultimately an aristocracy of learning or the tuition fees must be vastly increased, which would put higher education beyond the reach of many worthy youth. Neither of these remedies, therefore, is desirable. They must be applied and be applied soon unless the alumni of the various state universities come to Louise Gwynn, a native of Morgan County, Missouri, was brought to the attention of the alumni who exhibited their appreciation by rising and applauding at length.

THE STATE UNIVERSITY

St. Louis Post-Dispatch: Dr. J. C. Jones, acting president of the Missouri State University, pointed out at a dinner address in Kansas City the disadvantages the University suffers in not coming in under the large endowments being raised for private institutions of learning. The declaration was made incidental to a statement of the University's need of more funds, whether from taxation or endowment or both.

Welcome as would be any contribution to Missouri "U," from whatever untainted source, it is interesting to recall in connection with Dr. Jones' plea the remarks while in St. Louis of one of the nation's foremost of the younger generation of educators and college presidents. Dr. Marion Leroy Burton, of Michigan State University, prophesied that the university of the future was the tax-supported institution, and he moralized that it should be so. It was necessary to the preservation of our democracy, he declared, that education should be without class distinctions either socially, economically or academically.

In making his statement President Burton anticipated any suspicion of special pleading by calling attention to the conditions of congestion and overflow at his university. It is a fact, we believe, that state universities everywhere are unable to accommodate all applications for matriculation. This, said Dr. Jones, is the condition at Missouri. In considering the present and future of our state university it is important for Missourians to realize what is being said and thought of state universities by the leading educational thinkers. Our University is not to be looked on merely as a poor man's supplement to private education but as a possible future leader among universities of all classes.

At least one state university (Michigan) is already a competitor with Harvard, Yale and Princeton, while another (Wisconsin) has earned a reputation for usefulness. There is no reason why Missouri should not eventually become a competitor of the best.

"Edit Your Own Page"

Starting with this issue the "Edit your own page", will be discontinued. Several complaints have come to the Alumni Recorder's office from alumni who say they are filing their copies of the Alumnus and do not wish to tear it out and spoil the book.

But this does not mean that any alumnus should stop editing his own page. Write it down on anything and send it in. Tell us what you want in the magazine—edit your own page on anything that comes handy and mail it. Don't forget that that page has made its last appearance so as you finish reading this find something to write on and send in that note before you forget it.

their aid. They can assist the states in their efforts to create a more enlightened citizenship, by endowing chairs, by endowing libraries, by putting up buildings for instruction or for research or by the construction of dormitories.

"You want to have a share in the great forward looking movements in the world.

"You can endow a chair or a laboratory for some beloved teacher who planted in you the seeds that have borne such rich fruit. You can construct on the campus of your alma mater a building to the memory of some cherished father or mother or son. You can build and endow a dormitory which will make it possible for more youth to secure the training that has meant so much to you."

GRADUATES AND EMPLOYMENT

From the inquiries coming to the office of the Alumni Recorder it is apparent that former students and alumni of the University of Missouri who are in business where they are employing men are very desirous of employing graduates of the University of Missouri. We have received a few inquiries asking about men who might be available for different kinds of work. One man wrote that he has in his employ seven graduates of the University of Missouri, everyone of whom are succeeding excellently in doing the work desired. It would seem that graduate students from almost every school in the University are in demand. This office is very glad indeed to be of service in helping to locate graduates for employment by graduates. Along about this time when seniors finish up their courses during the mid-winter term and especially as the spring approaches seniors are ready to make arrangements for employment. Any University of Missouri men who desire to get in communication with men and women who are available should feel free to keep in touch with this office in regard to employment.

ORGANIZATION IN THE "Y"

Renewed Activities Increasing Popularity Among the Students.

Under the newly organized cabinet led by President Jim Coppedge, the Y. M. C. A. has become a great center of activity during the past month. Over one hundred and twenty meetings of various kinds were held in the building in addition to the regular meetings of such organizations as the Y cabinet, the Christian Endeavor Society of the Christian Church, the B. Y. P. U., all of which have offices in the building which are in constant use.

The Men's Mass Meetings held Sunday afternoons stand out as the most striking features of the achievements of the past month. The purpose of these meetings is to develop campus opinion and a "community mind" on the local and national problems which are challenging thinking people today. Over two hundred and fifty of the leading men of the campus gathered to hear Dr. J. W. Hudson on the first Sunday and Dr. Charles Ellwood on the following Sunday present two masterly addresses which were followed by discussions and questions. After one of the speakers had closed his address and the meeting had been adjourned, the discussion lasted over two hours, so great was the interest manifested. The meetings will be continued indefinitely.

Sixty freshmen have completed an organization which has for its object the development of leaders for the various activities. This organization offers promise of being one of the most effective pieces of constructive leadership ever perfected by Missouri students. Fred Eldean is sponsor and guide for this new feature.

Hugh G. Proctor, employment secretary, reports eighty-seven men placed in permanent positions with 235 in temporary jobs making a total of 322. This splendid report constitutes a record in the department.

Under the joint auspices of the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A. the internationally popular light operetta, "The Nautical Knot," will be given early next semester with over eighty of the soloists of Columbia in the cast supported by an orchestra of twenty pieces.

Gospel teams organized by Herbert Kriege and others will conduct religious services throughout the state next semester.

New improvements made almost weekly in the building under the direction of the house committee comprising Mrs. J. H. Estes, Mrs. St. Clair-Moss and Mrs. J. C. Jones, add much to the attractiveness of the Y as a community center.

BOARD OF CURATORS VISIT

Springfield, and the newest member of the board, expressed his satisfaction with this, his first visit to Columbia.

"Although I have never visited Columbia before, I have long considered it the educational and cultural center of Missouri," declared Mr. McDavid. "With the co-operation of all of the people of Columbia, the University should be able to reach greater heights than it has ever attained."

Milton Tootle, Jr., St. Joseph, expressed his appreciation of the efforts of the citizens of Columbia in furthering the interests of the University.

Dr. G. R. Muns, Montgomery City, also expressed his appreciation for the hearty welcome and hospitality shown members of the board by citizens of Columbia.

Those who sat at the table of honor at the luncheon were: Acting-President J. C. Jones, of the University; E. W. Stephens, toastmaster; R. L. Hill, president of the Commercial Club and University alumni recorder; R. B. Price, Sr., treasurer of the Board of Curators; P. E. Burton, Joplin, vice-president of the Board; E. Lansing Ray, St. Louis; former Senator F. M. McDavid, Springfield; Dr. G. R. Muns, Montgomery City; Milton Tootle, Jr., St. Joseph; H. J. Blanton, Paris; and A. W. McAlester, Columbia.

ORGANIZE A POLO TEAM

R. O. T. C. Officers Backing Plans to Introduce Sport Here.

A polo team will be organized at the University of Missouri in the near future, according to officers of the local R. O. T. C. unit, who are backing the undertaking.

It is thought that the field recently leased from C. B. Rollins on the Providence road near Rollins spring for the use of the Field Artillery detachment could be put in condition for a polo field at a minimum cost. However, there are at least two other sites under consideration. Some of the government horses belonging to the R. O. T. C. unit will be used, but practically all those who have signified their willingness to take up this new sport have indicated their intention to buy a private mount which they expect to train for a polo pony.

"It is not expected that a crack polo team will be turned out over night nor that the team will start practice under ideal conditions," said Major Joseph Plassmeyer, an officer of the local R. O. T. C. unit, who has had considerable experience in polo. But Major Plassmeyer stated that he saw no reason why a first class polo team should not be turned out in due time if the men go after the game in true Missouri fashion.

A supply of polo mallets and balls have been requisitioned from the Zone Supply Officer by the R. O. T. C. Quartermaster and it is thought that practice will start soon after the first of the year.

With the University Women

Things of Interest To Them

A Woman Doctor Here.

For the first time since the establishment of the Student Health Service, University women students have a woman doctor with whom they may consult and who is helping them solve their health problems.

Dr. Edith Hedges Matzke of Ithaca, N. Y., who is now connected with the Student Health Service, under the direction of Dr. Guy L. Noyes, has come to the University this year to look after the health of over a thousand women.

Dr. Matzke is a doctor of public health besides being an M. D. and is probably the only woman doctor in the state to hold such a degree. She is here as a professor in the Department of Clinical Medicine and Surgery. Besides being a part of the health service, which takes care of students individually, she is a member of the Health Committee of which Dr. M. P. Ravenel is chairman. This committee looks after the health of the University as a whole.

The new field of work which Dr. Matzke will undertake for the University women is still being organized.

Dr. Matzke said, in an interview, that the strength of the women's self government association had impressed her as outstanding in this University. She feels that such a large body of women will aid her materially in the organization of her work and the establishment of high standards of health among the University women.

Dr. Matzke was a student at Stanford University, California, and later received her M. D. degree from the Women's Medical College of Penn at Philadelphia. She received the degree of Dr. of Public Health from University of Pennsylvania.

At one time, Dr. Matzke was medical adviser for women at Stanford University and later at Cornell University.

During the war she was a medical lecturer for the War Department.

She plans to use her experience to help University girls to carry out all plans which they have had in the past few years for the full development of University women.

Dr. Matzke has a most charming personality and her sympathy will steady many a woman student through strenuous times.

No Women on Juries.

Women are not eligible for grand or petit jury service in Missouri. Neither the amendment to the federal constitution giving women suffrage or the recent amendment to the constitution of the state making women eligible to hold office confer upon them the right to sit on grand or petit juries. This, in effect, is the context of a legal opinion recently prepared by First Assistant Attorney-General Merrill Otis, A.B. '06, A.M., L.L.B. '10.

The legal opinion is remarkable for its briefness and the clear-cut disposition of two constitutional points and one interpretation of a statute. The opinion follows:

It is the opinion of this department that, until the Legislature amends the law governing grand and petit juries, women will not be eligible for jury service. As the law now stands it reads as follows:

"Section 6607, R. S. 1919. Every juror, grand and petit, shall be a male citizen of the state. * * *

It is scarcely necessary to point out that the nineteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which gives women the right of suffrage, in no way affects the legal qualifications for jury service. Nor are these qualifications in any way affected by the amendment to the Constitution of Missouri, adopted at the special election held August 2, 1921, providing that 'No person shall be disqualified from holding office in the state on account of sex.' Obviously, jury service is not office holding.

Building Appropriation Normal Now.

The appropriation for the women's building has been shifted back to its original state of $150,000. This makes possible a large reception room and the bowling alleys which were not included in the architect's first plans for the building. This building, more of a gymnasium than was at first planned for, will prove a stabilized social center for the University women and will be a big aid in the maintenance of a well balanced social life among University women.

The W. S. G. A. Christmas Party.

On the night of December 13, the women of the University were guests at a Christmas party given by W. S. G. A. in the Knights of Columbus Hall.

There were twelve stunts provided by the journalistic organizations, sorority houses and the two dormitories. These flavored a great deal of college wit, the follies and a Christmas spirit.

A silver loving cup was given to the Alpha Phi chapter for a clever stunt representing a tragic scene in a far distant harem. The favors that were distributed among the guests and the high sticks of candy and popcorn balls furnished much merriment for the guests.

The reception room itself was lighted by the dim colored lights of a huge Christmas tree and a great fireplace was another feature of decoration.

There were between 500 and 600 women at the party—possibly the largest social gathering of University women in its whole history.

The members of the committee working for the Missouri Memorial Union Building campaign are decidedly thankful for the interest and support that the Alumnae are giving this splendid and outstanding undertaking.

The loyal support and active interest that the women are displaying in the campaign is a true index of the success and achievements of women's activities in the University.

Case on Board of Agriculture.

John F. Case will be appointed a member of the State Board of Agriculture, according to an announcement made recently by Governor Hyde. He will succeed Carol Wisdom of Bowling Green. The latter's term expires January 4.

Echoes From the Tiger Camp

— Past, Present and Future Dope —

Five Tigers Finish School.

When the 1921 Missouri football team returned to Columbia after the session with the Kansas Jayhawkers at Lawrence on Thanksgiving Day, five Tigers, ranking with the greatest of the long roll of Missouri football heroes, turned in their moleskins for the last time. Two of them had captained Missouri elevens, and all had played their full three years of eligibility, had seen their team win one Valley championship and finish as the runner-up for the title honors twice. Two of them had been named for the mythical All-Missouri Valley eleven, one of them winning his place in the minds of all grid critics every year of his competition. A brief sketch of each of the five follows:

Herbert Blumer, captain of the 1921 Tiger eleven, represents the highest type of college athlete, and has probably done more to raise the standard of sportsmanship in western football circles than any other player. A big man, a man who fought every minute from the kickoff until the final whistle of every game, Blumer is a gentleman, a scholar and an athlete. Beside his gold football, the emblem of the 1919 championship won by Missouri, Blumer wears the Phi Beta Kappa key, the highest honor of scholastic achievement, and on the gridiron his courtesy toward officials and opposing players brought honor to Missouri in every game which he entered. Blumer's scholastic attainments at Missouri have been rewarded with a scholarship, and he will do sociological research work in Paris next year. His home is in Webster Groves, Mo.

Charles L. (Chuck) Lewis, captain of the Tigers in 1920, came back to Missouri last fall to play his third year of football, and turned in the most brilliant season of his gridiron career. Lewis, three years an All-Valley man, and like Blumer, a splendid student, proved himself the outstanding back of the Missouri Valley for the entire period since the triple threat came into its own in football.

"Chuck" undoubtedly proved himself to be one of the greatest backs the Valley has ever seen. His punting always kept the ball well down the field and away from the Tiger goal; his passing sent the pigskin like a bullet into the arms of the waiting back or end, his toe was never flustered when the time was right for a dropkick, and he smashed the line, ran the ends and ploughed through a broken field with a drive that made him the most feared back in the Valley. Lewis also competed in track for Missouri two years, his work in the broad jump, high jump, pole vault and weights proving him an all-around athlete. He is married, and his home is in Kansas City.

Brutus K. (Ham) Hamilton, "the world's greatest athlete," won a football letter at Missouri for the first time this year, and, capitalizing his natural athletic ability, he played an end that caused more than one critic of Valley football to mention him for All-Valley honors. Hamilton is national pentathlon and decathlon champion, carried the colors of the United States to the Olympic games, where he won the decathlon, competed in meets in England and France, and has since taken part in most of the big indoor track meets of the country. Hamilton began winning honors when as a high school athlete he established state interscholastic records in the pole vault and high jump, and has been setting new marks ever since. He is captain of the 1922 Missouri track team. Hamilton's home is in Harrisonville, Mo.

Verne (Scrubby) Hardin, center, tackle and end, was called by many Tiger followers the most versatile man in the Tiger line during the three years which he wore the Old Gold and Black on the Missouri team. Hardin began his gridiron career as a tackle, moved to center when the need arose, and at the opening of last season, when a shortage of ends loomed, he took to the wing position like a veteran, playing a smashing offensive and a stonewall defensive. In a season in which good ends were found on almost every eleven in the Valley, Hardin ranked with the best. His home is in Maitland, Mo.

S. F. T. (Ted) Packwood carried a drive worthy of a man twice his size when he carried the ball, passed well, and proved himself a clear-headed general when he took the quarterback position to call the signals. Packwood saw service with Stankowski at quarterback in 1919, and alternated with Jack Fulbright and Chuck Lewis at calling the plays in 1920. In the season just closed Packwood served as reserve quarterback, ready to replace Lewis should injury ever send the Tiger star to the bench, but he won his spurs at lugging the ball when in game after game he showed the smashing drive necessary to penetrate the enemy's defense. He hails from St. Joseph, Mo.

Athletic Director Clevenger, during his after-dinner talk at the Athletic Committee banquet to the 1921 football team, made the statement that it was one of the duties of every Tiger who has played his last game of football to be responsible for sending a football player to the University of Missouri to take his place. He addressed the five men who had played their last year of football and urged them to see that a man, equally as good if not better than themselves, enter the University of Missouri the coming year to fill their shoes. The way Mr. Clevenger presented the idea appealed to every man at the banquet in such a way that not only the townspeople who heard his talk but football players themselves took his suggestion to heart and there has been much talk of some pledge that football players will take in carrying out the suggestions outlined by Mr. Clevenger.

The M Men's Organization.

Every former student and alumnus of the University of Missouri must be up and doing to help the M Men's organization succeed in the thing which it is attempting to accomplish for athletics at the University of Missouri. They have inaugurated a splendid program for 1922 and they deserve the efforts of every one of us in helping in their work.

Thomas Lawson Price, recently elected President of the M Men's association at their meeting in Kansas City, is now located at 1, Wsetwood Place, Jefferson City, Mo., and is in the United States Bonding and Real Estate Loan business. He attended the University in 1895 and was one of the greatest football players in the history of the institution. Mr. Price was married in 1899 to Mary Johnson. They have one daughter.

Former students and alumni can look forward to a constructive program and policy on the part of the newly elected officers of the M Men's association as outlined in the following quotation from a recent letter to the Alumni Recorder from Mr. Price:

"I am in receipt of your favor of the 5th offering to lend the valuable assistance of the Alumnus to the M Men's association. I assure you that this offer is highly appreciated, not only by myself, but all the M men of the University of Missouri."

"Indeed, the M Men's association can be and should be of wonderful value to the University of Missouri and all branches of athletics, and while I have not had time to form any definite plans for the future, I at least have this in mind: That the first principle of the association is to keep in touch with all the high schools of the state as far as possible, with a view of securing in a legitimate way the entrance into the University all the best and most promising athletes from those high schools, and next to encourage all M Men to return to the University at least once a year to lend their support to the athletic association.

"I want to take this occasion to say that the athletic department of the University of Missouri has been very courteous and considerate of all the old M Men for many years past, and that Mr. Clevenger has been especially interested in all the "has beens" so to speak. Many of us are so out of date as far as modern athletics are concerned that we could not be of much value, with any advice to the different departments, but some of the more recent attendants might be induced to return during each football season to assist the athletic director. This plan has been in vogue at Yale, Harvard and many eastern schools ever since 1893, and they seem to have gotten good results.

"I read the Alumnus with great interest, and again thank you for your kind offer of assistance."

Mr. Price is very desirous of having all the M men correspond with him regarding work for their organization the coming year. Realizing the great need that this organization can fill in giving assistance to athletics at the University of Missouri, Mr. Price desires the co-operation of every M man. He is very much interested in the banquet that the St. Louis Alumni Association is giving to the St. Louis High School athletes on December 21 and considers this a move worth while and a plan which other alumni associations should follow.

Herbert Bunker Is Tiger Captain.

Herbert Bunker of Nevada, Mo., will captain the 1922 football team. This was determined at a recent banquet tendered the members of the football team by the Committee on Intercollegiate Athletics. Bunker won by a narrow margin over Allan Lincoln, of Webster Groves.

Bunker has played an exceptional game at center for the past two seasons and has always given Polly Wallace, All-American center of Ames, a real race for supremacy at that position in the Valley. He played every minute of last season and until the Oklahoma game this year had been in regularly this past season. Like Blumer, the 1921 captain, Bunker is an excellent student as well as a leader of athletics. He weighs 200 pounds; stands over six feet tall, and plays basketball and baseball as well as he performs on the gridiron.

Athletic Director Clevenger hopes sincerely that Bunker will try to win an "M" in all the major sports at the University of Missouri this year.

There is not much dope available concerning the 1922 football prospects. It is a certainty that the Varsity will fare better from freshman material than she did last fall. Lewis, Hamilton, Hardin, Packwood and Blumer have played their last year of Conference football.

As a nucleus the Tiger coaches will have such men as Captain Bunker, Lincoln, Knight, Humes, Kershaw, Scott, Gay, Storms, Simpson and Bundschu among the letter men.

News From Alumni Centers— Shackelford of St. Louis Writes

A young fellow leaving a small town in which he has grown up and going to distant parts to labor, is often lonesome, homesick and eager to see even the wag of the old "yaller" dog's tail. He reads every line of the home paper and wishes they would print more news.

As months and years pass he makes new acquaintances and forgets most of the old ones. His subscription to the home paper has expired and he does not know that Annie is married or John is a banker or that the town has more than doubled in population. On his return in ten years or so he finds so many changes have occurred, he scarcely recognizes it and awakens to the fact that he is almost forgotten by the town.

How similar this is to school life. The first year or two after leaving we journey back occasionally and watch intently for any news items of Dear Old Missouri. Soon the student body changes so much that we feel strangers on the campus and begin to lose interest. We feel that no one is interested in us or cares whether we go back or not; that all the efforts are spent on the present students and we are in the way. What greater mistake could be made than that, both for ourselves and for our Alma Mater? No one has realized this more keenly than as Dr. J. C. Jones, our beloved president. He has noticed the tendency of alumni and especially of former students to drift away from the University and feels that that a part of this is due to the fact that the University has neglected to keep in touch with her former children.

In a conversation recently with Dr. Jones, he stated that if he accomplished nothing else while he was president of the University of Missouri than to bring the alumni and former students in closer touch with their Alma Mater, he would consider he had not labored in vain. Fellow Missourians do you realize what a wonderful undertaking that is and how much needed it is?

Perhaps Dr. Jones does not realize it as much as we who are out in the state do. What a great amount has already been accomplished under his plan. The old Missourian is beginning to feel the call back to Columbia, to realize he is wanted, to know he is welcome all the time and that he is really missed if he does not go or at least write in and tell his experiences,

So we say no greater task could Dr. Jones have undertaken than the one he has, and no task will receive a more hearty approbation from every one. Every former Missourian appreciates it, is desirous of helping, and joyous of the fact that his Alma Mater has not forgotten him and wants to keep him under her guiding wing.

To Dr. J. C. Jones, the beloved teacher, dean and president of the University of Missouri, every Missourian extends his sincerest appreciation and most earnest promise to help in his task of organizing the alumni and former students.

Pres. St. Louis Alumni Assoc.

UNIVERSITY OF MISSOURI ALUMNI ASSOCIATION OF NEW YORK

2 West 45th Street, Room 1402,
New York City

To the Alumnus:

It was characteristic of Dr. Jones, with his vision and thoroughness, that he should offer to help organize former students and alumni into county and town organizations.

The benefits will accrue jointly to the University and to the association members. In enumerating the benefits, Dr. Jones will show that they do not flow entirely to the Varsity.

We congratulate all the beneficiaries.

Washington, D. C. Alumni.

The following communication has just been received from Walt Mandry, LL. B. '17, firm of Mandry & Hornback, Attorneys and Counselors-at-law, 713 Woodward Building, Washington, D. C., relative to the alumni association meeting there, November 19. Mr. Mandry advises that the organization of the alumni association at Washington is not complete but that Miss Ilena M. Bailey, B. S. Ag. '12, is president and J. H. Patrick, B. S. Ed. '12, is secretary. Mr. Mandry advises that they are working on a list of the alumni and former students in Washington and that they hope to furnish it to the office of the Alumni Recorder within a week. The alumni and former students are doing an excellent work for the institution at Washington and are to be congratulated on their organization there.

"The meeting of the University of Missouri Alumni Association of Washington, D. C., held on the evening of November 19th, was attended by the following alumni, or former students: R. W. Atkeson, Mary Meck Atkeson, Lucy Adams, M. H. Brinklev, Orville Coan and wife, Mrs. A. M. Gardner, Stella Heldman, John S. Hornback, John H. Hudson, Mary

Greetings From the President and Deans

To the Alumni and Former Students of the School of Journalism:

A Merry Christmas and a New Year of peace and good will is the wish of the School of Journalism to every one of you, from Peking to London and from Halifax to Buenos Aires.

F. L. MARTIN, Acting Dean.

To the Alumni of the School of Business and Public Administration:

The Faculty and students of the School of Business and Public Administration offer their best wishes and cordial greetings of the season to the alumni and former students. This school, while showing the largest percentage of growth of any division of the University, is maintaining and perfecting the highest standards of training for business, and for public and social service.

ISIDOR LOEB, Dean.

To Former Students of the Graduate School, Greetings:

For the holiday season of 1921 the Graduate School desires to send to each one of you all good wishes for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. We trust that your lives are already being richly crowned with abundant success and happiness. The only real success in life, we hold, consists not in the abundance of things that one has but in the amount and quality of service for others; for that you have been more fully prepared by your advanced work here. And the only real happiness in life is but an incident to right living. So may all the new years to come find you increasingly successful and more abundantly happy.

WALTER MILLER, Dean.

To the Alumni of the Law School. Greetings:

"I am very much pleased, Mr. Editor, to have the opportunity, through the Alumnus, of extending my best wishes and the season's greetings to the alumni and former students of the Law School.

"The Law School is in a flourishing condition and will enter the New Year, 1922, with a determination to do better work in all its various activities.

"We, who are now in the school, faculty and students alike, realize that we cannot stand still, that we must make progress, or lower a past record of achievement of which we are very proud."

J. P. McBAINE, Dean.

To the Alumni and Former Student:

Permit me in the name of your Alma Mater to send you a cordial Christmas greeting. She would be greatly pleased if she could know that amid your Christmas cheer your thoughts turned towards her and that you meditated ever so briefly upon the contribution that she had made to make your life happier and richer at this Christmas time.

J. C. JONES, Acting Pres.

To the Alumni of the College of Agriculture.

The best Christmas gift which the alumni of the College of Agriculture can make to the world under present conditions, is an abiding faith in the essential strength of the agricultural industry and the fundamental value of the American farmer in establishing and perpetuating the American Democracy.

The work of the College of Agriculture is more important under present depressed agricultural conditions than when economic conditions are more satisfactory. There is more need of exact training in agriculture when the industry is laboring under hard conditions than when it is prosperous. A state-wide adoption of the methods which have been found to be profitable by the Experiment Station would materially increase the net income of the Missouri farmer.

The College of Agriculture has been particularly fortunate in having had the enthusiastic and loyal support of its graduates. This has been of distinct value in the development of the Institution. Constructive suggestions have been freely made by the alumni and these have been received with appreciation by the administrative officers.

The future for the College is bright. The plans for the New Agricultural Building are about completed. When this building is completed, the College will have five large buildings on the East Campus which will for the present provide adequate space for all the departments located on the East Campus.

F. B. MUMFORD, Dean.

To the Alumni of the School of Medicine:

The Faculty of Medicine sends the heartiest of holiday greetings to all the graduates and former students of the Division of Medicine. Our wish for you all is that you may have the peace and happiness in this season that comes to all who practice our profession in accord with its best teachings.

GUY L. NOYES, Dean.

To the Alumni of the School of Education:

The Faculty of the School of Education extends to the graduates and former students most cordial Christmas greetings and every good wish for the New Year. It is gratifying to know that plans are being made to increase the service of the School of Education to the State by bringing the School of Education into closer relationship with the public schools, and by providing, through advanced professional courses, a more extensive training for educational leadership.

J. H. COURSAULT, Dean.

To the Alumni of the College of Arts and Science:

The College of Arts and Science extends holiday greetings to its alumni and former students. We are still doing the fundamental work preparatory to the professions, and offering a broad, liberal training to all who have time to take the full work for the A. B. Degree. We hope that you look back upon your work with a good deal of satisfaction, and with the feeling that your work was thoroughly profitable.

At the last Commencement 145 students were granted the degree of Bachelor of Arts. The College of Arts and Science now has an enrollment of 1,760, approximately half of the student body.

F. M. TISDEL, Dean.

To Alumni and Former Students of the School of Engineering:

Wherever your lot may be cast in this troubled world may the approach of the Christmas Holidays renew your interest and faith in the traditions of your forefathers! One of these is the value of Education; a tradition which places it second only to the value of Religion. May we hope that you are doing your part to help others as the School has helped you. And may we feel that we have your sympathy and interest in our endeavors. We rejoice in your accomplishments of life. Our joys will be intensified and our regrets softened as we grow in co-operative spirit.

Yours for another year of effort.

E. J. McCAUSTLAND, Dean.

Alice Hudson, Virgil Kline and wife, Walt Mandry, Horace Payne, Lola Scrutchfield, J. M. Stedman, wife and daughter, E. B. Smith, Mrs. Shirley Webb, Mrs. A. E. Imus, Frank Porter, Dr. A. Ross Hill and wife.

"The meeting would have been better attended had the night not been rainy. After a short musical program, Dr. Hill made a much appreciated talk dealing with the growth of the University and its future. Dr. Hill returned from France a few months ago and expects to be in Washington until February, when he will again leave for Europe. Refreshments, gossip and a few old songs closed the evening. The letter of Dr. Jones to the alumni urging better alumni cooperation was timely, and the alumni of Washington are heartily in accord with the plans of Dr. Jones and Bob Hill, Alumni Recorder."

He's The Oldest Alumnus.

L. B. Dougherty, A.B. '47, A.M. '50, is now living at Liberty, Missouri. On the date of November 24 he wrote the Alumni Recorder that if he lives until December 7 next he will be 93 years of age.

He writes, "I am almost blind. I can see to write only by getting my eye (the right) close to the line (left one gone)." Mr. Dougherty has been asked to prepare a story for the December issue of the ALUMNUS and it will be published in full. So far as the records of the Alumni Recorder show Mr. Dougherty is the oldest living alumnus of the University of Missouri.

The Band in Kansas City.

On Wednesday, November 23, George Venable with the University of Missouri band of 54 pieces visited the High Schools of Kansas City including Westport, Central, Northeast, and Manual and the Junior College of Kansas City. Splendid programs were rendered of at least four numbers in each of these schools. Prior to the concert at each school, Dr. Isidor Loeb made a short talk about the University. H. K. Poindexter '15, furnished transportation for Dr. Loeb. Student President, J. Max McCann and the Alumni Recorder R. L. Hill in visiting these different schools. The response and reception furnished by the student body and faculty of the different schools was exceptionally pleasing and words are not available for praise and commendation of the spirit which they exhibited. The Band's trip was an outstanding feature of the Thanksgiving exercises. Shannon Douglass' management was apparent.

LYON'S GENIUS RECOGNIZED

M. U. Alumnus Died From Neglect —Works Winning Tribute in N. Y.

O. O. McIntyre, in a chatty article on New York which appeared in the Kansas City Times this week tells of the homage being paid Harris Merton Lyon, an alumnus of the University of Missouri, A. B. 1905.

"They are paying tribute to Harris Merton Lyon these days," he says. "Like Stephen Crane and Frank Norris his genius burned briefly—and he died neglected. He was among the first men I met in New York and for a time we worked side by side on a magazine. He was living then in Connecticut, battering himself to pieces to reach the magazines.

He died from overwork—leaving a realistic novel unfinished. His 'Sardonic' and book of short stories, 'Graphics,' are among the finest pieces of American literature. The last time I saw him he was in front of an advertising office where he worked. They had assigned him—one of the few literary geniuses America has produced—to writing ads for smoking and chewing tobacco. His employer never knew he worked there until after he died. He had so many young copy men, you know. He spent much of his time in Keene's Chop House brooding over a glass of beer. He was not bitter. He was just disillusioned. Even now Lyon ranks with O. Henry and his earthly reward was a series of acid disappointments."

Alumni Association Officers.

We want to publish regularly in the ALUMNUS a list of the alumni associations with the names and addresses of their officers. Please keep this office informed so that we can correct the list from time to time.

Bernard Coleman "Shows 'Em".

Bernard Coleman, a former student in the University, who is now a student at Boston Tech, has been "discovered" according to an announcement in a recent issue of the official organ of that institution. He has made center on the first basketball team. Boston Tech ranks high in the basketball world and has booked games this year with Yale, Cornell and Princeton. The "discovery" was made by Coach Allan as he watched Coleman playing on the Delta Tau Delta fraternity team. He held an interview with Coleman asking where he had received his first training. Coleman said it was with his high school team at Poplar Bluff, Mo. Coleman will play in the game against Princeton on December 22.

Coleman was a student in the University the years of 1917-18, 1918-19 and 1919-20. He will be graduated from Boston Tech in 1923.

Name of Academic Hall Is Changed.

Academic Hall, so named since it was built in 1895, has been changed to Jesse Hall by a decision of the Board of Curators at a meeting held a short time ago at the Hotel Baltimore in Kansas City. The name has been changed in memory of former President R. H. Jesse, who was president of the University from 1891 to 1908.

Mrs. Frank was born at Vincennes, Indiana, Sept. 11, 1887. Her family removed to St. Louis when she was about ten or eleven years and she received her education in the public schools there. She later attended Missouri University, completing her college course in three years, receiving her A.B. and B.S. in 1908. She taught in the high school at Troy, Mo. for one year and for three years was instructor of languages at the high school in Brookfield, Mo., prior to her marriage June 6, 1912. She was active in civic matters and a member of several women's clubs and during the war was secretary of the Carondelet Branch of the Red Cross Chapter at St. Louis. She was also 12th Ward Committeeman during the Women's Suffrage Campaign and active in the St. Louis Alumnae Association of Missouri University, being vice-president last year and member at large of the Executive Board at the time of her death.

Besides the infant son, she is survived by another son, Richard Schonfield Frank, now seven years old, and her husband Harry A. Frank.

Mrs. Victor Barth died on December 7 at her home on East Broadway, Columbia, Mo. Victor Barth was the founder of the Victor Barth Clothing Company. He died in 1895. Mrs. Barth is survived by Irvin V. Barth, St. Louis; two brothers, Joseph Barth and Isidore Barth, managers of the Victor Barth Clothing Co., both of Columbia; two sisters, Miss Carrie A. Barth, who was with Mrs. Barth during her serious illness, and Mrs. Henry Haefer, New York; and a nephew, Paul A. Barth, now connected with the Victor Barth Clothing Co. Mrs. Barth was formerly Nettie A. Barth. She was born in Fayette, Mo., December 21, 1855.

Sooners Win Debate.

The Tiger debaters were defeated in the first debate of the season with the Sooners at Norman, Okla., December 21. The members of the team who took the trip to the oil deserts were Louis D. Potter and John Caskey. Both have had experience in debating. Caskey debating against Kansas two years ago.

The question was: Resolved, that the Kansas Court plan for adjusting industrial disputes should be adopted throughout the United States. Missouri upheld the negative. The next debates will be with Washington and Wisconsin. The latter debate will be held at Madison. In the spring it is planned to send a team to meet several of the eastern colleges and universities.

Ivan Slaughter, B.S. in Ag. '20, is now engaged in dairy farming at Bethany, Mo. His wife, who was Jo D. Squires has a B.S. in Ag. '20.

CLASS OF '21.

Lela C. M. Cox, A.B. '19, B.S. '21, is now teaching at Marshall, Minn.

Sam Robert Broadbent, B.S. in Forestry, '21, is now a student in the Yale School of Forestry, New Haven, Conn.

Charles Nelson Hillix, B.S. in Ag. '21, is now teaching science and agriculture, with offices at 414 Delaware, Hiawatha, Kans. His home address is Weston, Mo.

Anton Arnold Tibbe, Jr., A.B. '21, is now a student in the Harvard law school. His present address is 51 Oxford street, Cambridge, Mass. His home address is Washington, Mo.

James Thomas Gibbs, Jr., B.S. in Ag. '21, is now field man for the Portland Cement Association, with offices at 111 W. Washington St., Chicago, Ill.

Ralph R. Coffey, A.B. '21, is now practicing medicine in Minneapolis, Minn. He married Esther Robertson, May 4, 1921. They are making their home at 500 Delaware S. E., Apt. 301.

Ruth Pauline Warren, B.S. in Ed. '21, is now a student in the School of Journalism at the University. Her Columbia address is 1004 Locust, Columbia.

Corwin D. E. Edwards, A.B. '20, B.J. '21, is now a student in Oxford. Present address is Lincoln College, Oxford, England. He is going to Paris to spend the Christmas holidays.

Floy Joslyn, B.S. '21, is now teaching Vocational Home Economics at the Kirksville, Mo. high school. Her home address is Charleston, Mo.

FORMER STUDENTS

Ivah Opal France, who attended the University during the year of 1915, married G. D. France, September 1, 1918. Her home address is Bethany, Mo.

Fred Borth attended the University during the years 1907-08, and was enrolled in the School of Engineering. He married Josie M. Stone in 1911. They have two children. He is now a druggist at 123 N. Main street, Poplar Bluff, Mo.

Samuel Jennings Roberts, who was enrolled in the College of Arts and Science, during the years, 1915-16, is now a student in the medical school of Washington University. His present address is 4949 Forest Park Blvd., St. Louis, Mo. His home address is DeKalb, Mo.

Mary Willie Harris, was enrolled in the School of Education in the summer of 1915. She is now teaching in Fayette, Mo.

George R. Lamade was enrolled in the School of Journalism in 1911-12 and from January, 1915 to January, 1917. He is now with the Grit Publishing Co., Williamsport, Pa. He married Margaret C. Hays, August, 12, 1919. They have one child.

Raymond A. Evans was enrolled in the College of Arts and Science during 1910. He is now a dentist at Savannah, Mo. He married Lena Seville July 3, 1913.

BEG PARDON!

The class note commencing "Clarence Shepard Wilson" on page 60 of the November ALUMNUS should have read—Charlene Shepard received her A. B. in '08. In 1911 she married George R. Wilson. They live at 917 McClellan street, Wausau, Wis.

FACULTY NOTES

By PAUL M. MILLER

Dr. M. P. Ravenel recently returned from New York where he attended the convention of the American Public Health Association which was held at the Hotel Astor. The purpose of the convention was to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the American Public Health Association and to celebrate the ninety-ninth birthday of its founder, Stephen Smith.

Doctor Ravenel is president of the National Public Health Association.

There were representatives at this convention from England, Mexico, Canada, Peru, Ecuador, Cuba and many other countries.

Prof. E. A. Trowbridge, chairman of the animal husbandry department of the Missouri College of Agriculture, said in a speech before the International Live Stock Exposition in Chicago that present indications are that a very large portion of the farm power in Missouri is and will continue to be supplied by horses and mules. Professor Trowbridge addressed the exposition on "The Horse Situation in Missouri".

Prof. R. J. Kerner of the history department spoke recently at Phillips University of Enid, Okla., on the subject, "International Relations." At the Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical College at Stillwater, Okla., he talked on "The Pacific in World Politics." He also spoke at the Tulsa University. The trip was made under the auspices of the Institute of International Education.

Prof. Frank L. Martin, Acting Dean School of Journalism has been ill at his home for several weeks. He is now under the care of a specialist in St. Louis.

Prof. Kenneth C. Sears of the School of Law of the University was elected secretary of the Missouri Bar Association which was in session recently in Kansas City. Dean J. P. McBaine was appointed a member of the executive committee. C. W. German, of Kansas City, was elected president of the Association.

Jefferson City was chosen as the place for the next annual meeting.

Henry Zolinsky, 18 years old, wants an education badly enough to walk for it. Lots of students say that it is too far to walk across the East Campus to class. Here is a boy who is walking from New York to Columbia and will walk across Missouri campus many times during the spring term. Henry Zolinsky will enter the College of Arts and Science next spring.

Zolinsky is a poet of exceptional ability. He has had two poems published in the Poetry Magazine for December, 1921.

A swimming team will be organized at the University of Missouri, according to Lieut. J. E. McCammon of the R. O. T. C. unit, who has charge of swimming instruction. An effort will be made to arrange aquatic meets with similar teams in the Missouri Valley Conference. The class in swimming uses the Christian College pool.

Polo is being considered in the Valley sports.

The Law Library of the University has received about eighty volumes of Supreme Court reports as a gift from the Secretary of State from North Carolina.

One of the many interesting affairs given in honor of Dean Williams while he was in Honolulu presiding over the sessions of the Press Congress of the World was a banquet given by the Missouri University Society of Honolulu. The banquet was given on October 26 at the University Club. Other guests of honor at the dinner were delegates to the Press Congress who are also alumni of the University of Missouri.

A replica of the Columns sat in the center of the table and small tigers were also used in the table decorations.

David Heenan, '19, was toastmaster. Dean Williams, who gave the principal speech of the evening, told the Honolulu Missourians the latest news from Columbia and at the end of the dinner the guests stood and sang "Old Missouri".

The guests of honor were: Dean Walter Williams; Miss Frances Mitchell; Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Gordon; John Morris, Columbia, Mo. Miss Arretta Watts, Elsberry, Mo.; Miss C. Southern, and Williams Southern, Jr, Independence, Mo.; Hing Wong, Canton, China, and Mrs. John F. Rhodes.

Residents of Honolulu who attended the luncheon were: Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd R. Kilham, Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Loomis, Mr. and Mrs. Paul S. Loomis, C. H. Talbot, L. C. Kinkle, David Heenan, M. O. Atkinson, R. F. Lum, Frank Lee, H. L. Chung, E. J. R. Rainalter and E. Watada.

Dean F. B. Mumford, appointed by Acting President J. C. Jones, represented the University at the installation of David Kinley as president of the University of Illinois on Dec. 2. He is also a delegate to the conference on "Relation of the Federal Government to Education" which will be held there.

The determination of the physical properties of electric paints and insulating varnishes is occupying the research time of Prof. M. H. Weinbach, of the School of Engineering. Problems such as the heat conductivity of paints and varnishes, also the effects of fumes and the action of oils on the durability of these coverings are a few of the practical problems on which he hopes to throw light.

Prof. A. C. Lanier, of the School of Engineering, is making a rather extended investigation of the surface iron losses in rotating electrical machines. Special research assistants will in all probability be appointed to help carry on this work.

The Columbia Commercial Club is trying to secure the convention of the Public Utilities Association for Columbia in 1922.

Dean F. B. Mumford of the College of Agriculture has just received a letter from Vladivostok, Siberia, from W. de Sagareff, a former student of agriculture in the University of Missouri in '12. The latter wishes that a friend of his, Alexander N. Danilevsky, might receive permission from Washington to enter the United States to take university work in this country. Dean Mumford has promised to do all in his power to secure the Russian's entrance to this country.

Professors Bradford, Gardner and Hooker have just issued a new text book on horticulture, which is being used in classroom work in that department.

Prof. S. D. Gromer is speaking throughout the state, in connection with Agricultural Experiment Station work, on economics of interest to farmers.

A non-collegiate vocational poultry judging team from the College of Agriculture won second place in a judging contest held in Kansas City recently in connection with the Live Stock show there. M. A. Seaton accompanied the team.

Prof. Leonard Haseman, chairman of the department of entomology, will attend the convention of scientific workers to be held in Toronto, Canada, late in December.

Prof. W. C. Etheridge recently composed an article on agricultural research in Missouri and its opportunities, for the Cyclopaedia of Agriculture. His work was of such a high quality that it is being used as a model for the preparation of similar work in other states. Dean F. B. Mumford prepared an article for the same publication on animal breeding.

Prof. F. P. Spaulding is collecting information relating to the durability of brick pavements in Missouri towns. He hopes to publish his results in the near future.

Dean F. B. Mumford has just brought out the annual report of "One Year's Work" in the Agricultural Experiment Station. The report shows that sixteen bulletins, ten circulars and six research bulletins have been issued during the year.

Dean F. B. Mumford was the representative of the University of Missouri at the installation of David Kinley as president of Illinois University, December 2. At the same time a conference was held on the relation of the federal government to education.

Dr. E. R. Hedrick of the department of mathematics will speak before the Mathematical Association of America at its meeting with the American Association for the Advancement of Science to be held in Toronto, Canada, from December 27 to 31. Dr. Hedrick's subject will be "Functionality in Mathematic Instruction."

Prof. W. W. Swet, of the Dairy Husbandry department, has been appointed chairman of a committee of the Dairy Science Association to form a set of regulations for judging contests.

Miss Gath prepared a paper for delivery at the State Teachers' Association, on "Co-operation between the Dean and Directors of Physical Education."

MAKES HEROIC SACRIFICE

acute loss. The following letter is a typical one among hundreds.

"Linneus, Mo. Oct. 23, 1921.

"My dear Mr. and Mrs. Tate:

"I was appalled to learn through the Globe-Democrat of the terrible accident which culminated in the death of your son. I cannot refrain from writing you a few words of sympathy.

"It was my good fortune to be a member of Beta Theta Pi at the same time Lee was in school, and only those whose hearts and lives were entwined in that organization can realize how much I admired and cared for him. It all comes back to me now. I can recall as if it were only yesterday the happy years we spent together in that care-free, lighthearted group; and Lee stands out of all the boys as the most lighthearted, optimistic, responsive, and adaptable. Thousands are the times that I roared with laughter at his witticisms, marveled at his intelligence and listened to his advice and counsel. His heart was so big, and his fellowship so spontaneous and his friendship so true and tender. I can name dozens and dozens of men whose lives have been made happier, nobler and truer, as mine has, by having known and having loved dear old "Circ" Tate. His loss leaves a gap in many a life and a pang in many a heart.

"I know that for you, his parents, this is the bitterest cup that mortals can taste. My heart goes out to you in this trying hour. Still it must be a great satisfaction to you to know that Lee's life was one round of happiness and good cheer and that you provided him with everything in earth—environment, training, companionship, and everything that generous and loving parents could bestow. His happy, joyous life was due for the most part to you.

"I thank God for that sweet hope of immortality, for I feel sure that somewhere just beyond the Dawn there awaits for me a strong grip and a warm welcome from my dear old friend, 'The Mate.'

"With kindest personal regards, I am

"Yours very respectfully,

"DONALD C. FITCH."

The president of the active chapter of the Beta Fraternity sent the following letter:

"My dear Mr. and Mrs. Tate:

"It was a very great shock and sorrow to us to learn of our dear brother's death. During his life here in Zeta Phi Chapter of Beta Theta Pi, and during his years as a loyal alumnus, he came to mean very much to all of us, and we learned to know him and to love him.

"Our chapter house, in which we take such pride, stands as a memorial to his untiring and devoted efforts ever toward the upbuilding and betterment of his fraternity for which he held such a large spot in his heart. His interest in the chapter was ever uppermost in his mind, and our interests in return were for his achievement and success. When he builded, he builded better than he knew, for today there stands a group of classmates and brothers who will ever cherish the memories of his association, and who put into their daily lives those principles of true living for which he stood.

"Zeta Phi of Beta Theta Pi extends its sincerest sympathies to you in your sad bereavement, and if there was but something which we could do to allay the pain of parting, we would stand ready to offer our services.

"We hope that you will feel in the future that our home thus stands as one of his achievements, and that you will find a great joy and peace of heart to be able to visit here in his fraternity's home.

"Most sincerely,

EDWARD S. HART, JR., Pres.

At the entry of the United States into the World War, Lee Tate, in conjunction with several friends, purchased and gave to the government the yacht, Josephine, for patrol purposes in the Gulf of Mexico and the Atlantic Ocean. All enlisted as ordinary seamen. Close application to his duties earned for him promotion to the rank of Ensign on March 3, 1918, and shortly thereafter he was appointed by Secretary of the Navy Daniels as Judge Advocate of the Eighth Naval District, with headquarters in New Orleans. He served in this capacity and as an aide to Admiral John D. Milton.

The following letter of sympathy to Mr. Tate's parents indicates the high respect in which he was held by his associates and superior officers in the naval service:

"1355 Junipero Ave., Long Beach, Cal.

"Nov. 7, 1921.

"My dear Mr. Tate:

"This morning I received the very sorrowful news of the death of your son and the harrowing circumstances that caused it. This sad news is a blow to me and Mrs. Milton and I am feeling much depressed over it.

"Your son and I were very closely associated officially, socially and personally while on duty together at the naval station in New Orleans. We were intimately associated as an old and young man could be, and I became exceedingly fond of him and sincerely hoped to be thrown with him again. I grew to know all his good qualities, his fairness, uprightness, honesty, energy, zeal and gentlemanly bearing. His character was admirable in every particular, and it seems it was so unnecessary for him to be taken.

"From the account given by the clipping he came to his death as I would expect—bravely, in sacrificing himself rather than risk injuring the woman driving the other car. This, with the full knowledge of the righteous life he lived, I hope is a comfort to you and his mother.

"Very sincerely yours,

"J. B. MILTON,

"Admiral Eighth Naval District."

Commodore V. L. Nelson, commandant of the Eighth Naval District came into intimate contact with Lieutenant Tate, and on hearing of his death sent the following letter:

"416 S. Main street, Hendersonville, N. C.

"Oct. 23, 1921

"My dear Mr. Tate:

"I was extremely sorry to hear of the fatal accident to your son Lee, and I wish to extend my sincerest sympathy to you and Mrs. Tate in your bereavement.

"While I know that I can do nothing to help you in your sorrow, yet I will say that it must be some satisfaction to you to know that he showed that he was all man to the end, by deliberately sacrificing his own safety, and unfortunately his life, in order that he might save a woman. I have noticed that such courage and consideration for others are not universal among our young men of today.

"Lee made good in New Orleans. I found him capable and always reliable and trustworthy; trustworthy and attentive to his duties, and efficient in the performance of them. I became fond of him myself, and he was popular and well liked by all with whom he came in contact.

"Assuring you of my sincerest sympathy, I am,

"Very truly yours,

"V. L. NELSON."

Just prior to the close of the war he was promoted to the rank of Lieutenant, junior grade. At the request of his superior officers he remained Judge Advocate of the district until May 1, 1919, when he received his honorable discharge.

He then abandoned the Law, and devoted his entire time to the business enterprises of his father. The father and son were inseparable companions in business and in pleasure, and were seen constantly together. A devoted son he was, and after the death of his sister, Sara, eighteen years previous, he concentrated his love upon his parents. They were his constant companions and pals. He had in his business and social life a charming personality that endeared him to everyone with whom he came in contact.

This alma mater feels the deepest grief at the death of an alumnus whose short life so manifested the ideals of manhood, courage, virtue and industry which she is striving to create in her sons.

BOARD OF VISITORS

charge of club work promoted by Senator Arthur Capper in 14 states with a total enrollment of more than 10,000 boys and girls.

W. P. Brinkley whose home is in Linneus, Missouri, is one of the progressive and most active farmers of the state. At the present time he is holding down the following jobs without salary. He is president of the Linn County Farm Bureau, vice-president of the Missouri State Corn Growers' Association, secretary of the Linn County Shorthorn Breeders'

Association and a member of the Linn County Republican Committee. In the past he has been president of the Linn County Farm Loan Association, president of the Linn County Farmers' Association and a director of the Missouri Federation of Co-operative Live Stock Shippers. He is in addition a contributing editor of the Missouri Ruralist.

Alexander Edwards Douglass was born near Columbia, Dec. 9, 1857. He was graduated from the School of Arts and Science, June 7, 1877, ranking first in the course in arts. He was not validictorian, however, as that honor was for the first time conferred by election of the class. At less than twenty years of age he was elected the following fall as the head of the language department in the Teachers' College—then Normal School—Cape Girardeau, Mo.

Resigning at the end of ten years because of climatic conditions he located in Kansas City. He twice refused the presidency of the Teachers' College because of his health. During his first few years in Kansas City he took a vacation from teaching. He then returned to the school room. For ten years he taught Latin in Central High. He then became principal of Switzler Grade School, one of the largest in the city, and has held that position ever since. The credit for opening elementary schools to social center or community work goes largely to Mr. Douglass. The first public meeting was held in his school, Feb. 5, 1909. Mr. Douglass is the only member of the board whose appointment dates back to Governor Hadley's administration. He was first appointed during that time and has been appointed by every governor since.

CHURCHES AND UNIVERSITY

ogist. The thesis of it is that music depends upon aroused longings ever on the verge of satisfaction. It is not the completed note that satisfies, he says, but the note anticipated. If it comes we are pleased and the canon of good music is fulfilled. The University of Missouri has great anticipations for the years to come. So also do the churches that seek to serve it. May the two great agencies of the mind and the spirit co-operate here to make this the great center of learning of the Middle West.

Certainly we can never outgrow the need of beautiful religious temples and what they signify and symbolize. Banks and factories, railway terminals and office buildings, are symbols of the necessary material things of life. But every community needs imposing temples of worship as symbols of the Invisible God. Ralph Connor tells in one of his novels of a mushroom town in the northwest that had not even an itinerant preacher. Some of the less tough-minded of the town proposed a church building as a sign of peace and prosperity. So a crude church was erected with the conventional steeple. For three years it stood without a single service. But even that unused building was a symbol of God's spirit and had its effect. Blasphemy grew less common and men could not be quite so lawless under the shadow of that token of the Eternal. It is a legitimate question whether we can ever spend too much love and money to make our sacred shrines beautiful and efficient.

The churches of Columbia desire to do a far-reaching service in the Athens of Missouri and there is no corner of this great commonwealth that will not realize an increment of power in consecrated leadership if you will assist us to serve the Ideals for which a true university stands.

Albert Leonard has organized a class in Rural Sociology for the short term men which is lead by Professor Morgan. This class will study the principles of community leadership with the idea of putting the plans in practical application in their home communities.

Messrs. David R. Porter, E. H. Hinckley and R. Elliot from the National Headquarters visited the University for a two days' conference and made many valuable suggestions on methods and activities.

J. F. Holden, vice-president of the Kansas City Railway, H. M. Beardsley, formerly mayor of Kansas City, R. H. Radford of St. Louis, members of the state committee, and James Summer of Kansas City visited the association recently and expressed themselves as highly pleased with the splendid progress which has been made in reorganizing activities and in renovating and decorating the building.

Over $9,000 has been put into improvements. The reception room is equipped with splendid furniture and fixtures and makes a very desirable meeting place for social events. The north room of the building has been converted into a library with new tables and fixtures and with a supply of magazines which makes it one of the best furnished library tables on the campus. Other improvements include the opening up of the game room, which is equipped with two pool tables, one billiard table, and several checker tables.

In honor of the distinguished guests the Commercial Club held a special luncheon meeting at the Daniel Boone Tavern at which the visitors gave brief addresses. Dean Walter Miller, Frank B. Rollins and W. G. Stephenson responded for the business men, while Bob Hill acted as toastmaster.

A committee made up of prominent ladies of the city of Columbia is acting in an advisory capacity and has made many suggestions which have added to the attractiveness of the building.

That the building itself is serving an increasing need in campus life is proved by the fact that over one hundred meetings of various kinds were held in the rooms set aside for this purpose during the month of October alone.

The campaign to raise the necessary $45,000 to completely renovate the building and equip it, is being pushed rapidly and early success is indicated.

FARM AGENTS MEET

Annual Conference of University Extension Division.

One hundred and fifteen county agricultural agents, home demonstration agents and specialists in agriculture and home economics held their annual convention in Columbia, December 5 and 10. Plans of vital concern to organized agriculture in Missouri for the next year were agreed upon. "Making the business of farming more effective, and devising a plan for reaching directly the men, women and girls of the farm were the two outstanding ideas running through the convention of the Extension Division," said A. J. Meyer, extension director.

These conferences of the Agricultural Extension Service are annual affairs. They bring together the force of extension workers into whose hands is given the responsibility of expending, for the benefit of rural Missouri, funds provided under the Smith-Lever Act of Congress, appropriations of the state Legislature and county courts, together with the large sums of money provided by the membership fees of the various county farm bureaus. Each year Missouri spends in the neighborhood of one-half million dollars in support of the various activities that head up under the Agricultural Extension Service, co-operating with the sixty-two county farm bureaus in the state.

"Throughout the conference ran the thought that in the last analysis, the permanency of agriculture and the stability of rural life are the ultimate goals in laying plans for the work of the coming year. The thought was constantly in the minds of this group of extension workers that economy of production and all-round efficiency in managing the farm and farm house are essential in attaining satisfactory rural conditions. Farming must be profitable and the conditions surrounding the farm home satisfying if agriculture is to take and hold its place in the national march of progress," said Mr. Meyer.

Former students and graduates of the University who attended the conference were:

- L. S. Kleinschmidt, B. S. '15 Savannah.
- J. M. Slaughter, B. S. '12, Tarkio.
- Ira Drymon, B. S. '18, Butler.
- Guy Q. McDaniel, B. S. '17, St. Joseph.
- C. E. Neff, A. M. '15, Fulton.
- C. E. Brown.
- Ray E. Miller, B. S. '17.
- W. F. Delp, B. S. '16, Springfield.
- L. F. Childers, B. S. '06, Fayette.
- R. J. Howat, B. S. '15, Independence.
- J. H. H. Mote, B. S. '16, Carthage.
- R. S. Clough, B. S. '17, Warrensburg.
- E. L. Peter, B. S. '21, Troy.
- J. Robert Hall, B. S. '17, Linneus.
- R. Q. Brown, B. S. '15, Charleston.
- R. L. Furry, B. S. '20, Pineville.
- H. C. Hensley, B. S. '16, New Madrid.
- L. J. Wormington, B. S. '16, Neosho.
- R. A. Kinnaird, B. S. '13, Maryville.
- W. T. Angle, B. S. '21, Sedalia.
- E. R. Keller, B. S. '20, Bowling Green.
- J. M. Huston, B. S. '14, Platte City.
- Asbury Roberts, B. S. '17, Marshall.
- W. E. Foard, A. M. '14, Benton.
- Roy I. Coplin, B. S. '18, Farmington.
- G. V. Sheets, B. S. '17, Bloomfield.
- G. R. Skinner, B. S. '15, Clayton.
- J. Bland Hill, B. S. '16, Marshfield.
- Jesse M. Miles.
- C. C. Keller.
- C. R. Howell.
- R. D. Jay.
- G. S. Hensley.
- Ross Nichols.
- E. T. Itschner.

Olive Proctor, B. S. '15, Fulton, was among the representatives of the Home Demonstration Agents.

STOCK JUDGING TEAM WINS

Missouri Men Place First in Judging Beef Cattle.

By winning first place among twenty-one college teams in the judging of beef cattle, five students of the College of Agriculture again brought honor to the University of Missouri at the International Live Stock Exposition at Chicago. The team was coached by Prof. L. A. Weaver, and the members of the team were as follows: W. P. Hays, St. Louis; H. R. Klein, Queen City; T. C. Wells, Columbia; Frank Stoner, Chamios, William Nicoson, Braymer, and H. W. Hamilton, Auxvasse.

Competition among the different teams was strong and Missouri took eighth place in the average of all classes, Ohio took first place, followed in order by Ontario, Oklahoma, Purdue, Kansas, Nebraska, Pennsylvania, Missouri and Washington.

Missouri's record at the International has always been a good one. For four years in succession from 1910 to 1913 inclusive, in competition with 12 teams representing the leading colleges of the Middle West, the College of Agriculture of the University of Missouri was never lower than fourth place. Since that time, however, competition has increased and the number of teams competing has doubled.

Six of the teams that competed with Missouri in this contest were coached by men who received their degrees from the College of Agriculture of the University of Missouri. They are as follows: E. A. Livesay, '17, West Virginia; W. L. Stangel, '16, Texas; Russell W. Duck, '15, Syracuse, N. Y.; Howard Hackerdorn '10, Washington; and F. L. Bentley '13, Pennsylvania State.

The six men who composed Missouri's team this year were picked from a class composed of thirty members enrolled in advanced stock judging. Each year the members of this class with the highest standing are chosen to represent the University at the International, and make an extended visit to the prominent pure bred herds of the Middle West preparatory to the show.

POULTRY JUDGING HONORS

H. C. Hartman Places First in Kansas City Contest.

To H. C. Hartman of the University of Missouri goes high honors in the Poultry Judging Contest held at Kansas City, December 2. Not only was Mr. Hartman high man but the Missouri team won second place in the contest, winning over teams from the University of Nebraska and the Iowa State Agricultural College, and being defeated by 50 points by the team from the Kansas Agricultural College. The Missouri team also made the highest score in utility judging.

The contest was between four teams composed of U. S. Veterans' Bureau students taking non-collegiate instruction. The other members of the Missouri team were O. C. Grove, R. H. Smith, and C. H. Crumly. Their good showing is due to the excellent training received under M. A. Seaton, who coached the team.

The Poultry Judging Team of the University of Missouri, went to Chicago to take part in the second annual Mid-Western Inter-Collegiate Poultry Contest, which was held in connection with the Coliseum Show of Chicago. The team which is composed of three members, John M. Baldwin, Joe M. Brand and Joseph H. Chambers, was accompanied by Prof. H. L. Kempster, chairman of the poultry department of the University and E. W. Henderson an instructor in poultry raising. Missouri took first place in the contest last year. Missouri won second place in utility contest and won fifth place in whole judging contest this year.

FROM THE TIGER CAMP

On the night of December 15, President and Mrs. J. C. Jones entertained with a dance in honor of the 1921 Tigers. The house was beautifully decorated in keeping with the holiday season and the good old southern hospitality of the President and his wife made it one of the most delightful occasions of the year. "Herb" Blumer and "Herb" Bunker both held line positions again—only it was the receiving line with Dr. and Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Z. G. Clevenger.

More Dope on Basketball.

Craig Ruby, former Missouri basketball star and now coach of the court men, has a tough proposition ahead of him in the rebuilding of the basket-tossing five for this season. Four of last year's team are lost either through graduation or ineligibility, having played their full time on the court.

The position that will be hardest to fill will be that of center which for the last two years has been held down by the redoubtable George Williams, twice named as the Valley's best pivot man. Ex-captain George Brown, guard and forward, is another whose loss will leave a big hole in the Tiger quintet. Leslie Wackher and Ralph Coffey, the old reliable guards, will also be gone but not forgotten.

Herb Bunker was late in starting his basketball work because of his football activities but he is expected to play the same brand of basketball this year that he did last when he captured an all-Valley guard position his first year out. Another hard task for the Tiger mentor will be the finding and training of a running mate for the big boy.

Captain George Bond has been getting better every year and this season is expected to be the climax. Bond has long been a successful basket-tosser but he will have a big job ahead of him this year.

"Bun" Browning and John Knight are both forwards upon which much hope has been pinned for the 1922 season. They will both probably see service in every game.

The graduates of the freshman squad who are showing up best in their daily work-outs are: Lester, Storms, Van Nice, Thompson, Faurot, Hays and Terry.

Baseball in a Bad Way.

Baseball at Missouri has suffered in recent years because of the three term plan. The regular school year is over before the baseball season has hardly got started.

Last year's team is sadly disrupted by the absence of seven men, three of whom were pitchers. Southpaw Pruitt, who could not only pitch but also hit, will leave about February 15 to join the St. Louis Browns at Bogolusa, La. Smith and Ficklin are the other two pitchers who are not back. The whole infield of the 1921 aggregation will be missing, Huber at second base, Lam at shortstop, Fulbright at third base and Streeter at first base.

The men on whom the new nine will have to be built will be Charlie Lourance, last year's captain, Pat Murphy, Dick O'Reilly, Herb Bunker and Bus Williams.

Murphy, Lourance and O'Reilly are all good hitters and from present indications the hope of this year's team will lie in their ability to knock 'em out and bring in the runs. The mask work will be well taken care of by Murphy, O'Reilly and Lourance. Bunker will be able to take care of the outer-garden in O K style but the hard task will be the formation of a new infield and the finding and training of pitchers.

Among the men who showed up well on the freshman team last year we find hopes of a good infield. Bob Hayes plays first base, Quick can hold down the opposite corner and McKim is a shortstop. Laws was the only pitcher that showed possibilities. The hurling end appears, on paper, to be weak for any team must have more than one pitcher.

The Prospects in Track.

Robert I. Simpson has outlined a rather pretentious track chart for his athletes. The prospects are frankly not as good as they have been during the past several years.

Kansas, on the other hand, reports the greatest prospects in the history of K. U. with 14 letter men back on the job. Brutus Hamilton, captain of the M. U. tracksters, will carry the burden of the point-getting for the Old Gold and Black. The greatest weakness of the Missourians threatens to be in the sprints.

The baseball and track schedules follow:

BASEBALL

April 5 and 6—Nebraska at Columbia.
April 14 and 15—Kansas Aggies at Columbia.
April 19 and 20—Oklahoma at Columbia.
April 28 and 29—Washington at St. Louis.
May 4 and 5—Kansas at Lawrence.
May 12 and 13—Kansas at Columbia.
May 18 and 19—Washington at Columbia.
May 26 and 27—Ames at Ames.

TRACK

February 25—K. C. A. C. at Kansas City.
March 4—Illinois Relays.
March 17—Kansas at Kansas City.
March 25—Missouri Valley Indoor Meet at Kansas City.
April 22—Drake Relays.
April 29—Pennsylvania Relays.
May 13—Oklahoma at Oklahoma.
May 20—Kansas at Columbia.
May 26-27—Missouri Valley at Lawrence.
June 2-3—Western Conference at Iowa City.

A K. U.-West Point.

The University of Kansas is to play a football game with West Point October 27, 1922. Consent for schedule of the game has been given by the athletic board of the University of Kansas. The game will be the first in the history of the University of Kansas that its football team has journeyed into the extreme east. This game will be the first on the K. U. schedule next fall and will be followed the next week with a game with Drake at Des Moines, Ia. It is rumored that K. U. will also play the University of Colorado. Comment by University alumni and former students is that this is a wise move on the part of Kansas University. Valuable football experience will be learned in the early part of the season which they can use to advantage as the season closes and it will also take to the East the fact that the West produces good football material.

Clevenger to Visit in New York.

Mr. Z. G. Clevenger, Athletic Director, is to be given a dinner by the New York chapter of the Missouri Alumni Association some time in December. He will be in New York to attend the International Intercollegiate Athletic convention which meets December 28-29. Homer Croy, president of the alumni association, has written Mr. Clevenger to attend the dinner.

Basil Gwinn has been elected Captain of the basketball team at Columbia High School. Gwinn is the only "C" man of last year's squad on the team this year.

Editors and managers of annuals who have not placed their contracts for the engravings for 1922 issues may have a copy of the above book free.

"Dean Mumford Urges Schools to Help in Conservation."

"Missouri Food Pledges Lead."

"Mumford Tells Plans to Keep Food Cost Down."

In 1919 Dean Mumford was elected to visit French Universities. He went as a representative of agriculture and agricultural education on a commission of American representatives to France. The honor came from the French Institute of America.

Animal Husbandry is the dean's specialty, having carried the professorship of that division since his appointment. He does experimental work in this, is in charge of the experiment station here and has the administration of all scientific research work carried on in the College of Agriculture.

In 1911 Mr. Mumford received an offer from the State Agricultural College at Montevideo, Uruguay. He was to be director of that school. The offer entailed a substantial increase of salary over that which he received here at the time. However this offer is not startling when one considers the fact that he has refused the presidency of three wealthier schools in other states to continue his work here. In regard to this the dean said:

"I'd rather be dean of the Missouri College of Agriculture than to be president of all three of them."

An article by A. A. Jeffrey in the Missouri Ruralist for December 5, 1920, another quotation of Dean Mumford's in regard to his purpose for the college is given:

"The most important service that we can render is the training of young men to go back to the farm. Missouri needs trained men and women for agricultural leadership in her rural communities. The field of the college in this endeavor is unlimited.

"In Missouri there are 5,000 physicians and four schools to train them; but to train 263,000 farmers we have only one college of agriculture."

In the September issue of the College Farmer an article by the dean on "A New College of Agriculture," is just brimming over with statements of the dean that show in themselves many of the dean's characteristics and his dreams for his work which is a part of him. In this article he says:

"In my opinion the College of Agriculture has but started upon its career of service to the state and to those who enter its doors as students . . . the College has the vision for high achievement and the will to make this a great school. Its faculty, students and alumni all possess this vision and together will realize the high destiny awaiting the institution."

There is still another side to Dean Mumford's many sided career. He is an author. It is hard to write of him and not become immediately involved in the intricate affairs of the College of Agriculture of the University of Missouri because when one thinks he is really talking to the dean about himself they are usually fooling themselves because they are talking to him about the College of Agriculture. It is a case of "Now, my son, John." But to get back to the man as an author he wrote "Animal Breeding." He has also issued bulletins of the Agricultural Experiment Station of the University of Missouri, and on the Agricultural Experiment Station of Michigan.

He is a member of Sigma Xi, Alpha Zeta, American Genetic Association, American Association of Agricultural Colleges and Experiment Stations, Society for the Promotion of Agricultural Sciences, and the American Society of Animal Nutrition.

Dean Mumford's home is on the farm of the College of Agriculture in the southeast part of Columbia

TIGER LETTERS AWARDED

Sixteen Get Coveted Emblem—Numerals to Eighteen Freshmen.

Sixteen letters, emblems crowning a season of loyal and hard work, were granted to Tiger football players for the 1921 season. Following are the men who were awarded their "M" the night of November 29 by the athletic committee: Hamilton and Hardin, ends; Hill, Blumer, Keller, tackles; Storms and Scott, guards; Bunker and Simpson, centers; Lewis, quarterback; Kershaw, Packwood, Bundschu and Humes, halfbacks; Lincoln and Knight, fullbacks.

Among the horde of freshmen who tried for the yearling squad, 18 were given jerseys and numbers, while 13 received the grant of numerals alone. The committee also granted a sweater and "C-C" to Poage of the cross country team.

WE CALL your attention to the "Better University" campaign conducted in the Alumnus by various merchants in Columbia. Knowing that there is no direct advertising value, these business men are working for the best interests of M.U., believing that the University is Columbia's biggest asset.

Births.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Young who live near Fayette are receiving congratulations of their friends over the arrival of a daughter whom they have named Eleanor Wood. Mrs. Young was formerly Miss Hazel Pipes. She attended the University and is a member of the Alpha Delta Pi sorority.

A daughter was born Dec. 12 to Mr. and Mrs. Irl T. Scott. Mr. Scott is an assistant in the biology department.

Donald C. Fitch, B. S. in Ag. '15, and wife, A. B. '16, of Linneus, Mo., announce the arrival of a 10-pound son, David Robnett Fitch. Mrs. Fitch is the daughter of Mrs. D. A.

Robnett of Columbia. Donald C. Fitch, Jr., the 3-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Fitch, recently suffered a very serious fall.

Charles Kane Visits Here.

Charles E. Kane, who was formerly University Publisher, visited Columbia recently. Mr. Kane is now with the Illinois Central Magazine in Chicago. While in Columbia Mr. Kane called at the Alumni Recorder's office.

Marriages.

Cards have been received here announcing the marriage of Miss Sybil Flagg to Vann Kincannon, Jr., on November 5 in New York. Mrs. Kincannon formerly lived in Louisiana, Mo. She attended the University and is a member of the Pi Beta Phi sorority. The couple will make their home in New York.

Announcement has been received here of the marriage of Grant Wyatt, Jr., of St. Louis to Miss Marcia Plumridge of Los Angeles, Cal., on December 6 at Los Angeles. Mr. Wyatt was graduated from the University of Missouri in 1919. He is a member of the Kappa Alpha Fraternity. The couple will make their home in St. Louis.

Contract Awarded to Stephen's.

The E. W. Stephens Publishing Co. was awarded the contract recently for printing the reports of the Supreme Court of Missouri and the Missouri Court of Appeals for the ensuing six years. This makes the seventh time that this company has been awarded the contract. It has printed the reports for last 36 years. The total cost will be around $200,000. The price of $2 a volume is an increase of 64 cents over the last contract. This increase is caused by the rise in price of labor and materials, says Mr. Stephens.

Oklahoma Dixie Club.

Mrs. Roscoe G. Harper, nee Miss Frances Corlew, B.S. in Ed. '17, Columbia, Mo., is president of the Dixie Club at the University of Oklahoma, at Norman. It was organized last year and wives of faculty members are eligible if born in one of the southern states. A test of eligibility is the pronunciation of the word "door." A pronunciation which rhymes well with "beau," as tho. the word were spelled "do" gives a Class A membership. Mr. Harper is a professor in the School of Law. Mr. and Mrs. Harper were married Christmas Day, 1920.

Allan Lincoln

Is There an Allan Lincoln in Your Town?

Mr. Alumnus—did you know that the responsibility of victorious Tiger teams in the future rests on your shoulders? There doubtless are some young athletes playing on a back lot in your town that are embryo Brutus Hamiltons or Harry Viners. Dig them out, interest them in Old Mizzou—see that they get the right start.

Tiger athletes in the past have often been “discovered” after they came to the University. But think how many have gone on undiscovered, and how many more have not even gone to college. It’s up to you to help the coaches—show your appreciation of your school.

The Ability to Work Hard and to Sacrifice Did It

When "Herb" Bunker came to the University of Missouri as a freshman just out of high school at Nevada, Mo., he was like the rest of the freshmen, unknown. In three years time he has made for himself a secure berth on the Tiger football team and has received the highest honor that that team has in its power to bestow—he has been chosen captain for the season of 1922. In his first year of Valley basketball he was placed on that mythical all-Valley five.

His attainments have not been in the field of sports alone, for in the classroom his grades are above the average and he is well on his way toward being an honor scholar. On the campus he is a gentleman and is respected by his fellow students.

Since his entry in the University of Missouri "Herb" has earned a part of his way. It has been his willingness to sacrifice, to work hard and put thoughts of himself last that has made it possible for him to win out. At all times "Herb" has been a hard-hitting, smashing Tiger in all things that he has undertaken and today he is writing another page in the history of Tiger traditions.

It is the clean playing, the high scholarship and the gentlemanly conduct of such men as Herbert Bunker that have made the traditions of the University of Missouri what they are today, and that have given the Tigers the reputation of being the best sportsmen in the Valley.

Herbert Bunker has set a mark of achievement for High School men to aim at when they enter the University of Missouri. It is a mark only placed there by using loyalty to his Alma Mater, the determination to win for old Mizzou and by scholarly achievement as stepping stones to reach it.

"Herb" has won out because he believed that what he was doing was worth while.

The University of Missouri offers to the high school graduate who comes to Columbia the same opportunities to make good in a thousand ways. What one man has done another can achieve, but perhaps in a different way. "Herb" Bunker will not be here for always and in the future there will be men needed to take his place. These men are in the high schools today.

The Alumnus who still feels the kick of the old Tiger spirit will do everything in his power to see that these men are pointed the way to the University and are led to feel and to know the glory and the honor of her traditions.

Old Mizzou Needs You

As a student you gave moral support—now we need your financial support. The Boone National Savings and Loan Association has a plan whereby a group of alumni in one city can pool a small sum every month, and at the end of a 10-year period have enough money to make the University a substantial endowment.

Missouri needs new chairs, a new auditorium, new equipment. Many University faculty men are already investors in this association. More investors would greatly aid in helping University people own their own home.

Below is a table which shows the result of monthly deposits:

Deposited monthly	In about 10 years will yield
$ 3.00	$ 500.00
6.00	1,000.00
12.00	2,000.00
30.00	5,000.00
60.00	10,000.00

This association has operated for 25 years, and has never lost a dollar in the city. Here is your chance to do something big for your Alma Mater.

IS THE UNIVERSITY OF MISSOURI GOING TO BE A SALARIED EMPLOYEE OR AN OWNER AND MANAGER?

Do the alumni and the people of the State of Missouri want their University to be the uncertain, clock-watching, salaried employee, or the far-sighted owner and manager who, recognizing his duties to his customers and employees, makes every effort to guide his business wisely without thought of personal interest? The employee is always uncertain of his future because he lacks a financial foundation. The owner and manager has the foundation and his mind is therefore free to plan for and grapple with the problems of the future.

Endowment and Financial Foundation

The University of Missouri will be the salaried employee so long as it is almost solely dependent upon uncertain appropriations and will only pass into the class of the far-sighted manager when the worries of daily sustenance are lifted from its shoulders by endowment. Then, and then only, can it plan adequately for the future and play the progressive part that a great University located in the heart of a great state should. The University will still need the State appropriation just as the owner needs the salaried employee but it will have its financial foundation which removes personal worries and allows a bigger, broader outlook.

Where our University stands at present

Harvard University has an endowment of	$43,000,000
Columbia University has an endowment of	35,000,000
Chicago University has an endowment of	30,000,000
Yale University has an endowment of	24,000,000
Cornell University has an endowment of	16,700,000
Princeton University has an endowment of	9,564,000
Washington Univ. (St. Louis) has an endowment of	9,517,000
University of Texas has an endowment of	2,000,000
University of Missouri has an endowment of	1,646,000

Endowment the Most Permanent Gift

In speaking of an anonymous gift of $100,000 to endow a professorship at Washington University a few weeks ago Chancellor Hall said:

"The donor is one of the relatively few people who appreciate that the endowment of a professorship is more permanent, more enduring, than a building though made of granite. There are professorships today in English universities which were endowed 800 years ago. The endowment of a professorship is, in fact, the most abiding memorial that can be conceived."

NOW IS THE TIME FOR THE ALUMNI AND EVERY PERSON INTERESTED IN THE UNIVERSITY TO WORK TO LIFT IT OUT OF THE EMPLOYEE CLASS AND PUT IT WHERE IT CAN EXPAND IN ANTICIPATION OF THE NEEDS OF THE PEOPLE.
