The Medical School in Columbia

IN VIEW of the suggestion made by certain Kansas City physicians and surgeons that it might be advantageous for the University of Missouri to give its medical instruction in Kansas City rather than Columbia. Dean Guy L. Noyes of the School of Medicine has outlined in behalf of the University the reasons for maintaining the school here. The Board of Curators, at a recent meeting, announced that after careful consideration it re-affirmed its policy of establishing a four-year medical course and a state hospital at Columbia. Regarding the location of medical colleges in large cities distant from the universities of which they are a part, Dean Noyes says:

"The problem of location of the medical school is presented whenever the university is in a small city or town. Two courses are open; to go to a large city where clinical material is immediately accessible, or to keep the medical school at the seat of the university and provide the clinic in a state hospital. The solution involves weighing the advantages and disadvantages of each course, and the proper course will differ in different cases. There can be no perfectly satisfactory solution, since it is impossible to secure in either location the advantages of both.

"Location of the medical school with the rest of university in a small city or town is not an untried experiment. Michigan and Iowa have strong medical schools at Ann Arbor and Iowa City, respectively. Wisconsin, after years of hesitation, has decided upon the same course at Madison. Thus two of the great state universities have succeeded with the experiment. In the best educational thought of the country there is reluctance to locate the medical school away from the rest of the university.

"There are certain administrative advantages in a university location but the essential advantages are educational. Some of the educational advantages may be enumerated as follows:

"The majority of medical students in a state university enter upon the study of medicine after only the minimum two-year requirement of college training and experience. Many of these students come to college with an inadequate background of experience in the family or the environment. In the two years of pre-medical college work they have only begun to benefit by the formative influence of university life. These benefits of university residence come not only from the classroom but also from other features of university life.

"After all, the biggest thing in medical or any other kind of technical education is education itself, which must precede and accompany the giving of more technical skill. The time has not passed nor will it ever pass when the journalist, the lawyer, the schoolmaster, and the physician largely represent to the youth of most communities the higher things of life. In training the physician you are training a man for this service to his community as well as for the service of caring for the sick and promoting the public health.

"Students in other departments of the university are 'broadened' by contact with medicine. The lawyer, the engineer, the Journalist and the man of affairs learn the scope and spirit of modern medicine. They acquire a sympathetic insight into medicine which will subsequently redound to the advantage of the state in their intelligent support of the advance of medicine and public health.

"A great modern medical school on the campus of the University will attract to the profession of medicine a larger number of that large body of students who come to college after completing the high school course without having chosen their career. The medical school would be located at the chief source of supply.

"There is a dangerous and distressing shortage of teachers of medical subjects and the most difficult problem in operating a medical school is to secure a competent, active and devoted faculty. University associations strongly appeal to the men who enter the profession of teaching—vocational teachers—and a strong medical school at the University will attract these men more than one detached from this environment. Teaching is an underpaid profession. In a university community the professor's salary determines the social and other demands on that salary.

In a large city his immediate social group would be leading practitioners of medicine and surgery, men whose incomes treble or quadruple his. Living conditions are therefore better at the university and this attracts better teachers.

"University location presents to the faculty and students of medicine the invaluable asset of class contact with the fundamental sciences of physics, chemistry and biology and related sciences such as psychology and sociology. To have the libraries of these sciences available for reference by teachers of the medical sciences is most desirable, but the opportunity to consult with the professors in these sciences is even more important. Conversely the medical sciences frequently throw important light on many lines of work in pure science. Above all you secure a stronger scientific group in your university.

"So great are the advantages of university location that, in the words of President Alderman: 'Nothing would justify the separation from a great and growing university of an organic and essential part of the university except incontrovertible proof that the necessary processes of educational work of that department could not with proper money and legislation be carried on within the university. Any other position would invite general dismemberment and dissolution as abhorrent to an institution as to an individual. This I think the core of the matter.' Division of the four-year medical course is illogical and impracticable. The fundamental medical sciences must be closely connected with the hospital for purposes of teaching and research both in the medical sciences and in clinical subjects. This need has become more apparent with the developments in medical science in the past 10 years. The interdependence of the medical and other sciences is becoming more and more intimate.

"So indispensable is correlation of the work of the first and second years with that of the third and fourth that only one or two courses would be open to the university with clinical teaching established in Kansas City. Much of the work of the elementary years would of necessity be duplicated in Kansas City, or, on the other hand, the whole four years of work would be offered there and medical teaching discontinued at the University. The first alternative would be wasteful if not prohibitive in point of cost; the second would be a step toward the dismemberment of the University and unthinkable. It is abhorrent to contemplate and perhaps illegal to execute.

"For third and fourth year medical students sufficient amount and variety of clinical material is necessary but unlimited material is not necessary. A clinic of 500 beds for a school graduating 100 students annually is all that the school can profitably use. Hence although there is more clinical material easily accessible to a school in Kansas City, this is not the same thing as saying that adequate facilities for the clinical teaching of third and fourth-year medical students cannot be provided in Columbia and with no greater cost to the state.

FAVORS UNIFIED CONTROL

"The only safe plan is to have the teaching hospital and the medical school under the same governing body. With separate and especially with political control of the hospital, there is constant danger of uninformed and unintelligent limitation of the teaching privileges in a hospital. To make a municipal hospital in Kansas City the essential reliance of the state medical school for its teaching clinic is to court disaster.

"The other great essential of successful clinical teaching is the employment of vocational teachers of clinical as well as of scientific branches. Teaching is a man's job and a man must put into it the very best that is in him. The primary interest with the clinical teacher must not be the demands of a private practice; it must be the bedside teaching of medicine and surgery. There are grave practical difficulties in the way of establishing the vocational system of clinical teaching in a large city. Vocational teachers cost more than avocational teachers; but the cost is not prohibitive and it is as great or greater in large cities as at the University.

"All experience shows that if you build and equip a great modern hospital and place in it a competent staff, patients will come to it in constantly increasing numbers. They come to the hospital because of its reputation.

"Certain inevitable difficulties in establishing a teaching clinic in a small town have been urged as arguments for location in a large city, where these particular difficulties do not exist. Careful analysis shows that none of these difficulties are insuperable and that no essential element of clinical instruction is sacrificed by university location. Separate location, on the other hand, involves the irremedial sacrifice of most of the above enumerated invaluable educational assets. It is not a choice of evils. To locate away from the University is to throw away something which should be retained at any cost, and to do this through lack of initiative and effort to overcome a few surmountable difficulties.

PERFORMS DOUBLE SERVICE

"The cost of providing a teaching clinic is not properly charged to medical education alone. A great state teaching hospital provides the people of the state and essentially those in the rural districts with needed medical service. It performs a doubly beneficent service, and, because of its connection with a medical school, it renders this service more efficiently and economically than in any other way. For these reasons the removal of any part of the medical school from the University is an exceedingly serious and harmful step to take. We must not surrender an educational birthright for mere quantity in alleged clinical facilities and we must remember that similar proposals might well be made to the University for the removal of the departments of law, engineering, commerce, and so on with results that are obvious.

"No one will deny that a school would be stronger and a university administration would be more effective if the entire university were concentrated. No one will deny that the university spirit would be weaker and the administration less effective in a department removed from the campus.

"Upon those who favor dispersion of the University rests the burden of proof. They must show that medical education will gain, not lose, by the transfer of any part of the medical school away from the campus. Vanderbilt University is just now spending $3,000,000 to do away with the two miles which at present separate her medical school from the main university.

"Finally the problem of medical training is a problem in education and not a medical question. It is our duty to exclude such considerations as local economic advantage and local offers or promises of future financial support. We should do the ideal thing—as viewed from the standpoint of education—if we can afford it, and not to the 'second-best' thing because it may appear to be cheaper. The core of the whole matter is that the educational advantages of university location are so overwhelming that there is but one policy for the state of Missouri to pursue, namely to expand the medical school already in successful operation at Columbia, to develop here a great state hospital as Michigan and Iowa have done and as Wisconsin has decided to do. By this course and by this course alone will Missouri keep abreast of the trend of the thought in medical education."

Doctor Noyes summed up his views concerning the location of the state hospital as follows:

CENTRAL LOCATION LOGICAL ONE.

"A state hospital should function first, to give hospital service of high type to the rural population,—the cities have hospitals beds in plenty;—second, to make possible the teaching of scientific medicine.

"No large city is centrally located in Missouri. If a state hospital is to serve the rural people it should be in their midst and accessible to them. In the area included within a radius of fifty miles of Columbia may be found one-fifth of the rural population of Missouri.

"One should not assume that transportation is of necessity to be by means of railroads. Automobiles and airplanes owned by the hospital will bring patients to the state hospital in a rural location.

"A state hospital that furnishes the clinical teaching unit for the University must needs be located at Columbia. A state hospital organized to provide hospital service and the means for teaching medicine can be most effectively and economically administered by the University."

A Visual Education Service.

The University Extension Division, Visual Educational Service, University of Missouri, Columbia, has inaugurated a visual service for schools, farmers' clubs, colleges and other educational institutions. They have an extensive supply of splendid pictures with motion pictures and slides that ought to be used by the alumni organizations and school teachers of all grades and high schools. Persons interested should correspond with C. H. Williams, University of Missouri, Columbia, Missouri.

This Is a Reminiscence, But a Live One.

By MERRILL E. OTIS, A. B. '06

(Assistant Attorney General for the State of Missouri. Before entering the state legal department Mr. Otis was Assistant City Counselor of St. Joseph. Mrs. Otis was formerly Sophia Hersch, A. B. '12, A. M. '13.)

THE Editor of the ALUMNUS has asked me to write 750 words of reminiscences of my days at the University. As if it were possible for an old student to compass so vast a subject in so brief a space. Seven hundred and fifty pages would not tell the story.

While it is not true that I came to the University in the Mayflower, the Savitar to the contrary notwithstanding, it is true that I heard the last address of Dr. S. S. Laws to the students of the University (I trust none will conclude from that that I was a student in his administration). I witnessed the last years of Dr. Jesse's administration, the first administration of Dr. J. C. Jones as acting president, and the early part of the administration of Dr. A. Ross Hill. I saw the rise and fall of the U. B. Club, the death of the M. S. U. Independent, the birth of the Missourian. I attended the last meeting of daily chapel exercises, themselves reminiscent of a University ante-dating even the Old Columns on the "quad".

In the twelve years that have passed since I finally succeeded in graduating I have had but a fleeting glimpse or two of alma mater. When I left I intended fully to return each year or oftener to receive congratulations from my old instructors on my rapid forward strides in the great world, but it was a decade nearly before I had enough ahead to buy a ticket back, and at last, when I did return, it was to a University and a Columbia that knew me not and that I, on my part, scarcely knew. The old brick house overlooking the "Katy" Railroad, where as a Freshman I batched, deriving sustenance for a semester from a sack of beans, had been torn down. The boarding club in Lathrop Hall where in my time four hundred men sat down thrice daily to rhubarb pie and oleomargarine had been supplanted by a modern cafeteria, where polite manners had taken the place of flying biscuits. I learned with sadness that the literary societies and debating clubs of which there were half a dozen as late as 1910, had dwindled to only two, but

I was cheered by the information that the M. S. U. Debating Club was still leading as in bygone days. There was talk of new campuses, new buildings were pointed out, new names had been given to old buildings. To the thousands of students passing me on the sidewalk I was as uninteresting as the Aeneid of Virgil to a high school athlete, yet there was a time when even my battered hat was thought worthy of exhibition among other relics of antiquity at the Farmer's Fair. I was told that there still was a creek called the Hinkson beyond the golf links, but I dared not investigate lest even that ancient stream be now confined within iron pipes or called by some strange cognomen.

As, upon this fleeting visit, I saw the very youthful faces of the present generation and sensed their sweet innocence, it seemed a far call to the days of the great triumvirate,—Nardin, Nelson, Donnell,—Nardin, profound, versatile, indefatigable; Nelson, keen of mind and eloquent of speech; Donnell, two times valedictorian, at once brilliant and unrelenting. As a Freshman I worshipped at their shrine. Then was a student body as full of striking and unusual men as the Periclean age was replete with scholars, orators, philosophers and statesmen. There was Wallie Hurwitz, with the smallest head and largest brain of all, now at Cornell, who in a few years from graduation won recognition from the mathematical faculties both of the old world and the new. There was Mac Anderson who said to me, he was then fifteen, on the first day I was a student at Missouri, as we were walking together upon the campus: "When I have a particularly fine shade of thought to express I find it necessary to resort to the Greek language". As Dr. B. M. Anderson, Jr., he has since attained international reputation as an economist. There was C. H. Williams, now director of the Extension Department of the University, "History" Williams, who made the highest grades possible to be made in every subject which he took. There was KisKadden, the genius of the proletariat, who at the same moment could write a superb poem and analyze an abstruse problem in jurisprudence, old "Kis", called him. As an alumnus he revisited the University for the first time when he had become general attorney for the same railroad under one of whose box cars he first came to Columbia as a Freshman. There was old John "Robusto" Kurtz, who was scholar and debater and athlete, and is now Chairman of the Public Service Commission of Missouri.

Scores of others of the same calibre as these there were. They were the University of Missouri as I knew it, not bricks and stone and mortar and crumbling columns, they and those fine magnificent men, Jones and Loeb and Defoe and Hinton and Max Meyer and many others like them, some of whom fortunately still remain to instruct, to inspire, and to befriend.

Fighting the Battle of the Hinkson in '11.

(By OSCAR E. RILEY, B. J. '12, A. B. '11. American Secretary of the consulate general of Japan, New York. President of New York Alumni Association.)

When we of '11 matriculated in September, 1907, we were told by friendly sophomores from our home town that war was heaven, so we signed up in vast numbers for two years of military. Then we thought we had entered upon the great adventure of life as we marched to music between Academic Hall and Rollins Field.

A week or so later, thrills went up and down our spines when the same sophomores told us that Captain Frazier, the commandant, always had two-pound steaks, rare, with his meals and was always on a sharp lookout for freshmen who were slow at catching on. Naturally this improved our first efforts at present arms.

Then our uniforms came and we drilled before the looking glass as well as in the open spaces. We could hardly wait until Thanksgiving, when we could wear our uniforms home. That train life lingers forever in one's memory, when one looked down from a lofty height upon the prosaic wearers of everyday clothes, and who perhaps had never known the thrill of wearing a uniform with visible buttons.

Speaking of awkwardness in learning how, I recall vividly the natural aptitude shown by some of the others, mostly good looking chaps, such as Rockwood, Kennedy, Stowers, Nolle, Wetherell, Claude A. Brown, Linn McBride, Herbert W. Smith and Gus V. Kenton, to mention only a few.

There were six companies, each having four squads of eight men each, in addition to commissioned and non-commissioned officers, making a corps of more than 200. The reviewing officers from the regular army at Jefferson Barracks gave us unstinted praise, for we had perhaps the best corps the old school has ever had.

Company A, with the tallest soldiers, drilled in front of the Mechanics Arts Building and Companies D and E on either side of the Columns, with F lining up in front of the skyscraper which housed the Ag students and later became the temple of journalism.

The girls helped by walking around the campus and reviewing the drill three times a week—a service for which the doughty warriors of that day were sincerely grateful.

Some days the weather was too bad and stormy to venture outdoors and then we drilled in the basement of Academic Hall in the large room under the auditorium and along the corridors past the basement room where Dean Williams and Hon Martin were later to lecture. I have been told that students found it difficult to read or romance in the library when the militarists were marching below and the girls were perfecting high kicking and other stunts in their gym which rested on library ceiling.

Sometimes our lectures on military tactics were given by the commandant in the auditorium and at other times by our captains up near Professor Ankeney's studio and the tower.

We came to think a lot of our commandant, after we learned that the second year men were spoofing us. In those days, war was an elective subject, but I have always been glad, not sorry that I followed the sophomore advice back in the fall of '07. To me, '04 sound like the middle ages and '07 quite modern, so I suppose '07 sounds away back to present students.

The College Boy at Play in the Sixties.

By WALTER LENOIR CHURCH, '67

When Prof. Searcy was teacher at the Goose Creek School near Colonel Russell's home just across the bridge, the small boys had big times—particularly on any holiday which justified a bon-fire.

By the way, the relics of our forefathers' fire-worshipping superstitions often manifest in their younger descendants. It was no uncommon thing for the two opposing gangs—and there were always at least two in every school "befo' the waw"—to have rival bon-fires. Then there was likely to be a mock-battle with "Roman Candles" for fire-arms. But someone was always fighting-mad hurt by a blazing ball—and then the battle became real.

On 4th-of-July night before usual antagonism developed, something happened to unite in one common purpose the rival gangs on opposite sides of the road—who had been whooping and dancing around their respective fires.

A bunch of young toughs from Blackfoot rode into town and galloped across the old rickety bridge over Goose Creek, contrary to the "City Ordinance" thereunto appertaining.

The Goose Creek boys, by one impulse, turned loose on the intruders their Roman Candles. It looked and sounded so much like real "guns" that the Blackfoot boys, who were unarmed (for fear of the Town Marshal) incontinently turned and fled. Then when out of range of the "fiery bullets", they dismounted and stormed the two fire gangs with rocks from the gravel road.

"Turn about is fair play", so the Goose Creek boys scattered in dismay, some with bruises which the popular "Liniment for Man or Beast" did not cure in a day.

Professor Searcy later was teacher of the "Sub-Prep" department of the University, in the old school house down on the Providence Road, near the corner of the University Campus.

That school house afterwards became a dormitory. A new boy who slept there, was a big lubberly chap—fat, freckled and fourteen, likewise quite superstitious. He wouldn't dare walk alone into or near the old graveyard.

One night a couple of us caught a big white gander, tied his feet to a small dog, and put both through the open window into Fatty's room. Then at a safe distance in the shadows, we whooped like an owl and threw a rock into the room. Fatty jumped up in bed, the old gander flapped and hissed—Fatty rushed out through the door in night array, and vowed he had seen a ghost in his room.

After that it always enraged Fatty if any boy passed him on the street flapping his arms like wings and hissing like a goose. Fatty was lacking in a sense of humor, but he later developed surprising courage. Our gang put up a job on Fatty. One of them was to go out walking with him in the moonlight, beyond the town limits away out past Dr. Hubbard's place. We waylaid them and shot off an old horse pistol. Fatty's companion dropped and howled. Instead of running away, Fatty stood over his fallen and supposedly wounded companion and bombarded his assailants with rocks that hummed over our heads in the rail fence corner, like they had been hurled from a catapult.

Not wishing to hurt anyone, the gang silently slid away.

The prostrate traitorous companion was afraid to get up. Finally he did arise, but Fatty seeing he was not shot promptly knocked him down again and went home alone. After that, the whole gang respected Fatty, and played no more jokes on him. The arm flappers ceased from flapping and the hissers hissed no more for his annoyance.

When the Civil War "broke out," Fatty, young as he was, joined General Lyon at Springfield, Mo., and never returned to Columbia.

Back to Semester Plan in 1923.

The University of Missouri will go back to the two-semester summer school plan in September 1923. The Board of Curators upon the recommendation of the University Faculty had decided to go back to the two-semester summer school plan and referred the matter to the Committee of Deans relative to the exact time when the new plan would go into effect. After considering all the circumstances the Committee of Deans decided it is not possible to put the plan into effect until the date stated above.

Some University bulletins announcing the three-term plan for the next semester had already been sent out before the Board action and the Committee of Deans felt it would be fairer to students who had planned to complete their work by taking work in the spring term of 1923, not to put the plan into effect without due notice.

Ag Club Officers for 1922-23.

The 1922-23 officers of the students in the College of Agriculture Ag Club are: President, Roscoe Hill; Vice-President, Dura L. Pippin; Secretary, Harold Hanser; Treasurer, Alfred Spuehler; Recording Secretary, Neely Turner.

A report on the Farmer's Fair showed that the expenses of the fair were approximately $1,500 and that the proceeds from "The Follies" and minstrel show were approximately $1,700.

A report on the College Farmer showed that the magazine, re-established this year, had returned a profit of about $400. It has a circulation of between 600 and 700.

Officers for the University Cadet Band elected for the next year are: Harold Boyd, President; Frank Aldrich, Vice-President; and William Hancock, Secretary-Treasurer.

Plans were discussed at the band's final meeting for the arrangement of an extended tour they expect to take next year. It was decided to continue giving concerts during the coming school year the same as during the past year.

Alumni organizations should make arrangements now with Mr. Boyd for band concerts this fall and winter. The U. of M. band is an exceptional institution. Every Alumnus is proud of the band. Its concerts please everybody. The band draws students to the University of Missouri.

Dean Williams Calls on President.

Prompt enactment by Congress of the bill extending the period during which naval radio facilities shall be available for the transmission of news was asked of President Harding Mar. 24, 1922, by Dean Walter Williams, of the School of Journalism, and James W. Brown, editor and publisher.

Dean Williams said many parts of the Orient would not receive news from American sources unless Congress acted.

Cooper County Rally.

The Cooper County Alumni Association held an alumni rally meeting at Boonville, May 23. Major A. M. Hitch, A. B. '97, B. S. '07, principal of the Kemper Military School, and president of the Cooper County Alumni Association, presided at the dinner.

Dr. C. J. Blackburn, Blackburn, President of the Saline County Alumni Association and Vice-President of the Alumni Association in general, attended Journalism Week. Dr. Blackburn talked enthusiastically about the alumni organization and its force for power for the University of Missouri and education in general.

President Jones in his talk said that of all the organizations to which the student of the University of Missouri could become a member, membership in the organization of the alumni was the most important of all. Col. T. A. Johnstone, A. B., A. M. '72, President of the Kemper Military School, talked most interestingly of his school days and school day acquaintances. Major Hitch referred to Colonel Johnstone's school days as the Eugene Field days. Colonel Johnstone is President of the Boonville bridge project and was responsible in a large measure for this successful enterprise. Z. G. Clevenger, athletic director, told in detail of the work of his department and of the prospects for next year and of the work that should be done by the county alumni associations for the benefit of the Athletic Department. Bob Hill, alumni recorder, told of the work of the alumni organization.

The following alumni and former students attended the meeting:

William M. Kingsbury, Jr., '19-'23, Boonville. Frances T. Walts, '19-'22, Roswell. Harry E. Mean, Jr., '20-'22, Boonville. Anna Belle Summers, '21-'22, Boonville. ### The Greene County Banquet.

The Greene County Alumni Association held a banquet in honor of President J. C. Jones at Springfield on May 15. H. R. Nelson, B. S. Ag. '09, president of the organization, was master of ceremonies. Judge John S. Farrington, '93-'95, acted as toastmaster. Talks were made by Judge John H. Bradley, LL. B. '02, formerly Curator of the University of Missouri, and President J. C. Jones. The following Springfield alumni and former students of University of Missouri attended the banquet:

All of these were enthusiastic over the organization of the alumni by counties in Missouri and pledged their support to the efforts of President Jones and his work.

On May 16 President Jones addressed the 225 high school seniors at Springfield and also made a talk to the students of the Teachers' College located there. The Greene County alumni are doing some constructive work for education in general.

Pettis County Alumni.

The Pettis County Alumni association banquet for the high school seniors of that county was given on May 16th at Sedalia. About ninety of the ninety-seven Seniors graduating from the Sedalia High School were present.

A four-course dinner was served, following which Mr. Guy Titsworth, president of the Pettis County Alumni Association, took charge, of the meeting and acted as toastmaster. Dr. Titsworth gave the address of welcome to the senior class. C. A. Blockberger, president of the class, responded in a very pleasing manner. The Toastmaster then called upon the following alumni for short talks: Holmes Hall, Harvey Dow, Miss Margaret Letts, E. W. Couey, A. J. Campbell, Paul Barnett, Miss Vitula VanDyne and W. T. Angle.

The luncheon was often interrupted with short, peppy Missouri yells. The speeches that were made were for the purpose of informing the senior class of the opportunity offered by the State University in getting a higher education. Many interesting and numerous incidents of old alumni were recited during the evening.

Following the talks the gathering sang "Old Missouri" and the toastmaster announced that the dance was on.

The seniors are still thanking the alumni for the splendid entertainment accorded them.—W. T. Angle.

Shreveport Alumni.

On May 10 we had our alumni and former student meeting, with President Jones as the honor guest. There were nine alumni, six former students, one student now in the University, and one who is to enter in the fall. The wives of two former students completed our number.

We are so glad that Dr. Jones could come to us for this meeting. It is of great interest to us to know how prominently our Alma Mater stands through her representatives in the world of affairs. Following President Jones, Dr. Cassity, Dr. D. W. B. Kurtz, Jr., of Denver, Mr. R. L. Coleman of Lake Charles were the speakers of the evening. Mr. Coleman was a student in the University when President Jones was a student there, and told us many interesting things of those men who are only names to most of us. Dr. Kurtz needed no introduction to most of us.

An organization was made with Dr. G. H. Cassity as president, Miss Nelle Martin, vice-president, and Miss Stella Steele as secretary-treasurer.

We had letters and telegrams from alumni in New Orleans, Baton Rouge, and Natchitoches, expressing regret that they could not meet with us, and asking whether President Jones could not come to them for a meeting.—Chlo Fink.

Banquet In Audrain County.

The Audrain County Alumni Association entertained the fifty-five high school seniors of that county at a banquet at Mexico on May 11.

The room in which the banquet was held was beautifully decorated with University of Missouri colors and pennants. An orchestra from the Missouri Military Academy played University songs in which all those who were present joined. The president of the Audrain County Alumni Association, J. Harrison Brown, was busy leading yells and seeing that everybody had a good time. J. C. Stoy was toastmaster. He kept the crowd in a good humor and the banquet was a success from every viewpoint. The high school seniors were more than well pleased. The Audrain County Association is certainly alive to educational needs and advantages. They are to be congratulated on the constructive work they are doing. The Audrain County Association was the first to plan this way of giving publicity to prospective students about the University of Missouri and its initiative has been directly responsible for other county associations planning to do the same thing. On behalf of the high school students Carroll W. Glover of the McMillan High School, Mexico, Marlin Butts, Vandalia and Edith Kellum for Farber High School and Cynthia Slocum Cunningham of Laddonia, responded to toasts. Miss Cunningham is a great granddaughter of Judge Elliott P. Cunningham who was given the contract for building the old Academic Hall of which the Columns were a part. Her great grandmother was Cynthia Slocum, the granddaughter of Major Hugh Crockett of Revolutionary war fame. During her high school career, Miss Cunningham has been class president, art editor of the annual, treasurer of the athletic association and a member of the debating team. A banquet and reception was held at the Huckins Hotel. Talks were made by President Jones; Professor Jos. F. Paxton, A. B. '91; W. F. Wilson, A. B. '98, M. A. and LL. B. All of the alumni and former students in the state of Oklahoma are invited to attend this alumni rally banquet. # Echoes From the Tiger Camp

Past, Present and Future Dope

All Hail the New Coach.

Thomas Kelly has been appointed head football coach of the University. Kelly has a past that promises much for the future. He is a University of Chicago man, and has been coaching at the University of Idaho for the last two years. He comes highly recommended by Coach Stagg of Chicago and by the chairman of the athletic committee at Idaho University. During the time Kelly was line coach here, Herbert Blumer the retiring captain, worked under him, and the new coach has Blumer's complete approbation. Herbert Bunker, this year's captain, is also acquainted with Kelly and recommends him as a good coach.

Kelly coached the Rolla team who journeyed up and beat the Tigers, according to Coach Clevenger. His success as a line coach was demonstrated when he took the Idaho team—a team not in the Pacific Coast Conference then—and they showed to such good advantage that they were admitted to the Conference. He took a green line and made one of the best lines Missouri has ever had. Coach Clevenger says concerning the prospect of Missouri with Kelly at the helm of athletics:

"I am confident we will have one of the best lines in the conference and in addition we will have the efficient help of Garrity as line coach. I feel this to be a very strong combination and expect to have a very successful season."

Missouri on the Diamond.

Missouri did not make an exceptional showing in baseball this spring. This was due to the fact that she did not have enough good baseball material. Due to the tri-semester system now in practice, many of the available men left at the close of the winter term.

But, there is a very consoling fact connected with the baseball record. Although the Tigers were crippled by circumstances, our record is equal to that of the Jayhawkers. We tied them in standing in baseball.

The significance of this fact is that when a return to the two-term plan is made, the Bengals will "strut their stuff" and show the whole Valley conference that basketball is not the only game they can play.

Missouri Needs Athletes.

Although Missouri did well in basketball and football the past season, there has been a dearth of suitable material. The men selected for the different teams were satisfactory enough, but the competition wasn't keen enough to make it interesting. What Missouri needs is athletic material—more and better material.

The track team was scarce of exceptional men. Z. C. Clevenger, director of athletics, urges that every graduate and former student of Missouri appoint himself a committee of one to influence high school graduates in his or her community to register for the fall term. We need them, alumni, and it is your duty as a loyal Tiger to aid us in our time of need.

In every community there is some one or two students in high school who are capable of exceptional work in athletics under the proper training. And Missouri has the men who can give the coaching. It is up to you to co-operate with them and send the material with which to emblazon the name of Missouri in big letters in athletic circles, even as is being done in scholastic standing.

Pruett a Favorite.

That Hubert (Lefty) Pruett, a former Tiger pitcher, who is now twirling for the St. Louis Browns, is rapidly becoming a favorite with contemporaries and fans alike is being demonstrated at every performance. The gain in popularity is not only due to his sunny disposition, but also to his exceptional pitching. He has been rushed in at critical periods and at every opportunity has handled himself to favorable advantage. He has saved the Browns from defeat on several occasions and has oftentimes prevented the accumulation of a heavy score in cases of defeat.

Manager Fohl of the Browns has written to Z. G. Clevenger, director of athletics at M. U. concerning Pruett: ". . . Pruett is one of the best finished pitchers I have ever seen and the prospects for him are bright."

Such men as Pruett are making a name for the old Alma Mater. They are making a way for popularizing Missouri not only with residents of the state, but neighboring states and the country as a whole.

Who Will Coach Basketball?

There is a man selected by the athletic department for the position of basketball coach for next year, but his identity as yet is a secret. Coach Clevenger is mum on the subject for the reason that plans have not culminated in securing the prospect.

The best information obtainable is that he is a former Missouri basketball player. Also, he is at present in business. Whether he will sever his business connections for the time being and direct the Tigers is yet the question. At any rate Mr. Clevenger says he can produce the goods.

Prof. Pommer Given Watch.

A gold watch was presented to Prof. W. H. Pommer by the members of the Phi Mu Alpha at their final meeting of the year. The watch was presented to Professor Pommer by the retiring president, John H. Mueller, on the occasion of the former's birthday.

Professor Pommer has been a member of Phi Mu Alpha since 1907 when he came to the University of Missouri from St. Louis where he was supervisor of music in the schools.

At a business meeting which followed, the following officers were elected: President, Prof. George H. Sabine; Vice-President, Dr. Allison Gulick; Secretary, Cuthbert Tibbe; Treasurer, Prof. H. H. Loudonback.

IS DOING

IS THE UNIVERSITY PAGAN?

Knoxville, Tenn.

Dear Mr. Hill: The other day in Mobile, Ala., I met W. B. Pettus, 1898-1901, in Arts on the street. Right there we had a Missouri reunion. Big Bill Pettus is principal of the Union Language School at Peking, China, and secretary of the Y. M. C. A. New York address 299 Broadway. He will return to China in August. He was married in 1905 and has three boys. He was sent over here to raise a third of a million dollars to build a school. About sixty thousand more and he will be through with the job. Pettus asked me if there were any of the rest of the boys in town. Within ten minutes I had him completely surrounded by Missouri graduates Jesse F. Hogan, an old Tiger, Charlie Lack, a distinguished engineer, David Durant and Willie Durant, Engineers of the firm of Durant and Durant.

This subject came up; the public say that the University is pagan; that you are a bunch of infidels back there at home, and some other schools thrive on that reputation you have. Good men and women send their boys and girls somewhere else because they hear these things, and are afraid that their children will be led astray. That is a thing that hurts an old son of Alma Mater.

For example let's take a look. W. B. Pettus came to the University an avowed atheist. While there through the influence of fellow students and the "Y" he was converted, was himself a secretary of the "Y", entered the student volunteer movement, and has spent the past fifteen years in China as a missionary. J. F. Hogan, who called himself a free thinker, has for seven years had a Sunday School class of young men, second to none in his city and has been absent from that class only twice. He is a member in good standing in his church. Both the Durant boys can be found in their Sunday School class every morning and in choir during church. These fellows are all big, rough, two-fisted, regular fellows; just the average graduate of the University of Missouri.

How many schools, denominational or private, can show a better average? And yet this bunk about there being no religion in the University of Missouri is still being talked. Very truly yours, OLNER L. STEELE, A. B. '03, LL. B. '06.

President Jones read this letter at the Journalism Week banquet on May 26 to impress the Missouri newspaper men with the fact that the University of Missouri has a wonderful religious influence.

Boston, Mass.
May 26, 1922.

My Dear Bob: Just received your note. You were slightly misinformed as to my rank as teacher in the Harvard Medical School as my official title is "Student Assistant" in Histology, Embryology and Neurology in the medical school.

I am to teach during half the day for four months next year and will spend about six weeks doing research work under Dr. Bremer, who is chairman of the department of Histology. In order to have this free time next year I am to stay in school this summer and do two months of regular fourth year work in Surgery.

I personally do not deserve any credit for getting this assignment as I must conscientiously attribute it to having had the privilege of working with Dr. E. A. Clark at M. U. for two years. When I went to see Dr. Bremer in regard to the matter, as soon as he found that I had worked with Dr. Clark, he immediately said that he had a place for me. He considers Dr. Clark one of the leading anatomists in the country today. All the Missouri boys at Harvard heard of Dr. Clark's resignation with a great deal of regret, as he was a fine teacher and a true friend to the students. Best regards, Bob, R. G. SPURLING.

Tokyo, April 24.—University of Missouri alumni and alumnae continue to play an important part in activities among foreigners in the Japanese Imperial City. Their activities are not confined to this city, however, but rather is the name of "Missouri" being carried to all parts of the Far East by lovers of the columns and the gold and the black.

The visit of Dean Walter Williams of the School of Journalism to the Far East following the Press Congress of the World convention in Honolulu brought to Tokyo the man who is directly responsible for the great growth in the Missouri colony here. Through his individual efforts the number of M. U. journalists actively engaged in their profession in the Far East has grown from one or two pioneers to a force comprising practically the entire news staff of the Japan Advertiser, with representatives in other departments of the same organization and capable persons in many other journalistic organizations.

Characteristic of the Far East, as far as foreigners are concerned, there is a continual shifting, as the ones who have served for several years abroad return to their native land and others arrive to take their place. It is indicative of the personal influence of Dean Williams in the Far East, however, that the number of Missourians gradually increases, despite the loss of many members of the colony.

Several changes in the staffs of the Advertiser and the Trans-Pacific magazine, both of which are published by Mr. B. W. Fleisher in Tokyo, will be made this spring. The one which will be most keenly felt by Tokyo Missourians will be the departure of H. H. Kinyon, B. J. '12, A. B. '12, with his family for the United States in the near future. Mr. Kinyon, formerly University of Missouri publisher and editor of the ALUMNUS, has been managing editor of the Trans-Pacific since June, 1918, and during his four years at the head of the magazine it has grown to a place of authority on Far Eastern subjects. "Hank" has also ably served as president of the Missouri Alumni Association of Japan, and under his leadership many delightful gatherings of the clan from "Old Mizzou" have been held in Tokyo.

The return of Missourians to the states was begun recently when Vaughn Bryant, B. J. '11, former University of Missouri publisher, departed from Yokohama with his family after three years in the Orient. The Bryants visited with Tokyo Missourians before their departure, the Advertiser staff giving them a farewell "gyunabe" party at a Japanese restaurant just before their departure. Vaughn was for some time advertising manager of the Advertiser, later becoming manager of the branch office at Kobe, which position he occupied until the time of his departure.

Several changes in the Advertiser staff have recently been made, some temporary due to the visit in the states of Glenn Babb, B. J. '15, A. B. '14, and others permanent. Ben G. Kline, B. J. '17, has become news editor, taking the place of Glenn to the time of his departure. On his return "Jerry" is slated to become managing editor of the Advertiser, taking the place of Mr. Hugh Byas, the present managing editor, who will soon leave for London.

Frank H. Hedges, B. J. '19, who has won recognition for his excellent work as correspondent for the Advertiser, Trans-Pacific and the Philadelphia Public Ledger Syndicate in Peking, China, is at present in Japan, returning during the absence of Babb. He is now touring Japan as representative of the Advertiser in the party of the Prince of Wales.

During the absence of Hedges from Peking his place has been filled by Duke N. Parry, B. J. '20, who is now writing a series of exclusive articles for the Advertiser on the Shantung situation, being on the scene of activity also of the present warlike moves in China. Duke is representative of the International News Service in Tokyo, and in his absence this service is being handled by James H. McClain, B. J. '21. Parry scored a "world beat" on his cable dispatches of the assassination of Premier Hara, as Missourians have doubtless heard before this late date.

The efforts of Missouri journalists are not entirely confined to the news side, however. John H. Casey, B. J. '20, who joined the Advertiser staff in October, 1920, has in this short period risen to the position of advertising manager. Casey, however, is the only representative of the School of Journalism in the advertising department at this time.

The latest addition to the Missouri colony in Tokyo is Edward B. Smith, B. J. '22, who arrived in Japan during March. This makes three new additions since last October to the staff which has been sent to the Advertiser and associated publications by Dean Williams. That more graduates will appear on the scene in the future to take the places of others as they depart is an accepted fact—due to the excellent showing made by those already on the scene.

Don D. Patterson, B. J. '17, who has been associated with J. B. Powell, B. J. '10, in publication of The Weekly Review of the Far East at Shanghai, China, will soon depart for the states after having spent three years in the Orient. His wife, formerly Miss Ruth

C. Furbeck of St. Joseph, Mo., and their child have already returned to America. In addition to his work as business manager and financial editor of the magazine, Don has found time to do pioneer teaching of journalism in St. Johns University, along with correspondent work for many American publications. Powell, who attended the Washington Conference as representative of the American Chamber of Commerce of China, has not yet returned to the Orient. E. R. EGGER, B. J. '18.

Memorial Campaign Committee,
University of Missouri,
Columbia, Missouri.

Gentlemen: At long intervals, a copy of the ALUMNUS finds its way into this part of the world and from one of these copies I learned that a Memorial Building was to be erected at Columbia. You will find enclosed a postal money order for one hundred ($100) dollars. Please add this money to the fund being raised for this building. Sincerely yours, EMONS B. WHISNER, F. S. 1915-17, Captain of Infantry, United States Army.

For the last three years she has been an instructor in Spanish at Stephens College.

Frank Stonner of Chamois, B. S. Ag. '22, is going to Cape Girardeau where he has accepted a position as assistant county agent of Cape Girardeau County.

From rodman in the maintenance of way department, at $60 a month, to assistant superintendent of the Philadelphia division of the Pennsylvania Railroad is the record made in fourteen years by James B. Phelan, a graduate of the School of Engineering of the University of Missouri.

The story of the rapid rise of Mr. Phelan is told in the Altoona, (Pa.) Tribune recently. He was born at Moberly which was his home when he entered the University. After receiving his degree as a civil engineer, he went east and entered the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. as a rodman, on September 12, 1907. His promotions came rapidly.

He has been successively yardmaster, assistant stationmaster, assistant freight trainmaster, assistant passenger trainmaster and freight trainmaster, from which position he has now been promoted to an assistant superintendent. His headquarters will be in Philadelphia.

Max N. Beeler, B. J. '14, editor of the Kansas Homestead, Topeka, Kansas, writes: I saw Lute Frye at Spearville last week. Lute was graduated from the School of Journalism in 1914. He had been trifling around the country since his graduation until about a year ago, except for about 15 months when he was in the navy. Now he is one of the town daddies of Spearville. He is running the only paper in town, working hard, making money and is raising a flock of whiskers and speckled chickens. He took Tom Talbert, B. S. A. '13, Geo. Catts, B. S. A. '17, and several other fellows and me out to see his newspaper, poultry and living plant. I wanted to take a picture of Lute for the ALUMNUS but the wind was blowing so hard he couldn't hold his ears still.

Otto Eidman who was graduated from the School of Engineering in 1914 I believe, was in my office this morning. He is here with the state highway commission.

Dr. Carter Alexander, assistant director of Education Finance Inquiry in New York City, is a professor of Educational Finance at the University of Chicago this summer. Doctor Alexander is a graduate of the University of Missouri and holds a bachelor's degree in education. He obtained his master's degree in Arts in 1908.

A collection of rare books is being cataloged in the library of Neff Hall and is to be known as the Riley Collection. Oscar E. Riley was graduated from the School of Journalism in 1912 and since that time has sent various volumes of interesting books to be placed in the library for the use of the students of the School of Journalism.

The collection now consists of the following: Two volumes, 1-2 and 3-4, of Chambers Journal of Popular Literature Science and Art; The Anglo Saxon Review, edited in 1899 by Lady Randolph Spencer Churchill; The Literary Yearbook and Bookman's Directory, edited in 1901 by Herbert Morrah; Political Text Book, edited in 1860; Novelists' Magazine, volume 6; a copy of the Spectator, and two issues of The Galaxy of May 15, 1866, and July 15, 1866. The last two books are so old that they will not be bound and placed on the shelf, but it is expected that the library will have an addition of glass case in which these volumes in the same ancient condition will be preserved.

After Riley was graduated, he was copy reader and bank and real estate reporter for the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. In June, 1916, he became news editor of the Japan Advertiser and remained there until October, 1918, when he returned to New York and was elected manager of the Japan Society. He has been, since June, 1920, American secretary of the consulate-general of Japan, and resides in New York City. He is President of the New York Alumni Association.

Miss Ida Judith Johnson, who has returned after two years' absence to get her A. B., has already had some of her poetry printed in Contemporary Verse, Poetry, The Ladies Home Journal and several newspapers. The Literary Digest quoted one of her poems which had previously appeared in Contemporary Verse.

This past year Miss Johnson has been teaching Latin in Callaway College at Searcy, Arkansas, and the year before she taught French in Jonesboro (Arkansas) High School.

Miss Johnson tells a little joke on herself. Once she submitted a poem to Contemporary Verse about a little plum tree. It was printed and a few years afterwards she returned to the place of inspiration to see the tree. When she asked about it she found that the tree bore cherries.

The New York Evening Post will publish a number of short stories written by Harris Merton Lyon, a graduate of the University of Missouri, who died in 1915. Mr. Lyon came to New York at the age of 22 years and contributed a number of stories to the Broadway Magazine and Collier's Weekly. He also wrote endings to some of O. Henry's unfinished stories. He had written two volumes of short stories which have unusual distinction.

Representatives of the Columbia Chapter of the D. A. R., headed by Mrs. W. K. Freudenberger, regent of the chapter, decorated the tombstone of Thomas Jefferson, which stands on the Francis Quadrangle in front of Jesse Hall, with a garland of red, white and blue flowers in honor of the birthday of the great statesman. This act of homage has become a tradition with the chapter, and each year the wreath, which is made by H. F. Major, is placed on the monument on April 13.

Bredelle Jesse, son of former President R. H. Jesse, will return to Columbia from France in the early fall to accept a professorship in the French department of the University. Mr. Jesse has been studying in France for two years.

Dr. Frank Cauthorn of Superior, Arizona, a student of the University from 1874 to 1878, was in Columbia in May as a guest of E. B. Cauthorn, 401 Price avenue. Doctor Cauthorn has not been in Columbia since 1878, when he was graduated with an A. M. degree. While in the University he studied medicine under Doctor McAlester, whom he saw this week, for the first time in forty-four years. Doctor Cauthorn went all over Columbia looking for places he knew in his college days. At the end of the search, he said:

"There is only one thing that looks the same to me—that hasn't changed since the days I was a student here, and that is the Columns. They look as they did when I used to pass in and out beneath them into the corridors of the original Academic Hall nearly fifty years ago."

Since leaving the University, Doctor Cauthorn has lived in Portland, Oregon, where he was surgeon for the Union Pacific Railroad, during the eighties, and in old Mexico where he was surgeon for mining companies. He is now a practicing physician of Superior, Arizona.

H. Loy Shrader and his bride, formerly Miss Teresa Veale of Wichita Falls, Texas, arrived in Columbia in April. After May 1 Mr. and Mrs. Shrader will reside at 27 Allen place.

Robert W. Jones, A. B. '06, LL. B. '13, Professor of Journalism, University of Washington, Seattle, Washington writes as follows:

"Although I am 2,400 miles away from the University campus, my interest in the University is very real. I was glad to see in the newspapers recently a statement to the effect that the University of Missouri would return to the semester plan and abandon the three-term scheme under which it has operated for some time.

"Since most of the Universities in the Midwest operate either on the semester basis, I think the decision to return to the semester plan is good for several reasons.

"There are not many Missouri graduates in Seattle, although among them are Henry Elliott, Jr., LL. B. '10, M. W. Hicklin, B. J. '13, Nelson Sears, LL. B. '05, is deputy city clerk and doubtless there are a good many others I have not met."

mean that this many were being paid each day, as a large number of applications are short of details and would have to be made over. About six thousand applications had been passed at the time he left Jefferson City, said Colonel Reiger.

Lefty Pruett, former University of Missouri southpaw, in '19-'20-'21, went to the mound for the Browns recently in the ninth inning with the score between the Yankees and the St. Louis Americans tied, 3 to 3, and allowed the New Yorkers only one hit in the next three innings. The first department I turn to read is the page of personal items about graduates. I read first those listed under 1913, my year, and then glance over the others. M. U. Will Have Movie Camera.

The annual meeting of the Alumni Association during Commencement, the Board of Curators were urged to purchase a motion picture camera for the University of Missouri. On account of lack of funds they asked that the alumni furnish this camera for the institution. The Alumni Association has money available for the purchase of this camera and before another of the ALUMNUS; the machine will doubtless have been purchased. It is the idea to have President Jones appoint a committee to look after the camera and see that the proper pictures are taken that will be of interest to the alumni and former students, high school students and the public in general. The idea is to take motion pictures every year of student activities such as St. Pat's Day, Farmers' Fair, Journalism Week, Farmers' Week, Commencement exercises and "Homecoming". These pictures will then be shown at alumni meetings, furnished to high schools and public gatherings.

When Opportunity Knocks

The average young man begins life poor. His salary is comparatively small and consequently his possibilities are limited. But to every man there comes a golden opportunity whereby a sum of ready cash will enable him to realize more from life. With ordinary intelligence he can earn more than enough to supply the necessities of life. What will he do with that surplus amount? He can spend it and live as he goes; but he can save it and realize on it in a larger way when the opportunity presents itself.

We have a plan whereby every young man can invest his small savings and in time realize on his thrift in a substantial manner.

Here is the table which shows the result of monthly deposits:

Deposited Monthly	In About 10 Years Yields

The ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS

offered by the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company of Boston for the best answer to Mr. Edison's question, "Who Was John Hancock?" has been awarded to Leon V. Quigley, a student at the Worcester (Mass.) Polytechnic Institute. This answer, giving a correct, concise and comprehensive statement of the position occupied by John Hancock in American history, is printed below in full.

"Who Was John Hancock?"

JOHN HANCOCK was an American statesman and patriot. His signature is found on the oldest and most important documents of Massachusetts, and of the United States. He was the first signer of the Declaration of Independence and was the first Governor of Massachusetts.

John Hancock was born at Quincy, Massachusetts, in 1737. He graduated from Harvard College, and entering upon his uncle's business became a successful merchant in Boston. He gained much in social power and in wealth, being meanwhile justly popular for his integrity and ability.

He was in 1765-1770 a selectman of Boston and a member of the general court. With Samuel Adams he led the Massachusetts Whigs, and only escaped capture at Lexington and Concord by virtue of the valiant fight by the Minute Men on the "Nineteenth of April in '75."

John Hancock was subsequently known in various positions: as President of the Continental Congress, as Major-

General of the Massachusetts military forces, as President of the Constitutional Convention. He died at Quincy, Massachusetts, October 8, 1793.

The historical position of John Hancock is unique in State and Nation. He wielded great political influence but was always liberal and public-spirited. His name is most prominent as a Whig leader during the American Revolution in such events as the Boston Massacre, the Boston Tea Party and the battles of Lexington and Concord.

John Hancock signed his name first to the Declaration of Independence. He thus risked his own "life, liberty, and pursuit of happiness" that these privileges might be obtained for others to enjoy. To this end he "pledged his life, his fortune, and his sacred honor."

That he was popular and efficient may be judged from the fact that he was for ten years Governor of Massachusetts, being elected annually to this office by popular vote.

John Hancock insured the life of the Nation—
We will insure your life with the same integrity
