His professional work consisted of designing and supervising the dredge boats necessary to keep the channel open for low water navigation. He was in direct charge of the dredging fleet on the Mississippi River at the outbreak of the Spanish-American War. He at once organized the Voluntary Engineers Corps and went to Cuba as captain of the Third United States Volunteer Engineers.

After the Spanish-American War Mr. Sturtevant was employed in responsible positions by the Atlantic and Pacific Dredging Company, his work extending over river and harbor improvement in many countries. He later had charge of important work on the St. Lawrence River, the Panama Canal, the Magdalena River in Columbia, and recently completed a dam and irrigation works on the Mante River in Mexico.

During the World War he served for two years in France as lieutenant-colonel of the Fifteenth United States Engineers. Portraits of M. U. Founders Unveiled

Bronze portrait reliefs of Maj. James Sidney Rollins, "pater Universitatis Missouriensis," and John Hiram Lathrop, first and fifth president of the University, were unveiled at the Eighth Street gateway of Francis Quadrangle. Dr. John Pickard gave the presentation address. His address follows:

"That University is in the highest degree fortunate which can claim as its founders such remarkable men as James Sidney Rollins and John Hiram Lathrop and it is most fitting that we should meet today to do them honor.

James Sidney Rollins

"Major Rollins was born in Richmond, Kentucky, April 19, 1812. He received his early training in the public schools of Richmond and entered Washington College in Pennsylvania. Later he transferred his allegiance to the University of Indiana, graduating in the class of 1830. He then entered the Transylvania Law School in Lexington, Kentucky, receiving his LL.B. degree in 1832.

"In 1833 he came to Columbia, Missouri, and entered upon his practice of law. From that time to the date of his death in 1888 he ranked as Columbia's leading citizen, ever among the foremost of those working for the public good.

"In 1836, a youth of 24, he was a member of the first railroad convention in Missouri and as chairman of a committee whose other members were Edward Bates and Hamilton R. Gamble drafted a memorial to Congress praying for grants of public lands for the construction of railroads. Twenty-six years later in the 37th Congress he carried through a law for the construction of a railroad and a telegraph line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean, under which three great transcontinental lines were built.

"He served in the Legislature as representative or senator for twenty years. Twice a candidate for Governor he was defeated in 1848.

"He was really elected in 1857 but was counted out by the dominant political party.

"He was elected to Congress in 1860 and again in 1862. Though a large slave holder he was a strong Union man and an ardent supporter of the policies and measures of President Lincoln.

"In 1838 at the age of 26 he began his first term in the Legislature. His first legislative act was to draft the bill for the establishment of Missouri State University. The bill became a law and Major Rollins was a leader on the committee which secured from the citizens of Boone County that remarkable list of subscriptions totaling $117,000 which secured the location of the University in Columbia. Every dollar of those subscriptions was paid, in spite of the fact that some subscribers actually pledged more than the value of their farms.

"This first law was one of a long series of enactments supporting the University and the cause of higher education in Missouri which through a long series of years were placed upon the statute books by the efforts of Major Rollins.

THE MISSOURI ALUMNUS—Published ten months each year by the sons and daughters of the University of Missouri. Entered as second-class matter October 8, 1912, at the postoffice at Columbia, Mo., under Act of March 3, 1879.

The second was a bill to establish the Normal department at the University.

"Third, a bill to establish Normal schools at Warrensburg and at Kirksville.

"Eighth, a most important bill for the permanent investment of University funds.

"Ninth, a bill providing for a Board of Visitors to the University.

"Tenth, a bill to enlarge the Main Building of the University.

"Eleventh, as a member of Congress in 1862 he was instrumental in passing the Morrill Act under which Missouri received 300,000 acres of public land for the College of Agriculture and the Mechanic Arts.

"In fact for 47 years Major Rollins was either the author or principal advocate of every measure for the advancement and upbuilding of the University.

"In recognition of his distinguished services the Board of Curators by formal action bestowed upon him the title "Pater Universitatis Missouriensis."

"We, of today, in the light of history, enlarge that title and name him "Father of Higher Education in Missouri."

"He was a man of commanding presence, of distinguished bearing, of rare intellectual power, of most persuasive eloquence.

"For 18 years he was a member of the Board of Curators. For 16 years he was its President. In 1886 when ill health compelled his resignation from the board, Governor John S. Marmaduke wrote:

"In complying with your earnest request for the acceptance of your resignation of the office of Curator of the State University, allow me, in behalf of the people of the state, to tender you this expression of their high appreciation of your long and eminently successful efforts in creating an institution of learning which is already an ornament to our great commonwealth, and the pride of her citizens.

"It is a matter of history that to you, more than to anyone else, is due its foundation, its location, its organization, and its growth and advance to its present position of extended usefulness; and its perpetuity, already assured, will transmit your name through the histories of countless future ages."

John Hiram Lathrop

"The first and the fifth president of the University of Missouri was born in Sherbourne, Chenango County, New York, January 22, 1799. His father was a native of Columbia County, New York. His mother, whose maiden name was Hatch, was born in Litchfield, Connecticut.

"President Lathrop began his college career in Hamilton College, New York. As a sophomore he entered Yale College, graduating in the class of 1819. For the two years immediately after graduation he was preceptor of the Grammar School at Farmington and of the Academy at Weston, Connecticut. Then he became a tutor in Yale for four and a half years. During this time he studied law in the New Haven Law School and was admitted to the bar of Connecticut. He practiced law in Middleton, Connecticut.

"We next find him as instructor in the Military Academy in Norwich, Vermont, and as Principal of the Gardiner Lyceum in Maine.

"In 1829, ten years after his graduation from Yale he was called to Hamilton College as Professor of Mathematics and Natural Philosophy. Six years later in 1835 he was promoted at Hamilton to the Maynard Professorship of Law, History, Civil Polity and Political Economy.

"Professorships of Mathematics and Natural Philosophy of Law, History, Civil Polity and Political Economy! And he was also a fine classical scholar!

"We of the present day are a bit amazed at the encyclopedic character of his learning. From the serene heights of our specialization we are prone to look down a little condescendingly on the narrow curriculum of the old time college and upon what seems the inadequate preparation of its teachers. But before this patronizing feeling becomes too strong within us we would do well to recall the fact that this old-fashioned college education produced a Daniel Webster, a Rufus Choate, an Oliver Wendell Holmes, a George William Curtis, a James Russell Lowell.

"In 1840 Mr. Lathrop was chosen first president of the University of Missouri. He was inaugurated in 1841 and served with distinguished success until 1849.

"As an eastern man his views on human liberty were not in accord with those held by many Missourians of that day. So though universally beloved and respected he felt constrained to resign and accept a call to be the first president of the University of Wisconsin. After nine years in this position he became President of the University of Indiana.

"In 1863 President Lathrop was recalled to Missouri and became the fifth president of the University continuing in service till his death in 1866. His was indeed an unusual, a unique, distinction. He was president of three state universities in three great states of the middle west.

"In 1851 he was also appointed one of the examiners for West Point and became Secretary of that Board.

"President Lathrop was a rare man, of great personal charm, an able administrator, a ripe scholar, a devoted teacher and withal one of the courtliest gentlemen who ever occupied a professorial chair.

"Two scenes may give us the keynote to his character.

"At the end of his life as he lay in a little house which stood on the campus just west of this gateway his last whispered words to his life-long friend Major Rollins were: 'I have tried to do my duty.'

"Then the first sentence of his Inaugural address was: 'Our first accents, friends and fellow citizens, in this spacious temple of truth and of wisdom, are due to that great being whose voice is truth, whose essence is reason, whose temple is all space, let these accents arise in thanks-giving; for hitherto hath God helped us. Let them arise in supplication that He who has builded the house may deign to make his abode in it; that the ministrations of this temple may honor God and bless man throughout the years.'

"I will design a flag for the University of Missouri. Let the colors of this flag be old gold and black. In the center of the flag place the seal of the University beautifully and accurately wrought. Then in a circle about the seal as the motto of this University, the finest motto of any University in the land, place the immortal words of Lathrop:

'HONOR GOD AND BLESS MAN THROUGHOUT THE YEARS.'

"Mr. President: From this favored spot we can see the "Old Columns" of that University which Rollins, the statesman, founded which Lathrop, the scholar, inaugurated. We are at the gateway to the campus which they knew. This fine entrance, these massive pillars were erected from funds paid to the University by the national Government for the use of University buildings and grounds by Union soldiers during the Civil War. It is most fitting, therefore, that these portraits of Major Rollins and President Lathrop in imperishable bronze should find a permanent abiding place here.

"Acting in behalf of the Rollins family and of the Lathrop family I have the great pleasure and the distinguished honor of presenting these enduring monuments to the University."

Juliet Bowling Rollins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Rollins, and James Sidney Rollins, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Rollins, both great-grandchildren, unveiled the portrait relief of Maj. Rollins.

Preceding the address, Dewey Routh, all-senior president, presented a wreath in honor of Maj. Rollins and Esther Brown, all-senior secretary, presented a wreath in honor of President Lathrop.

Following the address, President Stratton D. Brooks accepted for the University.

The program opened with the singing of "Alma Mater" by a double quartet from the School of Fine Arts. It ended with the audience singing "Old Missouri."

Others present at the exercises included: Curators, members of the faculty of the University, the class of 1929, members of the State Historical Society of Missouri, and the Boone County Historical Society the Columbia Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, the John S. Marmaduke chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, Sigma Xi, Phi Beta Kappa, and the city government of Columbia.

Scholarship and Research Fund Started

M. H. Lockwood of New York City, an attorney, has placed in the hands of R. B. Price, treasurer of the University of Missouri, $1000 as a nucleus for the establishment of the John and Mary Lockwood Fund, to be held by the University curators in trust for University use. This amount is intended to start the fund, which is to be allowed to accumulate by investment and reinvestment of income therefrom for thirty years from this date.

At the close of thirty years, the income is to be available for an endowed chair, scholarship, research or such other purposes as the curators in their discretion may decide. Mr. Lockwood suggests as especially desirable its employment for the purpose of research. The fund is accepted with the understanding stated by Mr. Lockwood that it may be added to from time to time by contributions from the original donor, from other children of John and Mary Lockwood, and from other sources.

John and Mary Lockwood had nine children, each of whom attended the University of Missouri, and six of whom are graduates. The names of the Lockwood children, and the dates of their attendance upon or graduation from the University are:

win that event. J. Wilcox of Kansas, however, equalled the world and the conference record of 9.6 seconds in the 100 yard dash with the aid of a brisk wind. Missouri won third in the 880 relay. have the best mother, and my home is the best home—in the wide world. Other institutions of learning may be better financed, may enroll more students, may employ more instructors,—but none of the others are in Missouri, and none of them can claim the alma mater-ship of my children. No state is better than Missouri, and no boys and girls anywhere are any better than the boys and girls of Missouri.

"You ask, too, what I think of modern youth.

"In my opinion the current and rising generation is the best the world has ever known,—taken as a whole.

There are boys and girls that are bad and immoral. If we believe history, sacred and profane, there always were. How about Cain and Abel? In my opinion there are more good boys and girls today than there ever were before. I believe in them, in their happiness, in their future. In greater numbers than ever they appreciate God's blessings. They look upon time, and life, and health, and toil as blessings, and I have faith that because of their living the world is growing better. May homes that are happy multiply, and may little children—youth—bless our ever increasing number of homes.

"Let us hope the critics of this day will so stress the good of our generation that there will be no time nor space for thought of that which is evil. Construction! not destruction!"

Congratulations to you all.

The Merkle Incident

The swaggering New York Giants, led by John McGraw, and Frank Chance's pugnacious Chicago Cubs came to the last bitter game of the hectic 1908 National League season, separated by the smallest of percentages. Animosity at the boiling point, the teams met at Manhattan's Polo Grounds. They fought and wrangled desperately until the last of the ninth inning, when the score read 1-1. As TIME would have reported the Giants' half of the last inning, had TIME been published September 27, 1908....

....Giants at bat. Seymour and Devlin easy outs. Then McCormick singled lustily. "Tinker to Evers to Chance" jeered a bleacherite. But tall Fred Merkle hit into no double play. His single put McCormick on third. Bridwell, ordinarily a weak, left-handed hitter, came to bat, white-faced. More jeers; "Tinker to Evers to Chance." Cub shortstop Joe Tinker, second baseman John Evers, first baseman Frank Chance, hardly heard. "Crack!" and Bridwell hit sharply to left, Evers leaping in vain for the ball. McCormick sprinted home, as a mighty roar went up from the Giant rooters. Merkle, coming toward second base, saw McCormick cross the plate, so turned off the base lines just short of second base, and sprinted jubilantly to the club house.

Hoffman in center field, alert, recalling a similar play two weeks before, sprinted for the ball. "Iron Man" McGinnity, Giant coach at first base, likewise sensed Merkle's blunder; so did the Cub infielders. Hoffman scooped up the ball, hurled it over Evers' head, hitting Joe Tinker in the back as he was frantically calling Umpire Emslie's attention to the play. "Iron Man" McGinnity, coming on the run, seized the ball to hurl it into the stands. Tinker pinned his arms, and the ball lobbed into the crowd already surging on the field. A fat souvenir hunter grabbed it joyously. Young Floyd Kroh, substitute Cub pitcher, rushed from the bench, fists flying, yelled for the ball. The fat fan cried "Nix." Kroh struck him thrice, broke his derby, seized the ball and handed it to Evers who stepped quickly on second base. Chief Umpire Hank O'Day shouted, "Are you touching second base, Evers?" "Yes," replied the lantern-jawed little second baseman, now completely swallowed up by the mob. "All right. The man is out and the run doesn't count," said Hank O'Day.

Evers, bruised and beaten as the fisticuffing fans and players milled about him, finally reached the safety of the club house with the ball in his hands. The ensuing riot swept players and officials from the field, prevented the completion of the game, tied at 1-1...

So, too, would TIME have told how the controversy raged, how the National League directors sought to award the game to the Giants, how the public would not stand for it, how finally the Cubs, not to be denied, won the play-off in another bitter Polo Grounds game, and went on to win the World Series from Detroit two days later.

Planning high-speed business

An Advertisement of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company

MORE than 95% of the telephone calls from one town to another in the Bell System are now on a high-speed basis. This holds whether the call is from New Orleans to Boston or from New York to Oyster Bay.

Even if it is a long call, the operator in many cases now asks you to hold the telephone while the call is put through.

Calls from one town to another used to be handled by one operator taking your order and giving it to another group of operators to put through. You now give your call direct to the operators who put it through—and put it through fast while you are on the line. The average time for handling all toll and long distance calls in the Bell System was further materially reduced in 1928.

A high-speed service to all parts of the country—calls from one town to another as swift, clear and easy as local calls—that is the aim of the Bell System.

This is one of the many improvements in methods and appliances which are constantly being introduced to give high-speed telephone service.

Better and better telephone service at the lowest cost is ever the goal of the Bell System.

AND MANY OTHERS

ARE you a lover of detective stories? Then we have been working more than a year for you—whether you know it or not! And now at last, after a thorough sifting of the world's literature, the 101 World's Greatest Detective Stories of all time have been published in ONE amazing volume!

Their authors—of such varied nationalities and times as Boccaccio, Voltaire, Oppenheim, and Tolstoi!

Their scope—every phase of crime. Blackmail, Banditry, Murder, Forgery, Treason.

Not one of this series is the ordinary "thriller" that can be "seen through" at once. Read the titles, and you'll see why hundreds of hours of real thrills await you! From the literature of France, England, Spain, Russia, Italy, Arabia, Portugal, and America—the finest stories have been gleaned. Now they are ready to be sent to you for free examination—bound in one slender, beautiful volume—for only $2.98. Less than 3c per story!

How can it be done?

Many of these superb mystery tales have been, until now hidden in the collected works of the famous authors. Few people dreamed that writers like Chekhov and Maupassant, for instance, were capable of such exciting suspense, such breath-taking surprises.

The volume itself must be seen to be appreciated fully. Fine quality thin paper makes it possible. Printed in large, readable type, beautiful grained cover, this latest development in book-making will amaze and delight you. And you can examine it without obligation.
