Enrollment Skyrockets To 20,000

Fifty years ago enrollment figures reached 3,134. In 1949-50, 11,161 students were seeking higher education at the University.

Today, enrollment on the Columbia campus has skyrocketed to more than 20,000. Students on the other three campuses swell total University enrollment to 41,000.

In 1917, the hub of all University activity centered around Jesse Hall. Today Jesse is the center of the administrative organization only.

Construction of four new buildings underscores the vast expansion of the Columbia campus. The Space Sciences Research Center with a multi-purpose flexible laboratory and office facility will be erected on the west side of Providence Road in the University's Research Park to the southwest of the football stadium.

The Mathematical Science Building is under way to the east of the swimming pool on what was formerly Rollins Field. The Medical Sciences Building project calls for increasing the height of the east end of the building, now four stories, to seven stories; and increasing by five stories each two wings of the building on the north side from the present two

Homecoming Weekend Set for Nov. 10 and 11

Fifty-six years ago the fall tradition of homecoming began at the University in a game against Kansas.

This year the Tigers play Kansas State, the first time the two teams have met at Columbia during homecoming. Missouri has beaten the Wildcats nine straight years and hopes to make it an even 10 on Nov. 11.

The Tail of Two Kitties sets this year's theme. Don Faurot is in charge of homecoming activities for the Alumni Association, and Ken Baughman is student chairman.

Alumni Membership Drive Reaches 17,000

Membership in the Alumni Association climbed to 17,000 last month as the Tiger Hunt moved into its fall season. Goal of the ambitious program is 20,000 members by Jan. 1, an increase of more than 5,000 from a year earlier.

The membership committee's summer project generated considerable interest, many new members—and some confusion.

This is how it worked. Each active alumnus was sent the names of three inactive alumni and asked to write them, urging their membership in the association. Often the names were of persons living many miles from the active member. However, this was the program's design. Since the appeal was to out-of-state alumni only, Missouri members had to write persons in other states, so there was no attempt to match members and prospects by residence. In any event, the project worked well.

Sample letters were provided, but some alumni put the appeal in their own words:

"In the midst of trying to sell the house and preparing to move," wrote Mary Ann Leonard '58 to her prospect, "I received a letter from the Alumni Association of the University of Missouri, containing your name and two others, and asking either my husband or myself to write and ask you to join the Association.

"My first thought was to pitch the letter and get on with the closet cleaning, but second thoughts prompted me to get out the typewriter."

"When we move, we expect to renew some old acquaintances and make new friends through the local chapter of the Association, as we have done in St. Louis. If it had not been for the education my husband received at the University, he would probably not have been equipped to receive the promotion that is causing our move. So I guess we owe the University three letters."

"Your $4 dues give you the Alumnus Magazine, that keeps you up on the constant changes and progress at M. U. and lets you know what "good old so-and-so" is doing now. On request you receive Dan Devine's newsletter and keep up on the Tigers. You are also automatically a member of your local alumni chapter. Money from the dues also goes to any number of worthwhile campus projects.

"We have enjoyed our membership in this organization. I think you would too."

"This month another mass mailing will go to all non-members, urging them to catch themselves if no active alumnus has been successful in bagging them.

Mitch Murch: St. Louis' Fan for All Seasons

By RICH KOSTER, BJ '60

(Story and photos reprinted from the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.)

Mitch Murch is a fan for all seasons. A floating fixture on the local sports scene.

It happens in St. Louis. Mitch is here. He's a sure spectator. If there were a Hall of Fame for fans, Murch would be its Babe Ruth.

In the past 20 years, he has missed only five Missouri U. home football games. He's seen the Hawks approximately 400 times in their dozen years of baseball in St. Louis. He's missed the football Cardinals at home just twice. And he annually views 40 or more Cardinal baseball games at Busch Stadium.

Murch's business is a rag-to-riches success story. Literally. Fourteen years ago, he was a newly-minted Missouri graduate (BS BA '52) peddling janitor products. One day, a customer complained about the difficulties in getting competent porters to clean his building.

Murch had a solution: "Let me clean your office." For the next six months, he continued to sell by day and he swept floors, emptied trash and washed windows at night. Then, with the experience, he started the Modern Maintenance Co., now the largest office cleaning service in St. Louis—with more than 450 employees.

A 39-year-old father of four, Murch pursues the full life. Indeed, he seems almost to run it into the ground. "One of my major problems," he admits "is that I can't do anything in moderation. I have to go all out."

Besides his thriving business and his addiction to sports, he is actively involved in a plethora of professional, university, civic and social organizations.

"I seem to have a meeting every night," he says. Murch's home is a showplace in St. Louis County. Set on ten acres, it is furnished almost entirely with antiques of his interests—and boasts a menagerie.

There are five horses, three turkeys, 14 ducks, a heifer, a pig named Sophia, three cats, four dogs, six rabbits and assorted snakes, frogs, turtles and pigeons.

There used to be a peacock, a parrot and a monkey. "But the pig ate the peacock," Murch says. "All but the wings. And the cat ate the parrot."

And the monkey? "He died a natural death."

It doesn't take much to turn Murch on. He's an enthusiastic, gregarious individual who responds instantly to people and ideas. But sports are his passion.

"I was a third-string football player at U. City High," he says, "and I've never gotten over it. I'm a frustrated athlete."

Frustrated, he may be. Restrained, he definitely is not. He's an uninhibited cheerleader at Hawk basketball games, arguing with officials, urging on the players, gesticulating and exulting with the tide of play. His North Court seat seems only the place he drapes his coat.

Before his professional schedule became so heavily trafficked, Murch made frequent road trips with the Hawks. He is in charge of "Nights" honoring Charlie Share, Jack McMahon, Bob Pettit and Slater Martin, and he's currently president of The Buddy Fund, which dispenses sports equipment to needy area youngsters.

Since he refuses to miss either Missouri football or Hawk home games, he frequently makes a mad 125-mile dash up Highway 40 from St. Louis to Columbia on autumn Saturday afternoons. And when the game there is over, he races back to St. Louis.

Twice a year, he organizes rollicking bus excursions to Tiger grid encounters. On one of these a few years ago, Murch's unassuming passengers found themselves at a Hawk exhibition in Eldon, Mo., on Saturday night.

"Everyone thought we were going to Jefferson City for dinner," Murch laughs. "Only the bus driver and University of Missouri Alumni should be congratulated for another year of financial support for their Alma Mater.

As most of you know, since 1956 the University Development Fund has encouraged mass participation as a sound base for providing "that margin of excellence" which is supplied so tangibly by the gifts of University of Missouri Alumni and friends. Not only do these supporters enhance our academic, research and cultural advancements, but the support of your Alma Mater is measured by corporations and other agencies who don't automatically have the same feeling that you do for the University. Those of you who contribute to the University Development Fund Programs of your University should take great pride in the success you have helped the University achieve.

I am pleased to pass on the following statistics provided by the Office of Institutional Research sponsored by the National Association of State Universities and Land Grant Colleges and offices in Washington, D.C. in bulletin 107, dated Aug. 4, this report states that "Nine State Universities reported gifts of one million dollars or more from Alumni." Alumni of 42 other institutions also gave one million dollars or more to their Alma Maters.

University of Delaware	$6,746,456
University of California	3,571,073
University of Michigan	3,364,002
Virginia Military Institute	3,095,918
University of Illinois	2,901,705
University of Wisconsin	2,200,532
Ohio State University	1,914,464
University of Missouri	1,655,357
University of Kansas	1,407,457

The American Alumni Council's "Top 10" honor roll for annual giving and Alumni giving in 1965-66 included several public institutions. Your University of Missouri appeared on the list.

On the subject of private support for State Universities, some additional facts should be known by you. Today, nearly 50 per cent of all college students in this nation are enrolled in state colleges and universities. Six out of every 10 Ph.D.'s are awarded by these institutions. Yet across the country, state colleges and universities are receiving only 1.1 per cent of all contributions to higher education. There is no doubt that state institutions are showing gains in the receipt of voluntary gift support, but these gains are more than offset by the number of students such institutions are required to accept for their educational training. It might be of further interest to you to get some idea of how this voluntary support is used.

For Physical Plant	19.7%
For Basic Research	28.9%
Student Financial Aid	21.9%
Faculty Compensation	3.8%
Unrestricted Gifts	12.5%
Miscellaneous—other purposes	13.2%

Whether these nationwide percentages apply to your gifts to the University of Missouri has not been determined. I think it is of interest to note such a small percentage to faculty compensation, however. It would seem that increased voluntary support in the way of distinguished professorships to attract and retain the very top professors should be given some emphasis if a program is to be as well rounded as it should be.

Around the Lairs

with Jean Madden

As you can see in the Calendar of Events the Tigers are restless from New York to San Francisco with much of the activity being focused right here on the campus. And this doesn't even touch on planned activities in Berlin, or Seoul, Korea or India or even in St. Louis or Kansas City. Between now and the first snow, the voice of the Tiger will be heard throughout the land.

Much of continuing activity for the balance of 1967 will revolve around the closing phase of the big Tiger Hunt. Last spring there were fewer than 15,000 members, today there are 17,000 and by tomorrow, or sometime before Jan. 1, there will be 20,000. There will be that is, if the diligent efforts of membership chairman Garth Landis and his committee of Martha Collet, Bill Symon, Gene Trumble, Lloyd Turner and Bill Tyler have anything to say about it.

Other Alumni Association committees that have been particularly active during the summer include the Athletic Alumni Club, the 16-member, state-wide committee which concerns itself with improving Athletic Department programs. The six new members appointed by Alumni President, B. W. Robinson, met with the 10 veteran members on the campus Sept. 9 for luncheon at the training table, a business meeting, a close up look at the Missouri football team, and then dinner with Athletic Director Dan Devine and the members of all the coaching staffs.

The Awards Committee of Mitch March, Paul Doll, John Miller and chairman Dick Chamier met with President John Wear August 21 to discuss the long-range ramifications of the awards program for the total University.

The newest alumni staff member has changed gears with the same adaptability and same energy he showed five years ago when he gave up coaching for administrative responsibilities. Don Parout is hard at work, which will come as a surprise to no one, directing special events and immediate ones like Homecoming and long range ones like class reunions. His major responsibility is putting together an Associate's program for the University which will hopefully result in the establishment of a completely new support group.

The biggest event on the early fall schedule was the annual Leaders Meeting which was held on the campus on Sept. 23. Out of state alumni chairman, county alumni committee chairmen in Missouri, the officers of St. Louis and Kansas City chapters, the various standing committees of the Association, the board of directors and other special guests were guests of the Chancellor, Alumni President B. W. Robinson, took advantage of the occasion to discuss the alumni program for the year ahead.

To The Editor:

I arrived in Vietnam in April and was assigned to Pacific Exchange Service (PAEXE). I was transferred to Tuy Hoa to be the Sub Area Exchange Officer, where I have five different exchanges whose combined monthly sales average close to $1 million per month. As is true every place over here, I have plenty of work to keep me busy and more than my share of problems.

I've never been involved in any wars before, but I do know that this war or conflict or whatever you want to call it will have to go down in history as one of the most unique and different wars ever waged by man. The enemy is everywhere, and the hardest part is trying to determine who they are and where to look for them.

My sure hope that the "Fighting Tigers" have another outstanding football season. Believe me, I'll be pulling for them every inch of the way on their quest of that coveted Big 8 crown. After my army tour is over I want to get back for graduate work.

David Henner BS BA 1966

To The Editor:

This Tiger's membership, having lagged a little over a year ago, while I was attending a conference in Geneva, Switzerland, I really have been on the prowl for a good digestible reason to paw my way back into the U.M.A.A. I have just returned from attending another conference in Geneva and found this announcement (the appeal to join the Alumni Association). So taking a hitch in the conscience upon being confronted with such a coincidence, here I am seeking to circle my way back into the pride, (but that is for lions, isn't it?) So I guess what I really want to say is: it is with pride that I make tracks back into the air to come to rest with all the other wild animals.

Homecoming Weekend Set for Nov. 10 and 11

sorority house decorations are judged at 8 that evening.

Saturday morning features include various open houses in the divisional deans' offices and the parade, which proceeds through downtown Columbia and the campus, beginning at 9.

This year the 1942 class will hold its reunion, and in commemoration of the Women's Centennial, a special coffee hour for all returning women alumni members will be held in the Memorial Student Union from 9 until 10. The coffee hour is sponsored by the Association of Women Students, Panhellenic, Women's Residence Halls, Columbia Women Students and Mortar Board. They also will serve as hostesses.

The homecoming game (the Tigers have won 23 in the last 55) begins at 1:30 P.M. Half-time will feature the coronation of the 1967 homecoming queen, who will have toured the state with her two attendants the week before. And there will be Marching Mizzo's half-time band show.

This year's homecoming weekend comes to a close Saturday night with a dance at Rothwell Gymnasium and a concert in Jesse Auditorium.

University Day

Set for Seniors Of Area Schools

Welcome Missouri high school seniors and parents.

October 14 is the 10th Annual University Day Open House held traditionally to introduce seniors, parents and accompanying school officials to the opportunities of higher education at the University.

Visitors, who are expected to exceed last year's total of 4000, spend the day on their own seeing as many divisions, departments and facilities as they desire. Information centers will be located in the Memorial Union, Brady Student Commons, Arts and Science Building and the General Library Building.

Bus tours will be provided from 11:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. starting at the Memorial Union and the large ballroom of the Union will be open for parents to relax, sip coffee with faculty and student hosts and hostesses.

Besides visiting classrooms where instruction is taking place, experiencing laboratory experiments, exciting research and visiting displays and exhibits, non-academic departments and facilities will also be open. Included in these will be the offices of admissions and registration, student financial aids, testing and counseling, dean of students, and representatives of the Army, Navy and Air Force ROTC units.

Part of the purpose of University Day is to acquaint seniors with University life, to help them make a smoother transition the following year. One of the best ways to see what campus life is like will be to visit the Bingham Group of dormitories, a selected fraternity and sorority; the indoor-outdoor swimming pool; the A. P. Green Chapel, and the University Center. The Nuclear Reactor also will be open.

Entsminger Heads New Development Division

G. H. Entsminger, assistant to the president for development and executive director of the Alumni Association, was chosen vice president for University Development at a meeting of the Board of Curators Sept. 22.

The new division will encompass alumni relations, fund raising, and other volunteer organizations on all four campuses.

Although all development programs will emanate from the University level, they will be flexible enough to be adaptable to the needs of each campus.

Member of the Board of Curators since 1949 when he was appointed assistant director of alumni activities, Entsminger was named director two years later and in 1961 was given the additional responsibility of managing the student body assistant to the president in 1964.

Entsminger began his career in the era of the "do-it-yourself" alumni secretaries, and thereby gained first-hand experience in every phase of alumni and fund-raising work.

Later telephone campaigns in major out-of-state cities, similar to those held in St. Louis and Kansas City will be conducted by Association chapters with the help of 1100 former students. The student body president on the Columbia campus. These campaigns will be held in San Francisco, Los Angeles, Denver, New York, Washington, D.C., Minneapolis, Dallas, Houston, Chicago, Memphis, Miami, and New Orleans.

In Missouri a telephone appeal is set for Springfield, and additional individual county campaigns are scheduled.

Dr. Frederick C. Robbins Meeting Today's Challenge

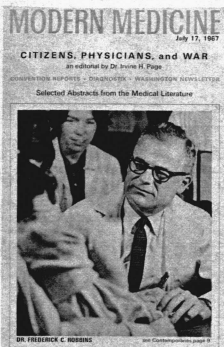

Are we meeting the challenge of present-day problems? Frederick C. Robbins, M.D., is.

Dr. Robbins, who is dean of the School of Medicine at Western Reserve University in Cleveland, was chosen by Modern Medicine magazine to set down his goals, some of his work and his appraisal of medicine today.

His goal for himself and his students is a sound understanding of the dynamics of life of both man and his environment. Dr. Robbins feels much of the challenge of present-day problems involves improving community health. "In order to cope with the many problems, health or otherwise, we need a discipline of understanding," Dr. Robbins states in the July cover story. "The personal, social, and psychological forces relating to a specific problem must be understood before we can focus our attention on the ultimate solution."

Dr. Robbins who received his AB and BS Med from the University in 1936 and 1938, went on to Harvard Medical School. In 1938 he received his D.S. from the University. He is responsible for investigations during World War II that led to the recognition of Q fever and its epidemiology.

And in 1954 he and two other men received the Nobel prize for discovery of a practical method of culturing polymelitis virus, which later made possible the production of polio vaccine. The public demand for medical service is ever increasing, Dr. Robbins notes.

I knew we were going to that basketball game." Murch came near sealing the Everest of any fan's career last January when he and some associates made an unsuccessful bid to buy the Hawks from Ben Kerner. The thought of Murch in Kerner's chair at mid-court must still send shudders through NBA President Walter Kennedy. To say nothing of the referees. To keep in trim for full participation as a spectator, he plays handball in the winter and softball twice weekly in the summer. And then there's Lost Trail.

The Murches and seven other couples own a 500-acre "retreat" on the Black River in the Ozarks, near Lesterville, Mo. "It's a great place," the Lost Trail president enthuses, "we hunt, fish, float the river and 'jeep.' That's real sport. There are hundreds of miles of jeep trails in the area.

"It's a great place for kids. They learn about nature and they learn to take care of themselves." The Murches spend at least one weekend a month "on retreat" at Lost Trail.

If it seems like Murch is perpetually at full throttle, it's really nothing new. As an undergraduate at Missouri, he hustled sandwiches and drinks to the fraternity and sorority houses on campus, earning the nickname, "Sam the Sandwich Man."

"I took a sharp cut in pay when I graduated," he says. "I was making good money in college."
While at Mizzou, Murch also persuaded a co-ed named Elaine Ting to marry him under a deferred honeymoon agreement. "We had one night at the Chase," he says, "and then it was back to Columbia."
It was seven years before they had our honeymoon."

Elaine Murch must love Mitch, because

Since the medical school is considered the fountain head of such services, it must attempt to fill this demand, while at the same time maintaining and strengthening the biological sciences to keep up with rapid technical advancements.

Aware that a concentration in one area can destroy other areas, Dr. Robbins tries to keep a balance between academic quality in the medical schools, fighting infectious diseases and giving the public the service they are demanding.

"Our major problems are the rapid increase in population and all that goes with it, and what we call the ecological crisis—what we are doing to our natural resources."

"We have to approach all these problems as they relate to the total pattern of well-being."

Capt. D. C. Davis Becomes Commander of Kitty Hawk

In May, while commanding the U.S.S. Montrose which was anchored in the Vung Tau Harbor, 35 miles southeast of Saigon, Navy Captain Donald C. Davis received new orders.

The captain, who spent his freshman year at the University in engineering and then transferred to the U. S. Naval Academy, became commander of the aircraft carrier Kitty Hawk.

Returning to San Diego, Davis spent the summer attending school in preparation for the new command which became effective in August.

He and his wife have a daughter and they live in Coronado, Calif. when Captain Davis is not making his home aboard ship.

Law Foundation Launches Drive For 'Excellence'

"We want the Law School to set the highest educational standards, to broaden its influence by educating more students, and to continue its tradition of leadership."

And so to accomplish these goals the "Margin for Excellence Program" is underway.

Adopted by the Law Foundation, alumni of the Law School dedicated to maintaining and improving the school, this fund-raising project is seeking $100,000 for "qualitative extras."

Alumni throughout the state have volunteered to solicit cash and pledges payable during 1967, 1968 and 1969 during this month and November. Among them are: Lowell L. Knipmeyer '32 of Kansas City, general chairman; and Jerry Rowan '40 of Kansas City, Kenneth Teasdale '18 of St. Louis, and A. D. Sappington '36 of Columbia, vice chairman. Alumni solicitation committees have been created in 12 areas of the state, each under a city or zone chairman. These are: John Henderson '31, Jefferson City; Karl Blumhard '40, Joplin; Clarence Woolsey '36, Springfield; Irvin Fane '28, Kansas City; Richmond Coburn '25, St. Louis; O. W. Watkins '29, St. Joseph; Scott Smith '66, Columbia; Ike Skelton Jr. '56, Northwest Missouri; Paul Hess Jr. '46, Northeast Missouri; Lynn Ewing Jr. '54, Southwest Missouri; W. W. Moore '50, South Central Missouri; and Jim Ed Reeves '51, Southeast Missouri.

Those "extras," which would not otherwise be available to students without the program include distinguished teachers, student scholarships, faculty aids, and visiting scholars and lecture programs.

80 Years Devoted To Education Fields

Eighty years were spent in teaching and school administration before retiring.

Those years represent the combined careers of Thomas S. Denham and his wife, Edna. He graduated in 1919 with a BS Ed. and in 1935 with a master of arts. The former Edna Peade Mowry received her BS Ed. in 1917.

The Denhams had identical work for 17 years when both were superintendents of Iowa schools. Denham served 25 years as superintendent in Missouri, Deep River and Chelsea. Mrs. Denham was superintendent of Powsheik County.

Now retired, they live in Webster, Ia. in a three-story mansion built in 1914 by a widely known cattle buyer, Charles Poland. Both Denhams keep busy, Mrs. Denham with sewing and Denham with his hobby of woodworking.

Dr. Pauline Garrett Retires from Home Ec

Twenty years of teaching home economics at the University ended last June for Dr. Pauline Garrett.

More than 200 colleagues, friends and former students gathered at a tea to honor the associate professor. In addition a $1500 scholarship fund was established in her name. She received assistance to deserving students in home economics and home economics education.

Dr. Garrett, who received her BS in 1939, her M.Ed. in 1946, and Ed.D. in 1948 from the University, was chosen recent president-elect of the department of home economics of the National Education Association. Previously she served as president of the Missouri Home Economics Association, the Missouri Vocational Association, Missouri Adult Education Association, Missouri Association of Superintendents of Missouri Schools, and of the Columbia Branch of American Association of University Women.

She and her husband moved to Boulder, Colo. where she is working for the U. S. Office of Education as a program specialist.

she hates sports. "She couldn't care less about going to games," her husband admits.

Perhaps Murch's finest hour as an active fan was the occasion he out-talked Cassius Clay. Murch was an NFL "Baby Sitter" during the Great Pro Grid War and his "babys" was Missouri's much-sought tackle, Francis Peay.

Peay's final college game was the Tigers' Sugar Bowl engagement two seasons ago. So Murch went to New Orleans in a dual role—as an M.U. super-fan and also as the NFL's "sitter" for Peay.

Also on hand was the Kansas City Chiefs' Lamar Hunt, who brought along heavyweight champion Clay to speak for the AFL.

Murch and Clay had about equal time with the recruit, but the champ was over-matched. He didn't lay a word on Mitch and Peay signed a rich contract with the New York Giants.

International Prestige Added By University

During the latter part of the summer, the Columbia campus added to its international prestige.

It entertained delegations from Brazil, Asia, Africa, and South America at four different conferences and seminars; it had a German parliamentarian as a guest; and it dispatched nine faculty members to international conferences abroad.

President and Mrs. John C. Weaver were among participants at the 94th Wilton Park International relations conference in Sussex, England; former President and Mrs. Elmer Ellis are spending four months in Colombia as educational consultants. Meanwhile, Dr. John H. Lander returned to the surgery faculty after a year of study in England.

Faculty members participating in international meetings included Dr. Charles Gehke, agricultural chemistry, in Japan; Dr. Hilario Ando, surgery, in Honduras; Dr. Ian Thompson, surgery, in Europe; Dr. Robert L. Jackson, Dr. Richard E. Guthrie, and Dr. D. Y. N. Murthy, pathology, in Sweden; Dr. Wallace E. Franck, statistics, in Canada; and Dr. Keewhan Choi, statistics, in Australia.

Herb Bunker Returns To Coaching Football

"Once the coaching virus gets in your blood, you're not much good for anything else."

That was Herb Bunker's explanation this week, as the 66-year-old Tiger football athlete and coach, now retired, agreed to help Coach Bob Frala tour his second freshman football squad at Mizou. Eighteen Tiger yearlings began workouts Sept. 21.

The 66-year-old Bunker, a Phi Kappa scholar during his competitive career at M.U. in the early '20s, is coaching the offensive ends and working with the young players. He began his coaching career with the same Tiger freshmen as head man in 1923. Then came coaching terms at Auburn, the University of Florida, and Culver-Stockton in Canton, Mo., before "Bunk" returned to his alma mater as "B" Team football coach under Don Faurot in 1937.

Bunker was a varsity assistant under Faurot and C. G. Simpson from 1940-45, bowing out after the '45 Cotton Bowl season to handle administrative jobs at M.U. until his retirement in June, 1965. He was recipient of the Alumni Association Distinguished Service Award in 1966.

Campus Enrollment Increases to 20,000 stories. A livestock center is being erected in the southeast area of the campus between Ashland Gravel and Rollins Street.

What used to be hectic hours of registering now often turns into frantic days of getting class schedules figured out. While the president used to be able to meet informally with most of the students, today he is lucky if he can shake 100 students in an hour of the fall open houses.

But the University continues to make its students feel a part of the campus. New students, both freshman and transfers, were required to attend four days of orientation programs, ranging from bus and library tours, the formal convocation in Brewer Field House, department open houses to programs on "How to Make Grades in College."

And the traditional Merry-Go-Round will bring together all student campus activities on Oct. 3 to encourage participation and invite all members into clubs, committees and councils.

The 16-member Alumni Athletic Council got a first-hand preview of the 1967 Tigers Sept. 9 as the guest of the Athletic Department at a closed scrimmage in Memorial Stadium. Later the group met with the coaching staffs of all sports at a dinner. Chairman of the council is Bud McClaren of St. Louis, who also serves on the University's Athletic Committee. The other alumni representative on the committee is Alan Roby of Kansas City. Alternate is George Osborn of Joplin.

Cost Called Biggest Factor in Selecting College

In the selection of a college, cost is the most important factor in the minds of most Missouri parents, according to a study conducted by the University Public Opinion Survey Unit at Columbia.

Second in importance is the academic reputation of the school, both in overall quality and its reputation in specialized fields.

A statewide survey in the summer of 1966 sampled nearly 1,000 Missouri adults. Of the original sample, 307 adults had children under age 18 whom they firmly expected to go to college. The findings are based on this smaller group.

Such factors in the selection of a college as the religious affiliation of the school, its social and moral climate, and its size received scattered mentions.

Almost half of the 307 parents cited lower cost (tuition, fees, etc.) as the factor in the selection of a college for their sons or daughters. Among the other factors, 34 per cent mentioned "college has good academic reputation in general," and 31 per cent mentioned "college is close to home, can live at home." (Since multiple factors could be noted, the total amounts to more than 100 per cent.)

Those parents who live in rural areas, towns, and small cities are far more concerned about sending their children to a college close to home. Urban and suburban residents attach much less importance to this factor; they are more concerned about academic excellence. Nearly twice as many of the metropolitan residents as compared to the town and small city dwellers rated academic reputation most important. Suburbanites, curiously enough, mentioned lower cost more often than anyone else; yet family incomes are generally higher in suburban areas than elsewhere in Missouri.

Families with annual incomes over $15,000 express only minimal concern for cost and proximity; they are far more interested in the general and specialized excellence of the school. For middle and low income families, cost continues to outweigh any other consideration.

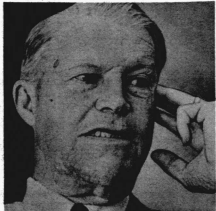

The poll indicates that the more education the parent has received, the less he is concerned about cost and proximity to home and the greater his concern for academic excellence of the school.

Physical Education Taught by Television

At first glance it seems far fetched, but the University is utilizing instruction-aid at television in physical education classes.

The explanation puts it in better focus, however. The films will cover physiological effects of exercise, teach worthy use of leisure time, offer health and safety instruction and explain fundamentals of human movement. Freshmen attending physical education classes twice a week will see a tape one day, participate in each of the second. That way, too, they will help use limited space more efficiently. Gymsnasiums designed to accommodate 2500 students are teaching physical education to 7500.

Meisburger Likes Retirement

Retirement is no lonely, sad or empty time.

At least not for Edward Paul Meisburger Sr., Agr. Arts '16, Meisburger, whose life has been filled and so fascinating, probably will never get bored. Consider how much he is planning for the future.

"A lot of men worry about retiring," he said. "Not me. I'll play golf. I do a lot reading and like to work in the yard."

But what will probably take up most of his time is writing. "I'd write anything at the drop of a hat. Oh, maybe I couldn't write a cookbook—but I'd try. I want to get organized. I've got a lot of writing to do."

His experiences and various jobs attest to that.

The last post, from which he retired in late July, was extended two years beyond the government service retirement age of 70 at the request of his superiors in the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. He had been a public information writer in their Kansas City district.

Meisburger first got into writing when he left the University in 1916, where he had been on the gymnastic team and active in boxing. Going first to the St. Joseph (Mo.) Gazette he later went with the Kansas City Post.

Some of his exciting moments as a reporter and with the Army include interviewing Bernard Baruch while he was bathing in his hotel room; sleeping under trees in France with Capt. Harry S. Truman during World War I; asking Roald Amundsen, explorer, how the arctic regions were, and reading the cease-fire agreement to battery D of the 129th field artillery early the morning of November 11, 1918, near Verdun, France.

Meisburger's later journalism experience was with the merged Kansas City Journal-Post, now defunct, and then the Minneapolis Star, Journal and Tribune.

Coming back to Missouri in 1944, he was state informational representative of the War Manpower Commission, regional government's program devoted to return of World War II dead and lastly with the Army Corps of Engineers.

Participation in outside clubs also has bused Meisburger. He served as president of the American Newspaper Guild in Greater Kansas City, member of the Kansas City Press Club, and an honorary member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars (one of the first Kansas City members).

Two sons, Edward P. Meisburger Jr. graduated with an AB from the University in 1920 and one of his daughters, Anna Marie Meisburger (now Mrs. Jack Hartley), was in Arts until 1949.

And if all his experiences can't keep him with enough to write about, or he loses interest in his hobbies, there are always the 18 grandchildren.

Anson Mount, the football expert of Playboy magazine, isn't a Missouri alum, but the football behind him is: It was used in last year's Missouri win over Minnesota. Mount was awarded the trophy by W. Judd Wyatt, '33, direction of advertising for MFA Insurance. Wyatt issues a summary of pre-season pigskin picks each year, and Mount won for 1966, correctly forecasting 14 of the top 20 teams. The photo appeared in the September 1967 issue of Playboy.

St. Louis Campus Organizes Sister Alumni Association

The University of Missouri at St. Louis Alumni Association has been formed with Miss Lois Vera Brockmeier, acting executive secretary of alumni activities.

The more than 175 graduates who received degrees as members of the University's first graduating class in June and approximately 65 who received degrees later in August will form the basis for the new alumni association. Miss Brockmeier was a magna cum laude member of the University's first graduating class in June and was active in student affairs during her four years at UMSL.

The St. Louis chapter of the University of Missouri Alumni Association at Columbia is contributed $1,000 a year for four years to assist the St. Louis campus group in its formative years.

Ralph Lowenstein To Set Up J-School At Tel Aviv, Israel

A new Ph.D. recipient from the University of Missouri, Columbia, who was an American volunteer during Israel's War of Independence, 1948 to 1949, has returned to that country this month as visiting professor and head of journalistic studies at Tel Aviv University.

He is Ralph L. Lowenstein, a native of Danville, Va. During his two-year stay in Israel, he will design an undergraduate and graduate curriculum in journalism at the university.

While at the University here, Dr. Lowenstein was publications editor of the School of Journalism and Freedom of Information Center. The findings of his doctoral dissertation, "Measuring World Press Freedom as a Political Indicator," received attention throughout the world.

University President John C. Weaver took part in a two-week conference near Steyning in Sussex, England in July to discuss "The Politics and Economics of Western Defense." Participating with him in this 94th Wilton Park conference were Jules Mohr (center), former president of the Council of Ministers of France and 17 times a minister of France; and Dr. Henry Koeppler (right), Warden of Wilton Park.

New Scholarship Funds Established at University

The University has received three gifts, to be used to augment a professorship and establish two new scholarship funds on the Columbia campus.

A $1,000 gift from the Harkness Fellowships of the Commonwealth Fund will supplement the Frank G. Miller professorship. The gift is the result of facilities made available to Lucio DeAngelis by the department of agricultural economics.

DeAngelis, from Sorrento, Italy, is on the faculty of the department of agriculture at the University of Naples. He spent the 1966-1967 school year as a research associate in agricultural economics here under the Harkness Fellowship program.

The second gift is 400 shares of U.S. Radium Corporation stock for the William H. Byler, Sr., and A. L. Meredith, Sr., scholarship fund by William H. Byler, Jr. Income from the stock will be available to undergraduates who are graduates of Cooper County High Schools.

The senior Byler and Meredith were members of the Cooper county school board and active in Cooper county school affairs. William Byler, Jr., received an M.A. and Ph.D. in chemistry from the University in 1931 and 1937 respectively. A native of Prairie Home, he now lives in Morristown, N. J.

The third gift is $1,300 contributed by friends and former students of Dr. Pauline Garrett, retired chairman of the department of home economics education. Known as the Dr. Pauline Garrett Award, the money will be used to provide an annual stipend to undergraduates or graduates of the School of Home Economics or Home Economics Education with preference to those who plan teaching as a career.

University Press Publishes Poetry by George Garrett

The University of Missouri Press has published the work, "For a Bitter Season, New and Selected Poems," by George Garrett, judged by critics to be "one of the most interesting and original of the younger poets."

The 114-page volume includes poems from his three other published collections of poetry, together with a representative selection of his new work.

Garrett has received the Sewanee Review Fellowship in Poetry (1958), the Rome Prize of American Academy of Arts and Letters (1959), and the Ford Grant in Drama (1961).

The book is available through bookstores or from the University of Missouri Press at $3.50 a copy.

Theodore Feder Finds Stimulus in Welfare

"I never thought when I was at the University of Missouri that I would end up in social welfare work overseas."

Theodore D. Feder, who received his BS BA in 1939, is now deputy director of the overseas program of the American Joint Distribution Committee, the voluntary Jewish organization that helps to reconstruct, rehabilitate, and give relief to 450,000 persons in 24 countries.

"After I was discharged from the Army in 1945, I wasn't sure what I wanted to do. I had the background in personnel and administration, but I was concerned about rehabilitation in Europe."

When the Army asked for volunteers to work with the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Program, Feder answered the call. In August 1945 he left the United States to work in the Displaced Peoples Program in Germany.

One evening a friend who worked for the American Joint Distribution Committee, a Jewish organization, asked Feder to accompany him. In a large truck they drove to some ruins where they were to pick up the Jewish people and take them to a displaced persons camp.

As they entered the dimly lit basement, hundreds of men, women and children were clinging together. Feder asked his friend how they could tell who was Jewish. His friend smiled and said the word, "friend", in Hebrew followed by the word, "Joint." Unquestioningly, 75 persons rose and followed.

"I was so sure this was the organization I wanted to be with. The belief these people portrayed was amazing." In 1946, Feder joined the organization, where since then he has been director of the program in Vienna, Austria, later in Tel Aviv, Israel, and today is deputy director of the entire overseas organization.

"We have a limited life, living from year to year with no surplus funds." As with other voluntary agencies that work overseas, money comes from contributions. In this case the money is from the United Jewish Appeal Federation. But Feder's job is to help weigh the priorities with the money they receive.

"It's a restless program. We don't want to do just what we did last year. We are constantly trying to revitalize attention to the communities to hear their real needs."

As a voluntary agency, there is more freedom. A government agency is necessarily confronted with military and political policies.

It is Feder's job to educate the people of the country. They don't want foreign doctors, teachers or administrators; they want to be trained themselves. We are able to give small loans to people to establish their livelihood.

In Israel, like in the other 24 countries, hospitals for handicapped and homes for the aged exist. The old people are a difficult, non-productive group but Feder is proud of his and his staff's accomplishments.

"We ran 400 beds for the aged and we were able to have two-thirds of them active daily in kitchens, nursing units, in sewing, weaving and handicrafts," crafts.

Feder explained how the housing complex was spread out over four blocks requiring all who were able, to walk several blocks for the their meals. "We are proud of his and his staff's accomplishments." "We ran 400 beds for the aged and we were able to have two-thirds of them active daily in kitchens, nursing units, in sewing, weaving and handicrafts," crafts. Feder explained how the housing complex was spread out over four blocks requiring all who were able, to walk several blocks for the their meals. "We are proud of his and his staff's accomplishments."

This intergroup action paid off in the recent Middle-East crisis. "It was these old people who were out filling the civil defense bases, taking care of children and homes while their fathers were at war. It was remarkable how these persons rose to the occasion with not a single sign of panic."

"The intangibility of the job often is frustrating. We're ready, and we never ready. We pride ourselves in acting quickly when emergency breaks out." They never know when 100 refugees will show up on a moments notice.

Once a group of 100 medical students fleeing from Hungary showed up needing help—a place to stay, food and one more year of their education. "We assisted them in finishing their final year." One of these students was a young woman who later became Feder's wife. Mr. and Mrs. Feder now have three children, who were born in Vienna but are "as American as they can be."

Their favorite pastime is baseball; they attend the international schools, and they feel the United States is their home. "The family was in Columbia for two days in August to visit Feder's sister, Dr. Sara Feder, AM '31, Ph.D. '44, who is an assistant professor of sociology at the University."

Where did Feder get the stimulus for this type of work? He's determined but he's unassuming about his position. He's satisfied, but he's continually searching.

In high school in Los Angeles, students were given tests of interest and desires, but never told the results. Thirty years later the Los Angeles school board attempted to relocate its students and administer the same test. "I was quite astonished and pleased."

Feder scored high in public administration, personnel and sociology, the same as when he was 15. "I wound up doing what I wanted to do, you could say."

The work is not easy. The Feders have had to move a lot. Now they are living in Geneva, Switzerland, but in several years it may be somewhere else. "I guess it's a little like the reverse. There's no pension plan of any great amount, we've had to give up comforts, there are the language barriers and the lack of security." But Theodore Feder would never give up this life, he loves every minute of it.

Retired Judge Dale Referred To As Oklahoma's Mr. Guyman

Who is Mr. Guyman, Okla.?

He's been described as "Endowed with a tremendous ambition for self improvement, together with a desire to help others, his life story forms an interesting pattern, made more colorful by the times in which these events occurred."

He's F. Hiner Dale, who, through his concern, hard work and contributions, has helped make Guyman a thriving city.

Some call him the "Will Rogers of the Oklahoma Panhandle," but local residents are proud to claim him as their "Mr. Guyman."

Dale graduated from the University Law School in 1906. Here he played football on the varsity team and was captain of the "Lynchpamore" and "all senior" class teams.

"But getting through college was not easy even in those pre-inflation days," the Guyman Daily Herald recalled. "Hiner Dale spent even summer earning funds to continue through the following semesters. One summer he worked as a book salesman and another vacation period was spent as a traveling cow doctor."

In fact in 1905, President Jones of the University, employed Dale to milk and feed his cow, stoke his furnace, and feed his horse at a salary of $1.50 per week.

Upon graduation he was employed by the county attorney of Boone County. "I accepted the position of assistant county attorney. My salary was $1.50 per week and I boarded myself and furnished my own room," Dale once wrote in a letter to the Alumnus, summer earnings funds to continue through the following semesters. One summer he worked as a book salesman and another vacation period was spent as a traveling cow doctor."

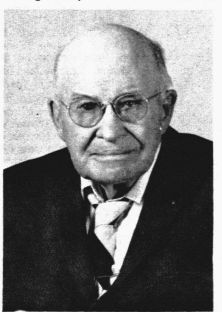

Wishing to practice law, Dale spent several months looking for the right job. On Jan. 1, 1907, he left a Guyman real estate firm to establish a law and real estate firm of Ennis and Dale.

"Judge Dale has always evidenced an outstanding public spirit giving freely of his time and talent in the promotion of any enterprise which has for its purpose the betterment of his community.

"As a practicing attorney and as county attorney, as president of the Guyman School Board and as district judge, he and his career have always reflected the highest standards of American citizenship," reports a local newspaper in 1950 when a 100-room, five-story hotel was named in his honor.

It is impossible to list all the activities in which Dale has taken part. He has given the city 37 lots for parks and playgrounds. He operated his own lending library of "How-To" books as he is a firm believer in their teaching value. Each year, Dale offers a prize to anyone under 18 who checks out and reads the most books from the Guyman City Library. In addition Dale has given 14 high schools in the Panhandle of Oklahoma $1,000 each in mutual funds.

But whether he was promoting the building of lakes in the Panhandle or raising his children, two of which graduated from the University (Vincent Dale, LL.B. '35 and Don Dale, BJ '41), F. Hiner Dale has been a busy, industrious man who deserves the title "Mr. Guyman."

Remember, it's a diploma, not a passport!

This message is from ... Newsweek

A diploma certifies you received X grades for X hours of study in X subjects. It is not a passport into guaranteed success. In business it can't assure you won't be taken to the cleaners by an adversary who honed his skill selling stolen hubcaps. In romance, it gives you no advantage over the dashing chap who was cum laude from dancing school. It provides no exemptions from the real-life problems of divorce, bankruptcy, IRS audits or mistakes in judgment. It doesn't change the odds on the green tables of Vegas or the fairways of Augusta. It does not immunize you from a bad report from the cancer lab. It is not a shield against the hoophead in the asphalt jungle who wants your watch, or the marksman in the real jungle who wants your life. Don't underestimate it. It does give you the added edge of being able to think clearly in the above situations. But don't overestimate it. It is a record of what you have accomplished to date; a sheepskin, not a bullet proof vest, not a passport to automatic success.

BEDFORD H. BERRY, BS M. Ed.,

Nurse Spends Two Years In Vietnam

by Ruth Ellen Thompson
(Story reprinted from St. Louis Globe Democrat.)

It started two years ago on a rainy night in Columbia. The recruiting sergeant had trailed her from her home to an auction, sat glumly through her successful bidding on a desk, loaded it into a station wagon and helped her carry it into the house.

And Patricia Goodman, R.N., admits she felt the least she could do was to fill in the papers he'd brought along.

That act, in turn, led to the offer of a Captain's commission in the Air Force Nurse Corps, an offer she accepted when she was "max age" (35).

Since that time "Flight Nurse Patsy Goodman has been exposed to an entirely different world, to "things you would never see here."

"Things like plague, cholera, leprosy, lice and the varied illnesses that afflict humanity in a tropical climate. And things like folk medicine where the "cure is worse than the ailment." Captain Goodman was one of the first 16 nurses assigned to open a hospital at Cam Ranh Air Base in Vietnam.

"We lived in one row tents and the patients lived in the other. We started operating there, plagued by black widow spiders, incredible heat and sand that got into everything.

"Then they built the latrine on the windward side of the camp and there was a terrible odor all the time. The patients not only lived, they did amazingly well," she recalled. "The morale has been excellent."

The tents, she hastened to add, have now been replaced by air-conditioned quarters. The sand is still a problem.

In early 1966, she was chosen to help set up a Medical Civic Action Program to minister to Vietnamese civilians in the vicinity.

Since April 8, 1966, MEDCAP Team 842 has paid regular visits to nearby villages, trying to educate the Vietnamese on hygiene, to treat what medical problems they can and to refer complicated cases to the provincial hospital.

The team consists of a doctor, a nurse-coordinator (Captain Goodman), a permanently assigned non-commissioned officer responsible for transportation and supplies and one or two interpreters.

Two air police go along to provide security because while it is generally safe, safety of the team is "not guaranteed."

The team carries medicines and equipment (obtained through the Army of the Republic of Vietnam) with it in metal chests and it has gone to villages by "every means except flying," Captain Goodman said.

The blue-eyed, slender nurse, whose brown hair is streaked from the sun, admitted fascinating incidents have happened while on MEDICAP ventures but "most of the funny ones aren't printable."

Actually the work is not funny, she said, because a high percentage of the Vietnamese are ill.

"Sanitation is so terrible. Wells usually are not covered and one of our first jobs is to educate the people on the need for clean drinking water."

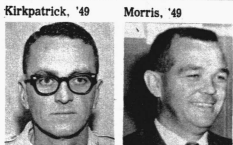

Many Vietnamese will wash in a bucket and later use the same container for drinking water. The living conditions are poor; huts have no screens. The diet is poor, too.

The practice of folk medicine is prevalent and it is common to see persons with bruises on their foreheads caused by "dau dau," pinching the skin to drive away a headache, she said.

From the St. Louis City Hospital where she took her nurses training, she went to the University of Missouri at Columbia for her Bachelor of Science in Nursing and then joined the faculty at Deaconess Hospital School of Nursing from 1956-59. She entered the Masters' program of St. Louis University, obtaining her degree in 1961. She then went back to Columbia to teach in the University's in-service education program.

"The recruiting sergeant caught up with me there," she laughed.

This month Captain Goodman will go to the 48th Technical Fighter Squadron at Lackenhead Air Base in England for a three-year tour of duty.

Dr. Elizabeth Brackett Teaches Chemistry In All-Male College

Running an X-ray diffractometer for a study project on crystals is chemistry to some people.

To most people it is a little above their heads. And to most women about the only chemical symbols that ring a bell are H₂O and maybe NaCl.

But to Elizabeth Becker Brackett, it is part of a normal daily routine. Dr. Brackett is a visiting assistant professor of chemistry at Colgate University in Hamilton, N. Y.

Dr. Brackett, who was born on a farm in Missouri, studied chemistry at the University. In 1953, Frances Elizabeth Becker received her B.S. degree and was elected to Phi Beta Kappa. She remembers her strongest influence as two chemistry professors at the University—the late Dr. Gerald F. Breckenridge and Dr. Lloyd B. Thomas, who still is on the campus.

Today, after earning her Ph.D. degree from the University of California at Berkeley, she is greatly admired by Colgate's predominantly all-male faculty and student body. Joseph J. Turner, chemistry department chairman values her perception and acute thinking: "She has a clear-eyed view of what we're doing here."

Dr. Brackett became associated with Colgate University through her husband, Dr. Thomas E. Brackett, a chemistry professor at Colgate since 1963.

The husband-wife teaching team has also combined forces as co-authors of more than a half dozen papers dealing with X-ray crystallography as a tool in high temperature inorganic chemistry. And she has contributed to half a dozen other articles in chemistry and physics journals.

Together they do experimentation, she doing the lab work while her husband writes up the computer calculations and writes up their findings.

But there is a lot more that fills Elizabeth Brackett's life than chemical equations and confusing terms like "The Use of Dielectric Rod Waveguides for the Microwave Spectroscopy of Free Radicals," her doctoral dissertation. She is the mother of five children ranging from ages 9 to 3.

This year she is only devoting herself to one section of chemistry. The Bracketts have been building a new house which sits on Johnsons Hill on the far side of the village from the hill where Colgate stands. They hope to be in by Christmas.

Ed Blaine Tackles Cardiovascular Physiology

by Heath Meriwether BJ '68

(Story condensed and reprinted from the Columbia Tribune.)

Ed Blaine has joined a new team. Four years a starting offensive guard for the Philadelphia Eagles in the NFL, Blaine has retired from pro football to join a research team in the physiology department at the University Medical Center.

Blaine has traded in his shoulder pads for light-green laboratory clothes, surgical tools, test tubes and the trappings of the lab. Now he's taking orders from Dr. James O. Davis, professor and chairman of the department of physiology and Dr. Vince Lombardi of the Packers and Joe Kuharsch of the Eagles.

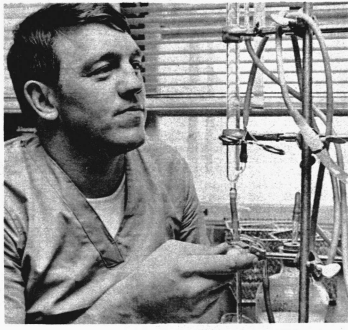

The switch from the gridiron to the research lab all came about because Ed Blaine, a good bargain in either place, drove a hard bargain.

The former University All-American knew what he was writing on dollars and cents and informed the Eagles that this spring would how much it would take to get him to come back to Philadelphia. Blaine never retreated from this demand and the Eagles' front office did not meet his figure.

So Blaine, who earned his Masters in Zoology this spring (Ph.D. AB in 1953) through the physiology department, did become involved in a three-year training grant of $95,000 in "Cardiovascular Physiology." In the words of the grant's director, Dr. Davis, the money is "to provide predoctoral fellows with training in depth in the field of cardiovascular physiology working for a Ph.D. degree." He noted that the postdoctorals also engaged in research on experimental heart and kidney disease will work closely with Blaine, Dr. Charles A. Robb and another fellow to be appointed later.

What this means for Blaine is that instead of a pro football player's 103 day, he will be spending eight to 10 months in the lab to get the lucrative five-figure salary Blaine pulled down for moving out defending linemen for the likes of Timmy Brown.

Is Blaine sorry? He admits he'll miss the money and the sport he's played for the last 13 years but looks at his new career as assuring "more long-term reliability." His wife, the former Susan Irene Crisp, (BS Ed '62), agrees she and 20-month-old daughter, Jennifer, are glad to stay in Columbia all year round. The Blaines had spent six months of each year in Philadelphia.

The ex-lineman talks wistfully of his football past but is willing and eager to talk about his research. Presently he's working in a project looking for the causes of edema, the accumulation of fluid in the tissues, during pregnancy. The research is a possible step toward detangling for the first time the causes of edema in human pregnancy. How long the project will last is difficult to foretell but most of Ed's work will deal with renal physiology, the hormonal effects on kidneys and the reciprocal effects of the kidneys on hormones. He will write his doctoral thesis around these problems.

The return to Academe really is no hardship for Blaine, who had as little trouble with the books as with Big 8 linemen in his four years at the University. He was a constant All-Academic player and carried well over a 3.0 average.

HAL LOEWENSTEIN, AB, and his father have opened new offices in the Montmartre in St. Louis. The company is Loewenstein Business Forms.

PAUL A. MONTEMURRO, FA, has been named assistant professor of music and director of Central Methodist College Bands in Fayette, Mo.
