

MISSOURI ALUMNUS

B. W. Robinson Heads Alumni For 2nd Term

B. W. Robinson, of Jefferson City, was re-elected president of the Alumni Association of the University of Missouri-Columbia last month at the spring meeting of the Association's Board of Directors in Columbia.

Twenty-two members of the 40-member Board attended the May 24-25 meeting and commended the president for his work during the past year. Robinson, director of the State's Vocational Educational program, responded by urging that the Association concentrate next year on strengthening the organization at the local level.

Vice presidents elected were John Miller of Kansas City; Ed Kennedy of Tulsa, Okla. (the first out of state alumnus ever to be chosen a vice president); and Garth Landis, of St. Joseph. Hartley Banks Sr., of Columbia, was re-elected treasurer.

Missouri district representatives chosen for two-year terms were District I, Elmer Turner, of Savannah, to fill out the unexpired term of Landis; District II, Lloyd Turner, of Chillicothe; District IV, E. S. Heblum, Richmond; District VI, Walt McElie, Montgomery City; District VIII, C. B. Fitzgerald, Warrensburg; District X, Robert Atkin, Rolla; District XII, Robert Stemmans, Mt. Vernon; and District XIV, Harry Rock, New Madrid.

Regional Representatives elected were: Eastern, Red Graham, of New York City; Southeastern, Howard Broemmelick, of Memphis, Tenn.; Southwestern, John Booth, of Oklahoma City; Far Western, Harry Calvert, of San Francisco; and Midwestern, Joe Hoover, of Chicago.

FORREST C. DONNELL

Faculty Award To Dr. Lois Knowles

When you sit and talk with her you can't help but feel that she must be a good teacher. Understanding eyes, a warm smile and sincere interest radiate around her. The Alumni Association this year has honored this teacher, writer and active contributor to the Columbia campus with the Distinguished Faculty Award, the first to be presented to a woman.

"But I'm going to return the award ($1,000) to the University. I would like to see it given to a woman student in education. The University has been good to me. This is just one token of my respect and affection."

Dr. Lois Knowles is first a teacher. She has been teaching ever since she received her BS Ed. and AM from the University of Missouri in 1931. First it was her hometown of Clinton, Mo., then Sedalia, the State Teachers College at Duluth, Minn. and then back to the University in 1934 where she has been on the faculty ever since.

Dr. James C. Olson Named New Chancellor of UMKC

New leadership has come to the University at Kansas City. Dr. James C. Olson has recently been appointed chancellor of that campus by the Board of Curators of the four campuses.

Olson, who will assume his new duties the first of August, is the former vice chancellor for research and graduate studies at the University of Nebraska. He replaces Dr. Randall M. Whaley who resigned his UMKC post last summer.

In an acceptance statement, Olson said, "I look forward with enthusiasm to the challenge involved in the chancellorship of UMKC, surely one of the most promising urban universities in America."

In 1946 Olson joined the Nebraska history department to become its chairman in 1956. In 1956 he was named dean of the graduate college and research administrator and became vice chancellor in April.

He and his wife, Vera, have two daughters.

Alumni Honors To Forrest C. Donnell

At the annual commencement exercises, Forrest Donnell was the 11th man to be presented the Distinguished Service Award by the Alumni Association.

Former Governor of Missouri and former United States Senator, Forrest C. Donnell, has a long record of service to the state and to the University. His long and distinguished career has fulfilled a desire to serve his fellowman. As a former president of the Alumni Association and president of the St. Louis chapter, Donnell has been a loyal and enthusiastic graduate of the University.

Donnell entered the University in 1900 receiving his first degree, the AB, in 1904. He went on for a law degree which he received in 1907, was admitted to the bar that year and began practice in St. Louis with Spelden P. Spencer. He later became his partner in 1911. In 1956 the formation of Donnell, Schoenbeck and Donnell was

Campus Alumni Interested in Today's Mizzou

More interested in today than yesterday; not overly concerned about the growing size of the Columbia campus; and still possessing considerable loyalty for the University of Missouri-Columbia. But there is a generation gap.

These generalizations about readers of the Missouri Alumnus are made after analyzing the results of two surveys, one a random sample questionnaire answered by 430 members of the Alumni Association, the other an attitude-measuring study of a scientifically selected sample of 40 members.

Most of the attitude study's value is to the publications staff as it assesses the importance of four separate types of readers identified by electronic computer from the 40 responses. All types of readers, however, strongly agreed with the statement, "The magazine should answer the question, 'What is happening at my University today?'" And all types of readers strongly disagreed with the statement, "I enjoyed my years at MU, but it's now so big that I wouldn't want my son to go there."

Of more general interest is the readership survey obtained by random sample. The survey was mailed to 367 members of the Alumni Association and completed and returned by 430. The 43.6 per cent response is considered high for surveys of this type.

As in the attitude survey, responses indicated that the alumnus is primarily concerned about the University today. Here is the way the 430 persons ranked the possible purposes of the Missouri Alumnus, in order of importance:

1. To tell alumni about the University.
2. To serve as a link between alumni and the University.
3. To tell alumni about other alumni.
4. To be an independent reporter of University

Here is the average ranking of 12 different types of feature stories as determined by 430 responses to the survey question, "Rank these titles in the order that you would be most likely to read them."

1. 10-Year Plan for the Columbia Campus
2. Class Notes (Your Era)
3. Dan Devine Talks About Tiger Football
4. How much Academic Freedom
5. Today's Working Student
6. Campus Hangouts I Have Known
7. Missouri Researchers Look to the Moon
8. New Curriculum Makes Literature Come Alive
9. The Great Fire of 1822
10. Joe Bovary: Alumnus With a Mission
11. Alumni Association Gives Faculty Award
12. Class Notes (Not Your Era)

activities for the alumni.

5. To be a public relations arm of the University.
6. To tell the University about alumni.

The first two rankings finished far out in front of the others. No. 6 was far behind, and the middle three were more or less bunched together. The rankings were fairly consistent in all groups, that is by men and women, age residence, etc.

Of the persons responding to the survey, 75 per cent were men, 23 per cent women.

Thirty per cent were under 30 years of age; 35 per cent, 30 to 45; 23 per cent, 45 to 60; and 10 per cent over 60.

Eleven per cent lived in Columbia; 36 per cent in the rest of Missouri; and 52 per cent outside the state.

Thirty-five per cent belonged to a social fraternity or sorority while they were in college, 63 per cent did not.

Thirty-three per cent had an annual income of less than $10,000; 44 per cent, an income of from $10,000 to $20,000; and 18 per cent, more than $20,000.

The difference that age makes was most marked in the answers to the question concerning controversial stories. Here is the average response to the question, "Would you like to see the Alumnus include stories like these:

	Yes	No
Hippies at Columbia	43%	56%
Vietnam Protest Marches	38%	56%
MU Offers Second Class Education, Says Student Body President	54%	36%
Drugs on Campus	54%	36%
Faculty Group Calls Academic Environment Stifling	67%	25%
The Abortion Racket	39%	59%

In every case, the younger the age group, the more likely they were to say yes. As the groups got older, the answer was more likely to be no. For example, the average "yes" to the stories about drugs on campus was 54 per cent. But 63 per cent of the under 30 group said yes; 57 per cent of the age 30-45; 45 per cent of those from 45 to 60; and only 28 per cent of the over 60 age group said yes.

There was more general agreement in response to the question, "Would you like to see the class notes a part of the magazine, even though it meant fewer features about alumni and a totally black-and-white magazine?" Forty per cent said yes, and 58 per cent said no. Most readers appear to approve of the present alumni publications program of alternating magazine and newspaper formats.

Around the Columns

with Jean Madden

Fifty-seven separate meetings involving 4444 alumni all over the country between January 30 and May 18 of this year. These were the figures reported to the spring meeting of the Alumni Association Board of Directors on May 25.

These figures are the best possible barometer of the health and vitality of the Alumni Association and of the job being done by the two new Assistant Directors of alumni activities, Don Faurot and Bill Dalzell.

"I spent 32 years running away from alumni, and now I'm chasing them," is the way Don Faurot describes his new duties at his old Alma Mater; and cringing then he is—from Washington, D.C., to San Diego, Calif., with intermediate stops in Atlanta, Memphis, Phoenix, Los Angeles, Santa Barbara, Cincinnati, Columbus, Dayton, Indianapolis, and at least that many places in Missouri.

Meanwhile, Bill Dalzell, who wasn't as well known but who soon may be, has more than 100 Missouri's 114 counties, and he has set up county-wide alumni meetings in 31 of those counties during this period. These meetings, which have featured University officials like Chancellor John Schwada (he also visited Dallas and Houston), Bus Entsminger; Professors Ardie Emmons and John Lesley; alumni volunteers like B. W. Robinson and Cordell Tindell and alumni office staff members, among others, have been well received and well attended.

Add to this the usual busy schedule in St. Louis and Kansas City and the many school and college activities on the Columbia campus, and it all adds up to a busy and profitable period.

Before September, Bill Dalzell estimates that we will have had over 100 alumni meetings for the year involving nearly 9000 alumni; and this, of course, doesn't count the 6000 at the St. Louis Band Concert, the thousands at the various Homecoming activities, nor those at the 100 plus county executive meetings.

This is all part of alumni president Robinson's mandate last fall for more members in the Association and more grass root involvement by individual alumni. With Robinson back at the helm, we can look for increasing alumni activity next year. When we report these noteworthy achievements, we can hear him saying, "Only 20,000 alumni belong to the Association and only 10,000 went to meetings last year—what about the rest of them?"

What about the rest of you? If you haven't had a Missouri Alumni meeting in your area recently, get a piece of the action. Contact Bill Dalzell at 308 Jesse Hall, Columbia, Mo., and he'll put you in business.

Basketball Coach Norm Stewart looks longingly at a scale model of the Columbia campus's multi-purpose auditorium slated for completion in 1970. The $7.65 million structure, long needed for variety of functions, should also provide an important boost to MU basketball fortunes.

Holdover regional representatives are: Eastern, Walter John, of Arlington, Va.; Southeastern, Dave Goodman, of Miami, Fla.; Southwestern, Cliff Blackmon, of Dallas, Tex.; Far Western, John Pollitt, of Santa Barbara, Calif.; and Midwestern, Eugene Trumble, Hopkins, Minn.

Divisional representatives to the Board, chosen by their respective divisions, are Engineering, Newby Miller, Kansas City; Law, Lou Cottey, Lancaster; Medicine, Dr. Bernell Andrews, Kansas City; Agriculture, Don Schooler, Brookfield; Journalism, John Stapel, Columbia; Home Economics, Dr. Adeline Hoffman, Iowa City, Ia.; Nursing, Doris E. Asselmeier, Webster Groves; Veterinary Medicine, Dr. Gerald Johnson, Independence; and Forestry, Ramon Gass, Jefferson City. The newly formed Division of Elementary Association chose Bob Atkin as its representative.

As Dr. Frank Heagerty, principal of the Laboratory School, described her, "She is a master teacher." What did he mean? She is one of the few people who can be exceptional in the elementary classroom, the college classroom, as a writer and publisher and most important as a person.

"She's quiet, dignified, yet extremely forceful and willing to take a definite position." She has real ability!

Today Dr. Knowles who in the past has been a supervisor and teacher in the Laboratory School, teaches classes in elementary education just to college students. "This semester I have three courses and work with two seminars." She has just finished co-authoring a series of mathematics textbooks, six in number, for elementary school children and had two articles published in journals this year for which she was co-author.

In addition Dr. Knowles served as chairman of the centennial committee this year and coordinated all events in commemoration of the 100 years of women on the campus.

Just look at Dr. Lois Knowles and you know she is the type of woman and teacher who many students come to for advice. "Oh yes, she was very popular when she taught the fourth grade in the Lab school," Heagerty says. "Kids see her sincerity and caring right away. And she was highly accepted by the parents." Dr. Knowles herself even admits that it is quite common today for students to come to her office to talk and not always about courses.

Football Film Available Free For Groups

For those alumni groups who plan to get together this summer and need a program, the Big Eight Conference has a 27-minute, sound, color football highlights film which should fit the bill.

Entitled, "Big Eight Football at Its Best," the movie features outstanding segments of the 1967 season, especially those involving the 113 players starting last season who will be back this fall. Included are spectacular plays by the Tigers' Roger Wehrli, Jon Staggers, and Bill Schmitt. Nationally known sports-aster Lindsey Nelson is the narrator.

Financed by Frontier Airlines, the film is available cost free, and may be obtained by writing to the Big Eight office, Hotel Muehlebach, Kansas City, Mo. 64105.

Girl Enters Alien Field Of Graduate Engineering

Even chemical engineering is no longer a man's field. Dioste L. Jallorina, a native of the Philippines is the first woman graduate student in that department at the University.

Why become an engineer? It was the advice of her father. She received a B.S. in chemical engineering from the University of Santo Tomas in the Philippines. And listening to the recommendation of a family friend who once studied on the Columbia campus, Dioste is here now. She finds her male classmates both helpful and friendly.

Wm. Kimel Becomes Engineering Dean

The College of Engineering has a new dean. A professor and head of the nuclear engineering department at Kansas State University since 1958, Dr. William R. Kimel will come to the campus to succeed Dr. Adrian Pauw.

Pauw has been acting dean since August 1967 when Dean Joseph Hogan resigned to become dean of engineering at Notre Dame University.

Besides teaching, Dr. Kimel has worked in Goodyear Tire and Rubber, Boeing Aircraft and Westinghouse Electric and served as engineering associate for the U.S. Forest Products Laboratory and Ar-gonne National Laboratory.

announced.

"He figures to win" was the outline in a Kansas City Star article that explored the optimism of the Republican candidate in 1960 who won the election in 1964. Four years later Donnell was running for the U. S. Senate. One feature amusingly portrayed him as a natural born orator who began at age four and later debated on the University team for three years. He was elected in 1945 and served for six years.

Donnell has also served the American Bar Association and the state and local bar associations for many years. He and his wife have four children.

Memorial Award Given In Honor of Track Star

A memorial track award, honoring the late Bill Rawson, was offered this spring to the most outstanding freshman member of the Missouri track squad. Lt. Rawson, a top-flight halfmiler at the University in 1962-63, was killed in action in Vietnam over a year ago while leading his Marine platoon.

Centennial Convocation Honors 100 Alumnae

The final major event of the Year of the Tigress took place May 7 with the Centennial Convocation honoring 100 distinguished women graduates and 100 distinguished women students. Following the award assembly at which Michigan Congressman Martha C. Griffiths spoke, a symposium was held in the afternoon and a banquet that evening.

Selection of the women to be honored was made by individual colleges and divisions. Selection of the students was made in proportion to the undergraduate classes and the Graduate School. Academic excellence and participation in campus activities were the criteria.

Following is the list of outstanding women graduates, their degrees and residence today.

Distinguished Service

Awards to 5 Engineers

For distinguished service in engineering, five honor awards went to prominent engineers March 22 during Engineers' Week.

Three of them were graduates of the University. Paul N. Doll, who received his BS AE in 1936 and MS in 1937, is executive director of the Missouri Society of Professional Engineers. Dr. Erich A. Farber, a professor of mechanical engineering, was a BS ME graduate of 1943 and a MS graduate of 1946. Harold L. Gasler received a bachelor in civil engineering in 1951 and today is president of Toledo, Peoria and Western Railroad Co.

The other two awards went to a former dean of the University's College of Engineering, Huber O. Croft, and to Dr. Lillian Gilbreth who is the first woman to receive the Missouri Honor Award for Distinguished Service to Engineering. She is an engineering management consultant and president of Gilbreth, Inc. and heroine of the book, "Cheaper by the Dozen."

Three Missouri Educators Cited for Service

Three veteran Missouri educators received citations for distinguished service to education at the annual Education Day banquet May 6. Those honored were Roscoe V. Cramer, Beauford W. Robinson and Willard J. Graff.

Dr. Cramer, the 1925 masters graduate who received his Ph.D. in 1929 from the University, spent three decades as principal of Switzer Elementary and West Junior High schools in Kansas City.

Robinson, also president of the Alumni Association for the Columbia campus, is state director of vocational education. Previously he was high school superintendent at Eldon and at Rolla. He received a M. Ed. in 1946.

Attorneys Honored at

Law School Ceremonies

Law School alumni of the University heard a former professor at Oxford University and the President-elect of the American Bar Association speak at the two banquets during Law Day activities, on April 26-27.

In addition, four distinguished service awards were presented to Clarence O. Woolsey, Lowell L. Knipmeyer and Judge Paul A. Buzard. The citation of merit was presented John H. Hendren by the Alumni Association.

Woolsey, president of the Law School Foundation, is a 1936 graduate of the School. Knipmeyer graduated in 1932 and Hendren in 1931.

D. Jeff Lance was initiated into the Order of the Coif as an honorary member. He is a member of the board of trustees of the Law School Foundation, vice president of the Law School Alumni Association and a partner of the firm of Cook, Murphy, Lance & Mayer in St. Louis. He graduated from the University in 1948.

Graff is superintendent of schools at Springfield and a masters graduate in 1934 from the University. He was elected president of the Missouri State Teachers Association in 1967.

This year's Education Day was particularly eventful as it marked the 100th anniversary of the College of Education and the organization of the College's first alumni association. Mrs. Hearnas was the speaker and her husband, the Governor, became an honorary alumnus of the College of Education.

In addition the two top education seniors hosted the teachers that most influenced their lives.

Russians Read About MU's Dr. Jones

How do foreign countries perceive America? What do they think of when the University of Missouri is mentioned? Is it thought of with respect?

It's rather hard to answer these questions at least without doing extensive research on attitudes. But what we can be sure of is that the people of Poland and Russia got a favorable impression of MU in April when they read America Illustrated, a magazine published by the United States Information Agency for distribution abroad.

In six pages the story of Dr. William M. Jones, professor of English and associate dean of the Graduate School, was portrayed through words and pictures. George Gardner (AB '64) captures in pictures the outgoing, dynamic personality of Dr. Jones, so well known by recent graduates for his stimulating courses in Shakespeare.

Below are some of the words of Dr. Jones who first handed "the challenges and rewards of a life in education." The magazine, edited by Lee Battaglia (AB '58, MS '60), printed in Russian and Polish, shows the American professor at work and at home with his family.

"My life is an indivisible unit composed of various related activities, all of which serve the same central purpose: to employ each day as fully—and as wisely—as I, and all the wise men whose words I have time to read, know how to. In my professional life I attempt to communicate to my students this same respect for the sacredness of existence.

"My duty is to demonstrate it to all students with whom I come in contact; that existence consists of a great deal more than the accumulation of material success. As educated men they must realize their cultural responsibilities to become active participants in their rich literary, musical and artistic heritage. In spite of the multiplicity of my professional activities, I think that underlying them all is my fundamental faith in the educational process as a means of constantly expanding physical, emotional and intellectual perceptivity. I seek new dimensions of human capability for myself and my students by developing—in an orderly form the accumulated knowledge of my discipline.

"I seek to preserve some time each day for total solitude, either in the library or in my office. (When the doors are closed, the secretaries smile and say, 'My sorry, he's in conference, an acceptable half-truth which means I'm conferring with Shakespeare, Dostoyevsky or the Muses.) I must continue to read and write because this scholarly effort is really my contribution to my culture.

"Aside from my family and profession, I have a number of interests, all of which seem directed toward the beautification of my immediate surroundings. Often my wife and I practice music together (she on the cello and I on the piano), and sometimes we play trios with our daughters or other violinists. When the children are in bed, I frequently go to the basement to take care of my plants and am drawn to the room where my makeshift easel holds a canvas. My wife's sympathetic attitude toward my painting is quite different from her attitude toward my music. When we are playing she occasionally hits me with her cello bow if I fail to keep the tempo—always gently though."

J-School Honors Topping

During the 56th annual Journalism Week, seven Missouri Honor Awards for Distinguished Service in Journalism were presented. Two individuals, a newspaper, a magazine, an encyclopedia, a television program and a journalism education fund were recipients of bronze award medals.

Seymour Topping was back in Columbia to receive an individual award for his contribution to journalism today. The foreign news editor of the New York Times, is a 1943 graduate of the University. In 1946 he went to Peking with the International News Service, covering civil wars in Manchuria and China.

After 13 years' experience as a foreign correspondent Topping then joined the Times soon to become their Moscow correspondent to Hong Kong. In 1966 he was appointed foreign news editor.

Ben W. Weir Sr. was the other individual honoree. He has been publisher of the Nevada (Mo.) Daily Mail since 1943.

The other five bronze award medals went to NBC's "The Today Show" accepted by moderator Hugh Downs; the New York Daily News accepted by president and publisher F. M. Flynn; Encyclopedia Britannica accepted by editor in chief Sir William Haley; the Newspaper Fund, Inc. accepted by executive director Paul S. Swenson, and the Saturday Review accepted by managing editor Richard Tobin.

F. M. Flynn is also a graduate of the University School of Journalism in 1924.

Vet Medicine Gives Teacher Award

Dr. Lloyd E. Davis (left), associate professor of veterinary physiology and pharmacology, and associate professor of pharmacology, the University School of Veterinary Medicine, was given special recognition as the Distinguished Teacher Award at the annual Awards Night of the School of Veterinary Medicine in April. Dr. Davis who received his Ph.D. from the University in 1952, has been in the faculty since 1959. At right is Dr. Leonard Hibbs of Norton Laboratories.

Dr. A. H. Groth, dean emeritus of the School of Veterinary Medicine, was given special recognition for his devoted years of service to the School. He will retire in August.

Dr. Hitch Speaks At Commencement

It was June 4 and Memorial Stadium at 6:45 p.m. and it was much like any other University commencement except the faces were different and there were more of them.

Speaking to the 1968 graduates at the 126th annual exercises was Dr. Charles J. Hitch, a native Missourian and now president of the University of California. Dr. Hitch had returned to Missouri along with two others to receive honorary degrees from the University. Until January, Dr. Hitch has been vice president for business and finance at the University of California.

Dr. Burrhus Frederic Skinner, professor of psychology at Harvard University, and Dr. Barbara McClintock, a geneticist with the Carnegie Institute in New York and a former faculty member on the University campus from 1936 until 1941 were the other two honor recipients.

50th Reunion Held For Class of 1918

Dr. John H. Longwell, dean emeritus of the College of Agriculture, and Paul Hamilton, Kansas City businessman who was football captain in 1917, were featured by the University of Missouri at the 50th anniversary reunion of the Class of 1918. The reunion was held at the University.

Hamilton and Dr. Longwell both were members of the 1918 class which held its 50th anniversary reunion. Hamilton spoke at an alumni dinner Monday when Jean Madson, director of alumni activities of the Columbia campus, presented 50-year medals to members of the 1918 graduating class. Dr. Longwell spoke at a reunion luncheon Tuesday, which followed an informal meeting at the Memorial Union with Chancellor John W. Schwada.

Don Faurt, assistant director of alumni activities, said about 100 members of the 1918 class and of classes graduating prior to that time, returned for the reunion.

MU Press Selects Baird for an Editor

The University of Missouri Press has a new editor. Max Baird, the city editor of the Columbia Daily Tribune, took over as an editor in April.

Baird who received both his AB (1935) and AM (1935) in English from the University also was an instructor in English for three years in the '50s. In 1957 he joined the news and editorial staff of the Columbia Tribune.

He had previous journalism experience as editor of the Air Force Journal, the official service publication during World War and several years in New York City in editorial posts with the New Yorker magazine and Doubleday and Co.

Football Center Gets Award for Grades

This year's chemical engineering scholarship for highest grades and most promise in the profession has gone to a football player. The myth of the football player with no brains isn't true at Missouri, and it certainly isn't true of Conny Rees.

Rees, starting offensive center for the Tigers, has a cumulative grade point average of 3.586. The junior received the $25 scholarship and scroll in March from the American Institute of Chemical Engineers.

Engineering Society Receives Third Place

Third place for "Outstanding Student Chapter for 1967" has gone to the Alpha Phi Mu chapter of the College of Engineering on the University of Missouri campus.

This national honorary society for industrial engineers had 34 chapters competing for the title.

Four Alumni Receive B & PA Recognition

The School of Business and Public Administration honored four of its alumni on April 25 at the annual Honors Banquet in Columbia, the main highlight of B&PA Week.

Honored for recognition of outstanding achievements were William P. Harsh, J. J. McIntyre, G. V. Patterson and Edwin B. Flippo.

Harsh is group vice president of Hallmark Cards, Inc., Kansas City, having joined the company in 1936 after receiving his BS BA that same year.

McIntyre is partner-in-charge of the Baltimore office of Price Waterhouse & Co., public accountants. The 1947 graduate is a certified public accountant in six states, has been with the company since 1947 and became a partner in 1960.

Patterson is president of Swartwood, Inc. in Kokomo, Ind., a position he has held since 1959. He has served the company, which manufactures ventilation equipment, as vice president and general manager. After receiving his BS BA in 1948, Patterson owned Patterson & Co., a manufacturer's agent.

Flippo is professor of management at the University of Arizona at Tucson where he has been since 1964. He was head of the department from 1964 until 1967 and previously held that same position at California State College in Los Angeles. He received his business degree in 1947 and was an instructor of management at the University here for a year.

Studio Band Gets Standing Ovation

April 28 was just another of many days of awards and congratulations for the University of Missouri Columbia Studio Band. Participating in the fifth annual Kansas City Jazz Festival, they received the only standing ovation.

The Columbia campus band had won the University of Missouri-Kansas City Mid-America Jazz Festival on April 26, receiving first place prize of $200 and two trophies. Earlier in the month the band was named one of the top three bands at the second annual Little Rock Jazz Festival.

Tigers Fare Well in Recruiting Wars

Missouri's athletic teams fared generally well in the recruiting wars which ended for the most part around May 22, the day the national letter of intent became valid. The national letter, recognized by all major conferences, binds the athlete to a particular school when he signs it.

The football Tigers signed 38 prospects, and had a particularly fine year as far as home-state players were concerned. The 23 Missouri prospects represent virtually all the state's blue-chip prospects.

Norm Stewart, in the midst of a rebuilding program, was least satisfied with his recruiting, but his 1967 signees included several boys who should help the rebirth of Tiger basketball fortunes.

One of them is Steve Rea, 6-5, 200-pounder from Thermopolis, Wyo., who was chosen to two high school all-American teams. He was all-state as both a junior and senior.

Other signees include Richard Brum, 6-5, 210, New Haven, all-state Missouri in Class S; Sanford Boyd, 6-3, 173, St. Louis (McKinley), all-district; Greg Flaker, 6-3½, 185, Cape Girardeau (Notre Dame), 2-F; Pete Bulis, 6-3, 190, Afton, Split end and defensive halfback was chosen all-metropolitan in the St. Louis area.

Mike Vaughn, 6-5, 185, Chicago (Crane); Bob Allen, 6-8, 210, Indianapolis, IA., honorable mention high school all-American; and Carl Altrich, 6-7, 215, St. Charles.

Baseball coach John (Hi) Simmons is especially high on two of his signees, Mike Griffin, an outfielder from Guthrie, Okla., who hit .390 this season, and Mike Crim, the leading pitcher on Columbia Hickman High School's team.

Heavyweight Frank Chandler from Lenox, Ill., probably is the top wrestling prospect recruited at Missouri. The 6-3, 255-pound grappler, undefeated in his senior year, was the state champion. Two blue chippers are among swimming hopefuls. Steve Summer of Kirkwood is the state 50 and 100-yard freestyle champion, and Scott Arnold of Webster Groves is the state 100-yard backstroke champion. Both are high school all-Americans.

The 38 football prospects are as follows:

Mark Baker, 6-2, 210, Maplewood (M.) High School. A high school linebacker and offensive tackle, Baker ranked 16th in his class of 200 and won all-suburban grid honors.

Charles Barnes, 6-1, 210, San Antonio, Texas. Barnes, who played tailback for Highlands High School, has run the 100-yard dash in 16.7 seconds.

Mark Beattie, 5-11, 200, Pittsfield, Ill.

A hard-hitting game, and the No. 1 offensive line did not impress me.

Devine also termed the play of his quarterback as the most disappointing. The signees came away with a different impression. They liked the style of Terry McMillan, the transfer who guided the Black Bears to a 10-1 record in 15 passes, three of them for touchdowns. He also displayed a knack for finding the open receiver and the ability to fake a defensive back out of position.

Garnett Phelps, the No. 1 quarterback going into this game, had a 5-for-15 day and threw two interceptions. But it should be remembered Phelps was working against the No. 1 defensive unit.

Perhaps the most crowd-pleasing performance was turned in by James Harrison, the 237-pound fullback up from the freshman squad. He sat out much of spring practice with a ankle injury, but he churned out 68 yards in 11 carries.

Devine said he was not pleased by any particular phase of this game. Then he added, "But it's difficult to isolate things. For instance, I can't please that Slaggers runs 87 yards, and displeased that our No. 1 defense let him do it. Teams we play have back as good as Slaggers—and most of them are better."

Then, before rushing off to see high school prospects gathered here for this game, Devine added, "One of the main values of spring practice is that you find out not only who can play—but who can't."

Scouts from Kentucky, Illinois and Army—Missouri's first three opponents next fall—said they didn't see many in the can't play category.

Mark player fullback and defensive end and was a member of the Illinois squad in the Missouri-Illinois all-star game in St. Louis.

Scott Bell, 6-1, 230, Kansas City (Van Horn). Chosen to the all-state second team, Bell played both guard and tackle. He was rated all-metro in the Kansas City area.

Robert Bishop, 6-3, 230, Cape Girardeau. Bishop, considered one of the best prospects in Southeast Missouri, played both tackle and end.

Daniel Borgard, 6-2, 190, St. Louis (Bishop DuBourg). An all-district selection, Borgard played fullback and linebacker. He ranks in the upper fourth of his class.

Lorenzo Brinkley, 6-1, 188, St. Louis (Beaumont). High school all-American selection at halfback, Brinkley has great speed.

Samuel Britts, 5-11, 192, St. Louis (Rosary). A versatile player, Britts had time at end, fullback, and tackle.

Sam Brown, 6-0, 195, Excelsior Springs. An all-state selection, Brown was Excelsior's leading ground gainer.

Pete Bulis, 6-3, 190, Afton. Split end and defensive halfback was chosen all-metropolitan in the St. Louis area.

James Doak, 6-2, 205, Cameron. Doak was picked to the Class M-S all-state team.

Bob Dudley, 6-0, 170, Dallas, Texas (Richardson). All-metropolitan selection at quarterback led him to the semifinals of the state championship.

Mike Fink, 5-10, 175, Farkville. Second team all-state halfback had a 9.7 time for 100-yard dash this spring.

David Frieze, 6-2, 195, Oak Grove. Football defensive end and tackle was a one-man track team for Oak Grove as well. He has run the 100 in 10.1.

Kurt Gebhard, 6-3, 215, Brentwood. All-stater played defensive end and offensive tackle.

Chris Gibson, 5-11, 185, King City. This all-stater played offensive end and tackle.

Ray Hammer, 6-2, 215, Springfield. Hammy's tackle, is considered best prospect in the Springfield area.

Tom Kamradt, 6-0, 195, Traverse City, Mich. An outstanding student, Kamradt was sought by Ivy League schools as well as his home-state universities.

Nick Kantzberg, 6-5, 200, Kansas City Kan. (Ward). Tight end was chosen to all-metropolitan team in Kansas City area.

Jack King, 6-0, 175, Belleville, Ill. (West). All-conference quarterback started for his team three years.

Charles Land, 5-11, 170, Midwest City, Okla. All-state halfback ranked in the top 20 per cent of all Missouri players.

Steve Marshall, 5-10, 195, Kirkwood. Defensive tackle was second team all-metro and had the fine time of 10.3 in 100-yard dash.

Bill Mauer, 6-1, 208, Belleville, Ill. (West 23). One of Missouri's metropolitan selection also was a unanimous all-state pick in Illinois.

Dan McDonough, 5-10, 180, Riverview Gardens. All-state halfback was noted for his broken back running.

Mike McKee, 6-0, 205, Overland (Chaminade). Fullback and linebacker played in the Globe-Democrat all-star game.

Jeff Reiland, 6-0, 205, Godfrey, Ill. Reiland was a three-year starter at guard and linebacker for Alton High School.

Mack Rogers, 6-1, 195, Dallas, Texas (Richardson). Winner of all-district honors, Rogers was a tailback on offense, nose guard on defense.

Doug Romine, 6-1, 205, Centralia. Chosen to his district team, Romine played fullback and linebacker.

Chuck Roper, 6-2, 185, Brentwood. Regarded as the best passer in the St. Louis area in past several years, Roper won all-state honors as a quarterback. He also started in track.

Bob Schmitt, 6-2, 205, Imperial. Schmitt, a brother of Tiger star, Bill, played fullback for Crystal City.

Dave Shaw, 5-11, 190, Pittsfield, Ill. Shaw, a halfback and linebacker, won little state honors in Illinois.

Pleasant Smith Jr., 6-4, 205, Mexico, Mo. Smith played end in high school.

Rick Stotler, 6-1, 189, Bethalto, Ill. An Illinois star, Stotler shared St. Louis metro quarterbacking honors with Roper.

Rick Spica, 6-1, 185, St. Louis (Rosary). Spica was a high school end and defensive halfback.

Al Todd, 6-1, 240, St. Louis (Beaumont). Ranking in the top 10 per cent of his class academically, Todd also was named to the all-state grid teams.

John Ventresca, 5-10, 190, Pekin, Ill. Also ranking in upper 10 per cent, Venturi played both quarterback and defensive halfback.

Jim Walters, 5-10, 195, Manhattan, Kan. Walters, a linebacker, is regarded as an especially hard hitter.

Stan Wiltz, 6-1, 215, New Orleans (St. Augustine). Especially fast for a fullback, Wiltz can run the 100 in 10.1.

Bill Callahan Honored On 20th Anniversary

By JOE RHEIN
(Reprinted from the Columbia Missourian)

Bill Callahan, BJ '47, the unsung pioneer of Missouri sports since 1948, was the object of attention at a surprise dinner in St. Louis.

The Tigers' sports information director was honored for his 20th year on the job by the "Friends of Bill Callahan," associates and former employees of his Rothwell Gym office.

"This is the greatest thing that could have happened to me," Callahan said. "This night will stay with my family for a long time."

Organizers of the dinner were four of Callahan's former student helpers—Joe Pollack, now publicity director of the St. Louis Football Cardinals; Joe Blair, publicity head of the Washington Redskins; Dave Lipman, sports writer for the St. Louis Post-Dispatch; and Bob Dixon, of Southwestern Bell Telephone in Chicago.

In December, the organ contactors, friends of Callahan throughout the country and requested a cash donation for a present.

"The response was terrific," Pollack said. "Of the 125 organizations and people we contacted, 123 responded."

"Bill is one of the few college publicity men who is trusted by both the coaches and the news media," said Missouri Athletic Director Dan Devine, "and that is not easy to achieve."

Callahan praised the Tiger coaches who "have made my job easy. I'm just a guy who enjoys his job all the time."

73 Points Scored In Spring Wup

By DICK WADE
(Reprinted from the Kansas City Star)

Tradition has it that University of Missouri spring football games are low-scoring. Tradition was shattered this year when the Black club, built around the No. 1 defense, riddled the Gold, which features the first offensive group, 48-25.

Sturdy Greg Cook, the Black tailback who ran into the end zone three most times and gave the 6,700 fans their most exciting moment with a picture-book 87-yard T.D. run.

It was a tailback's day as the Tigers staved their newly installed 1 formation all the way. Cook carried 24 times for 77 yards; Slaggers took it 21 times and gained 143.

It was the most significant development of the game was that M.U. did not have as much defensive depth as its fans believed. This game was decided by the Gold defense's inability to handle the Black attack.

The Gold defense started eight sophomores-to-be, and not one Gold defender played a down last season in what now is his specialty. As Coach Dan Devine put it, "The sophomores were the back-up defensive men next fall. One who might crack the starting line-up, however, is Lynn Cox, a 219-pound sophomore tackle. He was voted the game's outstanding defender."

Lack of experience could not be the plea of the Gold offensive line—and it did not help. As Coach Dan Devine put it after the game, "This simply was not

MU Climbs Out of All-Sports Cellar

By RON PEMSTEIN

Stop the lamentations, this has been a helluva year for Missouri sports.

So what if the bowl committees snubbed us, football is everything. It just pays for everything.

Look at the bright side. We got ourselves a fire-breathing back: ball coach who can win with a squad of pygmies and beat K.U. too. We got a 4-7 Dixie and the flag the week before Garnett Phelps and Jon Slaggers combined to give us our first grid win over Nebraska in five years.

Most importantly, this was the year Ol' Mizzou finally renounced its permanent hold on the cellar in the Big Eight all-sports race.

In the past, the excuse the higher-ups gave for our poor showing in the all-sports standing was that we didn't have a gymnastics team. That means we receive an automatic tie for last with Oklahoma State.

Well we still don't have a gymnastics team and we won't have one until they put $5000 toward construction of the new fieldhouse instead of scale models.

Unless I miss my bet, the improvement may have resulted from better coaching and most importantly, more dollar bills in those coaches' hands.

It's no coincidence that the basketball team has its cellar position when it got a new coach. It's no coincidence that the swimming and wrestling teams shot to a hairbreadth of first division when their coaches got some money to recruit talent.

New York Playwright Got Start at MU

By BEATRICE BERG
(Reprinted from the St. Louis Post Dispatch)

Once upon a time, back in 1951, there was this 21-year-old boy from the Bronx named Bruce Jay Friedman who was living in Belleville, Ill., because he was in the Air Force and stationed at Scott Field. He was transferred—probably because he had a degree in journalism from the University of Missouri—to the Buder Building in St. Louis to be on the staff of an Air Force magazine soberly titled "Air Training."

Then Bruce got a great idea. He would write Air Force fables. The first line of one of these stories, just to give you an idea, was "Once upon a time there was a fairy sergeant."

"I got away with lunatic stuff like that for a year and a half and wrote eight before I got shot down," civilian Friedman said the other day as he puffed at a skinny cigar and sipped cognac at Sardi's East. A block away, at the uptown off-Broadway New Theatre, his first play, "Scuba Duba," billed as "a tense comedy," opened in October and is now "the hottest ticket in town."

These days, anyone who wants to hear Friedman's lunatic stuff on stage has to mail an undated check, list six alternate dates or leave the date open, or merely specify the day of the week for any time until next Sept. 29.

"Scuba Duba" is an unsettling experience. It does seem at first to be sheer lunacy, a mad farrago having to do with a guy (white American) who wanders around a rented chateau on the French Riviera in pajamas and sandals, sometimes wearing a muffler, in a security blanket, or brandishing a huge scythe. He writes blind copy for a living and thinks his wife is having an affair with a scuba diver (Negro American).

You've barely taken your seat before the belly laughs begin. Those first yocks are pure, innocent merriment. Like the one about the former tenant, Irving de Gaulle, the General's brother who, it is whispered, tells Charles exactly what to do.

Friedman doesn't let you relax for long. Pretty soon the laughs come at you like rabbit punches but you're not quite sure whether you're going to explode into howls of laughter or tears.

As the play ends and the hero is bellowing his last desperate pleas and wild threats to his wife, who is going off not with the black scuba diver but with a black poet, you suddenly make a blinding discovery. This is a tragedy of human loneliness and desperation, a ruthless dissection of the violence of the hostility between whites and blacks in this country and of the thinness of the veneer of liberalism, with peripheral whacks at motherhood and psychoanalysis.

The ambivalence you feel is no accident. Friedman deliberately chooses to smack his audiences in the face because he believes the theater ought to be a nervous and dangerous place to be.

"I've watched the audiences at 'Scuba Duba,'" he says. "You can feel their temperature rise. They wriggle. It's good to see it. It's needed, and it's needed so bad. The machinery at work in the play is to take people by the throat and make them aware of things they haven't been aware of."

"I wrote 'Scuba Duba' because, as with most serious writers, I have race on my mind," Friedman said. "But I wanted to look at the issues through a different filter. The last thing I wanted to do was to say, 'Isn't it awful what we're doing to Negroes?' That's merely writing a pamphlet, and there have been plenty of those."

Although he believes every serious work is in a sense cathartic for the author, he says, "I'm still not at peace about race." He did find a kind of peace, though, with the writing of his first novel, "Stern," published in 1963. "In 'Stern,'" he says, "I dealt with the problem of being Jewish and what it meant to me. In a sense I laid it to rest with myself, and I've been comfortable on that score since writing it."

That first novel was a critical success but it sold only about 5000 copies. "I didn't make a cent on it but it must have sold to the right 5000 people," Friedman says. It became one of those literary phenomena—the "underground" book that gathers force by word of mouth. Friedman says "Stern" is still selling and has had as much or more success than "A Mother's Kiss," his second novel, which was the best seller list for nine glorious weeks.

"Stern" was dedicated "To My Darling Ginger," who was Ginger Howard who Bruce first laid eyes on at a dance at the University of Missouri and although they weren't introduced, he found out who she was.

"I filed her away in my head," he says. "She was somebody I was building up the courage to call."

Bruce found the courage to call Ginger, and in 1954 she became Mrs. Bruce Jay Friedman. With their three young sons the Friedmans now live in Great Neck, Long Island, a suburb of New York.

"This one (Scuba Duba) announced itself to me as a play, not as a novel," he said. "It happens in one evening, in one place and there was no reason to get out of the set. I wrote it as fast as I could get it down. But of course it's costly to write that fast. It was more an idea for a play than a play, and when you write that fast you have to do more rewriting."

Journalism Educators Confer in Far East

Howard R. Long (center) recently spent five weeks touring the Far East at which time he was honored in Taiwan and named an academician of the China Academy Long, who is chairman of the department of Journalism at Southern Illinois University in Carbondale, received his journalism degree from the University in 1930. He also received an AB in History, MA in English literature in 1941 and Ph.D. in rural sociology from the University in 1949. At left is Milton J. Shieh also a School of Journalism graduate (BJ '66) and now deputy secretary general of the Kuo Min Tang Party on Taiwan and dean of the School of Journalism at the College of Chinese Culture. At right is Hsin Yeh, director of Taiwan's Central News Agency.

Does Anyone Remember Isadore J. Berkowitz?

What's happened to Isadore Julius Berkowitz? He attended the University for three years in Arts and Science and pre-medicine and then left in 1929.

As Isadore Berkowitz, he no longer exists. But as Ira Jay Berk he is a retired MD living in Tucson, Ariz. and a member of the first violin section of the Tucson Symphony Orchestra, under Gregory Miller, previously assistant to Leonard Bernstein.

"After graduating from University of Kansas Medical School, my name was officially changed," Berk wrote the Alumnus. "Thus, no one knows who I am."

He continues, "While a student in Columbia, I was with the orchestra in the Daniel Boone Hotel for two years." That was the beginning of his violin interests which he took up again in 1963 after tiring of the routine retirement of golf and bridge.

In addition to doing post-graduate thoracic surgery at the Mayo Clinic, Berk was in private practice and then a lieutenant colonel and chief surgeon of a 550 bed-hospital at Ft. Clark, Tex. Anyone wanting to contact Ira Berk (and he probably wouldn't even mind being called Isadore) can write him at 8149 E. Baker Dr., Carriage Hill, Tucson.

Dr. INKS FRANKLIN, AM, D. Ed. '48, was elected to a three-year term on the board of directors of the Silver Corp., in Columbia, where he lives at 906 Westover.

Dallasans Know Her Through Her By-line

One afternoon in late February, Dallasans might have been surprised to see a woman riding with the dog catcher. What was she doing? Mrs. William T. Callaway was just researching a story on the plight of city dogs and of city people who love them for the Dallas Morning News. "The favorite part of my work is the occasional escape from heavy subjects and the chance to do a light feature," says the former Helen Bullock, a 1938 graduate of the University School of Journalism. Late last summer the staff writer did a feature on Dallas' favorite comic strip, Peanuts.

But for the most part, Mrs. Callaway is known for her medical writing and awards. In 1947, she became the first Texas newspaper reporter to specialize in medical writing. Since then, she has won national awards from the Arthritis Foundation (including a citation this past December), the American Society of Anesthesiology, from the American Medical Association, Texas Medical Association, Dallas Hospital Council and Texas Association for Retarded Children, to mention just a few.

How did she get into the specialized career of medical writing? Actually it was not by wish, but some things like this turn out for the better. "My adolescent dream was to originate my own comic strip and become a syndicated cartoonist." Her college was study journalism along with art and get a start on a newspaper. But at 20, rheumatoid arthritis damaged her hands making an artistic career impossible. But her artistic talent wasn't really too much anyway.

Beginning with the Dallas News advertising art department in 1938, she spent five years doing layouts, writing copy and illustrating ads. Several years were spent doing cartoons for several staff-written columns and retouching photos. Then in 1946 the World War II veterans returned to their jobs, and Mrs. Callaway was moved to the city desk as a reporter.

"About this time a national survey surprised a lot of editors by indicating that medical news ranks right at the top, with police news, in readership. Because of my enforced long-distance adventure with arthritis, I knew lots of doctors and had picked up a good bit of medical information.

Today although much of her work is still in science, the "special staff writer," her title, also devotes time to in-depth features and series in the areas of education, art, music, conservation, urban problems, and transportation. The field is limitless: "I choose some of my own assignments, get others from the managing editor, and many ideas from our readers."

Appearing usually on the paper's Showcase page on weekends, the lengthy stories are accompanied with two to three pictures. This fall there were: Adventures on Turtle Creek trail, the honors program at El Centro College, the history of Dallas' Dealey Plaza and philanthropy drives for hospitals and universities.

Mrs. Callaway realized how really well known her by-lines had become in 1962 when her name changed. "My friends and readers believed my by-line would forever remain Helen Bullock." Her husband, an old classmate from San Angelo High School and San Angelo (Tex.) Junior College, is terribly proud of his wife's ability and career.

Still working fulltime, Mrs. Callaway has had to limit some of her travel, but research for a feature usually takes a good week, and a series, longer. "What I'm trying to do is a cross between ordinary news stories and a well-researched magazine story."

A woman riding in a milk truck? Don't worry, it's just Mrs. Callaway doing a story on Dallas dairy problems.

Washington, D. C. Sets Scene For Fascinating Career

By PEGGY PHILLIPS

How does Jane Simmons account for the glamorous, activity-packed life she has lead since moving to Washington, D.C. six and a half years ago? "I've just been lucky," says the petite brunette.

This University of Missouri graduate's career in the nation's capital has been a variegated tapestry of jobs interlacing public relations, national political campaigning, public education financing, newspaper and magazine reporting, government service, and honors by her fellow Missourians. Five-foot four, Jane was green-selected Missouri's National Cherry Blossom Festival Princess in 1963. Later, she was one of the founders of the national sorority of former princesses, and currently is a member of the board of directors of the organization.

Several years ago Mexico, Mo., honored his hometown girl with an award for Outstanding Achievement; the previous year, her father, Art Simmons, the nationally-known saddle-horse trainer, received the same award.

Asked if her college education, and her B.S. in secondary education in particular, contributed to her attainments and recognition, Jane quickly explains that she has found her MU education "invaluable," but she adds with an elfish grin, "I have never had to show my certificate."

Reminded of her graduation, she related how she drove to Columbia from Mexico with her mother and brother on that hot one night in 1961, wearing a pair of white high-heeled shoes in a papersack, and how she slipped into her cap and gown and heels and sat coolly through the entire graduation exercise while perspiration dripped from the faces of her fellow classmates. She explained that immediately upon returning the cap and gown to the Missouri Store and having her degree framed, she and her mother and brother commenced an 18-hour drive to Texas to join her father who was at a horse show in Houston.

Presently, 29-year-old Jane is the assistant to the executive director of the Presidential Commission on Travel. The commission, appointed by the President last November, is charged with improving methods for substantially increasing the flow of foreign visitors to our country, and thereby decrease the travel deficit in the U.S. balance of payments. She is the "on loan" to the commission last December by the Treasury Department's Congressional Relations Office, of which she had been a staff member since April 1967.

Jane remembers she arrived in Washington with only 40 pounds of clothing "and not even a teacup." She has comfortably and attractively furnished her efficiency apart with "things that struck my fancy," such as sink-down chairs, rag rugs, reproductions of paintings by Van Gogh and Degas, French lamps, horse show trophies, autographed pictures of well-known political figures, and books of every size and description.

She lives in a block-long apartment house just four blocks north of the White House with a magnificent view of one of the small enchanting parks for which Washington is famous. In the center of this particular park stands a giant statue of a general on a snorting gallant steed. The statue is one of the main reasons I selected this apartment. It reminds me of home, the stables, the horses."

A major reason she never moved from her apartment

is its proximity to the jobs she has held. "I have always walked except when I worked for a short time on Capital Hill." She rapidly ticked them off: "I was only two blocks from my first job with the national public relations firm of Ruder & Finn; four blocks from my next job with the Democratic National Committee; three blocks from the offices of the National Committee for Support of the Public Schools; seven blocks from my reporting job in the National Press Building; and now I am five blocks from the Treasury Building."

A hearty burst of laughter answered a query as to whether she ever became lonely. "I don't have time to be," she observed. "There aren't enough hours in my day as it is. There is always the play I haven't seen, the book I haven't read, the friend I haven't written, the errand I haven't run. And Washington, the vortex of our country, draws stimulating and interesting people from the entire world community, and through my work I have been fortunate to be in contact with them both professionally and socially."

Jane also is an active member of social and professional organizations, including The Sigma Phi, the national society for women in journalism, and the D.C. Chapter of the University of Missouri Alumni Association. In addition, she has been a by-line feature writer since 1960 for her hometown newspaper, the Mexico Evening Ledger.

"But how did it all begin? Jane revealed that the trail to Washington began at "Ole Mizou".

"It all began one night in 1960 when I decided to attend a campus Young Democrats meeting. It turned out to be the night the group voted to disband and to re-form as the Youth for Symington for President. I volunteered to help in any way possible."

She ended up the national convention director, the third highest office in the national youth organization. The position required that she go to Los Angeles two weeks in advance of the Democratic National Convention. She went planning to be gone three weeks, but she stayed for five months, working in California for the Kennedy-Johnson ticket.

"It was a never-to-be forgotten experience," says Jane. "If I had decided to go to the movies that particular night, rather than to the YD meeting, you can see what I would have missed." Maintains Jane: "It was sheer luck!"

Peggy Phillips, a former student of the University School of Journalism, served as associate director of the Journalism's 50th anniversary in 58-59 for 13 years. Mrs. Phillips was the news bureau at Stephens College and director of public relations at Christian College for five years. In 1964 she moved to Washington, D.C. where her varied activities included a position with national headquarters of the American Alumni Council and the American College Public Relations Association, with the National Ballet, the Children to Children Foundation and the Socioprofessional Research Center. As a member of the Missouri Society of Washington, she became involved in the Conference of State Societies, and in publicizing the annual Cherry Blossom Festival she became acquainted with Jane Simmons. Mrs. Phillips now resides in Allentown, Pa., where she is director of information at Cedar Crest College.

Alumna Works As KC's Youngest Stockbroker

With an ever increasing number of women investing today in stocks and bonds, it's a natural that there should also be a new type of stockbroker—the business-minded woman.

Helene Waters, or Laney as she is called, is just one of the new breed of women financial wizards. If you had known her at M.U. you might be surprised at her new career. In Columbia she spent most of her time in Hill Hall where she received a BS ED in 1963.

What got her into the business of buying and selling securities? After a summer job with a broker and a year in her thoughts about teaching, she began to change. "It resulted in my abandoning, at least for the time being, my plan to teach."

For many people it might be hard to imagine the thrill of the stock and bond business. But once involved people rarely disavow its excitement and fun. "I had no previous experience in the field, but the work was fascinating and interesting. It still is! A girl could go into a lot of things today, but I don't think anyone could find the constant challenge we have in this work."

Laney today at 25 is the youngest registered broker in Kansas City. She works for B. C. Christopher and Co., members of the New York Stock Exchange. And Laney is in a specialized field of securities that very few men even know about—puts and calls.

"During my training period the partner in charge of the option department needed an assistant," Laney relates. "After talking to him I realized that the option business was still in its infancy and I could see the possibilities for the future." Options present a whole new concept in investing. Specifically it means an individual buys from another the privilege of acquiring a certain security at a price within a specified period of time. The transactions run into the large money figures.

And money certainly is one lure for people contemplating this field. As the Kansas City Star reported in a feature, "At least two Kansas City women in the business depend on incomes from security dealings of more than $35,000 a year." But hard work and pressure are the prices paid.

"For me there is quite a bit of work after hours. I find it necessary to constantly do research work as well as read as much as I can in order to be aware of current news or anything that might effect the market."

Typical requirements to be a registered representative of the New York Stock Exchange are training courses of about six months in length, correspondence courses from the New York Institute of Finance and three separate exams (the New York Stock Exchange exam, the National Association of Security Dealers exam and a state exam.)

What's the public's reaction to a stockbroker heels and a dress or the feminine voice that answers the telephone call for financial advice? As the Kansas City Star reports, sometimes the reaction is negative. Some people still prefer the advice from a deep-voiced, suited broker. But more and more women stockbrokers are being looked to with respect for their competence. Or, "Oh, I'm so glad you're a woman because then I don't mind feeling so ignorant of the market and all that special terminology."

Reportedly today the New York Stock Exchange has some 2,400 women representatives (out of a total 41,000). But perhaps just as significant or more so is the fact that women have surpassed men in number (men still own more capital in the market) to where they today are approximately 51 female holders to every 49 men. And Laney Waters is also one of those investors. "Being in the business I do make investments in the market. It seems to me that investments in the country's industries is not only beneficial but an interesting way to plan for the future."

Jeani Wilson—Youthful Director of Christian College Information

By STEVE WYNN

(Reprinted from the Columbia Missourian)

A person is the product of his environment. Mrs. Rick R. (Jeani) Wilson is both proof and a contradiction of that thought.

It is not surprising that Mrs. Wilson is working toward an A.M. in journalism after receiving her B.J. from the University in 1966. Nor is it surprising that she was assistant women's editor of the Columbia Missourian and news laboratory and research assistant in the School of Journalism.

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herschel Gaddy, preceded her at the University; her mother (the former Donna Nella Stiles GN '41) is a registered nurse and her father (BS Agr '41) is

It also follows that she is a member of Theta Sigma Phi, national women's journalism fraternity, and Kappa Tau Alpha, national journalism scholastic honorary—for her entire family, like a vaudeville clan, lists similar credits. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herschel Gaddy, preceded her at the University; her mother (the former Donna Nella Stiles GN '41) is a registered nurse and her father (BS Agr '41) is lish at Hickman High School in Columbia this fall. Her present address is 4822 N. Winn Rd., Kansas City.

HUME (Stan) WHITE, AB, was promoted to first lieutenant in the U.S. Air Force. He is a personnel officer at Othello Air Force Station, Wash., and is a member of the Aerospace Defense Command.

RICHARD D. WINDSOR, AB, was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Army upon graduation from Officer Candidate School at Ft. Benning, Ga. He has been assigned as a test officer on the Army Infantry Board at Ft. Benning.

F. TOWNE COMEE, BJ, formerly an announcer for KFRU Radio in Columbia, has joined NBC television network central sales as a sales administrator, which entails coordinating efforts of television sales departments in Chicago and New York. He and his wife have one daughter.

SARAH DODGE, BS Ed., is teaching English at Hickman High School in Co-working toward an A.M. in field crops and soils.

Her brother, Jamie, studies agricultural chemistry at the University and her husband has just begun Law School. Her father-in-law, Ray L. Wilson, ranked third of the University's graduating engineers in 1947. This impressive common interest creates an incentive which, one semester, produced a family total of 40 credit hours of A.

As part of such a record it's no wonder Mrs. Wilson recently was named director of Christian College's Office of Public Information, after only seven months as a news and publications writer in that office.

What is surprising, a skeleton in an otherwise immaculate closet, is Mrs. Wilson's early education. It's a wonder how she got there as she is today after six years at the Sulphur Springs Grammar School.

Six miles north of Marshall, Mo., there was a one-room school with a coal stove—without running water. It since has been condemned, but a short 15 years ago Mrs. Wilson was one of its nine pupils.

She carried in coal for the stove which seldom generated enough heat to allow students to remove their coats, was locked out by the teacher to play baseball half the day and even taught some of the younger children when she was in the seventh grade.

"We had none of the 'mities' like art or music," she says. "Because of the combination of grades I never had third grade English. I didn't know what a verb or adverb was until I was in high school."

But Mrs. Wilson knows what a verb is today as she produces Christian's weekly quarter magazines, news releases and special articles. She already has begun plans to revamp Christian's public relations program.

lumbia and is working toward her master's degree at the University.

Shorter Line Is Chosen

(Reprinted from the K. C. Times)

Sen. Richard M. Webster (R-Canthage) gives this explanation of why he became a lawyer instead of fulfilling his boyhood ambition to be a journalist:

He'd completed his first two years at the University, he said, when World War II called him into the military as an enlisted man.

It seemed like all I did was stand in lines," he said. "Lines for food, for shots, for clothing, lines for everything."

"When I got back to M.U. I was standing in line to enroll in the journalism school. A friend walked by who had completed his enrollment, explaining the line was shorter at the law school."

"So I got in the shorter line."

Plan Now For 1968 Homecoming

It may be only June, but plans are well underway for the 1968 Homecoming to be held the weekend of Nov. 9. That's the date of the Missouri-Iowa State football game.

Graduates from the classes of 1928 and 1943 will hold their 40th and 25th class reunions respectively. Both groups already have rooms reserved in the Memorial Student Union for luncheons on Saturday and dinners at the Tiger Hotel after the game.

For all alumni there will be the usual open houses in the various schools and colleges on campus Saturday morning, a reception in the mezzanine of the Tiger Hotel from 6 until 9 after the game, followed by a dance in the hotel's ballroom where the University Studio band will play, led by Larry Southerland.

An alternative for the evening will be the current Broadway hit, "You Know I Can't Hear You When the Water's Running." Some of the critics' comments for these four-plays-in-one have been: "Wonderfully comic, beautifully touching. Best of the season," "A comic look at sex and marriage."

In addition the annual M-Men's Luncheon will be held, and an effort is being made to bring back the old football teams from 1939 through 1942.

This year's student homecoming committee has chosen the theme: "Tiger Ames: To Still the Storm." As always, homecoming decorations will carry out the theme for Friday night's viewing. The annual pep rally is "Cyclone Chowdown," and the Saturday-morning parade will be "Moonshine March." Saturday evening the student dance is "Twister Tamer."

For weekend reservations or for more information contact Don Faurot, assistant director of alumni activities, 306 Jesse, Columbia.
