Campus Commentary

By Bus Entsminger

If you missed the February 4 issue of "Time" magazine, I suggest you get a copy "muy pronto" or check it at your library. The magazine devotes a page of its education section to the University of Missouri under the heading "Missouri's Upward Reach." It's a beautifully written article which brings you rather rapidly from the nostalgic memory of your alma mater's founding through some interesting periods of strife, then suddenly into the stage which has vaulted this University into one of the truly outstanding institutions in America. You'll get a lot of satisfaction and feel a lot of pride in reading this article. A couple of quotes:

"Missouri changed from a school that had largely served agricultural interests into a many-faceted science-conscious institution trying to meet the needs of the state's urban growth."

"This statewide system now boasts the nation's largest university nuclear reactor (10 megawatts), will offer a Ph.D. in nuclear engineering next fall, has a forward-looking Space Science Research Center exploring the possibilities of creating permanent settlements on the moon."

When "Sports Illustrated" gave only a couple of lines to Missouri's Sugar Bowl victory over Florida, M.U. Alumni President Marvin D. McQueen fired a hot wire to the publication. His protest drew an explanation from Publisher Garry Valk, who said the spectacle of three unbeaten teams being upset in bowl games got the big play and ran the magazine out of space. In his letter the publisher wrote: "Obviously to you and hundreds of others who have written, wired and phoned, we 'blew this one.'"

One night recently I was jarred out of bed at 4:45 a.m. by the telephone. A man gave his name, and said he was calling from a TV station in Canada. It sounded like a gag. But the caller wanted information on one of our medical staff members, a psychologist, who had graduated from M.U. I suggested that we had lists of more than 70,000 alumni but I didn't keep them at home, they were at the office. The man went on to say that he had tried to contact our man, Dr. David McDonald, but he was unreachable because he was conducting "a sleep experiment." I said I was trying to do the same thing, until his call came. After reaching the office and checking the record, I got a second call from the TV man. A man on the staff of a Canadian university had been going under the same name as the Missouri professor, and claimed to have the same degrees. Missouri's Dr. McDonald pointed out this similarity to the proper authorities, the man in Canada disappeared and was suspended. But back to the phone call: After considerable talk, the man in Canada asked for a more direct statement—it was then I learned that the entire conversation was being taped. This didn't set well, either, especially after being awakened at 4:45 a.m. So, a very brief statement was spoken for the record. It was to the point, but not too much so that it would add complications to the "international incident." Must be flattering to have your identity stolen.

A. L. (Bert) Gustin III of Kansas City is a rabid Mizzou fan who admires the tiger as a symbol, but on the morning after New Year's Eve revelry in New Orleans, he'd just as soon not be greeted by a live Tiger at his motel door.

But this is what happened when he answered a knock at 7 a. m. A New Orleans man, Max Fetty, handed Bert a margay tiger cub, bedecked with a huge black and gold bow. With the gift was a card which read "Go, Tigers, Go."

The tigerish practical joke, which the victim took in stride after his sudden awakening, was perpetrated by some of his friends who couldn't make the trip to the Sugar Bowl game. Splitting the estimated $500 cost for the prank were Mr. and Mrs. Ed Joullian of Oklahoma City and Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Lynd of Kansas City.

Back in 1949, when Linda Lucy Brown was born to Mr. and Mrs. James Brown of Chaffee, Missouri, the proud parents received a letter of congratulations from Dr. Herbert Bunker, then director of alumni activities at the University (and now Professor Emeritus of Physical Education). The letter actually was addressed to Linda, who was asked to call on her parents to fill out data blanks which were enclosed. The letter also said "We shall be looking forward to having you enroll here at the University in 1966. We have spoken to Phi Beta Kappa about you and also the registrar who is listing you as a prospective student." The Alumni Office last fall received the original letter on which were these hand-written lines: "Gentlemen: I'm now ready! Please send me catalog and requirements so that I might have the prescribed courses in high school for enrollment, fall '66." It was signed: Linda Brown, 1393 Singing Trees, Memphis, Tennessee. That's how time flies. We hope to see Linda on campus in the fall.

IT STARTED WITH SNAKES

By CLARISSA START DAVIDSON

THERE ARE THOSE who believe there must be something special in the halo and wing department of the next world for those brave and stalwart women who have seen duty as landladies in college boarding houses. High among the ranks of these unsung heroines is one who surely must have an extra star in her crown—Mrs. Waggoner, who operated a student residence on College avenue in Columbia in the 1920s.

It was Mrs. Waggoner's lot to have among her paying guests, one Richard Marlin Perkins, a boy with a fondness for snakes which he kept in his room. Perkins has always been of the opinion that the king snake which disappeared probably fell down the heating ventilator and was burned to death. Mrs. Waggoner was not so sure and her peace of mind was shattered for months.

Perhaps it would have softened the blow had she known that she was nurturing, not a viper, but a future famous man. Better known today as R. Marlin Perkins, he is the director of the Zoological Gardens of St. Louis and a television film performer whose fan mail is postmarked Japan and New Zealand and Rhodesia.

He is still fond of snakes and thinks it regrettable that they have such a bad "image."

"Snakes are grossly misunderstood," said Perkins, a distinguished looking, silvery-haired man of 60 with an easy and urbane manner. He was leaning back in the chair behind his desk in his office at the St. Louis Zoo. A striking backdrop is provided by a handsome zebra skin, once attached to a Lincoln Park Zoo friend named Prince.

"People often have preconceived notions about snakes which color their entire lives and make them miserable. This is why I feature reptiles so often on my television show, Wild Kingdom, so people will get better acquainted with them."

Even when Perkins was a freshman in the College of Agriculture at the University of Missouri, he was doing a public relations job for snakes.

"At Farmer's Fair that year, I put on an educational exhibit of snakes and gave away a little piece I'd written about snakes in Missouri. It told of the benefit of snakes to the farmer and how one good bull snake was worth a certain amount of money because it ate up so many mice which would have eaten so much grain. I had the sums all figured out. In a way, it was my beginning in this field."

His admiration for snakes dates back long before his college days, however. When he was a boy of eight in school in Pittsburg, Kan., and later in Carthage, Mo., he had his own backyard zoo of snakes, skunks, coyotes, groundhogs, ground squirrels and lizards. Since his father was Circuit Judge Joseph D. Perkins, the family had a certain amount of status in town but even so, they had some trouble keeping maids.

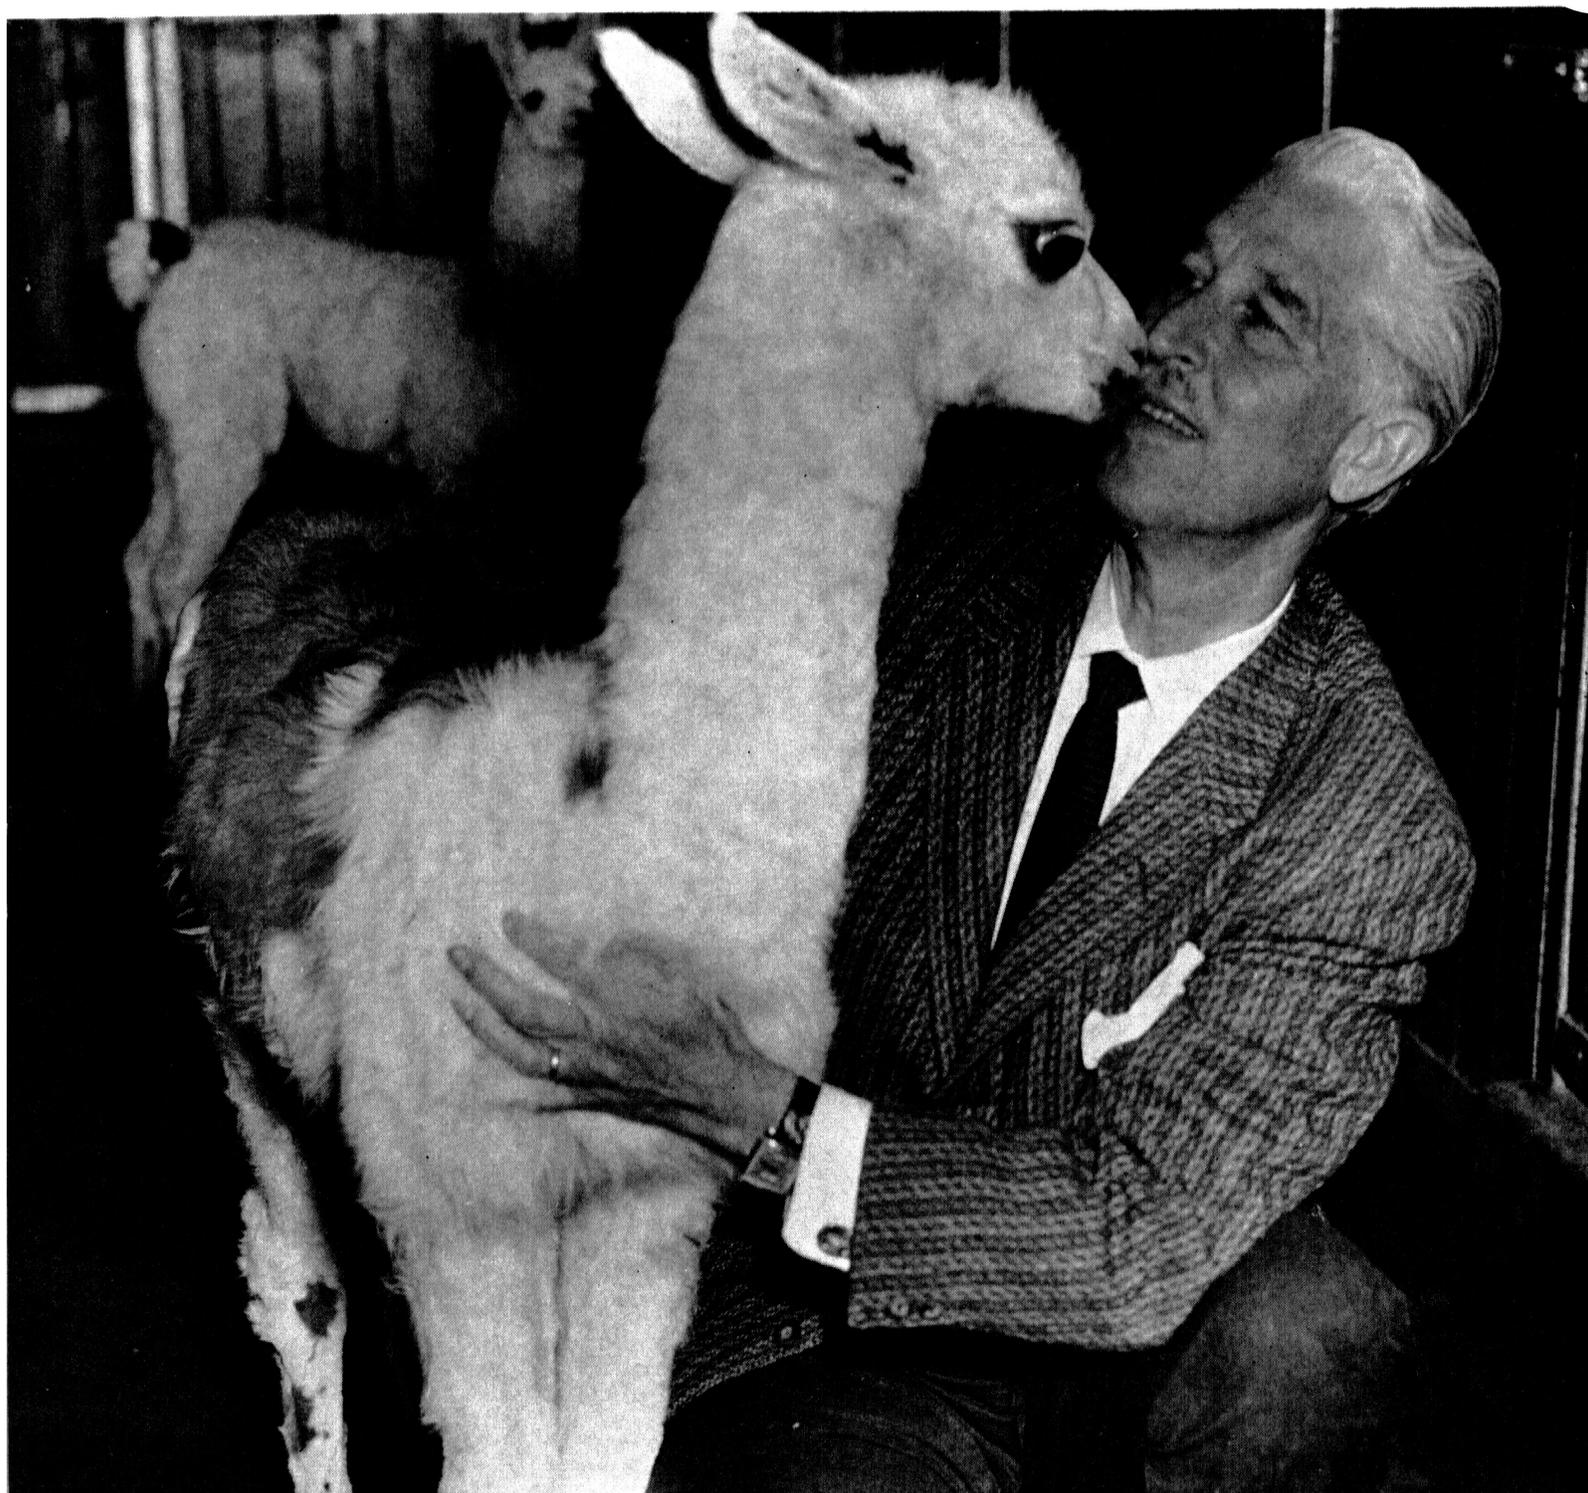

PERKINS WAS the youngest of three boys in his family. After grade school in Carthage, he attended Wentworth Military Academy for two years and here again he found some of his choice companions were persona non grata to others. On one occasion, he had to let a small blue racer bite him to convince an instructor the snake was not poisonous.

He finished his last two years of high school at Carthage High. Then because he didn't quite know what he wanted to do or be, he went to California to live with his older brothers, Pierce and Carl, who are still in business there. Marlin worked as a solicitor for a laundry. This didn't seem to be what he had in mind so he came back to Missouri and told his father he'd like to enroll in the College of Agriculture. He thought he might like animal husbandry.

"The first course I took turned out to be duller

Marlin Perkins, as a young man, with "first love."

... He has fond memories of Hinkson Creek, because it was a good area for hunting snakes.

than dishwasher," he said bluntly. "It was all statistical stuff about stockyard receipts in Chicago and East St. Louis and Kansas City. So many swine, so many cattle. It didn't tell me a thing about breeding animals which is what I wanted to know."

He dropped out of Agriculture and enrolled in the College of Arts and Science. Here he found some courses which did fire his imagination, notably a class in zoology with Dr. Winterton C. Curtis and one in comparative anatomy with Mary A. Guthrie. He still has the textbooks from both courses.

HIS YEARS AT THE UNIVERSITY were 1924, 1925 and 1926. He can still recall some of the faculty members—Isidor Loeb who taught English and civics in a big lecture hall; Dr. Mazzyck P. Ravenel who taught a popular course in preventive medicine, and had a dog which followed him to class and sat at his feet; Walter Williams at the Journalism school, and Professor Jesse "Monkey" Wrench, hero of many an anecdote, then and later.

Perkins lived at 610 College avenue with the Waggoner family.

"The house was two doors down from the Phi Delt house and two doors up from the Phi Gam house," he placed it. "The Waggoners were a nice family and Mrs. Waggoner set a good table; there were 12 or 14 who sat down in the dining room every night, some of whom roomed elsewhere but came in for meals. The Waggoners had several boys as I recall. One of them was Col. Hugh Waggoner, head of the Missouri State Highway Patrol who died last year."

He remembers Columbia as a "sleepy little town with one main street, some rough cobblestone streets and beautiful shade trees. You walked everywhere; there were few cars. One Beta had a Stutz Bearcat, a red one. He could have all the dates he wanted."

He remembers Hinkson Creek, mostly because it was a good area in which to hunt snakes.

He doesn't recall a lot of social life on campus and says he wasn't very much interested in dating. He did not have a job because he didn't have to work. His father had a salary of $5500 a year as circuit judge which was not wealth but was substantial and comfortable.

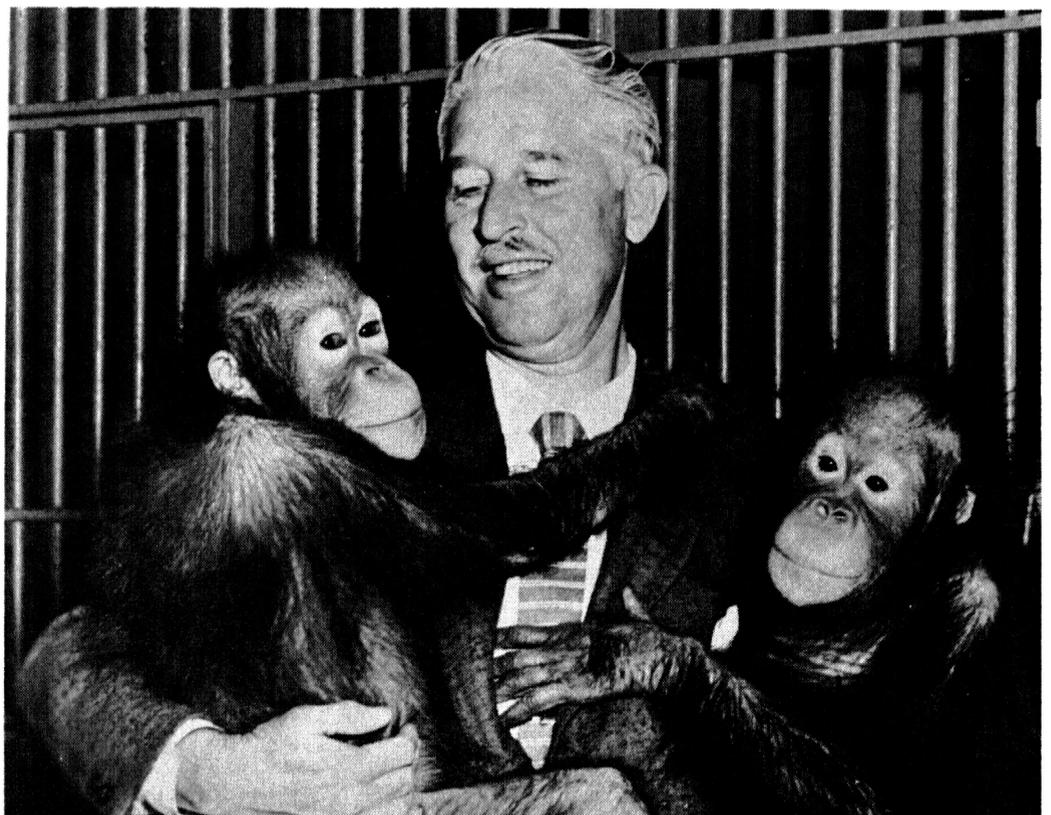

He didn't go out for sports although he'd won a letter in football at Carthage High School. "I've often wondered," he added reflectively, "if I'd played football whether or not I would have stayed."

The bald truth is that, while this may not point a moral to the student of today, Perkins, an artistic, financial and happy success, was a college dropout.

"We're going to save the old World's Fair birdcage, one of the few Fair landmarks standing. Right now we're printing a brochure to tell people how they can give gifts to the Zoo, ranging from a small tree for $10 or a park bench for $50 to a lion house for a million dollars."

"IT WAS A PLEASANT TWO YEARS," said Perkins, "but I was in a situation in my life where I didn't know what I wanted to do and it didn't make sense to me to stay on.

"I ran into so many fellows who had specialized in one thing and planned to practice another that I asked myself, why go to school all these years and then do something different? I went home and told my father I wanted to go into something that had to do with animals, probably wild animals rather than domestic. I knew I didn't want anything to do with stockyards and statistics or judging horses and I hadn't learned how to do anything else. I said I'd like some more time to find myself.

"My father said that made good sense. What did I want to do? I said I thought I'd go to St. Louis to see if I could get a job at the St. Louis Zoo."

He had visited the St. Louis Zoo. It was the second one he'd seen, the first being the Swope Park Zoo in Kansas City. He learned the St. Louis Zoo director was George Vierheller so he called on him.

On the basis of his interest and experience, Vierheller hired him—for the "bull gang," sweeping sidewalks and clipping hedges at $3.75 a day, six days a week. Two weeks later, he was promoted, to work with his first love, snakes.

He had been at the Zoo only a short time when he decided that this was the life's work he'd been seeking and he set about to fill in the gaps in his education. He took classes in Latin and Psychology at Washington University at night and set about building a personal library which became the nucleus of the Zoo's sizeable library today.

Vierheller sent him to the Bronx Zoo to study with Curator Raymond I. Ditmars and other authorities. He came back and was put in charge of reptiles.

PERKINS WAS STILL A NEWCOMER to the field when he made headlines. He and his assistant, Moody Lenz, were feeding an African Gaboon viper when suddenly it turned on Perkins and bit him. Lenz risked his own life to come to Perkins' rescue. Perkins was rushed to the hospital but it was touch-and-go for many hours as he battled for his life. He is the only person known to have recovered from the bite of the deadly reptile. The snake, incidentally, died—not of the bite but from pneumonia brought on by shock.

Perkins still likes snakes but advocates a healthy respect for them.

"You have to stay constantly alert," he said. "You must know a snake's habits, how far and how fast it will strike. A rattlesnake, for instance, strikes faster than a cobra. Trying to beat a rattlesnake to the draw is like Russian roulette."

Perkins has worked at four zoos. From his first job in St. Louis, he went to the Buffalo Zoo, then in 1944 to the Lincoln Park Zoo in Chicago where he became nationally known from his network television program, Zoo Parade. In April 1962 Vier-heller retired as St. Louis Zoo director and Perkins succeeded him.

His experience has been augmented by much travel in Africa and South America.

In 1960 he went on an expedition with Sir Edmund Hillary and other scientists to the Himalayas to track down the legendary Abominable Snowman. They returned, of the opinion that it is a myth.

His present televised show, Wild Kingdom, is seen around the world. In 1964 it won the National Wildlife Federation's outstanding achievement award.

Since Perkins has been in charge of the St. Louis Zoo, many new programs and projects have been started.

"This is a wonderful zoo and we've got many interesting things planned," he said. "We have enough money now to start a sizeable and interesting children's zoo."

Perkins' first marriage ended in divorce in 1953. He has a daughter, now Mrs. John Brentlinger, wife of a professor of philosophy in Amherst, Mass., and mother of two children, Christopher, 8 and Peter, 6.

His second marriage was to Mrs. Carol Morse Cotsworth who has three children, Fred, Alice and Marguerite. Mrs. Perkins has accompanied her husband on several of his trips, has written a book, "The Shattered Skull," about primitive man, and collaborated with him on a book, "I Saw You From Afar," about the African bushmen.

Perkins is understandably sympathetic to young visitors and letter writers who tell him they'd like to be zoo directors. There are bulletins he sends them and suggestions, depending on their special interests, for higher education.

He stresses the importance of a college education even though he didn't complete his.

"It was easier in my day to develop a career without a degree," he said. "Now we require degrees from just about everyone. An education is far more important today."

Glancing at the shelves and shelves of books in his office, he added, "Most people start to really learn when they get out of school. That's what happened to me when I began applying myself.

"The important thing they taught me at the University of Missouri was how to acquire knowledge, how to look up things in books. I feel my days there were very worthwhile because I learned how to study and how to acquire knowledge from books.

"Besides that, it was a happy time."

Perkins has never been back since the spring of 1926.

"I've been to Jefferson City but not to Columbia," he said. "I'd like to go back some day.

"I understand it's changed."

Campus Greet Visiting Leaders

A LONG-PLANNED project of the University Alumni Association—that of bringing leaders from various communities to the Columbia campus for a good look at the University—finally “got off the ground” in December. When returns from all precincts were in, there was no doubt that the venture had been highly successful. More such campus visitations are certain to follow.

The program was initiated December 8 when eighteen citizens of St. Joseph, Missouri, were flown in to spend a day on the campus. The next day twenty-one persons from Springfield, Missouri, were flown in for a similar visit. Words of praise immediately flowed from participants in both cities. All on the campus who had been directly involved in the project were well pleased, too, with the apparent enjoyment of their guests. The inevitable bugs that showed up in the first day’s programming were either eliminated or diminished on the second day.

In looking over the agenda, one would be inclined to regard it as a simple operation, yet a great amount of planning and arrangements had to be made in advance. The schedule went like this: A University plane (one of four that have been given to the University—expenses of the whole enterprise were borne by the Alumni Association) picked up the guests in their home town around 8 a.m. Landing in Columbia about an hour later, they were taken by University bus to get a close look at the University’s powerful nuclear reactor facility, where Dr. Ardath H. Emmons, the director, lectured in understandable language. Then a visit to a dormitory and a luncheon at the Student Union where students from the towns of the visitors were on hand. Luncheon speakers were University President Elmer Ellis and Dean of Students Jack Matthews. Presiding was Chancellor John W. Schwada.

Next were visits to the Library, the Museum of Art and Archaeology, and the Fine Arts Building. After coffee in the attractive Alumni-Faculty Lounge of the Student Union, the visitors had a choice of spots to visit next. The evening closed with a dinner, the first night at the Daniel Boone Hotel, the second night at the Student Union, with Chancellor Schwada presiding, speaking informally, and answering questions. At each evening session the guests voiced their reaction to the day’s activities (it was uniformly favorable) and offered constructive criticism.

The delegations literally were given the red carpet treatment. The Air Force ROTC enhanced the impressiveness of the occasion. Col. Ernest D. Carwile, professor of aerospace studies, was in charge as an Honor Guard officiated when the visitors deplaned; cadets also were on hand at the coffee hour, and members of Angel Flight scored tremendously as hostesses on the flights as well as

Bill Kahler of Briarpatch Farm

LET'S SAY you're a Missouri farm boy who put in 41 years in the telephone business, mostly in Chicago, and it's time for retirement. Do you stay in the city? Not if you're like William V. Kahler. He bought 160 acres of farm land in the area of his birthplace and moved there with the goal of rehabilitating the land. There he applies the same principles to that challenge that carried him to the presidency of Illinois Bell Telephone Company. He tackles his current problems of land improvement and farm maintenance with the same vigor, the same organizational talent, and the same impatience with what he regards as tradition-based nonsense that characterized his business career.

Mr. Kahler began as an engineer's helper in the Bell Telephone Laboratories in New York City, but spent most of his working life with Illinois Bell, where he was elected vice-president in 1946, president in 1951, and chairman of the board in 1962. He retired three years ago—on January 31, 1963.

In his back-to-the soil move, Bill Kahler has found a great deal of privacy, but one who was so prominent in the business and civic life of Chicago cannot drop from sight. The Chicago Tribune's financial editor, William Clark, was particularly curious about Mr. Kahler's way of living in a rural area far removed from the daily pressures of a business executive. The Missouri invited the editor to come on down to his place, Briarpatch Farm—eight miles from Mendon, in Chariton County—and make himself at home. The result was a three-part story in the Tribune. The series was launched on page one of a Sunday edition with an introduction in which Mr. Clark wrote:

"Kahler was one of Chicago's best-known, best-liked, and busiest citizens. He received numerous honors and citations for civic and charitable work. He was a leader in the Junior Achievement organization, a member of Mayor Daley's commission on youth welfare, and a trustee or director of universities, museums, libraries and several corporations."

Briarpatch Farm is marked by clean fence rows, clean farm buildings, and an immaculately clean house. It is located in an area settled by Mr. Kahler's grandfather and a number of other Germans who came over from the old country.

"I'm trying to make this 160 acres as good as when the buffalo was here," Mr. Kahler said. "I'm trying to help nature do its work. I'm not trying to make money, just make land. I work till I'm tired, then I quit."

The 67-year-old farmer does quite a bit of work himself but is helped by his brother who has worked an adjacent farm for most of his life, and by local hands hired for specific projects.

Although he makes an occasional brief trip into Chicago, Mr. Kahler is always glad to get back to his farm and his constant companion, Sam, a Vizsla dog. In his series, Mr. Clark wrote of Kahler:

"He convinced this writer that he does in fact consider the sounds of rural life a symphony and the silhouette of a tree against the night sky an unparalleled work of art."

"My culture is agri—" is Bill Kahler's reply to those who ask how, after a high-paced career as a city-dwelling executive, he can abandon the business associations and cultural institutions of the metropolis to farming in western Missouri.

There are indications that he might possibly be drawn into industrial recruitment activities on behalf of nearby Brunswick. This would add a dimension to his area of concern. "He can talk their language," local civic leaders say, meaning the language of numerous captains of industry who could bring new plants to the town.

Ingrained in Mr. Kahler is respect for machinery and the determination to care for it. The first thing in caring for it is to keep it clean. This attitude carries over to the beautiful new house which was planned in detail by Mr. Kahler and his wife, Virginia, in the years preceding his retirement. It contains about all the conveniences that household architects and the Kahlers could think of.

Three months after the Kahlers moved in, Mrs. Kahler died. Mr. Clark writes: "The degree to which Bill Kahler has adjusted his life to this tragedy is another measure of the man. He talks of her frequently, and feelingly. A sign in the kitchen reads, 'The Kitchen of Virginia Kahler.' He has added cooking and housekeeping to his farming activities."

Mr. Kahler says one has to plan for retirement, and you don't retire to rest—"You merely transfer the talents and interests you have into new channels." Here are the principles that have guided him:

Plan ahead. Choose a situation in which there will be an outlet for already established talents and interests. Don't plunge, upon retirement, into an utterly strange atmosphere with utterly unfamiliar people. Keep busy, but at a program of which you are the master, not one that masters you.

Mr. Kahler received a B.S. in Engineering from the University in 1922. Numerous honors he has won include the Missouri Honor Award for Distinguished Service in Engineering, awarded in 1951, and the Doctor of Science Honorary degree, awarded in 1961, both by the University of Missouri. Mrs. Kahler was the former Virginia Tinchler, Arts, 1922.

Alumni Point the Way

The large sign pictured above has been erected at the southeast corner of Hitt and Lowry streets—in front of the Fine Arts Building and across from the Student Union. It is an attractive campus map, and passersby often stop by to study it. This map is one of the first items in a beautification and identification system which the University of Missouri Alumni Association has been devising for some time. The goal is to make it simpler for anyone to find his way more quickly about the campus. In recent years of rapid growth and expansion this has become an increasing problem, even for Columbians. Under the program originated and financed by the Alumni Association, directional signs will guide visitors from highways to the campus, campus buildings will be identified with nameplates, and lighted maps are to be strategically placed as a guide for students and visitors.

The map is illuminated automatically at dusk through the use of a special light-sensitive device. Other maps of similar design are planned in the Alumni Association project.

SUGAR TIME DOWN SOUTH

Missouri fans by the thousands and cheer for victorious Tigers.

TO GO ALONG with Missouri's triumph in the Sugar Bowl, followers of the Tigers scored a conquest of their own, on another front. They converged on New Orleans from far and near—and New Orleans loves to be converged on by holiday throngs. By their numbers and their spirit, the Missourians won favor and plaudits from those practical hosts down Delta way.

And no wonder. Missouri fans bought at least 11,000, possibly 15,000, tickets to the game, as compared to 5,000 bought by Florida fans. Two thousand Missouri followers occupied 900 rooms at the Jung Hotel, headquarters for the M. U. Alumni Association. Approximately 4,000 signed in at the Alumni registration desk. More than 1,700 rode to the game in 35 special busses. About 650 attended the Saturday morning Alumni brunch preceding the New Year's Day game. All factors considered, Missouri's part in the Sugar Bowl festivities was the biggest and most successful off-campus activity ever conducted by M. U. alumni.

Naturally, a vast amount of advance work and detailed planning was involved. When the Sugar Bowl announced the Tigers' selection, wheels were set in motion in the Alumni Office. A trip was made to New Orleans immediately to line up hotel accommodations (not a simple matter) and bus transportation. A letter and brochure were mailed to 15,000 active members of the Alumni Association. While room orders went directly to the Jung, bus and brunch tickets were handled in the Alumni Office.

Leading representatives of the Missouri contingent included Governor and Mrs. Warren E. Hearnes, members of the Board of Curators, President and Mrs. Elmer Ellis, and Chancellor and Mrs. John W. Schwada.

The New Orleans press gave generous attention to the Missouri partisans. A J-School alumnus, Jules Fogel, reported on their activities for the Times-Picayune. Coach Dan Devine made a hit with New Orleans boosters by keeping his team in town for its training program. Marching Mizzou was just another of the favorite attractions. Altogether, Missouri had a lot of good will ambassadors working in its behalf during the four or five day visit to the Crescent City, and the reception could hardly have been better.

Recognition For No. 1 Music Fan

A MUSICAL ARRANGEMENT that can be described only as lovely is the one between Roy L. Tarter of St. Louis and the University of Missouri's band and orchestra program. The affair has been going on for five years. Recently, on the campus at Columbia, there was public recognition of it.

Mr. Tarter, president of Carondelet Savings and Loan, was the guest of honor at a luncheon held at the Student Union and attended by University officials and faculty members and by Carondelet officials. The University of Missouri Alumni Association presented Mr. Tarter a citation for his support of the University Band and Orchestra. Chancellor John W. Schwada presented the Alumni citation:

"Certificate of Special Recognition to Roy L. Tarter for his services to the University of Missouri and most particularly to its band and orchestra, for his assistance to band and orchestra members from the St. Louis area, and for his personal interest and concern for young people devoted to music."

Mr. Tarter also was made an honorary director of Marching Mizzou, the University marching band. As evidence of this position, he can display an attractive plaque with mounted baton, which was presented to him by Charles L. Emmons, professor of music and director of bands and orchestra.

The University Alumni Chapter of St. Louis, which is co-sponsor with Carondelet of the scholarship concert which has become a big annual event in St. Louis, was represented at the luncheon by James Turner, president of the chapter.

In accepting the award and citation, Mr. Tarter announced that the fifth concert by the University Band will be held in Kiel Auditorium on May 8. He also announced sponsorship of similar concerts in 1967 and 1968. Sixty-five students from the St. Louis area have received scholarships in band and orchestra through funds provided by the firm at previous concerts. The performance is open to the public without charge.

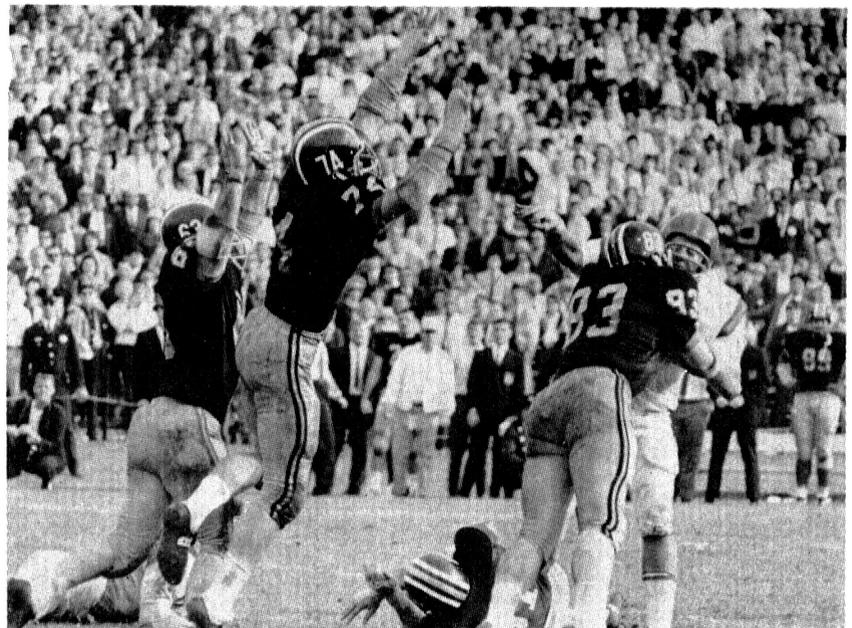

Carondelet officials present at the luncheon, held during the University Arts and Science Week, included Elmer Muschany, vice-president, and Mrs. Muschany; Richard Haag, director; and the following directors and their wives: Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Griffin, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Lipic, and Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Schubel.

The Cliff Hanger

If the Sugar Bowl game had ended after the third quarter, the score would have been Missouri 20, Florida 0. Tiger fans would have been quite satisfied, though not necessarily proud. Gator followers would have been humiliated. Neutral observers might have called it a dull mismatch. But there was a fourth quarter, and that made it perhaps the most exciting game in the New Orleans series. The tense finish left 67,421 fans in the stands limp; fans at home were no better off. Florida's All-American quarterback, Steve Spurrier, hobbled by Missouri's furious rush, began to click. He completed 27 of 46 pass attempts for 352 yards, a new bowl record. The Gators scored three touchdowns, one on Charlie Casey's fantastic end zone catch of a pass that had been "broken up." Florida's three tries for a two-point conversion were thwarted, and this was the margin of Missouri's 20-18 victory.

Coach Dan Devine's team was a nearly perfect machine most of the way. On the ground, Florida was held to a minus 2 yards; Missouri ran for 257. The Tigers scored 17 points in the second quarter—on a ten yard run by Charlie Brown, an 11-yard pass from Johnny Roland to Earl Denny, with extra points and a field goal by Bill Bates, who added another field goal in the third.

When Mizzou's instant carolers won the South

A giant-sized supply of peanut butter, cheese spread (they forgot the lunch meat), enthusiasm, and Christmas spirit was about all the eleven "cross-country carolers" could pack in the '53 Chevy and the '65 Ford they traveled in, but with it they sang their way from Columbia to New Orleans and back on $17 apiece. The eleven students, all members of the University Singers, took five days from Christmas vacation to make the trip as "unofficial ambassadors of good will." They sang in state capitols, city halls, on radio and TV shows, in restaurants, hotels, on street corners—anywhere they found an audience.

It was cold at 3 a.m. the Sunday they headed South, and the Chevy's heater was out of order, but soon after they left Columbia they hit an unexpected bump in the road and the heater suddenly began to function. It worked fine the rest of the trip.

That was just one of many happy incidents that helped reassure them that good will generally works reciprocally. The Alumni Office had wired prominent M.U. alumni in each of the cities the carolers planned to visit, asking them to schedule appearances for the group.

Arriving in Little Rock, Arkansas, they were met by Alumnus John Willingham, who had arranged for them to sing (and eat) at the North Little Rock Country Club. Going in, one of the girls fell down a flight of concrete steps but got up unhurt. Afterward, they sang at a Nativity scene at the state capitol and filmed a Christmas program at KARK-TV.

In the mayor's absence, the carolers were greeted in Alexandria, Louisiana, by Street and Park Commissioner Bill Lambdin. There they sang on the city hall balcony with Santa Claus and a crowd of children.

Mayor W. W. Dumas of Baton Rouge presented each of the carolers with a key to the city, and he and his family, along with Administrative Assistant Jim Hayes, took the group to dinner. They took advantage of the opportunity to sing for the other diners. Their worries about being behind schedule were dispelled when a police escort (arranged by the mayor) saw them to the city limits. There the astonished students were met by the highway patrol which escorted them, with sirens screaming, all the way to New Orleans.

A New Orleans police escort was waiting to take them to the Jung Hotel, which graciously arranged a good-will rate for the tired travelers. Next morning they were breakfast guests on the Dick Bruce Radio Show at the hotel. They caroled on Canal Street, and later were singing luncheon guests on a color TV show from WDSU-TV. At the mayor's office they proudly accepted a certificate proclaiming all the members of the University Singers honorary citizens of New Orleans, and they also brought back a key to the city.

Wednesday in Memphis, Tennessee, they met Alumni Association President Dallas Nelson and Past-President Howard Broemmelsick. Broemmelsick took them to a Kiwanis Club luncheon in the Sheraton-Peabody Hotel where they entertained the Kiwanians. Later they were given a tour of Memphis' famous skyscraper bank, the First National, where they were awed at the sight of $1,200,000 in change "all in ONE room!" A Memphis paper carried a feature story about the "student troupe" that "set Dixie caroling."

Back in Missouri, they were house guests Wednesday night of Mary H. Flentge, Dean of Students at Southeast Missouri State College. In Cape Girardeau they provided an impromptu concert by a live Nativity scene at the courthouse.

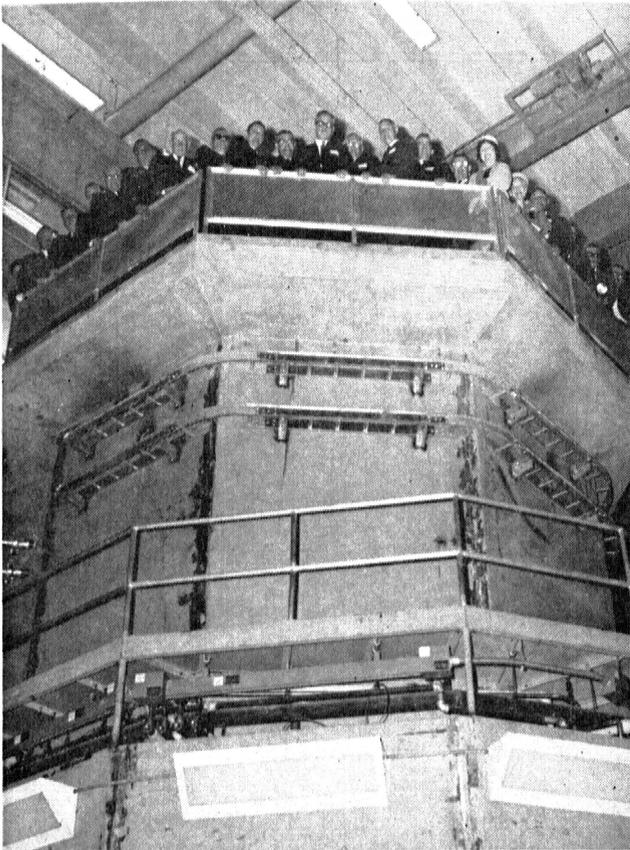

Thursday morning they visited Mayor Cervantes in St. Louis, and sang on the Charlotte Peters Show on KTVI. Two of the men also displayed their talents as judges on a fashion panel; two other carolers distinguished themselves by winning a "go-go" dance contest on the show (one of them had never danced before). Considering all the activity they had packed into the preceding days, perhaps it was even more noteworthy that that same student managed to sing "Ave Maria" beautifully at a friend's wedding later that same afternoon.

Dale new dean at UMKC

Dr. Wesley J. Dale has been appointed dean of the Graduate School of the University of Missouri at Kansas City. He has been a member of the chemistry faculty at the University of Missouri, Columbia, since 1949. For the last two years he has been on the staff of the National Science Foundation in Washington as associate director and senior staff associate.

Dr. Dale, who was promoted to full professor of chemistry here in 1958, became chairman of the chemistry department in 1961. He was given a year's leave of absence in 1964 to join the NSF office, and it was extended for a year upon request of the Foundation to permit him to be promoted to senior staff associate.

He is a 1943 graduate of the University of Illinois. In 1949 he took his doctorate at the University of Minnesota.

Visiting Leaders

at the Alumni-Faculty Lounge receptions.

The delegations from St. Joseph and Springfield included persons prominent in education, business, communications, and the professions. Virtually every segment of the civic leadership was represented. Some alumni were among the groups, but many were non-alumni.

An indication of the favorable reaction the two groups of visitors experienced are these excerpts from letters which typify the general tone of the visitors' comments:

"The day was not only enlightening, but it gave us older ones a lot of confidence in the future of our Nation because we can see how well our youth are being trained."

"Your staff and the Alumni group did a wonderful job on this project and I hope to be able to assist in your overall objectives in the future."

"It was the consensus we would all be glad to become ambassadors for the University."

"The day had so many highlights that it is almost impossible to select the outstanding one. If I had any suggestion to make it would be that you might mix a little more of the bitter with the sweet. I see nothing wrong in you deliberately selecting one or two areas where you need public and legislative support."

"The careful planning and coordination had a terrific impact on all members of our party. I was especially pleased with the frankness with which problems were presented. This honest approach to the situation was appreciated."

"I wish to particularly compliment the Flight Angels. They were most gracious hostesses."

"It is clear that the combined pressures of expanding technology and population will offer a stiff challenge in the years immediately ahead to all those responsible for the University's growth and expansion. In this situation, it will be extremely important for us to be well informed, and the Alumni are to be commended for initiating these visits. I would like to express particular thanks to the Flight Angels. These young ladies treated us all with great courtesy and consideration; they are certainly a fine recommendation for the University."

"I welcome the opportunity to become more personally acquainted with the dramatic growth of your institution."

In a letter to Alumni President Marvin D. McQueen, Chancellor Schwada named three of the alumni who contributed greatly to the success of the project. He wrote:

"I want to express to you the appreciation of this campus for the excellent support of the Alumni Association in providing for visits by the St. Joseph and Springfield groups. I personally feel this is a very beneficial program and the responses from individuals in both these groups bear me out.

"Elinor Gaunt, Karl Wickstrom and Garth Landis did an excellent job of working directly with us and the people who visited the campus.

"I hope this program can be continued since I feel that one of our basic problems is adequate communication with the leadership of the State."

The $2,600,000 necessary to build and equip a Biological Sciences Building at the University is now assured. The National Science Foundation has allocated $751,200 to the University for this purpose. Chancellor John W. Schwada said the grant is in addition to $373,630 allocated under the Federal higher education construction bill and $1,500,000 provided by the Missouri General Assembly.

In accordance with Article III of the By-Laws of the University of Missouri Alumni Association, notice of the election of officers for 1966-67 is hereby given. Any alumnus may nominate candidates, and nominations are now being received by the Secretary's office, 308 Jesse Hall, Columbia, Missouri 65201. Nominations close May 1.

missouri memo

Roswell Messing, Jr., president of Spartan Printing Co., has been presented with the Edwin H. Sommer Award by Zeta Beta Tau Fraternity in recognition of his leadership in establishing a program to aid college students. Mr. Messing's efforts have resulted in the establishment of an endowment fund to assist under-graduates who cannot afford to continue their college education because of financial problems.

He has long been an active participant in University of Missouri and fraternity affairs. He was elected president of the St. Louis Alumni in 1946, president of the Board of Trustees of the University of Missouri chapter of ZBT in 1948, National Historian in 1952 and National Vice-President in 1962. He presently serves as a Regional Director. He is shown above at left.

Mr. Messing, who received his B.S. here in 1938, was awarded a Citation of Merit for Outstanding Achievement and Meritorious Service in Business Administration, in April, 1959.

Dr. Harl R. Douglass of Boulder, Colo., may be the only person who has served in three major branches of the armed forces without donning a uniform. For his services to education, he has been honored by all three branches. Last summer at a ceremony on the University of Colorado campus he received a plaque for service with the Air University of the Air Force with headquarters at Maxwell Air Force Base. Later he received Army recognition; he was given another plaque for distinguished service as a member of the Educational Survey Staff Commission. He served along with four generals of the Army and two educators on his commission. And back in 1952 he was awarded a certificate of appreciation from the Navy "in recognition of meritorious service in World War II." Dr. Douglass, consultant and lecturer in education, has civilian honors, too. The Dr. Harl R. Douglass chapter is the name given a chapter of the Future Teachers of America, and a junior high school in Boulder is named the Harl R. Douglass Junior High School. In 1958 he received a citation for distinguished service to education, awarded by the University's College of Education. He was given a degree of Doctor of Humane Letters at the University of Maine. In 1965 he was the principal speaker at the Centennial Celebration of the founding of the first high school in Hawaii. He is the author or co-author of numerous books.

Universities and senior colleges in Missouri conferred 14,917 degrees and junior colleges graduated 2,240 in 1965, according to a survey by Dr. Irvin F. Coyle, assistant to the president of the University of Missouri. The University of Missouri system awarded 4,928 of the degrees, 33 per cent of the total among the senior institutions.

Dr. Coyle obtained the figures from 51 schools over the state. His report shows that the University in Columbia awarded 3,434 degrees, the largest number from a single campus, followed by St. Louis with 1,873 and Washington with 1,767. Coyle found that the total number of degrees awarded was 20.2 per cent above totals of 1963.

R. A. (Red) Graham was toasted at a recent dinner meeting of the Touchdown Club in New York. The IBM executive, well known as the "charitable emcee," is shown with two of the celebrities at the dinner: Horace McMahon of TV and movies, at left, and Frankie Laine, popular singer, at right.

Missouri's long tradition of leadership in journalism education in China is being carried on in Hong Kong. This year the Chinese University of Hong Kong started the first school of journalism and mass communications center in the British Crown Colony. To inaugurate the program, Prof. Charles C. Clayton, B.J. '25, was invited to head the school and communications center as a visiting professor on leave from the Department of Journalism at Southern Illinois University. With his wife, (Elizabeth Eliot, AB '25), he is now in Hong Kong.

The other member of the faculty is Michael Wei, from Formosa, who received his B.J., A.M. and Ph.D. from the University of Missouri. After receiving his doctorate in 1963, he returned to Formosa where he taught last year at the School of Journalism at National Chengchi University in Mushan.

This is Professor Clayton's second trip to the Orient. In 1961-62 he taught in the Graduate School of Journalism at Chengchi University. He is the only person who has been made an honorary professor for life of Chengchi University. In January he returned to Formosa to give a series of special lectures at Chengchi University.

In 1952 he received Missouri's medal for Distinguished Service to Journalism. In 1934-36 he was president of the Journalism Alumni Association of the University of Missouri.

Dr. Robert L. Ketter, an alumnus of M. U., has been appointed dean of the Graduate School of the State University of New York at Buffalo. He has been acting dean since September. He received a civil engineering degree here in 1950.

"I left a secure,
satisfying job after 15 years for a new and even more rewarding career!"

Says — MELVIN WEISZ, C.L.U., The Gold Agency, Detroit

"My 15 years as a high school teacher were personally rewarding and now, as a representative for Mass Mutual, I'm still enjoying some of the satisfactions of teaching. I'm now educating adults in the art of solving their financial problems. Helping people save money, create estates, and guaranteeing their families the resources they'd need in case of premature death."

"Financially, the rewards of a career with Mass Mutual have been gratifying, too.

In fact, each of the 5 years I've been at it, I've put in force over $1 million in life insurance! This has made possible foreign travel, a new home, a college education for our son, and the leisure time to participate more fully in community activities!"

"And Mass Mutual representatives are a skilled group of professionals who work for themselves, but not by themselves. Backing them is the prestige of a company over 100 years old, with over $3 billion in assets."

If you're looking for the same rewards that appealed to Mr. Weisz in his new career, write a personal letter to: Charles H. Schaaff, President, Mass Mutual, Springfield, Massachusetts. He's always interested in hearing from a good man!

90 years of telephone progress toward better, faster service!

This year, 1965, the area-by-area introduction of fast, convenient Touch-Tone® phoning is well under way. Modern push buttons speed calling and open up many new uses for your phone. For example: you may be able to shop by phone just by touching buttons to identify the merchandise you want—or pay bills through your bank the same way.

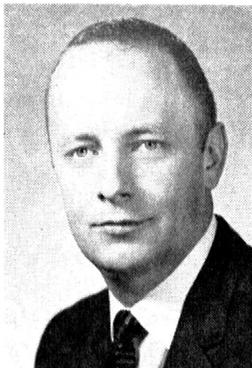

The 90 years between these two models have seen literally thousands of telephone designs developed. And behind them all has been a relentless search for new methods and materials that would carry the human voice farther, faster, more clearly—and as free from trouble as humanly possible. That's why your telephone and your telephone service will always keep changing—for the better.

M. F. Miller

1875-1965

Merritt F. Miller, Dean Emeritus of the University College of Agriculture, gave more than three score years of his long life to service in behalf of agriculture and rural life. Even after his retirement from the deanship in 1945, he carried on this service through writing, speaking, and counselling.

A pioneer in soil conservation research, Dean Miller was the first professor and chairman of the Department of Agronomy at the University. That was in 1904, when he came to the Missouri faculty from Ohio State University. He had graduated from Ohio State four years earlier and had advanced to the rank of assistant professor of agronomy at that institution. Ten years after he came to Missouri, the department he headed was renamed the Department of Soils, which he continued to direct as chairman.

When the Soil Conservation Service was activated to begin a program on control of soil losses, the only data available had come from Dean Miller's tests in a field on the southern edge of the campus.

After serving as dean from 1938 to 1945, Professor Miller wrote and illustrated seven publications for the College of Agriculture. The publications were designed for use by seventh and eighth grade students. He also wrote a textbook concerning on-the-farm training for young farmers.

Dean Miller, who was 90 at the time of his death in Columbia, Mo., on December 12, received the M.S.A. degree from Cornell, and also studied at Goettingen and Munich universities in Germany.

In 1927, he served on America's central committee for the first International Congress of Soil Scientists. He was a former president of the American Society of Agronomy and the American Soil Survey Association. He was a member of Sigma Xi.

Survivors include a daughter, Mrs. A. O. Hanson (Elizabeth Miller), AB '38, 707 W. Iowa St., Urbana, Ill., 61801; three sons, Edward E. Miller, BS Ch.E. ## Letters From Our Readers

To the editor:

The fact that our basketball team isn't winning games doesn't bother me so much as the reasons behind such a streak of losses. I think it all goes back to recruiting, and I imagine most coaches will tell you the same thing. And why can't we recruit top boys to play basketball at Missouri? I think you know the obvious answer: It's Brewer Field House. This antiquated barn doesn't have much allure to a prospective basketball player once he gets a look at such palatial field houses as they have, say, in Kansas, where 17,000 persons can be seated. It's pretty natural that you don't play at the Bijou when you can just as easily play the Palace.

If you analyze Brewer Field House—and I guess it was really something in its day—it's just four unfinished walls, with a dirt floor, and a small section of permanent bleachers. We're not going to get many great high school cage products until this monstrosity is done away with. Nobody likes it but the pigeons. Maybe it could be converted into a series of tennis courts. Or, if it were torn down and put up somewhere else on the campus, it could serve as a livestock barn.

I've seen the Tigers play this season and I think the boys play real hard and to the best of their ability. I consider Bob Vanatta a truly fine coach. His squad has been ripped to pieces, not only by the opposition much of the time, but by injuries and academic failings. Yet the coach doesn't cry about these problems and the boys continue to give whatever they have in a losing but admirable effort to become a winner. Future teams at Missouri will continue to be handicapped if they don't get some solid help in recruited talent, but many of the good ones are going to get away (as they have in the past) if they can't be offered a more desirable place to play their collegiate careers. Because Brewer Field House compares so poorly with other places where basketball is played in the Big Eight, you have to feel pretty kindly toward those boys who decided to choose Missouri.

J. S. T., St. Louis, Mo.

To the editor:

"How ya gonna tell the players if you don't have a program?" That's a common phrase at the Tiger Stadium on five Fall Saturdays. It's a common phrase . . . with variations . . . on the campus any day in the year.

Quite often we have visitors from TV stations, newspapers, insurance companies or what have you who rush through their sales pitch and then eagerly ask how far it is to the campus of the University.

I can show them Mumford Hall, Neff Hall, Jesse Hall, Waters Hall and the Library. But buildings have popped up faster than I can keep up with. Even though some of them have names on 'em, I can't tell whether they're a dormitory or an atomic energy testing plant.

Wonder if the department of helping folks find places could come up with a naming system or designation system of some sort that could tell us natives what's what in order that we can tell our visitors what's what and not have to appear so dumb and unconcerned. As I remember, I took horticulture in Whitten Hall. 'Fraid I'd be up the wrong tree if I told someone today that Whitten Hall is the Hort Building. Maybe along with the name, Whitten Hall, could be listed the departments in "Whitten Hall."

Man of Precision... he's always sure of his bearings

He should be. He's been intimately associated with them for a great many years. As a skilled employe of New Departure-Hyatt Bearings Division of General Motors, he operates a hydraulically controlled tracer lathe which machines the outer races of tapered roller journal bearings for railroad cars.

The workmanship is precise, the inspection process rigid, resulting in bearings as nearly perfect as the most highly refined production methods can make them.

Product quality and reliability are watchwords at New Departure-Hyatt. That's why the people who build, test and inspect these essential bearings are vital to the welfare of General Motors and its customers.
