Campus Commentary

By BUS ENTSINGER

It's one University

The expansion of the University of Missouri from a two- to a four-campus system has, as expected, aroused many questions for which the answers will not be immediately forthcoming. Those who have followed this expansion very closely will realize that the following statements are reflections of policy announcements emanating from the Board of Curators and therefore dictate a framework of operation which allows for expanded services to the state. One of the questions most frequently raised by members of the general public relates to four universities. This is an erroneous conception, since there is still only one University of Missouri, governed by only one Board of Curators and one administrative President. It is, however, now distributed over four geographic locations known as campuses, which form the University. Each campus must, by the very nature of its own individuality, take on a slightly different complexion than each of the others. Each has a slightly different type of environment, located in a different geographical area and, therefore, is necessarily intended to perform a slightly different function than any of the others. Yes, there will be some overlapping of curricula, but this will be pertinent to the variable performances of each campus.

Contrary to what many people assume, the new campuses were not inaugurated to "relieve the pressure" at Columbia or Rolla. They were designed to meet new pressures which heretofore the State of Missouri had been unwilling to attempt. Enrollments on all four campuses will continue to grow at approximately the same percentage that each is now growing and as a result of this forward stride, the State of Missouri should be in a better position to take care of its previously unserved thousands of students and public citizens.

Alumni affiliation is, of course, related to the campus where it was nurtured and developed, but as individuals we should all be concerned with the total development of all campuses, assisting in any civic way possible the continued effort to better serve the public regardless of campus location.

The bright ones

We hear much talk today about the quality of modern day students and how much improved it is since the "old times." School people seem to take great delight in reminding we nostalgic students of yesteryear that we might not make the grade today. While such a statement issues a challenge to us, what really hurts is that it might be true. Here is an indication by comparison of Missouri students today.

In tests concerned with high school seniors nationwide, over 88 per cent of the University of Missouri freshmen ranked in the top one-third on scholastic ability and over 60 per cent ranked in the top one-third on scholastic ability tests as compared with college freshmen nation-wide.

Another significant analysis shows that the caliber of enrolling freshmen is continuing to rise. In the freshman class, Fall 1965, only those who ranked in the top 10 per cent of their high school class made the top 25 per cent at the University of Missouri. In 1958, those who ranked in the top 13 per cent made the top 25 per cent at the University.

University with a heart

The University of Missouri does have a heart. In this day and age of criticism being leveled at large enrollment schools, it is sometimes difficult to find the real personality of a state university. We all accept the fact that there are necessary rules and regulations which demand certain degrees of conformity and sometimes the "red tape" seems to be obliterating the individual attention that various students receive. Here is a letter from an alumnus which graphically expresses not only the gratitude of the individuals concerned, but also the effort of the University to appraise individuals and individual situations. The names and towns should, for obvious reasons, remain anonymous. Other than that, this letter is a direct quote:

"Several years ago at my request you assisted in an intercession on behalf of a young chap named 'M.U. Student,' from 'Averagetown.' At the time he was under investigation for charges of cheating on a test and the preliminary board had recommended something drastic. I believe suspension from school for the balance of the semester or worse. With your indispensable help, the appellate review reversed the decision and put him on probation of some sort. At the time, I was most pleased you assisted but personally hopeful I had not put you out on a long limb. I am very pleased to report that the boy's father told me Saturday, the Dean of Students Office had written young 'M.U. Student' a letter of invitation to join 'Mystical 7'! At least in this one instance, the decision of the appellate board was one of great wisdom. All concerned owe you a personal debt of gratitude for going to bat for the boy at the most crucial period in his lifetime, perhaps.

"With my personal good wishes, I remain, Very truly yours, Signed: Grateful Alumnus"

AROUND THE COLUMNS . . .

A home for the new presidential family

When the University's next president, Dr. John C. Weaver, comes to Columbia this summer, he and his family will occupy a home on West Burnam Road. It has been purchased by the University Development Corporation and leased to the University for a year. In the meantime a new home will be constructed for the President of the University System. The Board of Curators has employed an architectural firm to design the home, for which several sites are under consideration. One site is in the area of the A. L. Gustin, Jr., Golf Course. This location would be near the proposed University Systems Building for which plans are being prepared. When Dr. Weaver was appointed president to succeed Dr. Elmer Ellis, the Curators said that the President's Residence on Francis Quadrangle would be utilized by the Chancellor of the Columbia campus. Dr. Weaver assumes office September 1.

Dr. McGowan newest dean on Columbia campus

The University Extension Division on the Columbia campus has a new Dean. He is Dr. John F. McGowan, professor of education. When his appointment became effective May 1, he was director of interdivisional behavioral and social science research programs. In announcing the appointment, Chancellor John W. Schwada said: "Dr. McGowan, due to his experience and contacts with many groups, is ideally equipped to direct our broad program of Extension Education throughout the State. He will work closely with all divisions on the campus and with groups throughout the State. I am certain he will bring about a closer relationship between the campus and the people of Missouri."

The position of Dean had been unfilled from July, 1965, when Dr. C. Brice Ratchford, who had held the office, was appointed Vice-President for Extension. Dr. Ratchford served as acting Dean until Dr. McGowan's appointment. Dean McGowan, on the University staff since 1955, formerly was assistant director of the testing and counseling service. He was honored recently at a meeting of the American Rehabilitation Counseling Association for his educational and professional contributions. He received the Yearly Service Award and the Harvard Graduate School of Education Association Award.

Outstanding teacher in veterinary medicine chosen

A secret faculty-student committee in the School of Veterinary Medicine selected Dr. Loren D. Kintner, professor of veterinary pathology, as the outstanding teacher in the School. Dr. Kintner was presented a plaque and $200 at the annual junior-senior veterinary medicine banquet. Dr. Kintner has been on the faculty since 1949.

Honorary memberships for five at Tap Day

The rains came on the morning of April 20, so the Tap Day ceremonies scheduled to be held near the Columns had to be moved inside, to Jesse Auditorium. There a capacity audience applauded as senior honor societies welcomed new members. Honorary memberships were bestowed upon Vice-President Oliver B. Ferguson of the University Board of Curators, University President Elmer Ellis and Mrs. Ellis, Dr. Hugh E. Stephenson, and Dr. Thomas C. Barrow. Mr. Ferguson, who is publisher of the Democrat-News at Fredericktown, Mo., and Dr. Stephenson, professor of surgery, were initiated as honorary members of QEBH. President Ellis and Dr. Barrow, associate professor of history, became honorary members of Mystical Seven. Mrs. Ellis was initiated as an honorary member of Mortar Board. Chancellor John W. Schwada spoke at the ceremony, and Dean of Students Jack Matthews presided.

Air Force intensive research applauded

Dr. Sara R. Feder, assistant professor of sociology, recently made a three-day tour of U. S. Air Force Systems Command installations. Dr. Feder concluded that the intensive research conducted by the Command is not for defense alone but of definite benefit to all humanity. She made the tour as one of a group of 28 members of the Southwest Central Region, American Association of University Women.

Building proposed for Freedom of Information Center

A site for a proposed building to house the Freedom of Information Center at the University's School of Journalism has been approved by the Board of Curators. Designated as the general site is the area to the west of the Journalism Building complex, west of the Circle Drive and north of the new Geology Building. In addition to the headquarters of the FoI Center, the building would house the Journalism Library and an auditorium. Dean Earl F. English of the School, announcing the plan at the 57th annual Journalism Banquet, said that the Missouri Press Association—now in a year-long observance of its 100th anniversary—plans to initiate a drive for funds. The Organization of Past Presidents of MPA pledged $2,500 as "a start" toward the project. This was also announced at the Journalism Banquet.

Dr. Spiegel to be associate dean

A professor of political science, member of the University faculty since 1955, has been appointed associate dean of the School of Business and Public Administration. He is Dr. Frederick C. Spiegel, who will continue to teach public law after taking up his administrative duties September 1. Dr. Spiegel has been active in research and is author of a book, The Illinois Court of Claims: A Study of State Liability. He is working with two other faculty members in studying the Missouri plan for selection of judges, a study that will be published within a year.

A Naval citation for Dean Wilson

For outstanding service to the Navy in support of the Naval Reserve Medical Program, Dr. Vernon E. Wilson has been awarded the Commandant's Certificate of Merit of the Ninth Naval District of the United States Navy. The certificate was formally presented to the dean of the University's School of Medicine in a brief ceremony in the dean's office. The presentation was made by Capt. T. J. Canty, Medical Reserve Program Officer with the Ninth Naval District. The citation for Dean Wilson noted that "the encouragement and counsel you have given the medical students at the University of Missouri School of Medicine are certain to have a positive effect on the quality of naval medicine for years to come."

An Evening for Elmer Ellis

The University's President, soon to retire, is the subject of praise and folksy comment as Columbia campus honors him; Mrs. Ellis is also lauded for her role.

IT WAS ABOUT AS MUCH SHOW as the man would allow. The University of Missouri was honoring President and Mrs. Elmer Ellis, and it had to go about it informally and modestly. The evening began with a dinner in Memorial Union for about twenty-five top administrators and their wives, an occasion made unique by the lack of speeches. Then Jesse Auditorium was opened to faculty and administrative staff, together with their wives and husbands. On the stage were the honored guests and the program participants who were limited to thirty minutes. Afterward, a reception held in the large ballroom of Memorial Union was attended by hundreds.

Chancellor John W. Schwada presided over the Auditorium program. Professor Charles Hudson, as master of ceremonies, drew laughter with his puns and his doggerel. Three speakers reminisced about Elmer Ellis, pointed to his long-demonstrated qualities, and traced the development of the University under his guidance. Dr. Ellis retires as president August 31.

Robert Neill of St. Louis, president of the Board of Curators, was scheduled to speak for the Curators, the alumni and all Missourians. Mr. Neill was unable to be present, but his remarks prepared for the program were read by a fellow Curator, P. A. Smith of Mexico, Missouri.

In their tributes to President Ellis, Professor Loren Reid represented the faculty, and Professor L. G. Townsend represented the administration.

Mr. Smith, reading from Mr. Neill's manuscript, said:

"THE GREATEST ATTRIBUTES of Dr. Ellis have been his knowledge, his intelligence, his sincerity and his ability to get things done. We have all seen these characteristics. They are what has made us great and we shall miss them. Elmer has always come to the Board of Curators with his recommendation, pro or con, without sidestepping his responsibilities. As we look over the past recent years under Elmer, the stature of our institution has grown by leaps and bounds, both in national recognition as well as our image in our own home state. Much of the credit rightfully belongs to Dr. Elmer Ellis.

"We regret to see Elmer and Ruth leave us. You and I know, though, that his precepts of a great and free university will be followed by our new President, Dr. John Weaver and his wife Ruberta. We are thus blessed with worthy successors to Elmer and Ruth."

Professor Reid said early in his remarks:

"I have known President Ellis for the best part of 35 years, and I have often wondered what there was in the air at Anamoose, in the Great Northern Plains, up near the source of the Missouri, that helped compound such a man. I would suspect that he is largely English, because he is such a master of the British art of understated dialectic. I would suspect that he has a large streak of Irish, because of his warm heart and generous disposition. And when I read in the newspaper about some current controversy involving city hall, Capitol Hill, student government, or the labor temple, and further read some public pronouncement of his that has rescued the University from the dilemma, I wonder whether in his veins there are not a few corpuscles handed straight down from some old Sioux Indian chief."

Professor Reid pointed to the campus building program as one of the great developments during the Ellis administration.

"SHORTLY AFTER Dean Ellis became President Ellis," he recalled, "the $75,000,000 bond issue was voted, with him as state chairman. With a share of this money, plus federal and other moneys, construction started. First we had steam tunnels all over the place. So many sidewalks and streets were torn up we could hardly navigate from one place to the next. . . . Then came the buildings. Imagine what a calamity it would be today if we suddenly had to vacate B & P A, the Fine Arts Theater, the University Library wing, the Agriculture Building, the married student apartments, the high-rising dormitories, Research Park, and a dozen other buildings or additions.

"Now so much building is going on that we are in danger of developing a legend that Elmer Ellis built the whole University. . . . You think I am exaggerating? I call your attention to a recent Letter to the Editor in Time Magazine in which the President felt it only fair

Lines Written on the Occasion of the Retirement of a Certain University President or Life Without Father

*Tonight as we gather here together
Our hearts are filled with April weather,
A mingling of sunshine and of rain,
Of proper joy, and proper pain.
The reason why our hearts are sad
Is clear: We're losing our campus dad,
The captain of our motley crew,
The B.M.O.C. of old Mizzou.
In life's vicissitudes we know
When you gotta go, you gotta go.
And Elmer Ellis says he's gotta
Cometh Hades or high water.
Of all the virtues in creation
He has to show us resignation!
And to give an exhibition
Of a retiring disposition.
I know we've come here to make merry,
To praise our Caesar, not to bury;
And festive Jesse Auditorium
Is not the place for an In-Memoriam.
We're glad to share the deep-felt pleasure
Of contemplating well-earned leisure,
And recalling years of high achievement
Offsets our personal bereavement.
I'm also aware of the rosy fact
That the crew is sound, and the ship intact,
The prospect challenging and keen
(According to Time Magazine).
I know with what eager expectation
We await the new administration:
The hopes that we place in Mr. Weaver,
Who'll speak like a sage and work like a beaver;
And the faith we have in First-mate Schwada,
Able to steer a whole Armada
With the trickiest navigation
To reach a plotted destination.
We have assistants and directors
To be our guardians and protectors,
And at least two dozen deans*

*With competent, well-oiled machines,
Plus countless chairmen, loyal, busy,
Rotating till they're downright dizzy.*

*And yet these facts bring small relief
As I face the loss of our noble chief.
Although I try with might and main,
I can't help singing this sad refrain:
No longer will our gallant band
Be led by Ellis in Wonderland.
No longer will his footsteps tread
The big brick house on Francis Quad,
Or circumnavigate as always
Old Jesse's venerable hallways.
We'll be like a ship without a skipper,
A brimming bucket with no dipper,
A barbershop without a clipper,
A comedy team without a quipper,
A cup of tea without a sipper,
A chilly foot without a slipper,
A carnival without a gypper,
A pair of pants without a zipper,
A burlesque show without a stripper.*

*And the ladies are in similar state
Beleagued by a Ruthless fate.*

*So while I ponder weak and weary
(a line from Edgar Allan Poe,
Who doesn't need it any mo'),
I'm plagued with this persistent query:
What will become of our Alma Mater
Now that we're losing our Elmer Pater?
Or, to put it more distinctly,
More directly, more succinctly:
What will happen to me and you-all,
Will we fall apart without Elmer's Glue-all?*

—C. M. HUDSON

to disclaim having been responsible for the decision to build the Medical Center.”

In the course of his remarks, Dr. Townsend, Dean Emeritus of the College of Education, said:

“I believe that it has been the behavior of President Ellis, who has lived among us, and with us, for many years as a compassionate gentleman and as a recognized master of his field, that has impressed us most. We have become accustomed to competent leadership, to demonstrated administrative skill, and to far-reaching educational vision. In a sense, he may have spoiled us a great deal.

“President Ellis is blessed with a brief name, easy to say and easy to remember. He has used it to good advantage. Never did I hear him answer the phone or answer a person by saying, ‘This is Dr. Ellis,’ or, ‘This is President Ellis.’ It was always simply, ‘Elmer Ellis.’ To me, that type of behavior reflects complete lack of pretense or ostentation. But it is a name which will be set in bold face type in the real story of progress in education in our time.

“IN THE WORLD OF HIGHER EDUCATION, he has walked with the great, but he did not lose the common touch. He was always equally at home with faculty, administrators, alumni, and students.

“He has been a model on this campus for the open door policy in the management of his office. To gain access to the inner chambers of some offices might require personal identification and various steps of protocol, but not the office of Elmer Ellis. Only on the rarest of occasions did one find his door closed. He lived among us, in fact, and he made himself accessible to all who wanted to talk with him.

“A visit to his office always brought a friendly greeting and an attitude which made one feel welcome. Then, in a seemingly relaxed manner, he would listen intently.

“But the administrator who came to his office with a question or problem was likely to be embarrassed if he could not state his case clearly or completely, for President Ellis would fill in the details for him. How he kept so well informed about so many things involved in the administration of this complex University System is one of the unsolved mysteries around here.

“MANY TIMES administrators, who worked closely with him, were impressed by the breadth of vision and the depth of understanding of the man. He could lead by planning ahead and by seeing things from a large perspective. That leadership would shine through in the form of inspiration and challenge. One would come from his office frequently with original questions answered and with instructions clarified; but also with new problems, often in bigger perspective. In these conferences, too, one usually found that his diplomacy was equal to his decisions.

“One of the greatest attributes of President Ellis as an administrator has always been his sincere interest in people. . . . I believe that much of his administrative behavior received its deepest motivations from this genuine concern and dedication to the welfare of people.

“All of us who have been close to the University, particularly as administrators, know that we have been privileged to walk and work with a leader whom we could respect and trust. We know, too, that retirement does not end influence. It flows on and on.”

As the tributes were concluded, Chancellor Schwada presented President Ellis a gift from the administrative staff of the Columbia campus—a tape recorder, with the evening’s proceedings freshly recorded. From the same source, Mrs. Schwada presented Mrs. Ellis with a telephone—“to keep in touch.” □

Dr. William M. Jones, professor of English, has been director of the Honors College since 1964. He formerly was chairman of the Honors Council, the governing body of the college. He usually has about 300 students enrolled in a course in Shakespeare which he teaches.

The Responsibility To Perform

Survey shows that many alumni of Honors College continue in scholarly pursuits.

"Academic honors serve to impress on the astute recipient the responsibility which society places on him: to perform . . . [with] continued excellence."

THIS STATEMENT, made by a graduate of the University's Honors College, articulates an attitude typical of the honors alumni. A recent survey, which gave these alumni an opportunity to evaluate their undergraduate education and to suggest possible ways to make the program more effective, also revealed that they are indeed "performing," and performing excellently. The list of their accomplishments since the bachelor's degree is formidable.

Bachelor's degrees with departmental honors were granted to 181 students since the beginning of the program through August, 1965. Of those whose addresses were available, ninety-eight returned the survey questionnaire. That they continue to exhibit academic achievement is evidenced by the fact that only eleven reported no formal education beyond their bachelor's degree. Most of these were women who have married and who are currently helping their husbands through graduate school and/or raising families; most of them plan to continue their education when circumstances permit.

Fifty-eight Honors College alumni are presently enrolled as graduate students (twenty of them at the University of Missouri). Among those attending out-of-state schools are James Sandfort and Max Okenfuss at Harvard; David Allmendinger, Jr., at the University of Wisconsin; Karen Holloway at Duke; Paul Howard, Richard Cooledge, and Elizabeth Crouch at the University of Michigan; Gerald Fishman at Rice; John Talbott and Stanley Mengel at Stanford; Charles Elder and Patrick Story at Northwestern; William Brock and Terry Small at the University of California at Berkeley. Four are attending theological schools: Jerry Boren at Andover-Newton; Michael Fisher at the Episcopal Theological Seminary of the Southwest at Austin, Texas; Harvel Sanders at the Episcopal Theological School at Cambridge, Massachusetts; and Darrell Jackson at Yale. Kay Kyser Ptak is working on M.D. and Ph.D. degrees at the University of Chicago.

TWENTY-TWO ALUMNI report completion of master's degrees; forty-six are embarked on doctoral programs. One, W. Todd Wipke, has completed his doctorate in chemistry (at the University of California at Berkeley) and is now a 1st Lt. in the Army, stationed in Texas. Several others lack only their dissertations; among those in this category are Virginia Easley DeMarce, who will receive her Ph.D. from Stanford. She is now an assistant professor of humanities at Northwest Missouri State College at Maryville. Kay Lanto Bikson, who is completing her dissertation in philosophy at the University of Missouri, is teaching part-time at the University's St. Louis campus.

In almost every case, graduate education is being financed at least in part by fellowships and grants. Those reporting included fifteen Woodrow Wilson Fellows, eleven NDEA Fellows, several holders of Fulbrights and National Science Foundation grants, and many winners of scholarships from the various graduate schools. That Missouri's honors courses are instrumental in qualifying one for such awards and for the rigors of graduate school was repeatedly emphasized by the recipients. Others remarked that prospective employers were favorably influenced by their honors record. (Twenty-five of those reporting are Phi Beta Kappas.)

Thirteen of the honors alumni are presently teaching (nearly half of those reporting plan for teaching careers, mostly on the college level). Four of the men are in the armed services. In addition to Wipke, these include 1st Lt. Warren Mosby, stationed with the Air Force at the Pentagon; Army Pvt. Richard Rowe of Fort Benning, Georgia; and Lt. Roy C. Masterson, U.S.N., aboard the U.S.S. Higbee, a destroyer homeported in Yokosuka, Japan. Eleven of the women reporting list their occupation as homemaking. Some of the homemakers are also graduate students or hold part-time jobs. Kristina Hagman Weir, one of three honors alumni now abroad, is a combination housewife and teacher of economics. She teaches for the Extension Division of the University of Maryland at Oberammergau, Germany. (The others abroad are Charles F. Werneke, who is studying in France on a two-year teaching assistantship, and Nancy Rupprecht, who is a research assistant for a Missouri University professor in Berlin.) A random selection of other occupations represented reveals that Lana R. Yeokum is now with Senator Symington's staff in Washington; Martha Freeman is assistant to the art director at Hallmark Cards in Kansas City; Forrest Browne, Jr. is a financial analyst with the Chrysler Corporation in Michigan; Frances Flentge is a research assistant with a management consultant firm in New York; and Dennis Siebert is an information officer with the U. S. Public Health Service in Washington.

COMMENTING ON THE VALUE of their honors education at the University, the alumni were enthusiastic about the intellectual stimulation involved. They spoke of the challenge of participation in small classes where all students had superior academic rank, guided by the "most competent, dynamic professors." Several remarked that this opportunity to get to know and to work closely with such teachers had been instrumental in their own choice of career and had inspired them to develop their own abilities more fully. Rapport between students and professor and among the students themselves was valued highly. Typical comments were, "The honors courses provide an environment in which free communication of ideas is encouraged," and "In the honors courses we were able to get beyond the rather formal, impersonal instructor-student roles which of necessity develop in regular sections because of unwieldy class size." Implicit in some of their comments was a certain relief at escape from the stigma of being "darned average raisers" that some superior students really do suffer in regular classes. One said, "There was less emphasis on grades and more emphasis on learning." The freedom to investigate areas of special interest and the "emphasis on creative, analytical thinking" were praised. Many mentioned the value of the early introduction to research techniques. One said "the 'baby thesis' was good experience." The "baby thesis" (senior research paper) was repeatedly cited as one of the most rewarding of Honors College activities. (The Missouri Honors Review, first published in the spring of 1964, includes some of the outstanding research papers by honors students. This annual publication has included such diverse and impressive titles as "Existence and Aristotle's Logic," "Oblomovshchina: The Submissive Intelligentsia," "Conflict in Mozart's Piano Sonatas," and "Some Chemistry of bis-Ethylenediaminedioxyrhenium (v) Chloride: An Abstract.") The only real criticism of the Honors Program was offered by the few alumni who felt that the courses should be made still more rigorous. □

When the Band

IT FINALLY HAPPENED. The University Concert Band has given its first public concert in Kansas City. Alumni of the area brought the organization to the Music Hall of Municipal Auditorium on Sunday, April 24. It was a fine program, well received, and about 1,000 persons were present—regarded as rather good attendance in view of several conflicts.

Kansas Citians are familiar with Marching Mizzou, the 200-piece organization that performs at football games; but the Concert Band, 100 members chosen from the marching band, had performed only at private functions in the Kansas City area. So the high quality of the concert aggregation must have come as a pleasant surprise to those who sat in the Music Hall that Sunday afternoon. Kansas City alumni, who took care of the expense of this first pops concert, are hopeful that it can be made an annual event, with growing crowds at future performances.

An alumni band committee of the Kansas City chapter, appointed by President Sam Bornhauser, was headed by Lester Milgram, who had long advocated bringing the band to Kansas City.

The energy and enthusiasm that Les Milgram put into spearheading promotion for the concert band's debut in Kansas City should surprise no one familiar with his interest in music. Perennially, he leads a band at

M.U. pep rallies in Kansas City, where he is also a long-time band leader for Rotary Club functions. As many an alumnus recalls, Les was president and drum major of the M.U. band in 1939 when the band represented the state in the San Francisco Exposition. He succeeded in getting good press notices for the concert, and he used space in his food store advertising to boost the event. The alumni invited high school band leaders and their musicians in the area as special guests, and the Milgram stores made tickets available to the public.

Other Kansas City board members who assisted in the concert project include Merl Chandler, Randy Vanet, Jack Senter, Carl Ade, Al Hathman, Bob Rule.

THE RED CARPET

A FUNNY THING HAPPENED when visitors from Sikeston and nearby towns came to Columbia for an organized look at the University campus. As the guests concluded their tour and headed for a dinner program, the dinner was suddenly canceled. Word had arrived that bad flying weather was imminent and that the group would have to take off for the return home about two hours earlier than scheduled. When their plane landed at Sikeston, dinner would be ready for them there. So there was a brief get-together at the hotel before the speeded-up departure; Chancellor John W. Schwada stood in the middle of the group for a few informal remarks; and mementoes were passed around to the visitors.

That was in March. A few weeks later another group, from Kirksville and neighboring towns, flew in for the fourth in a series of these campus visitations. Their visit was cut short by two hours because of a conflicting event, but this necessity was known in advance and adjustments were made easily.

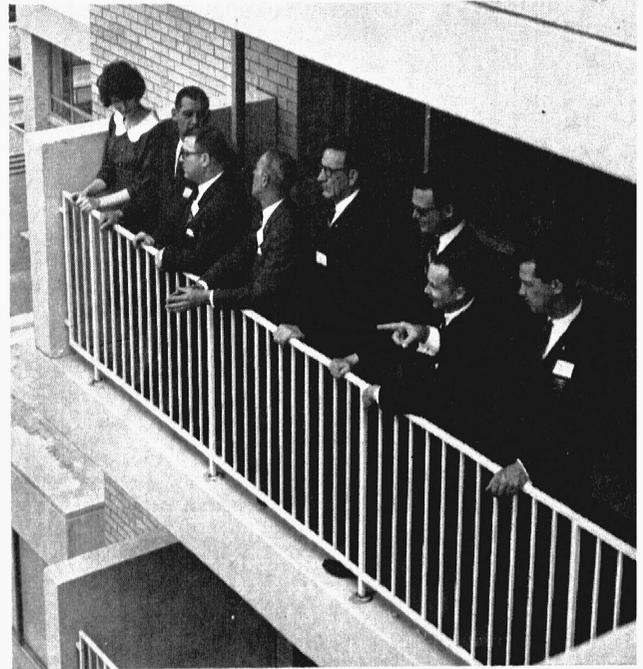

While the first two of these programs may have gone off with fewer hitches than the third and fourth, there was no detraction from the merit of the project in any way, considering the highly favorable reaction of the visitors. The entire operation, which will be resumed next fall, is sponsored by the University Alumni Association, whose leaders are convinced that this is one of the finest programs ever undertaken by the orga-

The visitors are prominent in a variety of fields in their home areas and are generally local leaders. Whether they are alumni or not, they return home with a better understanding of what the University is doing and how it is equipped to do its mission.

GENERALLY, THE DAY'S PROGRAM goes like this: A University plane picks up the guests who have gathered at an airport in their area (so far: St. Joseph, Springfield, Sikeston, Kirksville) and lands at Columbia around 9 a.m. They are accompanied on the flight by Angel Flight members acting as hostesses. At the airport in Columbia a red carpet literally is rolled out for the visitors, who are met by an honor guard from the Air Force ROTC and greeted by Chancellor Schwada (it was impossible for him to be on hand when the Kirksville delegation arrived). Then a University bus takes the group on a campus tour, highlighted by a visit to the Nuclear Reactor Facility where the director, Dr. Ardath H. Emmons, explains the operation.

Another fine feature of the day is a luncheon at the Student Union where students from home areas of the visitors are invited to sit with the guests who are on tour. Without fail, the delegations have been warmly impressed by the caliber of Mizzou students. Several deans and administrative staff members also attend the luncheon meeting. Chancellor Schwada speaks briefly at the luncheon, and assures the visitors that there is no "pitch" to be directed at them; the University simply wants them to know more about the institution and hopes they will continue to be interested in it.

In the afternoon the group goes on a whirlwind tour of the Library, the Museum of Art and Archaeology, and the State Historical Society of Missouri. Afterward, the delegates have a choice of visiting several of the University divisions, and are then conducted on those tours. A coffee hour in mid-afternoon was omitted when the Kirksville group was here, but will probably be reinstated as a welcome relief between tours. The day is topped off by dinner, and ordinarily the visitors start their homeward flight about 8 p.m.

PRESIDENT MARVIN McQUEEN, at the latest meeting of the Board of Directors of the Alumni Association, had words of praise for the committee in charge of the campus visitations. The members are Mrs. Elinor Gaunt of Columbia, Karl Wickstrom of Marshfield, and Garth Landis of St. Joseph. The project had been discussed by the Alumni Board for a couple of years but really "got off the ground" when this committee was appointed. The project is underwritten by the Alumni Association.

Words of praise also follow each of the visits. These come from the visitors after they return home. Here are some comments that are typical:

"Dr. Emmons did a marvelous job of explaining the reactor and its many, many uses, civilian and military. The atomic reactor is worth the trip to Columbia in itself."

"The tour was most informative, well arranged and all the comments were praiseworthy."

"On behalf of all from the 'Swamps,' thanks for a wonderful day on campus. I have always felt that communications between the University and the people of Missouri needed improvement, and these trips are certainly a big step in the right direction."

"The fact that about half of our group had not attended the University was perhaps the best move of the trip. All of them were impressed and now add their stronger appreciation for the University."

"We were delighted with the program and the courtesy shown us."

"May I take this opportunity to thank the alumni. . . . It was an enjoyable day and a most informative experience." □

Alumni to 'Rescue' on Vital Project

NEW LIFE HAS BEEN BREATHED into the much-discussed multipurpose auditorium for the Columbia campus by action of the University Alumni Association. At the recent spring meeting of the national Board of Directors, the Association voted $20,000 for site preparation and planning of the project, which has top priority on the University of Missouri building list.

Chancellor John W. Schwada, who had called for assistance in keeping the auditorium project alive, was notified of the alumni gift by Marvin McQueen, national president of the Alumni Association.

The appeal and response followed recent legislative developments. A sum of $400,000 for site preparation and planning had been recommended to the legislature by the State Budget Office, but was cut from the final appropriation for University of Missouri capital improvements.

According to Chancellor Schwada, the $20,000 provided by the Alumni Association will enable the University to undertake only a small portion of the preliminary work; however, it will cut one year off the completion of the auditorium when the General Assembly appropriates the required funds. The Chancellor said that requests for funds for the auditorium have been submitted to the Missouri Legislature during each session since 1955.

In its action, the Alumni Board expressed wholehearted agreement with University officials that the auditorium is much needed, and that any further delays in the project should be avoided. As now envisioned, the multipurpose auditorium would provide an indoor facility with a seating capacity of from 15,000 to 20,000 persons. It would serve as a gathering place for educational, cultural, and athletic events. These could be staged on a state, regional, and even national scale.

No campus facility at this time can hold a majority of the rapidly growing student population on the Columbia campus, where the enrollment is around 17,000. Jesse Auditorium seats 1,900 persons. It has turned away overflow crowds on several occasions. When chairs are placed on the gymnasium floor, Brewer Field House can seat around 5,000 persons, somewhat uncomfortably.

A site for the multipurpose auditorium in the general area immediately to the southeast of Memorial Stadium was approved in December by the Board of Curators.

Another Year for McQueen

The University Alumni Association's energetic president, Advertising Executive Marvin D. McQueen of St. Louis, has been re-elected to serve a full year in that office. He took over the presidency last fall, a few months after William C. Tucker of Warrensburg (then beginning his second term as alumni president) was appointed to the Board of Curators.

Other officers were also re-elected: Vice Presidents John Miller of Kansas City and B. W. Robinson of Jefferson City, and Vice-President and Treasurer Hartley G. Banks of Columbia. New terms start July 1.

District directors elected are Lloyd Turner, Chillicothe; E. S. (Simp) Hamilton, Ray County; Robert Hoffman, Montgomery County; C. B. Fitzgerald, Johnson County; Bob B. Atkin, Phelps County; Robert Stemmons, Lawrence County; Bob Wolpers, Butler County. Regional directors: Sam Cook Digges, New York City; Howard Broemmelsick, Memphis; Joe Hoover, Chicago; Ed Kennedy, Tulsa; Harry Calvert, San Francisco.

MISSOURI HONOR MEDALISTS

ENGINEERING. Five outstanding American engineers, including four alumni of the University, received the Missouri Honor Award for Distinguished Service in Engineering from the University at the annual Engineering Convocation. They are shown with Chancellor John W. Schwada (standing, center); Dean Joseph C. Hogan (standing, right); and Dr. Thomas L. K. Smull (seated, center), director of the Office of Grants and Research Contracts, National Aeronautics and Space Administration, who gave the Convocation address. The medal winners are (standing, from left): George G. Holman, A.B., B.S. '31, production manager for the du Pont Company Film Department, Wilmington, Del.; Dr. J. Stuart Johnson, B.S. '32 and M.S. '34, dean of the Wayne State University College of Engineering, Detroit, Mich.; N. T. Veatch, managing partner of Black and Veatch, Kansas City, Mo.; Albert R. Waters (seated, left), B.S. '12, co-founder of the Carter-Waters Corporation, Kansas City, Mo.

JOURNALISM. Missouri Honor Awards for Distinguished Service in Journalism were presented to five prominent members of the journalism profession, to a publishing firm and to a newspaper during the 57th annual Journalism Week at the University. The individual recipients shown with Chancellor John W. Schwada (standing, second from left) and Dean Earl F. English (seated, left) are Walter D. Scott (standing, left) B.J. '36, chairman of the board of the National Broadcasting Company, New York; Charles L. Blanton, Jr. (standing, third from left), publisher of the Daily Standard at Sikeston, Mo., and long a leader in press activities in Missouri; and, seated: Thomas M. Storke, retired founder and publisher of the News-Press at Santa Barbara, Calif., a Pulitzer Prize winner, former United States Senator, and crusading California editor for many years; Robert M. Jackson, B.J. '28, outstanding editor of the Caller-Times, Corpus Christi, Texas; and Alton L. Blakeslee, long a distinguished science news editor with the Associated Press. Scott and Storke were the Journalism Banquet speakers. At extreme right, standing, Alton F. Baker, Jr., editor and publisher of the Eugene (Ore.) Register-Guard, accepted the medal for that newspaper; and, standing next to him, Henry Swirner, Chicago, accepted the medal for Fairchild Publications, Inc., New York, of which he is vice-president and Midwest director.

TO THE EDITOR:

Just a note to congratulate you on the beautiful new look of the Missouri Alumnus. It has always been a great source of information for me.

ARTHUR R. MCQUIDDY, '47

*Public Relations Department

TO THE EDITOR:

The March issue was outstanding. . . . I've always regarded the Alumnus as one of the finest publications in the country. . . . Your pictorial coverage has been above standard always and I note that Timothy Gusé isn't going to lower that banner; he's got a nice touch. . . . I like your good use of white space, the open type used in the vastly improved Class Notes Section. . . . Guess I have nothing but praise—an excellent job all the way. Carry on.

TO THE EDITOR:

I'm not a nut about the good old days. Who wants 15-cent bacon if it means 5-cent hogs. Who wants 50-cent doctor bills if it means castor oil instead of penicillin.

But some things about the good old days are just as "camp" and fundamental today as they were last year or 25 years ago. Take bacon, itself, the Mona Lisa, the Lord's Prayer—and the make-up and style of the Missouri Alumnus. The Alumnus had style, cohesion, continuity . . . a Mona Lisa. It won awards. A reader didn't have to hunt all over the book to find the story that went with the picture. The recent Alumnus resembles the old—like a Jimmy Hatlo cartoon resembles the Mona Lisa.

Why change things just for the sake of changing things, or just because it's "camp" to change things? Give us back our Mona Lisa of alumni publications!

TO THE EDITOR:

Like your new format very much. The whole issue (March) was excellent. I knew John Weaver at Nebraska. Missouri is fortunate to get him.

TO THE EDITOR:

A sincere salute . . . on the continuing improvement of the Missouri Alumnus. On my judgment the March, 1966 issue represents marked improvement. Very attractive! Very informative! Very well done indeed! Thank you all sincerely!

TO THE EDITOR:

I think you and your staff have done an outstanding job in changing the magazine to what it is today. I believe this is one of the first times I have read the issue (March) from cover to cover, and felt I should because everything looked interesting.

TO THE EDITOR:

In view of the progress made by the University of Missouri in the past dozen years, as a result of some fine leadership, it may seem untimely to criticize the effort of the State of Missouri in higher education. However, in the interest of the state and the nation, I believe that friends of the University must continue to appraise critically the state's progress in this vital area.

The truth is that Missourians generally are contributing, at the state level, much less than their share of the cost of the national effort in higher education. In 1964 Missouri ranked as high as 17th among the states in per capita income; its average income was higher than that of any other Big Eight state and higher than that of four Big Ten states. But in per capita expenditures on current operations for higher education, Missouri ranked a dismal 40th.

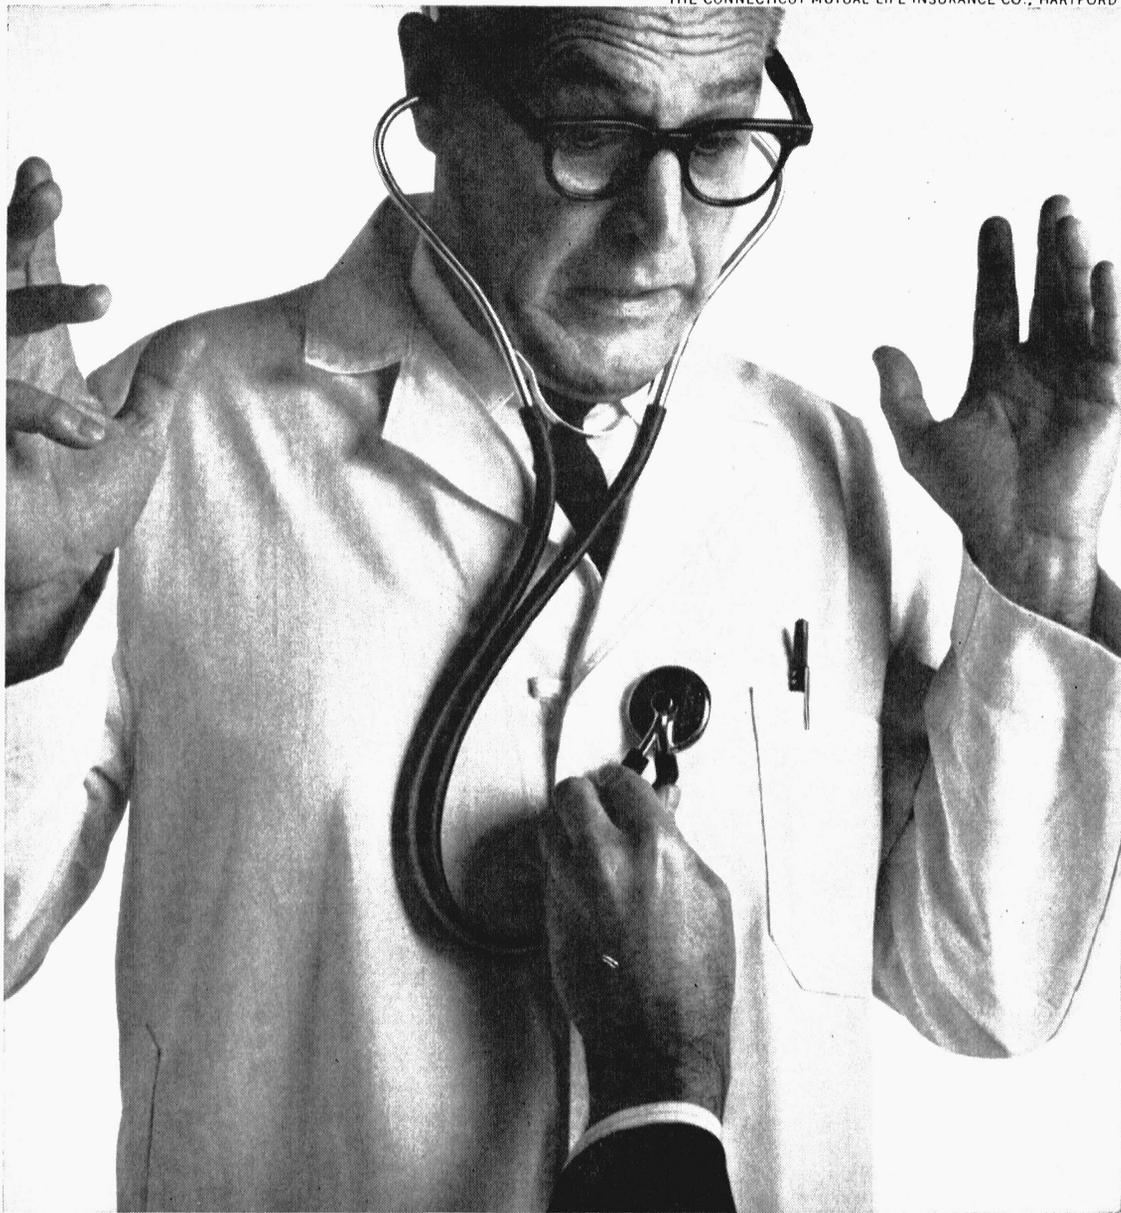

Not only was Missouri far below the other states in the Big Eight in higher education expenditures, and not only was it below every state in the Big Ten, but it was below seven southern states and West Virginia. Missouri was ahead of most Ivy League states, but those states have more heavily endowed universities, with high tuition. In 1964, to have placed as high in per capita college funds as in average income, Missouri would have had to more than double its higher education budget.

Whether Missouri likes it or not, it is in competition with 49 other states for the economic growth of tomorrow and, hence, for the best-educated youth of today. Our country, likewise, is in grim competition with other countries across the whole spectrum of human endeavor, particularly in science. So Missourians have a duty to their own youth and to the nation that they cannot shirk without weakening both their state and their nation. A policy of complacent gradualism will not do the job.

To the credit of recent Missouri legislatures are certain overdue tax increases, the new School of Medicine, and the start of the University's Kansas City and St. Louis branches. Missouri voters should elect legislators responsive to the financial needs of their University system.

Examine the insurance company before it examines you

You'll find healthy differences in the 'Blue Chip' company!

Before you let any insurance company's doctor (including ours) zero in with his stethoscope, it will pay you to take a thoughtful look at that company.

Of the 1,600-odd life companies in the U.S., Connecticut Mutual—the 'Blue Chip' company—ranks in the very top bracket. In high dividends (continuous dividends for 120 years). In liberal benefits and options. In reserves for contingencies. In quality of investments. In low net cost. Connecticut Mutual's net cost to policy holders is remarkably low. This is substantiated by Best'sLife Insurance Reports, industry authority.

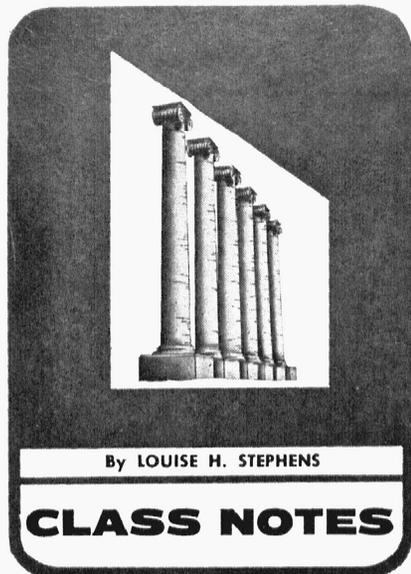

Our financial health is a big plus for you. It means more dollars—for your retirement or to leave your loved ones.

A Class Note in the April issue about Judge WALTER H. BOHLING, Sr., AB, Jefferson City, Mo., contained inaccuracies, which the Alumnus deeply regrets. The item, based on a newsletter clipping, stated that Judge Bohling was associated with a law firm, which is not true, and that he formerly served as a Commissioner of the Missouri Supreme Court, retiring from that position in 1963. The fact is that Judge Bohling has not practiced law or been associated with any law firm at any time since 1934, the year he was appointed as Commissioner. Following his retirement as Commissioner in 1963, he was appointed Special Commissioner of the Missouri Supreme Court, and now serves in that position.

The boy who wondered what made things tick...
now keeps complex machines 'ticking' at General Motors

When Steve Slowinski was eight years old, he was lucky enough to find a broken-down alarm clock in a vacant lot near his home. He took the clock apart, and then put it back together so it worked perfectly.

In the days and years that followed, Steve considered it a personal challenge when he found anything that needed rebuilding. In high school, for example, he set up his own repair business and within a year his room was crowded with faceless clocks, dismembered watches, washing machines, toasters and other items. You name it—Steve could fix it.

After courses in mechanical arts and drafting, Steve joined the Ternstedt Division of General Motors. His first job—to fix intricate machinery when it got fouled up. Today, Steve is the Foreman of the machine repair team at this important GM Division.

Looking back, it was more than a broken alarm clock that a young boy found so many years ago. It was, in effect, a lifetime career.

We're mighty glad it worked out that way . . . for Steve Slowinski . . . and for General Motors!

General Motors is People...making better things for you
