New Flexibility for Intensive Care

By Edwin W. Parkhurst

"At that time, life hangs in the balance," Dr. Richard Martin, a cardiac specialist at the Medical Center, said, in commenting on the critical need for intensive health care in the first few days after a heart attack. In large part it is the need for intensive care in those important days that has prompted the Medical Center to begin construction of a $1-million Intensive Care Unit (ICU).

Employing the most sophisticated techniques for the care of the critically ill, the Medical Center expects to complete the first phase of the ICU in time to admit cerebral-vascular (stroke) and cardio-vascular (coronary) patients by this summer. The first section of the unit will cost about $480,000 and will provide for the care of 12 patients. An additional $520,000 would complete the entire unit, bringing the intensive care patient capacity to approximately 25.

The prime concept behind the unit development means that when total construction of the ICU is completed a variety of critically ill patients may be cared for. Each of the beds of the unit will have a built-in flexibility allowing for specific care concentration based on the particular needs of the patient — whether he be a surgical, thoracic, medicine, stroke, coronary, or neurological case.

Replacing two of the Medical Center's present intensive care facilities, Phase I of the new ICU reflects a nationwide trend in hospital care for the critically ill. By concentrating medical specialists and equipment in limited areas designed specifically for intensive treatment, such units provide optimum patient care at the same time they effect economies in the hospital's total operation.

When the first section of the new unit opens in the fall, it will be a model system for intensive care. Much of the equipment has been developed specially for use by the Medical Center. Every electronic device will be built into unit walls.

A "primary care" corridor runs through the center of the unit while a second corridor circles the rooms. This provides a traffic separation avoiding conflicts between the various persons attending to patient needs. Patient supplies, resuscitation team input, laboratory specimen collection, and visitor traffic move on the outer ring while physicians and nurses arrive at a patient's bedside by using the central "primary care" corridor.

A four-way, audio-visual alarm system will automatically notify the medical personnel on duty of any critical change in a patient's

The unit will be much more than a showplace.

show that in many intensive care units reduced by up to 60 percent.

condition. The alarm will sound; a light outside the patient's room will flash; an "elapsed-time clock" will be activated to indicate at a glance how much time has passed since the patient experienced a critical condition change, and a trace of all patient measurements just prior to the alarm will be "frozen" on a memory system for quick referral in diagnosing the exact nature of the patient's condition.

A combination of three special lighting systems will provide the optimum range of illumination from recessed normal room lighting to variable high-intensity "wide-angle" lighting to an intense beam that can be moved from the wall to pinpoint any spot on the patient's body in performing emergency surgical procedures.

Each patient can speak directly to the nurse at a central nursing station through an intercom in his room. In addition, each patient's condition parameters are channeled into the central station. Dynamic parameters — such as EKG, EEG, direct blood pressure levels, and pulse pressure waveforms — can be observed at a moment's notice on a two-channel oscilloscope. A digital display unit alongside the oscilloscope also monitors the blood pressure, temperature, respiration, and heartrate. The central nursing station will handle most of the administrative work of the ICU. It will also provide for teaching utilization, allowing medical students to observe each patient's condition without disturbing the patient.

Two nursing sub-stations will be the center for primary medical care in the unit. They will provide constant vigilance of two dynamic parameters for each patient in addition to the digital display of static measures. With sliding glass panels forming an entire wall of nearly every room in the unit, each patient is easily observed and quickly accessible to nurses at all times.

Present plans call for a minimum of one ICU physician on duty 24 hours a day with a nursing staff of six, specially trained in stroke and coronary care.

A new generator system hooked directly to the ICU will eventually provide emergency power to back-up every piece of electrical equipment.

Even the decor of the rooms will receive special attention after a study showed that pastel blue was the color most conducive to a patient's well-being. The unit will be color-keyed to match the findings of the study.

Providing twelve beds at an equipment and renovation cost of $40,000 per bed, however, meant that extensive research was a "must." Visits to the Myocardial Infarction Research Unit at the University of Alabama Medical Center in Birmingham, visits to the Miami (Fla.) Heart Institute, to the Menorah Medical Center in Kansas City, to Cincinnati's Christ Hospital, and to the Hospitals and Clinics of the University of Iowa each provided an insight into the strong points and the pitfalls in ICU development.

Development at Missouri included an unusual mock-up phase. A proposed module of the ICU was constructed and used on an experimental basis with physicians, nurses, para-medical personnel, and patient actors playing the roles they would assume in case of an emergency situation. All of the play acting took place before television cameras which recorded the entire sequence from the initial alarm phase of the emergency to the exit of all personnel after the "patient" had been successfully treated. Looking at the video-tape helped to test the practicality of the unit proposals. Had enough space been allowed for? Was the built-in equipment panel in the right place? Were electrical outlets in the proper locations? Were the entrances and exits to the unit wide enough and did they provide a minimum of conflict between physician, nurse, inhalation therapist, and others needed at the time of the emergency?

With these studies and the extensive background development the Medical Center has now been able to stay within the limits of hospital construction costs. Today, on the average, provision of one "regular" hospital bed runs up to $38,000. The Medical Center has added $2000 to that cost and come up with not just a "regular" hospital bed, but a highly sophisticated, custom-built intensive care system that will be a showplace for treatment of the critically ill.

Phase I will be completed by summertime, Phase II still awaits federal, state, and private support. □

The Issue of

By Betsey Barnette

This year's attempt to expand social privileges at University residence halls and Greek houses — better known as the "intervisitation controversy" — has confronted the University community with an involved and frustratingly confused issue. Those expressing support for intervisitation in some form range from Curators to campus leftists.

The issue developed after the Board of Curators vetoed an intervisitation proposal, and student organizations, beginning with the Interfraternity Council, moved to protest the Board's decision by holding pre-arranged intervisitation sessions. Subsequent demonstrations for "student rights" and several abortive attempts to occupy Read Hall and the Memorial Union by more radical groups have complicated the controversy. In fact, these demonstrations appeared to have little or nothing to do with intervisitation and by mid-March had ceased.

Further entangling the issue is the variety of definitions and connotations attributed to the term "intervisitation." To intervisit means to visit a student of the opposite sex in his or her private room, yet all the intervisitation proposals discussed limited such open houses to periods during the time women's dorms are regularly open and required 60 per cent of a house or governing unit to approve the time period.

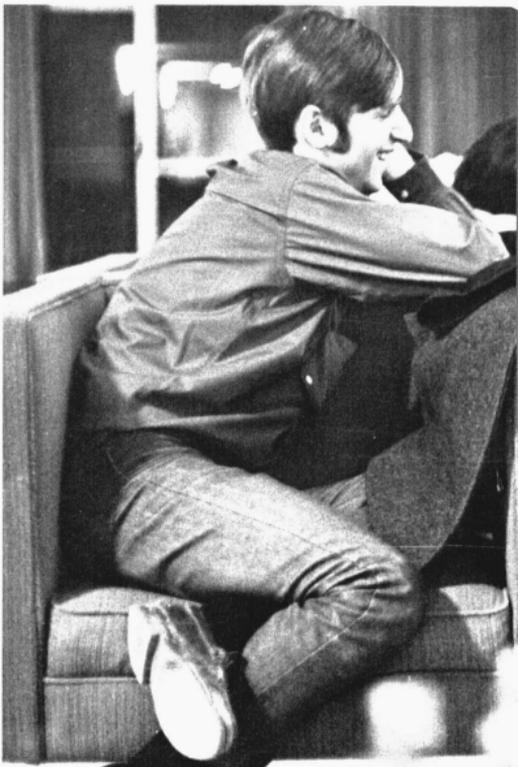

Intervisitation, initially proposed by student residence hall organizations and IFC, gained the approval of the student-faculty Committee on Single Student Housing in the spring of 1969. The committee recommendation, its proposals extensively limited by Chancellor John Schwada, went to President John Weaver and then to the Board of Curators last May. The administration proposal called for two-hour visiting periods Saturday and Sunday afternoons and from 8-11 p.m. on Friday or Saturday nights. Curator William Myers' amendment limited the evening period to four times per semester.

Schwada explains the proposal taken to the Board as "the extension of social privileges under University supervision and with the approval of parents. Certain decisions about the private lives of students are properly a matter between a student and his parent. No university can or should assume this parental responsibility, but there would have been none of the closed-door, unsupervised visiting that sometimes is envisaged.

"We must remember, too," he adds, "that a student's room is his home. It's where he studies and relaxes with his friends; it's where he lives as well as sleeps. The public lounge simply isn't 'home.' The limited proposal would have provided an opportunity for responsible students to gain in maturity and understanding — and the overwhelming share of our students are responsible."

However, some citizens have expressed their belief, through letters to newspapers and University administrators, that intervisitation is an invitation to immorality and drug abuse. In turn, others argue that the University cannot regulate morality or teach personal responsibility with "rigid" rules.

Missouri Students Association President Jim Heeter, a senior from Jefferson City, sees intervisitation as a "laboratory experience in making decisions." Heeter charges that "at the present time, restrictive housing regulations deny the student freedom of choice and deprive him of this valuable experience in the governing of his own life."

Presently students in University-supervised housing may hold four open houses each year for no more than two hours on a Saturday or Sunday afternoon. The intent of the proposal was to gain expansion of this existing privilege. But since the Board of Curators vetoed a proposal which had wide support not only from students, but also from faculty and the administration, the issue has broadened.

Dr. Richard Caple, assistant director of housing (whose office approved the proposal), says now "more students are concerned with the right to decide."

The controversy might never have ensued if the curators had not decided last April to change a 10-year old ruling and take over the responsibility to approve changes in housing rules. Previously, the chancellors, with the approval of the president, had made such decisions (for example, on this campus, the gradual extension of key privileges to women and the elimination of rules governing occupants and visitors to non-supervised off-campus housing).

The Board of Curators' Academic Affairs Committee kept the revised plan in committee during the summer and early fall. In October the committee held a 5½-hour hearing on housing rule changes with members of the Committee on Single Student Housing, administrators, and student leaders. Despite the hearing, students and some administrators continued to feel the Board was not familiar enough with the day-to-day situation on campus to make decisions in the area of housing rules.

At the November Board meeting the Academic Affairs Committee introduced an amended version of the administration's proposal along with two other housing rule changes. However, the proposal was tabled. The Board had kept it for the last six months and the request itself had been in student-faculty-administration channels for about one year.

Believing there was a need for more student comment on the proposal, and with the support of the MSA Senate, IFC and the Association of Women

Students, MSA President Jim Heeter wrote to the Board president requesting permission for student representatives to meet with the entire Board prior to their final decision. The Board president, Judge William Billings, sent copies of the letter to the other curators, but did not respond to Heeter.

In December the Board voted down the Academic Affairs Committee proposal submitted by Myers 5-3 and the administration's recommendation, unamended 8-1. In a February article in the Columbia Tribune, Curator Myers indicated that opposition to the proposal didn't cause the 8-1 margin as much as "procedural confusion" with the other two proposals.

Although the Board had voted decisively, Heeter and some other student leaders and administrators were hopeful the Board would reconsider. Heeter formally requested them to do so.

Other students, however, were more upset. A week before the January Board meeting, IFC voted to hold an illegal intervisitation during the weekend of January 9. Randy Hendricks, IFC president at the time, said, "we were more concerned to show symbolically how we felt. . . . It (the illegal intervisitation) was not a practical action toward achieving our aim. We had high hopes of accomplishing a legitimate aim . . . but the way it was seen — as a confrontation — hurt the intervisitation cause." (Heeter, out of town during the IFC action, was unable to voice his opposition to the IFC decision.)

"There would be none of the closed-door, unsupervised visiting sometimes envisaged."

But despite the fraternity action, the Board took the issue "under advisement" at its January 16 meeting.

The subsequent charges of sex and drug abuse during the fraternities' intervisiting and the placement of the 20 chapters on disciplinary probation added confrontation and open disregard for University regulations to the issue.

With the intermission of final exams and semester break, student anger and frustration grew. Bill Cox, 1970 Maneater editor, sees the January Board meeting as a turning point, where, he says, it became "obvious that the normal way of institution change (through channels) wouldn't work." Cox, who editorially in January praised the attempt to hold off action until the Board reconsidered, in February urged students to join the Independent Residence Hall Association protest — intervisiting one evening in University dorms.

Over Heeter's objection, but with the active support of Rick Goodman, MSA legislative vice president, the Senate voted to support IRHA's protest. Sixty-two of 90 dorm houses voted to participate, but warnings from University officials of possible disciplinary action deterred many students, Beth Jarboe, IRHA secretary, says. The intervisitation protest, itself, was orderly. One house invited friends and faculty to a seminar. About 300 students' names were submitted for disciplinary action.

Another stage in the controversy began after the IRHA protest when the campus leftist group, Committee of Concerned Students, began sponsoring intervisitation rallies. At one occasion, goaded by several former student activists, students gathered outside Read Hall. Three students, who entered the building against the orders of Dean of Students Jack Matthews, were temporarily suspended by Chancellor Schwada until formal disciplinary proceedings could be completed.

Such direct student action coupled with confrontation and the minor beatings of several protestors has in Editor Cox's opinion "hurt the cause to some extent." He feels "the moderate student is not willing to become radical over this issue."

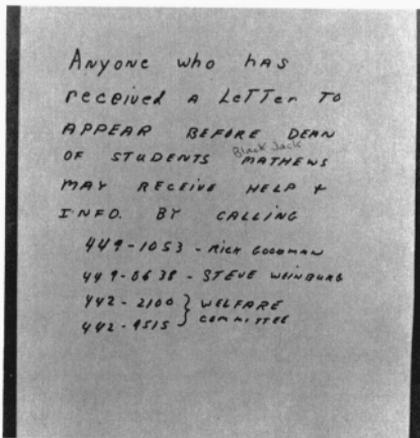

Several subsequent CCS sit-ins at the Memorial Union, involving from 150 to 300 students, centered on student rights. In the later sit-ins, these students scarcely mentioned intervisitation.

The Curators now have said they will reconsider intervisitation when the administration resubmits a proposal. Although there is official silence on this possibility, Heeter believes the Chancellor won't recommend housing rule changes for at least six months.

Schwada says he will ask the faculty-student committee that originally submitted the proposal to reassess it after a review of responses by parents to a survey conducted by the Association of Women Students.

The letter from Sara Jane Graves, AWS president, accompanying the questionnaire states that the "major question . . . raised by the students is whether the Board of Curators' decision represents the opinion of the parents. . . . The purpose of the enclosed questionnaire is to learn your reactions as parents to the open house proposal."

IRHA Secretary Beth Jarboe feels "all we can do is try to impress on the Board we are mature people who can make our own decisions," while former IFC President Randy Hendricks says the issue has "become a matter of principle. We think we have the right to set minimal rules where we go to college and to have a minimal amount of self government."

During the height of the intervisitation controversy, this notice appeared on the bulletin board of one dormitory.

CLASS NOTES

Reader-interest surveys of alumni magazines prove again and again that subscribers rate the class notes of the magazine high in importance. Editors of the Missouri Alumnus are anxious to provide this service, particularly with respect to more complete coverage of the older classes. Alumni news items should be sent to Missouri Alumnus, 312 Jesse Hall, Columbia, Mo. 65201.

Alumni Leaders

Chicago's Joe Hoover pulls the clay pigeon for Kansas City's Bill Symon as host Frank Williams awaits his turn.

In informal, "country" attire, members of the Board listen attentively to President Garth Landis (not pictured) as he presides over the formal business session.

Meet 'Down at the Farm'

FRANK WILLIAMS calls it a "farm," but few others would. They more likely would use the term lodge or even hotel to describe the Kansas City doctor's 14-bedroom, 12-bathroom dwelling east of Clinton, Missouri. Sitting on a bluff, the lodge offers an appealing view. It will become spectacular when the long-awaited Kaysinger Dam project is complete. The water isn't there yet, but for 30 members of the Alumni Association Board of Directors, Dr. Williams was a perfect host and his lodge made a perfect site for the mid-winter board meeting the weekend of February 13. There was ample time for conviviality, and a considerable amount of Association work was done, too.

BOOKS

Stump, Bar and Pulpit
Frances Lea McCurdy, BS Ed '35, AM '44, PhD '57, professor of speech, University of Missouri

The University of Missouri Press has published Dr. McCurdy's lively description of the stock that frontiersmen put in the art of speech. She captures what the Missouri frontiersman of the early nineteenth century was saying about himself and his times in the legislative halls, the courtroom, the campus meeting and the village square. Humor, colorful rhetoric, urgent problems and the spirit of the age are all a part of Stump, Bar and Pulpit, the result of more than 10 years' research.

Little Mack: Joseph B. McCullagh of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat
Charles C. Clayton, BJ '25

When Charles Clayton joined the Globe-Democrat staff in 1925, he worked in the same building which had once housed the office of Joseph B. McCullagh, editor of that newspaper from 1875 to 1896 and a leader of newspapermen into the "new journalism."

Clayton felt compelled to research the man because, as he states, "In view of the national recognition accorded McCullagh during his lifetime, I began to wonder why he was so quickly forgotten. This biographical study is the result of my continuing interest in the enigma of McCullagh."

For those reasons, Clayton uncovered much of the legend, tradition and history of the mysterious "Little Mack," as well as illuminating descriptions of the editor by one of his young reporters, Theodore Dreiser, who became one of America's most noted novelists.

Charles C. Clayton is a former newspaperman and a professor of journalism at Southern Illinois University at Carbondale for 15 years.

When Presidents Meet the Press

M. L. Stein, BJ '42

Every president from George Washington on has had to deal with the problems of handling a free and uncensored press. The bulk of the burden is put upon the White House press secretary — the middle man between the president and the press.

M. L. Stein, chairman of the Department of Journalism at New York University, has investigated the various relationships which press secretaries have had with the president and the news media from Joe Tumulty of Wilson's administration to George Christian of Lyndon Johnson's presidency. The book is published by Julian Messner, a division of Simon and Schuster.

Running Lucky

R. P. Dickey, AB '68, AM '69

A collection of poems published by Swallow Press, Running Lucky contains a variety of poems on a number of subjects. This is Dickey's first collection.

Factories in the Valley: Neenah-Menasha, 1870-1915

Dr. Charles N. Glaab, PhD '58, and Lawrence H. Larsen.

Neenah and Menasha are Wisconsin manufacturing towns that became the nucleus of an industrial region in the Fox River Valley, which was a center of the American paper industry.

Dr. Larsen is professor of history at the University of Toledo; Dr. Larsen is associate professor of history at the University of Missouri at Kansas City.

A Strategy for Guidance

Glen E. Smith, AM '42, Edward C. Roebber and Gary R. Walz

Published by the Macmillan Company, this book is designed for the graduate level in departments of education or counseling and guidance, taking a definite stand on the roles and responsibilities of the guidance counselor. Mr. Smith is chief of the program operation section, Division of Vocational Education of the Michigan Department of Education.

Collected Stories (1893-1897) of Hubert Crackanthorpe

Dr. William Peden, Professor of English, editor

The works of Hubert Crackanthorpe, an almost forgotten British fiction writer who died in 1896 at the age of 26, have been revived in this work under the direction of a University of Missouri-Columbia faculty member.

Crackanthorpe published four volumes which are reproduced intact in the new book. Publication of this current volume was aided by the availability of the British author's four published books in the University library. Dr. Peden said the original books are relatively rare. The University received them among the 2000 books left to the University by Fred M. Dearing in 1963.

According to Peden's 20-page introduction, Crackanthorpe was the most talented and most important of the lesser known authors who lived in England in the 1890's that produced Kipling, Conrad and Henry James.

"He produced some remarkable work, and his early death was not only a personal tragedy but a real loss to literature," Peden states.

The book is published by Scholars' Facsimiles and Reprints, Gainesville, Fla.

Cardiac Arrest and Resuscitation

Dr. Hugh E. Stephenson Jr., BS Med '43, AB '46, professor of surgery, University of Missouri-Columbia

This is the third revised edition of Dr. Stephenson's book.

Among the new contributors to the third edition are Dr. Franklin L. Mitchell, AB '51, BS Med '53, Dr. Jack M. Martt, BS Med '44, and Dr. Richard H. Martin, all faculty members at the University of Missouri-

Columbia.

The publisher is C. V. Mosby Company.

The Daily Needs and Interests of Older People

Adeline M. Hoffman, BS Ed '30, editor

Because gerontology is concerned with so many facets of the lives of older people, this book is multi-authored in order to bring forth views from distinguished leaders in social sciences, biological sciences, home economics and government. Among the contributors is Donald O. Cowgill, Arts '43, professor of sociology at the University.

Although directed primarily to home economists, the book is of interest to all groups and individuals concerned with the problems of people age 65 and over.

The publisher is Charles C. Thomas.

LETTERS

To the editor:

I am doing a master's thesis on the architecture of the quadrangle, Jesse Hall and the architect who designed them, Morris Frederick Bell.

At one time there were a pair of lions and a pair of goddesses on top of Jesse Hall. If anyone knows what happened to them I would appreciate it if he would write me.

Sincerely,

Mrs. Victor A. G. Ohman
501 South Garth Avenue
Columbia, Mo. 65201

To the editor:

May I reply to a letter written to you by William B. Gray, BJ '47, from Alexandria, Va.? It appeared in the Jan. '70 issue.

Gee Bill — do we have to have gloom, doom and revolution to keep our membership in the National Association of Universities?

Did the thought ever cross your mind that the administration at the University of Missouri has kept up with the changing times?

From what I have been reading in the Alumnus, the students and "ye olde establishment" have worked things out. I don't know the shape of the conference table but the results have been excellent.

Did you read "Conduct Code is Revised" in the Jan. '70 issue? Not exactly food for the SDS or any other radical group — just good common sense for the over and under 30 groups.

You know as well as I do Billy, that if Missouri had any fodder for SDS, no time would be wasted getting Huntley and Brinkley to swing from column to column to cover the action.

I'm sure there are a few students who find the regulations irritating and unbearable — but then Judas had his "hang ups" too — just can't leave 'em all.

From the lack of TV, newspaper and telstar coverage of Tigerville, it is safe to say that our President John Weaver and his staff are meeting the challenge, and that the students trust their conscientious, involved leaders.

I think we have a lot to be proud of at Missouri.

Sincerely,
Connie Shelley O'Shaughnessy,
BS Ed '48
Claymont, Delaware

To the editor:

In this era of preservation of threatened species, let's not have such a display, even if it is for team spirit. This is a very sad picture to me. I'd much prefer that this beautiful tiger be in the wild, or at least in the open spaces of a well-planned zoo.

Sincerely,
George Allan Cook,
BS Ed '38, AB '38, MA '39
Kingsville, Texas

To the editor:

I should like to express my appreciation to you for publishing in the January issue of the Alumnus an explanation concerning the distribution of the 1970 Orange Bowl tickets. I was among those disappointed alumni who did not receive a ticket, but wanted to attend the game. In 1965 my wife and I journeyed to the Sugar Bowl to see the Tigers play, and we enjoyed that trip so much we were hoping we could do it again this year to the Orange Bowl. But an offer to purchase tickets did not come as it had in the past, and naturally I was curious as to the reason. Your published explanation supplied the answer in a most satisfactory way, and I am grateful for it.

I would like to add something, however, I do not know whether this year's ticket experience with the Orange Bowl will mean that in the future it will be difficult, if not impossible, for members of the Alumni Association to secure tickets through the Alumni Association to future Tiger Bowl outings. It would not surprise me if this is the case, given the greatly increased interest in and popularity of the Tigers under Dan Devine's masterful coaching. What concerns me is that those of us alumni who do live far from Columbia, and in areas where the Tigers rarely if ever play, will have one less opportunity to see the team in action "in the flesh." What I would hope might happen — whether or not future Tiger Bowl appearances become increasingly inaccessible to widely scattered Missouri alumni — is that a few more of the football teams' regular season games could be scheduled against some of the eastern clubs.

As we look into the decade of the 70's, it would be nice to know that on two or three fall afternoons somewhere ahead we might be able to pile into the car and drive to see the Tigers play again!

Sincerely,
George M. Landes, AB '49
New York, New York

Editor's note: Professor Landes will be pleased to learn that the Tigers are scheduled to play Army at West Point, October 2, 1971.

Editor's note: One of the top priorities of the Alumni Association and the Development Fund this year is a National Merit Scholarship program in which more such scholarships can be funded and more National Merit Scholars can be attracted to the University of Missouri-Columbia. The following letter to Chancellor John W. Schwada is from a scholarship recipient this year.

Dear Chancellor Schwada:

As I have just completed my first semester, I thought this would be an ideal time to write to you.

I mainly want to thank you again for providing me with the National Merit scholarship which makes my attending the University possible. If there were any doubts last year that Mizou was the "right" college for me, they are completely gone now.

I love everything about it — the campus itself is beautiful; my first semester classes were really interesting; and the instructors were each so willing to be helpful. I'm amazed at how much I've learned in the past five months!

And though I know learning comes before socializing, the latter is still important if students are to enjoy college and to become well-rounded. I've also loved Missouri's social life; I've met many intelligent, great students, and it's a credit to the University that it attracts such people.

Again, thank you for making all of this possible. I hope you continue your extensive National Merit program for future freshmen.

Sincerely,
Carol Crosswaite
814A Laws Hall

Clinic for the Home Folks

When Tiger fans see Ol' Mizzou's black athletes performing at Memorial Stadium or Brewer Field House, they probably forget that many of them came from the ghetto — possibly because most Tiger fans are white and probably know little of ghettos.

But the black athletes don't forget.

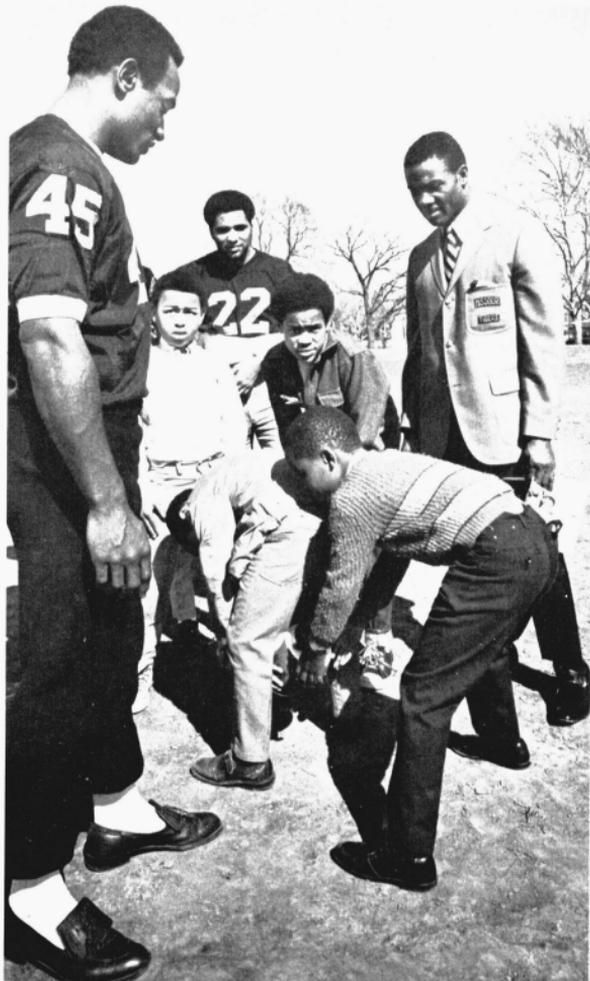

That's why, when Larron Jackson, the 255-pound offensive tackle for the football team, received word that one of the coaches of the Mathews-Dickey Boys Club for youths of the inner city of St. Louis wanted him to return home to talk to the boys about football, Larron responded quickly.

"I wanted to go," said Larron, "but I figured I couldn't talk about anything but the offensive line; so I hoped some of the rest of the guys would help hold a regular clinic."

And "some of the rest of the guys" were eager to help. Joe Moore, of St. Louis, talked about the offensive backs; Lorenzo Brinkley, also of St. Louis, about the defensive secondary; Adam Vital, of Houston, Texas, defensive line; Jon Staggers, Jefferson City, wide receivers; and Garnett Phelps, Louisville, Kentucky, quarterbacks. Assistant Coach Prentice Gautt went along to emcee the program, which was planned entirely by the players.

The 200 boys in a 8-14 age group who turned out were enthralled by the talks (Gautt spoke to them about personal pride), a showing of The Tiger highlight film, demonstrations, and agility drills.

And the players were a little enthralled, too. "I'd like to do it again next year," said Larron.

Joe Moore (45), Jon Staggers (22), and assistant coach Prentice Gautt explain a little about the T-formation to some of the 200 boys attending the March 7 clinic.

SCENES FROM THE CHRISTMAN LEGEND

"The mind raced through memories of those years at Of Mizzou when, thanks more to Christman than to any other, Don Faurot lifted the state university out of the red, meaning the red of embarrassment, as well as financial athletic distress." — Bob Broeg in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

"Christman was not only the best passer I ever had, but he was the best leader. . . . He was an All-American all the way." — Don Faurot, his college football coach.

"The blond crewcut with the merry eyes, the dimples and the slow grin became Missouri's first All-American. But he was even more than that to us. He was the guy we'd all have liked to have been in our little Walter Mitty lives." — Dave Gregg in the Joplin News Herald.

"It was a big heart that made Paul an All-American quarterback at the University of Missouri after he had been snubbed by Notre Dame and dismissed from Purdue's freshman squad. The same big heart made . . . (the) quick-witted charmer the leader of the World Champion Chicago Cardinals. Paul poured his heart into football." — Dave Condon in the Chicago Tribune.

"His ability to rise to each occasion made him the success in telecasting that he was in football — because he never changed. . . . Paul Christman always was in a class alone, mostly because he was class in everything he did." — Bob Burnes in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Young Paul hits books at the Kappa Sig house.

"Let the cheers ring out for Christman," enthused the Kansas City Star in 1939, "who plays for the love of the game and who keeps his head when the going is tough. And let the acclaim ring out for Don Faurot, who started with almost nothing and built this team in five years." Left, a first sacker.

"He was a football player first, but it's quite possible he would have played big-league baseball had it not been for World War II. He played first base for us and hit .400 one year." — John (Hi) Simmons, his college baseball coach.

Christman returned to Columbia in the fall of 1968 to accept a Faculty Alumni award from Curator Bill Myers (top). Last fall he was in Kansas City, the home town of his wife, Inez, to emcee the alumni rally before the Missouri-Kansas game. With Christman is the president of the Kansas City alumni, Skip Snyder. At left, Paul accepts his election into the College Football Hall of Fame in 1956 in Memorial Stadium.

"He talked to our team before several games. He always said just the right thing. When he talked to us before the Illinois game this year, he didn't even talk about football. He talked about life."

— Coach Dan Devine.

"Football will go on without Paul Christman, but it won't be quite the same." — Joe McGuff in the Kansas City Star.

NEWS FROM AROUND

Environmental Teach-Ins Rids Columbia of Trash

Not all university teach-ins are just excuses to cut class and not all youthful demonstrations are violent and destructive. A group of 125 Columbians, mostly students and faculty members, recently proved that point as they ignored 39-degree temperatures and spent two Saturdays shoveling garbage from the Hinkson Creek in northwest Columbia, and on North Garth near Bear Creek.

The campaign to clean up the littered creek was termed an Environmental Teach-in and was sponsored by the Environmental Educational Organization.

The volunteers collected more than just beer cans and garbage as they shoveled under the signs stating "No dumping" — they uncovered appliances, furniture and even a kitchen sink.

Four trucks were supplied by the Columbia Public Works Department to load and haul away the trash. Free soft drinks were also provided for the workers.

Amazingly enough, mountains of garbage were shoveled up and the job was completed by noon.

The project is only one program of the Environmental Educational Organization which is concentrating on a nationwide Environmental Teach-in on April 22, organized nationally by Senator Gaylord Nelson of Wisconsin and Congressman Robert McCloskey of California and locally by Debbie Voorhees, a student. Miss Voorhees and another student, Miss Lynn Sachse, attended a national environmental conference in October headed by Senator Nelson.

Efforts are being made to include high schools, churches, business, and industrial representatives and students from Christian and Stephens Colleges in the teach-in.

As ecology and the survival of the human race have become pressing concerns, this teach-in has been organized to educate citizens and stir them to action, Miss Voorhees said in the Columbia Missourian.

Various reasons for the interest in environment were given by the volunteers at Hinkson Creek. Mark Russell, a junior, stated, "Ecology is something to believe in."

Karen Larwill, also a junior, said, "If something isn't done pretty soon we're going to be living in our own trash."

Equally enthusiastic, though for totally different reasons, was the hard-working volunteer who peered up from the mounds of trash to ask his friend, "Did you find anything good for our room?"

Brock Heads Student Union

Robert Neal Brock, 41, has been appointed director of Memorial Union and Brady Commons at the University of Missouri-Columbia effective March 9. He succeeds A. C. Stotler, who is to become director of the Multipurpose auditorium which is under construction. In this position, Brock is responsible for maintenance, the bookstore, campus vending, and the university food service.

Brock has directed the Hagstad Student Center at Wisconsin State University at River Falls since 1960.

"His greatest asset is his ability to get along with students and to adjust to and anticipate their needs," recommended E. H. Kleinpell, president emeritus at Wisconsin State. Other colleagues mentioned Brock's understanding and leadership with many student and faculty committees, his administrative responsibilities and his ability to relate effectively to others.

Top Executives Are Alumni

Alumni of the University of Missouri-Columbia head several of the largest industrial corporations and businesses in the United States, according to information compiled by the Office of Institutional Research of the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges.

Among the nation's 500 largest industrial corporations, ranked according to sales, three are headed by alumni from Ol' Mizzou. They are:

Charles J. Haines, BS Eng. '17, chairman of the board, Chemetron, ranked 340th in size.

Ernest B. Hueter, BJ '42, president, Interstate Bakeries, the nation's 355th largest corporation.

T. Spencer Shore, AB, BJ '24, chairman of the board, Eagle-Picher Industries, ranked 391st in size.

Among the nation's 50 largest transportation companies, ranked according to operating revenues, one is headed by Paul A. Gorman, BS BA '29, president, Penn Central of Philadelphia, which is the largest transportation company in the United States. Before becoming president recently of Penn Central, Gorman was president of Western Electric, the nation's 12th largest industrial corporation (see February issue of Missouri Alumni).

life insurance companies, ranked according to assets. They are Walter E. Bixby, Sr., Arts '17, chairman of the board, Kansas City Life, the 45th largest life insurance company in the nation and Joseph R. Bixby, Arts '47, president, Kansas City Life.

Among the nation's top 50 utilities, ranked according to assets, one is headed by J. W. McAfee, LLB '26, chairman of the board, Union Electric of St. Louis, the 24th largest utility in the United States.

Sources consulted by the Office of Institutional Research in its survey were Fortune Magazine, and Poor's Register of Corporations, Directors and Executives.

Some Grad School Students Will Have to Pay Tuition

Non-resident graduate students will now have to pay tuition at the University of Missouri, according to action taken by the Board of Curators at its February 13 meeting.

The measure, effective with the fall semester 1971, does not apply to staff members on a 25 per cent or more appointment or on full-time hourly status.

Previously, all graduate students were exempt from the $400 per semester tuition.

New St. Louis Officers

Unanimously elected as the St. Louis alumni chapter officers for 1970 were: President, Tom Heapes; first vice president, John Cooper; secretary, Steve Kopcha; treasurer, Al Richter; vice president, band concert, Joe Hoffman; vice president, public relations, David Colwell; vice president, athletic liaison, Bud Wallach; vice president, development fund liaison, Bill Ward, Jr.; vice president, activities, Don Hoehne; and vice president, membership, Dietrich Mueller.

A banquet crowd of nearly 400 alumni gathered on February 21 for the meeting. Guests of honor were Dan Devine, his coaching staff and the St. Louis Missouri Alumni All America team, made up of St. Louis Tiger seniors.

A busy year was reported by the vice president for public relations, Dave Colwell, who cited the 1969 highlights:

"The Eighth Annual Scholarship Fund Benefit Marching Mizzou Band Concert was held last April, sponsored jointly by the St. Louis Alumni and Carondelet Savings and Loan, which raised the roof of Kiel Auditorium at least three inches.

"The First Annual Mitch Murch Memorial Munch was held before, after, and during last year's Mizzou-Illinois game at Busch Stadium, and guaranteed to return for a bigger and better second engagement this year. Only Don Hoehne knows how many wild-eyed fanatic alumni had to be turned away last year. Five hundred tickets were sold almost instantly. And that's all there were.

"But the most memorable, and by far the most constructive project of last year began as a result of a Red Carpet tour of the Columbia campus by St. Louis businessmen. Out of this tour, arranged and promoted by Werner Mueller and Darryl Francis, came the impetus for the St. Louis chapter's participation in the National Merit Scholarship Fund drive.

"The St. Louis Association opened a savings account with a $500 gift for the expressed purpose of building an endowment for scholarships to National Merit Scholars from the St. Louis area. Last year's Development Fund drive in St. Louis, headed by Bill Ward Jr., and normally conducted to raise general funds for the University, was earmarked, instead, for the National Merit Scholarship fund. The drive was climaxed by a Telefund in February when better than 400 alumni spent two evenings calling 700 other St. Louis area alumni and received pledges in excess of $1600, with more than 100 pledges still outstanding."

Dinner to Honor Matthews

A banquet in honor of Jack Matthews, who will retire as dean of students in August, has been set for May 20 at the Memorial Union.

Any alumnus desiring to attend the dinner or to contribute to the Jack Matthews Gift Fund should send his check (the dinner is $3.25) to the banquet chairman, Don Faurot, 314 Jesse Hall, Columbia.

Annual Election Notice

The annual election of officers for the Alumni Association of the University of Missouri-Columbia will be held at 9 a.m. Saturday, May 16, 1970, at the Memorial Student Union, Columbia, Missouri.

Nominations for president, three vice presidents, and a treasurer are now being accepted by the secretary's office, 314 Jesse Hall, Columbia, Missouri 65201. Nominations close May 1, and the Board of Directors will vote on said nominations.

DeWeese Aids Committee For Greek Medical Study

Among a committee of noted U.S. surgeons who have been asked to advise the Greek government on medical-surgical education is a Columbia campus professor. Dr. Marion S. DeWeese, professor and chairman of the surgery department at the University, is one of 12 American surgeons included in the group.

The Ministry of Social Service of Greece invited the committee to Athens in February. They will participate in a study of Greek medical education with special emphasis on surgical education for the purpose of making recommendations of improvements in the standards of medical-surgical education in Greece.

Center Adds Therapy Unit

A six-room addition complete with a new cobalt radiation therapy unit is expected to be ready for use July 1 at the radiology department of the University Medical Center.

The $100,000 addition will house two treatment rooms, an office for physicians, and physicist's office and laboratory and a radium storage room. A new $70,000 Cobalt 60 Teletherapy Unit will be installed in one of the treatment rooms, allowing as many as 30 patients a day, compared to the present 20, to be treated.

Students Enter Contest

Three medical students will represent the University at the national student research forums in April.

C. K. Osborne, a second year student, and James A. Goeken, a third year student, will present their research papers April 23-25 at the National Student Research Forum at the University of Texas Medical Branch in Galveston. The students will compete for $350, $200, and $100 awards.

Thomas P. Dresser, graduate student in physiology, was selected to present his research paper April 5-7 at the Midwest-Regional Forum for Medical Student Research at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor.

The students were chosen after presenting their papers before a medical school faculty committee and the general public at the sixth annual Student Research Day.

Four New Grants Received

Some $53,000 in grants has been received by the University for the continuation of four medical projects.

Dr. Harry Stoeckle, professor of pediatrics, will direct a $25,542 grant from the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare for the fifth year of work of "Arrhythmias Following Defibrillatory Waveforms."

A $13,861 grant from HEW will allow Dr. Owen J. Koeppe, professor and chairman of biochemistry, to begin his fourth year of work on "Enzymatic Synthesis of Aromatic Amides."

Chairman of pediatrics, Dr. Robert L. Jackson will direct a $5000 grant from the Upjohn Company for his continued work in the prevention of diabetes in children.

The sixth year of work on "Micro-structure Studies of Gastric Secretion," directed by Dr. Daniel H. Winship, associate professor of medicine, has received an $8711 grant from HEW.

Funds Approved For Study

An attack against diabetes mellitus, the eighth largest killer in the United States, is being launched by the Missouri Regional Medical Program.

Dr. Arthur E. Rikli, coordinator for the MRMP, announced the approval by the Advisory Council of expenditures of $190,155 over a three-year period for the "early diagnosis and treatment of children with diabetes to delay or prevent changes of the disease."

Medical teams from the Medical Center will travel to the Missouri communities of Sedalia, Washington, and Sullivan every three to four months to offer assistance to physicians for detection and treatment of the disease in children.

Guthrie Takes Position As Visiting Professor

A visiting professorship at the School of Medicine of the University of Haiti has been accepted by Dr. Richard A. Guthrie, assistant professor of pediatrics at the University. Guthrie will be a visiting professor at the University in Port-au-Prince in August.

He will be accompanied by his wife, Diana, a diabetic nurse consultant at the Medical Center. He also will conduct clinics in small Haitian communities, sponsored by the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

Shear Member of Panel

A Columbia campus assistant professor of biochemistry, Dr. David B. Shear, participated in a recent panel on space research held in New Haven, Conn.

MED SCHOOL

During the sessions, sponsored by the American Institute of Biological Sciences — National Aeronautics and Space Administration, the panel discussed the effects of weightlessness and radiation in space on plant and animal organisms which were aboard the Biosatellite II in 1967. The panel, Shear said, also made informal recommendations about the future of biological research in the space program and the possibilities of biological experiments conducted aboard a manned orbiting space laboratory.

Associate Dean Honored

The associate dean of the School of Medicine in charge of the School of Nursing, Dr. Ruby Potter, has been honored for her outstanding accomplishment in the field of nursing.

Dr. Potter is the ninth recipient of the Allstate Foundation's Gold Medal award.

She received her master's in education from the University and was supervisor of obstetrical nursing at Noyes Hospital, affiliated with the School of Nursing. Dr. Potter has headed the Missouri School of Nursing since 1956.

Medical School Ranks First In Dermatology Production

More dermatologists are produced by the University School of Medicine than any other institution in the nation. According to the AMA report, based on per 1000 graduates through 1967, 2.84 per cent of the University's graduates have gone on for further training in dermatology.

An approved three-year residency program is offered at Missouri in accordance with the American Board of Dermatology. The division here operates in-patient service at the Medical Center for adults and children and, in addition, 5364 outpatient clinic visits were recorded last year. Other clinical experience for trainees in dermatology is offered at Ellis Fischel Cancer Hospital and the University Student Health Service in Columbia and at Kansas City General Hospital.

Chief of the dermatology section of the University Dr. Norman Asel said eight physicians are now in training as dermatologists — current capacity for trainees — and Missouri graduates are also in training at six other medical centers.

The University is followed in the production of dermatologists by UCLA, Duke, Michigan, Puerto Rico, West Virginia, Rush, USC, Buffalo, and New Jersey.

Buesseler Named New Dean Of Texas Tech Med School

A professor of ophthalmology and a University graduate, Dr. John A. Buessler, has been named dean of the Texas Tech University Medical School. As dean, he will assume the duties of vice president for health affairs and chief executive officer of the Medical Center in Lubbock.

Buesseler has been a professor at the School of Medicine since 1961 and was founding chief of the Ophthalmology Service from 1959 to 1966.

In 1941 Buessler received his bachelor's degree from the University of Wisconsin at Madison, and his M.D. degree there in 1944. He earned a master of science degree in business administration on the Columbia campus in 1965 and is a candidate for a Ph.D from Cornell University.
