LETTER TO THE READERS

September. It doesn't seem possible that the summer has passed and another school year is about to begin at old Mizzou. But with the cool evenings, the thumping of footballs, and the clamor of the students returning from vacation makes us realize that fall is here.

Is our face red! In June we listed the Saville family as having seven graduates from M.U., but we omitted Miss Mahala Saville and so that raises the number to eight. What makes it so embarrassing is the fact that she is the one that sent in the information. Please accept our apologies, Mahala.

A question has arisen as to what happens to tradition in the "Case of the Missing Ivy."

This summer it was found necessary to replace the concrete bases of M.U.'s, famous Columns as the old bases were crumbling away and it was feared that more severe damage might result. Of course the ivy growing up the Columns had to be cut at the base and there is where the question arises.

What happens to tradition? Will the ivy grow back next spring or will it have to be replanted? Will attempts be made to grow ivy on the "mystery" Column that has never had ivy to grow on it before?

The answers to these questions are still unsolved, but we have a "Sherlock Holmes" checking on them.

Attention Missourians in Dallas and vicinity!

A block of tickets for the Mizzou-SMU game to be played in the Cotton Bowl Saturday night, Oct. 1, has been set aside for you. Send orders to Clifton Blackmon, Mo. Alumni Association, c/o Chamber of Commerce, Dallas, Tex. The Tickets are $3.60 each and add 25c to the total check for insurance and postage.

Chester Brewer, professor of physical education at the University, will be a delegate to the Tri Annual General Convention of the Episcopal Church in San Francisco from Sept. 26-Oct. 7. He will be in Los Angeles from Sept. 18-25.

Sincerely
The Editors

Germany Rehabilitator

Allen W. Fore, B.S. in C.E. '32 recently represented the United States Military Government for Germany in commercial negotiations which were held in Brussels with the Transport Ministries of Holland and Belgium concerning the routing of German imports through the harbors of Rotterdam and Antwerp.

These negotiations included agreement as to a division of this traffic between the two ports, the establishment of a three-nation freight booking office to handle the upstream Rhine lift of this cargo into Germany, and detail covering contracts for the Rhine freight.

Fore is a bachelor, and his permanent U. S. A. residence is with his brother, Charles M. Fore, in Wayland, Mo. During the past two and one-half years, he has been engaged in the work of rehabilitating the war damaged canal and inland waterway system of Western Germany, and reorganizing the German Transport Ministry so that it can function independently."

Receives Honorary Degrees

H. W. Prentis, Jr., President of the Armstrong Cork Company, was chosen by two Eastern universities as their Commencement speaker this Spring and both institutions conferred honorary degrees upon him. On June 20 Prentis addressed the graduates of Lehigh University at Bethlehem, Pa., and received an Eng. D. degree. On June 16 he spoke at Temple University's Commencement and received an LL.D. degree.

Prentis was graduated from the University of Missouri with an A.B. degree in the Class of 1903 and for two years thereafter he served as secretary to President Jesse. In 1907, after receiving an M.A. degree from the University of Cincinnati, he became associated with the Armstrong Cork Company. He has been President of Armstrong since 1934.

Promoted at Michigan State

Dr. Lloyd M. Turk, B.S. in Agr. '28, M.S. in Agr. '29, Ph.D. '31, has been named head of the department of soil science at Michigan State College effective July 1. He replaced Dr. C. E. Millar, who retires.

A native of Missouri, Turk joined the staff of Michigan State College in 1932 and during the next 13 years completed projects in which soil organisms played the leading roles.

GUS OEHM

Gus Oehm to Hawaii

Gus M. Oehm, A.B., B.J. '17, until recently agricultural editor in the DuPont Company's Public Relations Department in Wilmington, Del., has joined the Pineapple Research Institute of Hawaii in Honolulu.

Oehm has served as managing editor of the Harrisburg, Ill, Daily Register; correspondent for the United Press in Chicago, New York, and Berlin; and agricultural editor for the University of Arkansas, The National Fertilizer Association, American Cyanamid Company; and the Arkansas Farm Bureau. In his new position, Oehm will handle publicity, publications, and public relations for PRI.

Electronic Supervisor

Virgil H. Disney, B.S. in E.E. '36, formerly an assistant section head in research at the airplane division of the Curtiss-Wright Corporation, Dayton, Ohio, has been named a supervisor of electronics at Armour Research Foundation of Illinois Institute of Technology in Chicago.

Disney was with the Curtiss-Wright Corporation for two years. In 1947 he was a project engineer for the Sperry Gyroscope company, Great Neck, Long Island, N. Y.

From 1943-46 he was a project engineer for the C. G. Conn company, Elkhart, Ind. From 1937 to 1942 he was an electrical engineer for the American Can Company, Chicago, and in 1942-43 he taught in the Engineering and Science Management War Training Program at Illinois Tech.

Memphis Banker

Darryl R. Francis, B.S. in Agr. '36, has recently been elected to the office of vice president of the National Bank of Commerce in Memphis, Tenn.

Francis, born in Harrison County, formerly served on the faculty of the University in the agriculture department. Later he was Secretary-Treasurer of Ozark Production Credit Association of Springfield, Mo., and still later in the same capacity with St. Joseph Production Credit Association, St. Joseph, Mo.

On August 1, 1944, he became connected with the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis, devoting his full time to that bank's program of agricultural development.

Francis has contributed numerous articles on farm finance, soil conservation and other farm economic subjects to magazines and is the author of two books, "Bank Credit for Soil Conservation" and "A Farm Loan Development Program for Country Banks."

Alumnus Wins Fellowship

Beryl W. Sprinkel, Holt, Mo., has been awarded a fellowship to the University of Chicago.

Sprinkel was one of the 215 students from 34 states and 11 foreign countries selected for the graduate study awards, part of the university's $750,000 annual program of aid for outstanding students.

He received a $600 university fellowship in the school of business. Sprinkel received his bachelor's degree from M.U. in 1947 and his master of business administration degree from the University of Chicago in 1948. He served on the faculty at M.U. during the past year.

Named Circuit Judge

David A. McMullan, LL.B. '27, has been appointed by Gov. Forrest Smith as a Circuit Judge in the Eighth Judicial (St. Louis) Circuit.

McMullan, 45, lives at 4044 Wyoming St., St. Louis. He served as an associate city counselor from 1933 to 1940 and as an assistant circuit attorney from 1940 to 1943. Since 1943 he has been engaged in the private practice of law.

Air Force Captain

Capt. William H. Quinn, A.M. '42, of 437 Dewitt Street, Syracuse, New York, has recently been assigned to the USAF Institute of Oceanography at La Jolla, Calif., for the completion of educational requirements in oceanography.

MISSOURI HEADLINERS

JOHN REGINATO

Wonderland Manager

John F. Reginato, former Tiger football star has been appointed manager of the Shasta Cascade Wonderland Association.

Reginato, B. J. '47 was a member of the Tiger eleven in 1941, '42 and '46. He is a past president of the Delta Upsilon social fraternity and a member of the M Men's Club and the Alpha Delta Sigma, national advertising fraternity.

During the past war he was assigned to the Army Air Corps as a public relations specialist and played two years of service football at Rosecrans Field, St. Joseph, Mo., and 20th Ferrying Group, Nashville, Tenn., where he was a regular on the ATC Rockets eleven.

Reginato's primary duties will consist of publicizing the outstanding hunting, fishing, skiing, vacation and recreation areas of the six northern California counties, which comprise the Shasta Cascade Wonderland Association.

Former Instructor Dies

George J. Koch, Jr., 41, a former political science instructor at the University, died June 19 in San Diego, Calif., while on two weeks of active duty as a naval reserve officer.

Koch became ill with peritonitis and died in the Naval Hospital. A resident of St. Louis, Koch is survived by his widow, two sons, a daughter and his parents.

'F' Student Makes Phi Beta Kappa

Most come-backs are staged in the world of sports and most anybody would give you 20 to 1 that a guy who once flunked out of college would never come back and make Phi Beta Kappa. But Jerry Berndsen, A.B. '48, 501 West Broadway, Columbia, Mo., did it.

Berndsen left M.U. in 1942. He was preoccupied with the war and had trouble making classes. The "Fs" began coming pretty regularly and he received his "walking papers."

He spent the next three years as a troop carrier pilot in Europe.

He re-enrolled at the University in 1946 and began getting S' in most classes. He was graduated in 1948 and elected to Phi Beta Kappa. At present he is a medical student at the University.

Proctor Prize

Abner Brenner, B.S. '29, has been awarded the Dortha Proctor Prize for the second consecutive year for his paper entitled, "The Spiral Contractometer, a New Instrument for the Measurement of Stress in Electro-deposits." The paper was co-authored by Seymour Senderoff.

Dr. Brenner is a member of the American Chemical Society and the American Electroplaters' Society. He has written many papers on electroplating, cathode films, magnetic methods of measuring the thickness of plated coatings, and other scientific methods. He is a chemist at the National Bureau of Standards in Washington, D. C.

Atomic Fellowships

Atomic Energy Commission fellowships for 1949-50 have been awarded through the National Research Council to two graduates of the University.

They are Miss Marian I. Barnhart, A.B. '44, an instructor in zoology, and Jay Barton II, A.B. '46, A.M. '48, a graduate assistant in zoology. Both will continue work toward Ph.D. degrees at the University.

Given Scholarship

William Samore, A.B. '49, was granted a $600 fellowship from the University of Chicago to continue his studies in international relations there.

Samore is one of 215 students at the University of Chicago who have been given graduate study awards.

He became a member of Phi Beta Kappa Society at the University in June.

Advanced Degrees

Seven graduates of the University have received advanced degrees from the University of Southern California and the University of Indiana this spring.

Those awarded degree at California are: Marjorie A. Bowen, A.B. '45, a Graduate Certificate in Social Work; Madill F. Fartiser, B.S. in Ed. '48, and Minnie Henrietta Meyer, B.S. '31, Master of Science in Education; Susan Brown Wagner, B.F.A. '31, Master of Social Work; Mrs. Barbara James Leason, B.S. in Ed. '43, Master of Arts in English; and Henry Kent Farley, B.S. '27, A.M. '32, Doctor of Education.

At the University of Indiana, Elizabeth Nolyra Brown, A.B. '47, was awarded the Master of Science in Recreation degree.

Bunker Commissioned

Herbert Bunker, Jr., '46-'47, son of Dr. and Mrs. Herbert Bunker, received his commission as a second lieutenant and the silver wings of a pilot in the U. S. Air Force at the formal graduation exercises at William Air Force Base, Chandler, Ariz., on July 1.

Former Professor Retires

Dr. G. H. Robinson, professor of law at the University from 1917 to 1919, was retired in June from Cornell University where he had been professor of law since 1929.

TODA CHO

A recent letter from Mrs. Shigeyo Cho of Tokyo informs us that her husband died in 1947. He was a member of the class of '09. Mrs. Cho says that he often planned to return to M. U. to continue his education.

ON CAMPUS

Lead Graduating Class

For the second time this year a man and his wife led their graduating class as marshal and alternate marshal in the academic procession to Commencement exercises at the University Wednesday evening, Aug. 3.

Guy Selph and his wife, Matilda, served as marshal and alternate marshal, respectively, of candidates for degrees from the School of Business and Public Administration in the traditional procession opening the exercises. Both received degrees of Bachelor of Science in Business Administration.

Mr. and Mrs. James K. Kelliher led the graduating class of the same School in the academic procession at the June Commencement.

Marshals and alternates are usually chosen from the scholastic leaders of the graduating classes of the various divisions of the University.

Selph is the son of Mrs. Clara Selph of Lilbourn, Mo., and Mrs. Selph is the former Mathilda French, daughter of Mrs. Pauline French of 617 Pue Street, Bedford, Indiana.

Middlebush on Commission

President Frederick A. Middlebush of the University has accepted appointment as a member of a special commission of the Association of American Universities to make a thorough study of the problems of financing higher education and research in the nation.

The Association of American Universities, an organization of thirty-four leading American institutions which attempts to survey and resolve problems of higher education, plans to set up this commission of from twelve to fifteen leading citizens, of various professions and all parts of the country to carry out the important study.

Dr. English to Speak in Kansas

Dr. W. Francis English, assistant dean of the College of Arts and Science, will give two addresses at a meeting of the Kansas State Teachers' Association on November 3 at Salina.

Dr. English will speak on "Social Studies Teachers and Their Organizations" and on "Perspective and Balance in the Social Studies."

Alumnus in Europe

Rev. W. M. Hammond, Jr., '40-'41, was one of 91 college students chosen from the United States to sail on June 22 from New York City for Europe to attend the European Work Study Seminar sponsored by the National Student Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A.

Hammond lives at Windsor St., Columbia.

CAROL CLAYTON

Third Generation

Carol Clayton represented the third generation of her family to be graduated from M.U. when she received a B.J. at the June Commencement. Her aunt and uncle, and her grandmother all hold degrees from the University.

Miss Clayton is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Clayton, St. Louis. Her father is an editorial writer on the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. He was president of the Missouri Journalism Alumni Association from 1935 to 1937, and in 1933 he was a director of the General Alumni Association.

Mrs. Clayton was also graduated from the University, and they were married on their graduation day, June 3, 1925.

The oldest member of the family to receive an M.U. degree is Stephen E. Elliott, Carol's grandfather, who holds and A.M. degree with a major in education, awarded in 1930. He was a teacher in Central High School, St. Joseph, Mo., for many years and is now retired.

Receives Degree 24 Years Late

Old Mizzou corrected a 24-year-old error June 7 when it awarded a B.S. degree in agriculture to Clark P. Schumacher of St. Louis.

Schumacher failed to receive his degree in 1925 because of an interpretation of a rule regarding credits. The rule since has been changed. When preparing for the 1949 commencement, University officials recalled Schumacher's situation. They wrote him that a degree would be waiting for him this year—twenty four years late.

Expanding Education

Approximately 6,550 doctor's and master's degrees have been awarded by the University since 1892. The University School of Mines and Metallurgy at Rolla has granted 529 advanced degrees since it began to offer graduate studies.

About 70 per cent of the graduate diplomas issued at Columbia since 1892 have been conferred after 1929. This high increase in the number of advanced degrees awarded in recent years seems to follow closely the expansionist trend in higher education.

Advanced degrees were conferred by the University at Columbia as early as 1846, but records before 1892 are incomplete, because of the fire which destroyed the administration building in that year, and caused the loss of many documents.

From 1929 until last year the University has issued 4,627 advanced degrees, as compared with 1,923 degrees in the 37-year period from 1892 until 1929.

Mother Goes to College

Life at M. U. was really a family affair for three people this summer.

Mrs. Marjorie Smith of Joplin, Mo., attended the summer session so she could have a "vacation" with her children. She roomed with her daughter, Joy, at Women's Residence Hall. Her son, Carroll, lived with his wife at one of the trailer camps.

Mrs. Smith, who is an elementary school principal in Joplin, is working towards a master's degree in education. Illness prevented her from receiving the degree earlier.

Carroll is a physics major and Joy is working for a degree in education.

Prof. Jones Resigns

George D. Jones, extension entomologist of the University College of Agriculture for 19 years, has resigned to accept a similar position at the North Carolina State College of Agriculture and Engineering, effective Sept. 1.

Jones is former secretary-treasure of the Association of Alumni and Former Students of the Ag School.

Journalist Honored

Edward B. Orr, B.A. '17, M.A. '36, was honored last May when the Education Writers Association chose his editorial as an outstanding contribution to the progress of education.

Orr's editorial titled, "Something Can Be Done," appeared in the Christian Science Monitor on February 16, 1948. Orr is a member of the staff of the Monitor's editorial writers.

ON CAMPUS

HUBER O. CROFT

New Engineering Dean

Huber Ogilvie Croft, head of the mechanical engineering department at the University of Iowa, Iowa City, has been appointed dean of the College of Engineering of the University of Missouri. He will also be director of the Engineering Experiment Station and professor of mechanical engineering.

Prof. Croft, who will assume his duties Sept. 1, succeeds Dr. Harry A. Curtis, who resigned Feb. 16 to become a director of the Tennessee Valley Authority. Prof. Harry Rubey has been serving as acting dean since that time.

A native of Denver, Colo., Prof. Croft received a Bachelor of Science degree from the University of Colorado in 1918 and a Master of Science at the University of Illinois in 1923. He joined the staff at the University of Illinois as assistant professor in 1922, and upon leaving there in 1927 became associate professor of mechanical engineering at Stanford University. Since 1929 he has been at Iowa.

He first entered the field of engineering in 1919, when he became assistant to the chief engineer of Swift and Company in Denver. The next year he was design engineer for the Stearns-Rogers Manufacturing Company, Denver, and in 1921 he was assistant to Durbin Van Law, consulting power plant engineer, Denver.

M.Ü. Instructor Gets Ph.D.

Irvin G. Wyllie, University history instructor, was recently awarded a doctor of philosophy degree from the University of Wisconsin.

Scientist Tunes for Heartbeat, Hears Radio Station Instead

Everything doesn't happen in Brooklyn—as one M.U. professor will verify.

The young physiologist was interested in the electrocardio-graph machine. It is used for diagnosing heart conditions and costs a pretty penny.

The physiologist knew about some spare parts and decided to build one himself. He intended to obtain an "electrical picture" of animal heart action and use the graphs in class demonstrations.

Through many hot days he labored, building the instrument with painstaking care.

Finally, it was ready.

He picked out an animal, attached some wires to the hind and fore legs, and sat down to await the results.

The results were, to say the least, unusual. Into the instrument he had built was coming KFRU, the Columbia radio station.

It seems that the good professor had forgotten to erect copper mats to reduce outside electrical interference and the animal's hair was acting as an antenna.

Wins Scholarship

Miss Mary Elizabeth Jones, graduate student in English at the University, is the winner of the Delta Tau Kappa (honorary English sorority) tuition scholarship to the Missouri Writers' Workshop. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Jones of Cartersville, Mo.

L. A. Alumni Honor Botts

Coach Tom Botts and two members of the Tiger track team were honored at a luncheon held in June by the Los Angeles chapter of the Missouri Alumni Association.

Mizzou First

The School of Journalism of the University of Missouri ranks at the top of all journalism schools in doing the best job of training its students for the profession in the opinion of a group of managing editors of large daily newspapers from all over the nation.

This was revealed in the published results of a survey completed recently by the University of Miami Department of Journalism in which the Miami school sent detailed questionnaires to the managing editors of a group of daily newspapers having circulations of 50,000 or more, asking them for their views on journalism school training.

Thirty-seven of the editors made specific answers to the question: "In your opinion, what three journalism schools are doing the best job of training their graduates?" The University of Missouri School of Journalism ranked first with twenty-eight of the editors listing it in their choice.

Other schools which were listed by the editors as doing a good job included Columbia, Northwestern, Minnesota, Oregon, Wisconsin, Syracuse, Texas, Southern California, North Carolina, Washington and Lee, Iowa, Los Angeles City College, Michigan, Ohio State, Stanford, Illinois, and Georgia.

New Counselor

Leon H. Ungles, dean of administration at Wentworth Military Academy, Lexington, Mo., has been appointed Director of Student Affairs for Men at the University.

Ungles will assume his duties on September 1. He will succeed Dr. Darwin A. Hindman.

Ungles is 42 years old and a native Missourian. A graduate of the high school at Maitland, Holt County, Mo., he received the B. S. in Education degree from Northwest State College at Maryville, and a Master of Arts degree at M. U. in 1940.

From 1925 to 1935 he was coach at the Lexington High School, and from 1935 to 1939 was coach at Wentworth. Since 1940 he has been Dean of Administration at Wentworth. Ungles is married, but has no children.

Dr. Hindman, who is professor of physical education and physical training, will now devote full time to the Department of Physical Education.

LEON H. UNGLES

Playground to Playhouse

By BILL SOUTHARD

You may recall that the north wing roof top of the Education Building was designed originally as a children's playground. Well, you should have seen it this summer during the month of July. Players were there all right, but instead of their being little fellows, they were grownups. And they were playing at night before capacity audiences.

The solution to this puzzle is that the playground had become a playhouse. Since Jesse Auditorium was no longer available for plays, Professor Donovan Rhynsburger, University director of dramatics, had to find a place that was suitable as a summer theater for the Missouri Workshop. The Board of Curators gave him permission to use the Education Building roof top. He was indeed pleased.

You are probably wondering now why the professor should be happy at having a bare roof top for a theater. Well, he had a couple of tricks up his sleeve that were products of his ingenious mind and based on his lifetime in theatrical work. He deftly planned two arena style productions—very rare as compared with the conventional proscenium stage plays—and made the first known presentation of such a production in the open air on roof top. Just to add to the distinctions, he devised a unique semi-repertoire arrangement for the performances. He called his playhouse the "Roof Top Theater Under the Stars."

If you are now seemingly lost, do not worry. Explanations of the professor's highly successful experiment are relatively simple. In the first place, he realized there were advantages to having a theater on the roof top. It was cooler up there. It was novel. Bugs were likely to be less bothersome than they would be at open air ground level under lights. Of course, there was no control over weather, but rainchecks could be issued—and were, such as on the opening night of Noel Coward's "Hay Fever" when a downpour followed the line, "It's starting to rain." But the big advantage was that the roof top was ideal for arena style.

You are probably asking, "What is arena style?" It is a form of production, dating from the early Greeks and Romans but relatively new to this country, which has the informality of presenting plays on a floor level stage of about 12 x 18 feet before a small audience seated all around the acting area. This is the reason the small roof top was no obstacle in the professor's plans. No scenery is used and but few properties. Blackouts substitute for curtains. Makeup is near photographic, or light, and actions are very flexible since the audience is very close and some part of it always to the actor's back. This type of production offered a new training ground to the Workshop players and one that employs many techniques readily adaptable to television and the movies. In addition, it offered unusual thrills to theatergoers.

The semi-repertoire arrangement, believed to be the only one of its kind on record, was one in which a play was presented for two nights, followed by another the next two nights, with an alternated order the following week. Each had a different cast and student director. The plays, "Hay Fever" and Lynn Root and Harry Clark's "The Milky Way," both comedies, were presented the last four nights of the week.

Professor Rhynsburger's experiment is over now but the experience gained from his "Roof Top Theater Under the Stars," unlike any other theater, will be far more notable than a mere change of a playground to a playhouse.

Dean's Assistant

Mrs. Thelma O. Woods, former secretary of the University Alumni Association, is now administrative assistant to Paul Weaver, dean of religious life at Stephens College.

For the past year Mrs. Woods has been promotional director for the Missouri branch of the Save the Children Federation, an international child service organization with national headquarters in New York City.

DR. JAMES N. HADDOCK

Dr. James N. Haddock, who joined the faculty of the University School of Medicine July 1 as instructor in psychiatry. He will serve as full-time psychiatrist for the Student Health Service. A native of Cape Girardeau, he received his M.D. degree from Washington University, St. Louis, in 1943 after attending the University of Missouri.

Ag Editor Resigns

Arthur V. Edwards, B.S. in Ag. '47, resigned effective August 1 as assistant agricultural editor in the College of Agriculture at the University to become an editorial assistant on the Rural Electrification Missourian.

The R.E.M. is a monthly publication for REA farm people of Missouri. Editorial headquarters are in St. Louis.

The audience relaxes in the cool of the evening as they watch the Workshop players perform at the "Roof Top Theater Under the Stars."

Don Faurot --- "Daddy of the Split-T"

By JOHN E. WEAVER

Any directory of the nation's leading football coaches necessarily would include the name of Don Faurot, whose athletic career as a player, head coach, and finally athletic director has been linked with the University of Missouri for more than a quarter of a century.

Faurot, now 47, completed his 20th season as head coach of collegiate football in 1948—and his 11th year at Missouri. He had a nine year coaching internship at Northeast Missouri State College (Kirksville).

The slim, rock-jawed mentor can look back on a productive record. His Kirksville teams won seven M.I.A.A. championships and had piled up a winning streak of 26 straight when Missouri beckoned in 1935. He forthwith ushered the Tigers to their first Big Six title in 1939, again in 1941, and 1942.

Within that same period, his teams produced three All-Americans in quarterback Paul Christman, center Darold Jenkins, and halfback Bob Steuber. Except for the 1935 season, Faurot-tutored teams have never fallen below a tie for third in the conference.

After 20 football autumns, Faurot's record is 130 games won, 47 lost, and 10 tied. At Kirksville, his teams won 63, lost 13, and tied 3. His stay at Missouri has netted a mark of 67 wins against 34 defeats and 7 ties. Three of his teams were represented in post-season bowl games—the 1939, 1941, and the 1948 editions. Curiously, one goal as yet unrealized by Faurot is a triumph by one of his teams in a bowl game.

Faurot's split 'T' formation is to him as "open sesame" was to Ali Baba and his forty thieves. It has opened the door of fame.

His 1939 team—with Pitchin' Paul Christman passing the Tigers to an 8-2 season and their first bowl invite-projected Missouri football and Faurot into the national limelight. Thereafter, the Tigers on the strength of their stature within the Big Six conference were able to schedule increasingly stronger teams in intersectional games . . . and Faurot decided at just about that same time that something new would have to be added in Missouri's offensive scheme to combat "name" teams like Ohio State, Texas, Southern Methodist, Minnesota, and others, which were shortly to make regular appearances on Tiger schedules.

He stayed with his single wing and short punt through 1940, the last year in the Christman era, but looking ahead to the autumn of 1941 he began planning for a new twist in his offense.

Mostly because he felt his new material—year-in, year-out—might be best suited to a new offensive setup, Faurot evolved the Missouri split 'T'. It was used, intermixed with single wing, in the '41 campaign. That year, Mizzou took the Big Six title and went to the Sugar Bowl. In 1942, the Tigers again ruled their conference.

'T' football was in considerable vogue in the early forties, but the Faurot version contained a few vital variations. Most important, Faurot's quarterback was a "slider" rather than a "spinner" as in the original 'T'. Once the play was activated, the quarterback taking the center snap moved parallel with the line of scrimmage.

Another departure from the standard 'T' stuff—and still a characteristic split 'T' trait—was wider line spacing. His linemen maintained one-foot spacing between center and guard, two feet between guard and tackle, and a yard between tackle and end.

Popularly acclaimed as the "Daddy of the split 'T'", Faurot has always said that the idea of a sliding quarterback never came to him as a revelation. He simply felt that his quarterback could be more effective as a runner than the spinning variety. He foresaw early that a deft-fingered, shifty-stepping quarterback could exert tremendous pressure on opposing ends and tackles, by mixing his pitch-out and keep plays.

Faurot's theory behind wider line spacing was to split the defense. He felt that defense against his 'T' was more difficult when the opposition had to widen its five-six-or seven man lines. This spread enables greater use of inside and outside handoffs which are a vital part of the Tigers' quick-hitting offense.

DON FAUROT

A Coach Looks at His Team

By DON FAUROT

MARTIN SAUER

After utilizing both the split T and single wing in 1941, Missouri shifted entirely to the T beginning in 1942. Biggest reason for the emphasis on one style of offense was that 1941 statistics pointed up the efficiency of the 'T' as against the single wing. Whereas the power plays had netted two or three yards per play for instance, the tricky maneuvers of the new 'T' had picked up five or six yards per carry. Then too there were obvious benefits to be derived from exclusive use of the 'T'—more precise ball-handling, more thorough familiarization with plays.

Faurot's tinkering with his original split 'T' has been slight. He has added some new plays to his repertoire to give his attack more deception and assortment, but basically his early plays are still the pet ground-gainers. He tried a man-in-motion sparingly and finally discarded it in 1946. Frequently, he uses a flanker.

Both in 1947 and 1948 Faurot's Tiger teams finished sixth and seventh nationally in total offense. The '47 teams was average—the '48 team good, with a new record of 308 points in ten games.

More and more college grid teams seem to be trending toward the Missouri split 'T'. Most recent split 'T' converts include Oklahoma, Maryland, Alabama, Ole Miss., Detroit, and Cornell.

*Big Seven Conference Game

Night Game

The 1949 football prospects in the University of Missouri are good, that is from spectators' standpoint. We have a pretty good group of boys back and the toughest schedule the Tigers have ever played. There are several "ifs" about the squad that must be straightened out before we win a Conference championship or gain any National recognition, which are the goals of our coaching staff each year.

If Martin Sauer, Hugh Welch, Bob Henley, and Phil Klein can come through at the quarterback position affording us as good an offense as we had last year and if our defensive line can strengthen up a bit and throw back our opponents a little more forcefully we could have a right good year. The line, sparked by Captain Bob Fuchs, will include such lettermen as Ellis Cox, John Kadlec, Gene Pepper, Bronko Marusic, Dick Scholfield, Don Zeller, Freeman Bullock, Paul Savage, Kenny Bounds, Bob Ebinger, Jim Dusenbury, and Dick Armstrong. They must meet and out fight some of the best lines in America including the forward walls of S.M.U., Ohio State, Illinois, and Oklahoma.

In the backfield we are expecting a lot of offensive punch out of halfbacks Dick Braznell, Mike Ghnouly, Ed Stephens, John Glorioso, and Nick Carras. We are hoping for a little more strength in the fullback spot in Winford Carter, Dave Ashley, and Bill Houston.

Some of the reserves we expect a lot of backing from are Dale Portmann, Gene Ackerman, Ends; Dave Millican and Joe Woodson, Tackles; Bob See and Joe Moore, Guards; Bill Fuchs, Gile Blair, Roger Kinson, Jim Rutter, and Herman Baechle at Center.

Our losses from 1948 season are rather severe, losing three of our four All-Conference men. The toughest to replace will be "Bus" Entsminger at Quarterback who called our offensive signals.

It will also be quite a task to replace Captain Chester Fritz who called our defensive signals and directed our team when the opponents had the ball. Mel Sheehan, All-Conference end, and Roland Oaks were great players and we will miss them. Loyd Brinkman and Wilbur Volz were great defensive backs and won't be with us. Robert Dawson, one of the best point kickers in the country, is gone.

Other lettermen we lost by graduation were Howard Bonnett, Bob Wren, and James Wright. We have lost John Donley, 230 pound left tackle, who has dropped out of school to go to work. Hardin Cox, scrappy 190 pound guard from Rock Port, Mo., who injured his ankle playing baseball this summer, will be unable to play this fall.

Don Faurot giving instructions to one of his players who is about to be sent into the game. Faurot is like a busy switchboard operator as he runs his players in and out of the game.

Mizzou's Athletic Department

By JACK DONOVAN

MIKE GHOUPLY

The outlook of the Conference is not too bright with Oklahoma again presenting a powerhouse football team that should easily take first place. Nebraska and Kansas will both be much stronger with each of the other Conference teams showing improvement with new coaches, in addition to personnel, etc. Our tough non-conference schedule should put us in good shape for the Conference race if we don't have too much bad luck with injuries.

We could still have a mighty good team and lose a lot of ball games while playing our 1949 schedule.

Athletic Scholarships

The Board of Curators has approved a plan for awarding scholarships to athletes attending the University of Missouri who have a high scholastic standing.

According to the plan, the scholarships will range in amount from $400 to $600 a year and will come from funds provided by alumni and other persons interested in aiding college athletes who are good students.

The University Committee on Intercollegiate Athletics recommended this plan to the Curators after it had first been approved by the National Collegiate Athletic Association and the Big Seven Conference. If funds are available, the scholarships will be awarded this fall, and will be the first time that such scholarships have been offered at the University.

Under the regulations covering these scholarships only students maintaining a B average in the University and those entering from the top 25 per cent of their high-school class will be eligible. The scholarships will be awarded by a regular University committee and will be listed in University publications and the funds donated for the scholarships will be administered by the University business office.

The final gun sounds, the band strikes up "Old Missouri," and thousands of students and alumni rise in ovation for the hard fighting Missouri squad.

But a little of this well-deserved praise should go to another group of Missourians, the University athletic department.

To these men, every game represents the climax of a lot of difficult and largely unrecognized, hard labor.

The athletic department can be separated into two component divisions. The first, the athletic committee, acts in a guiding and supervisory capacity over all intercollegiate athletics. The committee, appointed by President, Middlebush, consists of three faculty and two alumni members.

Associate Dean Sam B. Shirky of the College of Agriculture, serves as chairman and also acts as faculty representative to the Big 7 Conference. Other faculty members are Dean Loran G. Townsend of the School of Education, and Professor Edward H. Weatherly of the English department.

Alumni members are Oak Hunter, Moberly, and Elmer Weber, St. Louis.

The other group of behind the scene workers is the coaching department headed by Athletic Director Don Faurot. Their job is to get talented Missouri boys to attend the University, and once enrolled, to mold them into a cohesive playing unit.

And Coach Faurot wants it known that the emphasis is definitely upon MISSOURI youths. He feels that since the University is supported by the taxpayers of the state, positions on the athletic teams should go to Missouri residents.

Therefore, all recruiting efforts by his staff are confined within the state boundaries.

Faurot puts it this way. "I've always been very aggressive in the legal recruiting of top-flight Missouri athletes necessary for a well-balanced athletic program at Missouri University. Occasionally a good player comes here from outside the state and of course, he is welcomed. But I've never made an effort to persuade any out-state boy to enroll here."

"The coaching staff believes there are enough good athletes in the state to enable the University to field a team capable of holding its own with anyone," he said.

The records show this to be true. Missouri has been scheduling the top teams in the country the past few years, including their always tough Big 7 Conference foes, and has made a creditable showing in all sports.

With last season's basketball squad playing such headliners as St. Louis, Southern Methodist and Baylor; the baseball team meeting Oklahoma A 1949 may mark the end of an era in Tiger football. An era that has seen many war veterans like Dick Scholfield take time out from practice to chat with his wife and son.

& M; and the track team competing against Notre Dame, Princeton and Army, the University is definitely in the big time sports picture.

This year's football schedule shows no exception. 1949 opponents include Southern Methodist, Ohio State and Oklahoma, all picked by the experts to be the leaders in their areas, and other such gridiron giants as Illinois and the Oklahoma Aggies.

But to keep these top-notchers on the schedule, the school must continue to field teams with comparable ability.

The material is in Missouri. The big job is to get the graduates of the state high schools to put on the uniforms of their own state University, and a major part of this task can be performed by Missouri alumni.

If every alumnus devotes a little of his time in persuading the better athletes to attend Missouri, the result will be a continuation of the present high class athletic program, and even greater success for the Black and Gold Tigers.

And everyone will agree that this is little enough reward for the hard working members of the athletic department who have brought Missouri to the fore in the national collegiate picture.

Pierpoint to Peoria

Two Bengal cage graduates of the 1948-49 squad will not end their playing days, at least for another season.

Karl Pierpoint, diminutive guard and co-captain of last year's team has announced he will join Dan Pippin, another Missouri star declared ineligible in mid-season, in Peoria, Ill., where he will work and play basketball with the famed Diesel Caterpillar Company cagers.

Fans who saw Missouri in action last year will remember 5 ft. 9 in. Karl as a fighting team leader who poured in a big part of his 102 point season total after the Tigers lost Pippin and George Lafferty.

Jumpin' Dan shouldered a big load as team scoring leader last year after the graduation of another Bengal great, Thornton Jenkins, in 1948. Pippin signed with the Diesels earlier in the year.

Woman at Cage Clinic

A possible precedent was set at the June basketball clinic at M. U. when Mrs. Mary Casteel Hazelton of Mt. Moriah (Mo.) High School attended the sessions.

Mrs. Hazelton, a Stephens College graduate, has coached boys' basketball at Mt. Moriah for two years and has inspired her hardwood prodigies to 20 victories against only four defeats.

All-American?

By BILL CALLAHAN

Over the past 15 years, Missouri football teams have been superbly stocked with top-grade centers—and Bob Fuchs, the current office-holder, is not the kind of chap who's about to ruin that tradition.

Starting with the Faurot regime in 1935, good centers came along at regular three-year intervals. There was some overlapping, of course. First on the scene was Huston Betty, now the Tigers' head line coach. Then there was Don Duchek, Charley Moser, Jeff Davis, Darold Jenkins, "Boots" Stewart—and now Fuchs. Virtually every one of that group placed on an all-conference team, and Jenkins climbed to the All-American throne-room in 1941. Now a senior, Fuchs will make his bid for that same All America wreath in 1949, and Tiger grid enthusiasts reckon their stalwart to be an authentic candidate for post-season plaudits.

The husky 210-pound mid-liner from St. Louis already has won himself a prominent place in Coach Faurot's private diary of favorite football players. Faurot unhesitatingly termed his pivot man "the nerve-center of Missouri's defense" in 1948, and conference writers figured it that way, too. They put Fuchs on their All Big Seven teams, and that recognition extended to the Associated Press All Midwest squad.

Fuchs enrolled at the University of Missouri in September, 1946, and was therefore eligible for varsity competition as a freshman. He lettered that year playing behind Stewart, Mizzou's all-conference center for two seasons, and was a full-time regular in 1947 and 1948. Last year he played more minutes than any other Tiger gridder, indicating his worth to the team both on offense and defense. Post-season voting for the 1949 Tiger captain was simply a matter of form. Fuchs was everybody's choice.

A former heavyweight wrestling champ in prep school, Fuchs uses the agility and mobility he learned on the mat to excellent advantage in his line-backing role. He covers plenty of field on defense, and is a shrewd spoiler of enemy plays. On offense, his bulk and charge make him a fearsome "clear-out" man, and it's a rare occasion when plays run over his position don't make consistent yardage. Often when the Tigers need precious yards, they can capitalize on Fuchs' fast and furious offensive charge for the necessary gain right down the middle.

BOB FUCHS

As a prep athlete at Western Military Academy in Illinois, Fuchs won ten letters—three in football and track, and four in wrestling. He was a shot-putter on the track squad. In football, he was on the all-Southwestern Illinois team.

Fuchs—he pronounces it "Fyou-sh-h"—is a pre-med student and intends to be a doctor, following in his father's footsteps. Still somewhat of a youth after three years of college competition, he will be just 21 years old on September 7, 1949. He has a younger brother Bill—also a center—who will be understudying him either in a second or third string capacity on Missouri's varsity this year. An older brother was a quarterback at Wisconsin in 1942.

Fuchs' nickname is a formidable tag. He's seldom called by his first name. To his teammates he's the "Brown Bear" or just simply "Bear." He is a member of the Sigma Nu social fraternity.

Like Father, Like Son

Robert I. Simpson, Jr., son of Missouri's former track star and track coach, is following in his father's footsteps over the hurdles. Young Simpson, who lived in Columbia for several years with his mother while his father was serving overseas, is now a student at West Point. In a recent triangular meet in which Army met Villanova and Fordham, he won both the high and low hurdles.

Robert, senior, world champion hurdler and former track coach at the University received a B.S. in Agriculture here at the University in 1917.

Missouri's Coaching Is a Family Affair

By W. E. JOHNSON

When Coach Don Faurot's Missouri Tigers take the field in quest of the Big Seven crown and a possible bowl bid this fall, they will represent months of intensive work and training of five "behind the scenes" assistant coaches.

Though Faurot has long been listed among the first ten mentors in the nation, he would be the first to agree that a head coach is no better than his assistants make him. And in Houston Betty, Chauncey Simpson, John Simmons, Clay Cooper and newcomer Robert Maddock, Faurot has a carefully hand-picked corps of assistants, any one of which is a competent coach in his own right.

An outstanding member of the coach's official family is former all Big Six ('36 and '37) center "Hoot" Betty, who played on Faurot's first Missouri team in 1935 and has been recently appointed head line coach, the spot vacated by Harry Smith. Betty's specialty is working with centers, traditionally Bengal standouts. An excellent example of his headiwork is Bob Fuchs, all Big Seven and all Midwest in '48, Missouri's All-American hope this fall.

The 34-year old Missouri graduate returned to his Alma Mater as a line coach in 1940 and has since become Faurot's second pair of eyes, sitting in the press-box during games and relaying information to the bench.

"Give me the eleven men who tackle the hardest," he says, "and that's my team. We may not win 'em all, but we'll never look bad in losing."

Backfield coach Chauncey Simpson's athletic and coaching career has been almost entirely linked with Missouri and Don Faurot. After lettering in football and track at the University, he went to Kirksville State Teachers where he was tutored by Faurot in football, basketball, and track. After graduation he became Faurot's assistant and later accompanied him to MU.

From 1943 through 1945, while Faurot was in the Navy, "Chance" took over the Tigers and shepherded them to a Big Six title and the Cotton Bowl in 1945. Still assisting Faurot in the backfield, he turned down a position as head coach at George Washington University last fall, preferring to remain in the Faurot family.

John "Hi" Simmons is the only member of Faurot's staff who never sees the Tigers play except once a year in the annual Thanksgiving day classic—twice if they play a bowl game. As scout for the Tigers, Hi stays one jump ahead of the team, looking over the opposition and reporting his sleuthing to Faurot.

Another Kirksville all-sports man, Simmons came to Missouri in 1937 to take over the Freshman squad. He is also head baseball coach.

In scouting the opposition, "Hi" watches every move of every player, and if a passer rubs his hands together before tossing, Simpson makes a note in his little red book. Faurot says bits of information passed on by "Hi" have resulted in gains "too numerous to mention."

"Simmons is a fine scout," Faurot says. "He usually comes up with a pretty good guess as to what a team will do

Missouri's coaching staff is again at full strength with the addition of Robert Maddock to replace Harry Smith, who resigned to return to his alma mater, Southern California. Pictured here are (standing) Robert Maddock, John "Hi" Simmons, Chauncey Simpson, and trainer, Ollie DeVictor; (kneeling) Houston Betty, Don Faurot, and Clay Cooper.

Memorial Stadium---1949

An artist's version of Memorial Stadium as it will look after the 5000 additional grandstand seats have been completed on the west side. Work is progressing rapidly and the job is expected to be completed in time for the Tigers' first home game.

By ROBERT M. SPONIK

Memorial Stadium, battleground of the Missouri Bengal Tigers, was only a vague dream in April, 1924 when the University appointed a committee to investigate a site and report on the possibility of constructing a hugh bowl. Since then a fitting monument has been erected, at a cost of $360,000, to the memory of the dead of World War I.

Work was hampered throughout the construction by an unusually rainy season. The stadium was completed in ten months and dedicated October 2, 1926, during the heaviest rainfall in 35 years. Sawdust was hammered into the ground and blowtorches were used in an effort to dry it out enough that the ceremony might take place.

In 1925 when the last game was played on Rollins Field, the former Tiger gridiron, taps were sounded from half completed Memorial Tower. Missouri defeated Oklahoma in this game.

The first game in the new stadium was with Tulane in 1926. Columns 20 feet high, bearing the colors of Tulane and Missouri, were placed at 7th, 8th, 9th, and 10th streets. All the stores in Columbia closed in celebration of the event.

Tulane brought one of the greatest bands in the south and a cheering section led by the first female cheer-leader in the country—a former Ziegfield Follies beauty. Missouri was still hampered by the rain for amid a torrential downpour a crowd of 12,000 watched the Tigers slip and slide to a scoreless tie with Tulane.

When the site was cleared for the construction of the stadium, it was necessary to cut down a mighty Walnut tree. Blocks were cut from the tree and 50 letter openers were carved from the blocks. The letter openers are being presented, one each year until they are all gone, to the captains of the football team.

At present the stadium has a seating capacity of 25,000 to 30,000 with the temporary bleachers. It is built in such manner that the entire 25,000 people can be seated in 45 minutes.

Four sections of additional grandstand seats are now being constructed on the west side of the stadium between the 25 yard lines. This will bring the permanent seating capacity to 28,792.

The construction, which will include a new press box at the top, will be payable out of intercollegiate athletic funds and will be completed September 24 at a cost of about $174,000. Thus, this will be an even greater stadium for the greater Tiger teams which are produced each year.

in any game coming up. He has a keen insight into the possibilities of an opposing team."

Only seven years after Clay Cooper left MU with nine athletic letters to his credit, he returned as an assistant coach, tutoring the 'B' team. He also assists in coaching the football and basketball squads.

Besides competing in basketball and track, Clay was Tiger halfback in '38, '39, and '40. Since he has only been with the MU coaching staff two years, Cooper looks forward to the arrival of Bob Maddock. Then "Coop" will no longer be the "boot" of the Faurot family.

Robert Maddock, who fills the vacancy created by the transfer of Harry Smith to Southern California, will not become an official member of the Missouri clan until fall. Twenty-eight-year-old "Bob" played at Notre Dame from 1939-41 and moved over to the professional Chicago Cardinals for the next five years.

Early '46 found him back at Notre Dame again, this time as spring practice students assistant to Frank Leahy. Ed McKeever of the University of San Francisco was his boss in 1947, and the next year they were a team with the Chicago Rockets of the All-American Conference. At Missouri "Bob" will be assistant line coach.

Faurot and his staff stress sportmanship almost as much as aggressiveness in their training. And although the Bengals finished sixth and seventh nationally in total offense in '47 and '48, they were the only team in the conference last year with no personal fouls.

Following each game, the coach and his staff get together and view movies of the contest, noting all flaws in team play so they can be corrected before the next game. And almost every night of the week during the football season the coach and his staff—which was all Missourian until Maddock joined the fold—meet for a conference and iron out all difficulties.

Shaping Missouri football teams is definitely a family affair.

On the eve of the 1949 football race, Big Seven experts show little imagination in their annual "pick-'em-as-you-see-'em" past-time.

Again they figure the conference quarrel will be a "three-hoss' race—Oklahoma, Missouri and Kansas.

They're willing to concede that the usual second-divisioners will be stronger—but they frankly can't see any of the lower echelon teams improved enough to upset the "Big Three" order.

The favorite's mantle belongs to Oklahoma, defending champions and Sugar Bowl conquerors of North Carolina. The Sooners have lost their T-Splitting quarterback, Jack Mitchell, and All-America guard Buddy Burris—but otherwise their lettermen losses were average . . . And their stunning wins over both Mizzou and Kansas in 1948 indicate deep reserve power.

Missouri may have tackle trouble, Kansas may have end trouble—and Oklahoma should have no trouble.

The Tigers must uncover a quarterback to replace Bus Entsminger, one of three all-conference players lost. The lettered nucleus is sound and experienced, perhaps a trifle thin at tackle, perennial Mizzou ailment. Kansas needs first string material at both ends—but the Jayhawks can claim the only returning regular quarterback in Dick Gilman, who pitched 15 touch-down passes last season.

The schedule-fixers have piled extra woe on the '49 Tigers, too. Missouri must take on Oklahoma and Kansas on successive weekends, Nov. 12 and 19. The Sooners play Kansas State before the Tiger engagement (while Mizzou makes the long hop to Boulder, Colo.), and the Kansans have an open date before the M. U. contest.

Nebraska, rebuilding under new coach Biff Glassford, must be reckoned as a threat although no-one expects the Cornhuskers to shake off the effects of three losing years in a single season. Colorado under capable Dal Ward lacked adequate depth in 1948, and yet gave Missouri a sizeable scare. If the Buffaloes acquire the necessary back-up personnel, they could give any of the top-rankers a bad afternoon. Kansas State will field a sophomore-studded team. It figures to be a hustling, willing outfit, hampered possibly by lack of seasoning—but capable of displaying the best post-war football seen at Manhattan. Undermanned Iowa State again will have manpower shortages to overcome—a sturdy starting eleven, but reserves of dubious quality.
