

MISSOURI ALUMNUS

JUNE 1970

AGRICULTURE EDITION

This is our fourth spring.

Since returning to the Columbia campus to edit the Missouri Alumnus. So we really should have known better. We should have known that the students would do something that would require a report to the alumni and saved space for it. But we didn't, so the individual divisional features scheduled for this issue were scrapped in favor of an explanation of what happened those few days in May.

The first spring four years ago featured a chalk-in at the courthouse in downtown Columbia. As we recall, it involved a thousand or 1500 students who were protesting some other students being arrested for writing on the sidewalk.

The next year the "uprising" took the form of an old-fashioned panty raid; last spring was highlighted by the 12-letter-word-obscenity-free-speech controversy; and this year, of course, Cambodia and Kent State set things off.

Next spring, as the weather gets warm after a Boone County winter and finals get closer, there'll probably be something else. Anyway, we're going to save space.

This month's story was written before the Curators' action on June 2. Maybe we should save some pages for the September issue, too.

What kind of student attends rallies? One young man brings his cot so he can demonstrate comfortably (top); another group is out plugging its own cause (bottom); the girl in the center photo seems truly interested and concerned. And is that a militant on the right? Or is the shirt merely "in."

the Cool Days of May

By Steve Shinn

Two students lettered their demands on a sheet. One ROTC student carefully studies the proposed agreement between the administration and demonstrators, while Bill Wickersham, assistant professor, explains the settlement to the crowd above. Long a leader in the peace movement, Wickersham was considered one of the rallies' instigators by some and the person who kept things cool by others. He is on terminal contract with the University. In the small picture on the opposite page is law professor Bill Murphy, chairman of the Faculty Council on University Policy that helped with the settlement.

This article started out to be an objective report concerning the student rallies and the administration's response to them during the first two weeks of May.

It soon became clear to me that I couldn't write a report that would be completely accurate, and some might even question my objectivity. I read the files we had clipped from the St. Louis Globe-Democrat and the Columbia Tribune, from the Kansas City Star and the Columbia Missourian, from the student newspaper, the Maneater, and white papers published by the campus's Office of Public Information. Sometimes it seemed that some of these reports were talking about different events. I listened to the radio, watched television, and even attended three or four of the rallies for a time. (The pictures on these pages may give you some of the rally atmosphere, too.)

The situation seemed too complex for a completely objective report; it contained too many diverse happenings for a completely accurate statement in anything under 10 or 12 pages. And by the time you read this, the students will have gone home, and student rallies everywhere undoubtedly will be off the front pages.

This, then, is simply a personal report from the editor of the Alumnus to his readers.

First of all, regrettable though student unrest may be, it would have been unusual if nothing had occurred on the Columbia campus. What was happening elsewhere — the problems on hundreds of other campuses across the country following Cambodia and the Kent University affair — was well reported by the newspapers, radio and television throughout the land.

What did occur here were several rallies of up to 3000 students (less than 15 per cent of the enrollment, but still a sizeable number). Many students undoubtedly were legitimately concerned about the state of the union. A few probably seized on this issue as a means to force a confrontation. And as an old rally observer, I think a considerable number were spectators.

What did not occur was violence.

Bad manners were sometimes in evidence. There were some tense moments at the steps of Jesse

On Monday, May 11, the tensest day of the rallies, protesters queued up quietly to be arrested by campus police (left, below). They later were released, however. Rallies also proved to be a good place to meet one's friends (see photo above).

Hall — which had been thoughtfully locked by the administration.

But no one was shot, or otherwise injured. No buildings were burned.

The administration did not "sell out" to "non-negotiable" student demands.

The campus stayed open.

The vast majority of students continued to go to class, and the faculty continued to teach.

There was an awfully lot of dialogue (we used to call it "talk"). In fact the rallies may well have dialogued themselves out.

But whatever the reason — whether it was the traditional reasonableness of the Missouri student, the no-nonsense firmness of the administration, the mediating influence of the faculty, or a hard rain on May 14 and 15 — the fact remains that the Columbia campus came off uncommonly well.

And all alumni — whether you have polarized yourself on the left or on the right, or are even somewhere in the middle (please, let somebody still be there) — have every right to be proud of Alma Mater during a hot spring when it kept its cool. □

The more things change, the more they stay the same.

JACK MATTHEWS: THE ALUMNI ASSOCIATION'S ALL- AMERICAN DEAN

By Jack Taylor

Reading order to disperse, Jack Matthews has final confrontation with students last month. Later that week, the Alumni Association announced it was presenting its Distinguished Service Award to Matthews, who is retiring this year as Dean of Students. In the following story, Matthews tells some of the incidents of his 20-year tenure and some of the differences between the student of 1950 and 1970.

"This year I reached the zenith of my unpopularity."

Not long after Jack Matthews became dean of students in 1950 he was invited to occupy a seat of honor at the Farmers Fair—on the dunking boat above the water tank of a popular concession.

Even then the dean was a prime target of student fervor. The price of three baseballs to be tossed in his direction promptly soared from 10 cents to a quarter. Business was uncommonly brisk as students eagerly purchased their three chances to drench the dean. He was dropped into the water half a dozen times in quick order—the contrivance having been so rigged as to unload its victim if the baseball came anywhere near the release gadget.

The fun soon ended, however, when a prankster slipped a purple dye into the water, but the dripping dean, having coated his body with oil, escaped without changing colors. (The culprit was apprehended by husky ag students who shaved his head and painted it an appropriate purple).

No question but what this carnival episode served as a thorough baptism for the new dean, in a literal sense, but actually his real induction came about even earlier through two more burdensome events.

One of his first official duties was to carry out a mandate to remove the bars and rathskellers that had flourished in many of the fraternity houses. Then, in 1952, a segment of the student body staged a mighty panty raid. Dean Matthews became chief investigator, and more than 200 participants were disciplined.

If Jack Matthews had been conducting a personal unpopularity contest, he was off to a flying start. In the intervening years his image has had its ups and downs in student favor, but in the last 18 months or so the dean has, in his own words, "reached the zenith of my unpopularity." He attributes this dubious distinction to two campus controversies—the so-called "free speech" issue and the more recent confrontation over intervisitation rights in the organized houses.

The dean's appraisal of his standing on the popularity chart is an obvious overstatement and fails to jibe with several campus demonstrations in his honor. These were the dinners given by the Interfraternity Council and the Panhellenic Council, the senior honor societies, Alpha Zeta, Zeta Beta Tau, and the general testimonial banquet which brought an overflow crowd to Memorial Union on May 20. The wording of the IFC-Panhellenic citation was typical of others: "In recognition and appreciation of his many faithful years of steadfast devotion and interest in the students of the University of Missouri-Columbia."

As a student on this campus in the late '20s, as athletic coach, professor, counselor, and disciplinarian, Jack Matthews probably knows Mizzou students better than anyone else—more of them and more about them, too.

Discussing the students of today and those of the past, Dean Matthews likes to begin with a physical comparison.

"The difference in students now and those in the 1950s is that their hair is longer and their skirts are shorter," he quipped. Then, seriously:

"Students today generally are much more concerned about everything—the world in which they live, about society in general, about all the problems which they think the older generation has not solved or even worked at solving very hard. And, of course, the war—we've always had student opposition to wars, and I think the real crux of student dissent nowadays is the war in Indochina.

"The quality of our students now is certainly superior. The average intelligence is considerably higher than 10, 15 or 20 years ago.

"One difference in students today is that they don't accept without questioning anything that is told them. I have no objection to dissent, and I think it's a good thing as long as it is carried on without violence or without interfering with the rights of others. I've been picketed any number of times in front of Read Hall (his office) and I tell students, picket all you want to, walk in circles, but do not interfere with anyone who is trying to come into my office."

The dean said today's students are concerned about improving the overall University.

"But they want it to happen right now. Change doesn't occur like that. The change must come after getting people informed and knowledgeable. But this is youth for you, they want it now."

Dean Matthews recalled former years when he knew hundreds of students by name and contrasted that relatively easy-going state with today's more complex situation.

"When I first came into this job I knew the presidents of every fraternity and sorority. One night, Kathryn (Mrs. Matthews) and I went to 12 or 13 formal dances. We did this because we wanted

Chip Off Famous Column Donated By Oldest Living Member of QEBH

The six columns left when old Academic Hall burned down have long been a symbol of the Columbia campus, but they may not be quite as solid as they seem. When CLAUDE BARTON HUTCHISON, BS Agr '08, LLD '37, was a student, a friend of his climbed up on one of the columns and chipped off a small piece which he later gave to Hutchison.

Now the chip belongs to the Alumni Association, thanks to Hutchison's recent donation. It will be mounted on walnut with a plaque explaining its history.

Hutchison, vice president emeritus of the University of California at Berkeley and dean emeritus of agriculture at that school, is the oldest known living member of QEBH, men's honorary fraternity. He was initiated in 1907.

The 85 year-old alumnus says of the chip, "This will interest some of my grandchildren and their contemporaries to learn that undergraduates in my days engaged in extra-curricular activities, too, a bit less destructive than some which occur today."

A former mayor of Berkeley, California, Hutchison once served as Director of Agricultural Education in Europe for the Rockefeller Education-

Board, and was decorated with the Order of the White Lion by the Czechoslovakian Republic and by the King of Belgium.

He holds an MS degree from Cornell University and an MS from Harvard.

Known as "Si" to his undergraduate friends in Columbia, Hutchison was instrumental in establishing the mother chapter of Farm House.

To the editor:

Dear Sir:

I would like to register my support (which I gather is of the great silent minority group of M. U. alumni) for the students against the V-N and Cambodia war, against National Guard patrols of college campuses, against college administration's loss of freedom of thought, teaching and leadership, in deference to rightist holders of purse strings and authority — and my hope for more public funds for the University and educational projects — not for bigger athletic stadia, scholarships, trips, and trimmings. We need so much more important research and study.

SPORTS

The recruiting season is over for Missouri football and basketball coaches and, although they would be the first to admit that no one can be 100 per cent sure how the youngsters will perform on the field and court, it also seems certain that this crop of high school seniors will help keep the football program on top and basketball moving up.

Twenty-one of the 44 football prospects and seven of the nine basketball recruits won all-state honors. Coach Norm Stewart came up with the tallest Tiger prospect ever in Gail Wolf, 6-11½, Okawville, Ill., who was chosen as the small high school player of the year in his state after the past basketball season. Coach Dan Devine's results were near perfect in Missouri and the best for many years in the Kansas City area.

There were two or three good Missouri high school basketball players who went out of state; the football coaches failed to come up with a "name" running back, although they finished second on five or six; and a few recruits have yet to qualify academically under the NCAA 1.6 rule. But at this point the pluses of this year's recruiting effort seem to far outweigh the minuses.

Football all-staters are: quarterbacks, Mike Robb, 6-1, 185, Warrensburg, and Ed Johndrow, 6-1, 175, Shawnee Mission (Kan.) South; halfbacks, Bob Keeney, 6-2, 200, Waynesville; Jeff Luedke, 6-0, 178, Rockford, Ill.; Alex Devora, 5-11, 195, San Antonio, Texas, a Catholic all-American; Dick Franklin, 5-10, 200, Princeton; Steve Rogers, 6-2, 180, Chaffee, also a wide receiver; Chuck Link, 5-10, 180, Aurora; and Mike Steinmann, 6-2, 180, Centralia, Ill., another wide receiver; fullbacks, Scott Pickens, 6-2, 205, Peoria, Ill.; Mack Morris, 6-1, 210, Mattoon, Ill., who averaged 5.8 yards per carry; and Bob Orsi, 6-0, 190, an all-American linebacker.

Ends, Bob Prather, 6-3, 190, Grant City; Steve Schreiber, 6-4, 210, Sioux City, Iowa; and Chuck Brookfield, 6-6, 245 Kansas City Pem Day, an all-stater in 1968; interior linemen, Paul Adamson, 6-3, 220, Belleville (Ill.) West, all-American; Jim Hrodey, 6-3, 220, Decatur, Ill., all-American; Zack Cartwright, 6-2, 210, St. Louis Brentwood; Mike See, 6-0, 200, Columbia Hickman; Ned Stephens, 6-5, 245, Kansas City Southeast, all-American; and Rich Henry, 6-2, 210, Kansas City Oak Park, all-American.

The others, all of whom had post-season honors ranging from all-conference to all-district and all-metro, were: quarterbacks, Tim Kauble, 6-4, 190, Camdenton; Dan Hill, 6-2, 190, Wichita, Kan., second team all-stater; John Bunch, 6-3, 205, Belleville (Ill.) West; Joe Gross, 6-3, 185, San Antonio, Texas; and Mike Zelenovich, 6-3, 210, St. Louis River-view Gardens; halfbacks, Tom Mulkey, 6-0, 190, St. Louis Cleveland; Mark Boxdorfer, 6-1, 200, St. Louis Mercy; Ken Gregory, 6-0, 185, St. Louis Soldan, also a quarterback; Jim Crum, 5-11, 185, Sacramento, Calif., who runs a 10-second hundred; Harvey Hardeman, 5-10, 170, San Antonio, Texas, a :9.9 sprinter; Steve Mahnen, 6-1, 190, Higgensville; Jeff Morton, 6-3, 195, Cypress, Calif.; and Bruce Berry, 6-1, 180, Minneapolis, Minn.; fullback, Don Muse, 6-3, 200, St. Louis Lafayette.

Ends, Mike Matthews, 6-2, 210, St. Louis Beaumont; Ray Miller, 6-2, 215, St. Louis Augustinian; and John Kelsey, 6-6, 215, Belton; interior linemen, Mike Levick, 6-2, 205, St. Louis Vianney; Ferrell Preston, 6-3, 225, St. Louis McCluer; Jeff Fishburn, 6-2, 215, St. Louis Ritenour; Larry Theiss, 6-4, 215, Lee's Summit; Dennis Vanarsdall, 6-2, 225, Kansas City Fort Osage; and Phil Poppa, 6-2, 205, Kansas City Rockhurst.

Besides Wolf, Stewart attracted all-staters Mike Love, 6-5, Joplin; Steve Blind, 6-3½, and Gary Link, 6-5, the stars of St. Louis Lindberg's 30-1 team; Rick Atzen, 6-10, Davenport, Iowa; John Cornelis, 6-2, Rock Island, Ill.; and Mike Lieppman, 6-5, St. Joe, an all-stater in 1969 and the valedictorian of his class, and Al Eberhart, 6-5½, Springfield, Iowa, and Bill Flamank, 6-5, Raytown South. Flamank, who played for the Missouri Class L champions, is the third member of his family to attend Ol' Mizzou. His dad, George Sr., was a three-sport letterman for the Tigers in the mid-twenties, and his brother George won three basketball letters in the early sixties.

For the Tiger Sports buff who just can't seem to read enough about his favorite team, the Columbia Missourian is making a special offer:

Seven months of the daily newspaper, published by the School of Journalism, for $10.50. That's a savings of $7 from the regular subscription price of $17.50. The special sports subscriptions will start September 1, and end March 31. Checks should be made payable to the Missourian, P.O. Box 917, Columbia, Missouri 65201.

A new sports publication, the Big 8 Banner is scheduled to begin in August. The weekly newspaper will cover the Big 8 Conference and span 46 consecutive weeks. For more information, write P. O. Box 1097, Topeka, Kansas 66601.

to and because we wanted to know these students.

"Now that the office staff has expanded I am out of touch, so to speak, with many students that I would have known on a first-name basis in earlier years, and I regret this change very much. Now I know fairly well only the top officers of our top student organizations.

"This limitation is the result of more administrative work, larger staff, larger enrollment, and it has been one of our big problems. This has resulted in thousands of students knowing me by reputation only.

"When these students are in here with some problem or difficulty, they're a little surprised that my horns at least are retracted. I am not quite the guy they expected to see."

Through it all the dean has kept himself accessible, practicing an open door policy. In his home he has four telephones. He has told students, "Call me any time you need help, or if you just want to communicate with me."

This invitation to call has been taken too literally by many a prankster through the years. For the phone to ring in the Matthews home at 2:30 or 3:30 in the morning is not unusual. Invariably it is a student with a gag or a silly question. Surprisingly, this doesn't bother the dean at all, and he can go right back to sleep. He accepts it as part of his job, and goes along with the gag. On one occasion late at night Mrs. Matthews answered the phone and spoke sharply to the anonymous caller. "You shouldn't have done that," Jack said. "If word gets around that the old dean blows his top I'll get 89 calls a night."

For 18 years of his deanship, Jack Matthews has also served as chairman of the Committee on Student Conduct.

"On the one hand you're trying to help students as individuals and as organizations to achieve whatever their goals are," he said. "On the other hand you have to discipline them. This is a rather difficult dual role if you think you're in a popularity contest."

The dean appears to thrive in his job. The former crew cut has been allowed to grow to regular lengths, and the man retains much of his old bounce. He can discuss the vicissitudes of his work with almost jovial ease.

"I would say that my unpopularity reached its zenith, if that's a good word, with something that occurred last year in connection with SDS (distribution of a publication) which was called inaccurately the free speech issue.

"I suppose I was taken to task by students more over that than anything that has happened during my career, unless it was the matter of the infamous panty raid of 1952. We had to make judgments on many students involved in that most destructive raid. That centered for the first time a lot of negative attitude toward me.

"Now this last year I suppose I've had more unusual, difficult, controversial problems arise than in any year I've been on the job. Anytime you have to take a position, to thwart, to slow down, to confront anybody or any group of people, whether they are students or whatever group, then you can, in the eyes of a certain group or maybe a large section of the population, become pretty unpopular.

"The thing that heartened me in that situation last year was the large number of letters and telephone calls I had from people, in the University community, citizens of the state, every rank and file of people. It was absolutely amazing. This support of the people meant more to me than anything that has happened in my long 20 years.

"It was interesting that the highest percentage retired dean will be prepping himself to resume teaching physical education courses in the winter semester. These activities probably will be scheduled so that he can still preside at the public address system for football games in Memorial Stadium, as he has done for years.

To the inevitable question a retiree expects, "Would you like to do it over again?" Matthews replied in a positive way:

"I'd like to do it over again. The only reason is that I could carry some of my learnings back and start all over again. Because when everyone gets to this point in a game you think, well, there were some good plays and we had some touchdowns scored, but gee, I sure made a mistake on that; I wish I could replay that one.

Matthews and Mitch Murch, left, display "All-American Dean" blanket presented by Association. Murch was master of ceremonies for the event.

of letters backing my stand, which was in support of a Board of Curators regulation, came from the lawyers of the state."

The intervisitation issue has also made the dean's last year in office memorable from the standpoint of the number of students involved. Even in the month of May he was still interviewing members of 20 fraternities and 250 students from residence halls accused of wittingly violating University regulations.

During the next semester Dr. and Mrs. Matthews plan to do some traveling, probably abroad, and the

"Yes, I've made mistakes. There isn't a person that works a day who doesn't make a mistake. Sometimes there are injustices done; we don't want that.

"There is no greater compliment a student can pay me—and several of them have paid me this compliment as they left the office. They said, 'You've certainly been fair.' This is the thing you hope that students will feel. So those remarks of students who say, 'You may be tough, you may be hard, you may be an s.o.b., but you're fair'—that's it. You can't want any more than that." □

Most Students Consider Demonstrations Ineffective

Despite what publicity concerning student demonstrations might lead you to believe, a recent poll taken on the Columbia campus confirms what most of us already knew: The majority of students do not participate.

The poll, taken by the Institute for Contemporary Political and Social Research, indicated that 74.1 per cent of University students interviewed by telephone said they had never participated in what they would call a student demonstration, and 72.2 per cent said they didn't believe University administrators pay much attention to demonstrators' demands.

The poll showed that 54.6 per cent of the sample said demonstrations are not effective means for presenting grievances, while 52.8 per cent opposed student demonstrations.

However, 57.4 per cent said they thought demonstrators were usually sincere in their demands.

The Institute which conducted the poll is a private organization founded last summer by four graduate students for the purpose of conducting research in Columbia.

In response to questioning about political party preferences, 45.5 per cent considered themselves independents, 26.9 per cent professed to be Democrats, and 25.0 per cent claimed to be Republicans. A percentage of 44.4 per cent of the students classified themselves moderates, 33.3 per cent, liberals, and 15.7 per cent, conservatives.

Most students supported the new University calendar (see article this page) but disagreed with the administration on the issue of inter-visitiation. In favor of intervisitiation were 76.9 per cent, 81.2 per cent male and 69.2 per cent female.

Students were satisfied with the hours of the University Book Store (56.6 in favor) and were pleased with the addition of an 11th game to the Tiger football schedule (70.4).

The results of the poll were published in the April 5 edition of the Columbia Missourian.

Football Star Wins Again; Research Award Granted

A former football All-American at the University of Missouri-Columbia and Philadelphia Eagles offensive guard, Edward H. Blaine, AB '63, AM '67, has received the first place award for research at the Student American Medical Association Research Forum at the University of Texas Medical Branch, Galveston, Texas.

Blaine, who is working towards his PhD in physiology at the School of Medicine, was given $350 and a plaque for his paper titled, "Renin Release from the Denervated Dog Kidney without Sodium Delivery to the Macula Densa."

Some 120 papers from students throughout the nation were presented at the forum held April 23-25. Winners were chosen in three categories: medical students, resident-intern and graduate students. Blaine was selected from the last division.

The 30-year old former professional athlete has been a member of a research team under Dr. James O. Davis in the physiology department since June, 1967, when he retired from the Philadelphia Eagles.

Alumni Association Names New Officers and Directors

Election of officers and 12 district and regional directors highlighted the Alumni Association's board meeting May 16 in Columbia.

The 1970-71 slate of officers, effective July 1, is as follows: Garth Landis, St. Joseph, president; Darryl Francis, St. Louis, president elect; Ed Kennedy, Tulsa, Okla., vice-president and Frank Williams, Kansas City, vice president.

Landis, an attorney, was re-elected president. Kennedy and Williams also were incumbents while Francis, a vice president during 1969-70, fills a new post. He will become president next year.

District directors elected for two-year terms are as follows: Jerry Litton, Chillicothe; Mrs. Barbara Moore, Malta Bend; Walt McQuie, Montgomery City; Lynn Ewing, Nevada; Randy Puchta, Hermann; Mike Garrett, Monett, and Harry Bock, New Madrid. McQuie, Puchta, and Bock were incumbents.

Regional directors chosen were Willis Alexander, Washington, D. C., Eastern Region; Dave Goodman, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., Southeastern Region; Bob Burnett, Des Moines, Iowa, Midwestern Region; Don Blume, Houston, Southwestern Region, and General William Woodyard, Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, Colo., Far Western Region.

Alexander is executive vice president of the American Bankers Association, while Burnett is vice president and general manager of the Magazine Division of Meredith Publishing Co. Blume is chief of NASA's Management Service, and General

Development Fund Board Gets Encouraging News

Dutton Brookfield, chairman of the Development Fund Board, had encouraging news to report at the board meeting held May 1 and 2 in Columbia.

According to Brookfield, alumni of the Columbia campus are responding in record numbers to the University's pleas for financial support for the first four months of 1970.

Thirty-six hundred individuals made financial contributions to the University during that period. This compares with 3200 contributors during the same period last year.

Thirty-six directors from as far away as Detroit, Dallas, and Los Gatos, Calif., attended the meeting.

Discussed at the meeting was the top priority National Merit Scholarship Program which was initiated last fall. Alumni funds provided scholarships for 42 merit scholars from the state who possibly would have gone to college elsewhere without the scholarships.

More than 60 new meritscholars are interested in the Columbia campus program this year. A new drive is underway to obtain approximately $1.6 million from St. Louis corporations through the next five-year period.

Also part of the business at the board meeting was formation of a new corporate council to make the needs of the University of Missouri-

Columbia known to all Missouri corporations. Another such project is to acquaint each of the state's non-profit foundations with the opportunities for giving to the University.

Also emphasized is the matching gift program promoted by many corporations in which the firm will match a gift made by an employee to the University. To be sure there is no discrimination, an alumnae fund committee obtained more than 750 gifts from Columbia campus women graduates in March.

"These are but some of the approaches being taken by the Development Fund," Brookfield said.

Last year, more than $1.4 million was given through the Development Fund. Included in this total were gifts from more than 11,000 individuals.

Besides a significant amount of unrestricted money, which can be used by the campus wherever the need is greatest, 13 of the 15 academic divisions received funds specifically for their use. More than $50,000 was received in endowment funds, and $275,000, for scholarships.

Projects traditionally supported by private giving through the Development Fund are those that cannot be financed through tax dollars.

Chancellor John W. Schwada said earlier, "This is a heartening response and a remarkable display of alumni loyalty and sensitivity."

Calendar Adopted for '71

Beginning with the 1971 school year, a new University calendar will go into effect with classes starting in August, the fall semester ending at the Christmas holidays, and commencement in mid-May.

The Committee of Deans approved the revised calendar on May 5, after it had been previously approved by a special committee, the faculty as a whole, and the Board of Curators.

"Because of scheduling of such special weeks as those conducted annually in agriculture, business and public administration, arts and science, education, law, engineering and journalism and the scheduling of junior college and high school programs as well as other conferences on the Columbia campus, it is mandatory that we adopt a calendar well in advance to help others with their scheduling problems," Chancellor John W. Schwada stated. For those reasons, the new calendar will not take effect until the fall of 1971. Classes for the 1970-71 term will begin on September 17.

Emeritus Titles Granted

Four faculty members who contributed 164 years to distinguished teaching on the Columbia campus have been given titles of professor emeritus by the Board of Curators.

Dr. Ralph L. Scolah, professor of mechanical and aerospace engineering who died unexpectedly on November 17, was awarded his title posthumously. The others receiving the title were Dr. Clifford M. Wallis, professor of electrical engineering; Dr. James R. Lorah, professor of chemical engineering; and Dr. Walter D. Keller, professor of geology.

At its June meeting, the Curators approved naming Dr. Earl English dean emeritus of the School of Journalism. He retires July 1.

Home Ec Chairman Helps with 'Follow Through'

Columbia campus students in the department of child and family development are profiting from the experiences of their department chairman, Dr. Virginia Lee Fisher.

Dr. Fisher is a consultant for a part of the national Follow Through program in Missouri, experimenting in ways to help poor children learn in early school years.

Missouri's projects are part of over a hundred in the nationwide program, which uses varied teaching approaches in the early grades. It is called Follow Through because it follows the Head Start program, sponsored by the Office of Economic Opportunity and the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Dr. Fisher uses written materials and videotapes from Missouri Follow Through classrooms to let Columbia campus students observe the effect of different teaching techniques. Materials from Follow Through, she says, help to extend the students' laboratory work to the school rooms of children in the projects around the state.

Missouri has several projects. Dr. Fisher is consultant for projects in the public schools of Ava, Mansfield, Mountain Grove and Portageville.

Cotton Strain Released

A new variety of upland cotton has been developed by the Missouri Agricultural Experiment Station in co-operation with the Cotton and Cordage Fibers Research Branch of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Chairman of the department of agronomy on the Columbia campus, Roger Mitchell, says the new variety, Delcot 277, has been under development since 1960.

William Shappenfield, professor of agronomy, and the principal developer says, "Delcot 277 represents an unusual combination of earliness, wilt resistance, productivity and fiber quality."

Among desirable qualities of Delcot 277 are early maturity and high lint yield in Missouri tests. It has adequate storm tests and adequate rust resistance for spindle-type machine harvesting.

Publish Centennial Report

The first 100 years of the College of Agriculture are described in a 254-page publication titled, "The Centennial Report 1870-1970 of the College of Agriculture."

The author is John H. Longwell, dean emeritus of the College, whose experiences and observations with land-grant universities extend over 55 of the 100 year history of the College.

A few of the subject headings in the Centennial history include outlying research centers, conferences and short courses, College relationships with industry, effects of wars on the College, international programs, new departments and financial matters.

In the introduction, Longwell gives special credit to a group of 26 men who were appointed to the College between 1900 and 1920, and remained with the College during their entire professional careers.

Dean Elmer R. Kiehl, in announcing the new publication, said, "We were fortunate in having Dean Longwell prepare this report. Much material is new and information which may be recorded elsewhere has been interpreted in the light of more recent perspective. This report will be a valuable reference for the future."

Longwell served as dean of the College of Agriculture from 1948 until his retirement in 1960.

Two Attend Forestry Meet

Two members of the School of Forestry faculty were prominent at a recent meeting of the Missouri Chapter of the Society of American Foresters.

Dr. Carl Settergren was the moderator for a panel discussion on the "Challenge of Forestry Education in the Future."

A recognition award for dedicated service to forestry in Missouri was presented to Dr. R. H. Westveld, professor emeritus.

Sociologist Joins Faculty

An internationally known rural sociologist, Douglas Ensminger, has been appointed to the Columbia campus faculty.

The University Board of Curators approved Ensminger's appointment, effective this September, as coordinator of socio-economic studies and professor of rural sociology.

At present, Ensminger is Ford Foundation Representative in India and Nepal with offices in New Delhi.

Bonsai Course To Be Held

The first accredited course in bonsai offered by a large American state university began this winter, 1970, semester on the Columbia campus.

The 300-level course, according to the professor Leon Snyder, is the study of "the centuries-old Japanese art of dwarfed trees involving the scaled-down statements of nature in a container to relate to their own natural environment."

AGRICULTURE

The name of the course, micro-scaled environments, was chosen to emphasize the student's interpretation of nature.

Micro-scaled environments is the domestication of the ancient art of bonsai. Bonsai was introduced into the United States about 35 years ago. "The concept of bonsai is to bring a segment of nature into the home or city," Snyder said.

Teaching horticulture principles of maintaining plant environments and creating micro-scaled environments in four dimensional art forms are some objectives of the course. Other basic aims of the course include observing nature through field trips and exploring new methods and materials in the interpretation of nature.

Grad, Ag Engineer Honored

Although now leading a retired life in Ohio, new honors still are being given to University graduate Mason Vaughn in recognition of his 38 years of work in India as an agricultural engineer.

The department of agricultural engineering at the University of Allahabad in India celebrated its Silver Jubilee in observance of the years of agricultural engineering training at the institution and the historic part played by Vaughn.

Also in honor of Vaughn, the Indian Society of Agricultural Engineers is publishing a special journal highlighting Vaughn's contribution to agricultural engineering education in India.

Vaughn, who received a BS in agriculture in 1919 and a BS in agricultural engineering in 1921, is known in India as the "Father of Agricultural Engineering" because of his contributions.

An implement factory, in the name of "Agricultural Development Society," was established by Vaughn. It still is meeting needs of Indian farmers by producing equipment based on his research.

What began as an apprenticeship in agricultural engineering organized by Vaughn, became a four-year course of study. In July, 1964, a master's degree program in agricultural engineering was launched at the University of Allahabad.

Vaughn has also served India as advisor on agricultural engineering and sat on numerous committees.

He is remembered in India for many things — research in rural housing, aspects of village sanitation, and kitchens. His notes on farm machinery, farm power, farm buildings, and workshops are considered standard literature by agricultural engineers all over the country.

Ag Journalists Get Funds At Pipe-Smoking Contest

A contest to find the best pipe smoker on the Columbia campus was sponsored in May by the Agricultural Journalism Club.

Each contestant was given 3.3 grams of tobacco and two wooden matches. The smoker who kept his pipe burning the longest was proclaimed the winner. First prize of a matched set of Washington-produced cob pipes and a briar pipe were awarded to agricultural education graduate student Donald A. Elbert of Washington, Missouri.

Each contestant was charged a dollar entry fee. Proceeds from the event are being used to send two club members to a national convention of agricultural journalism school students and editors to be held at Cornell University in July.

Jack Matthews: The Alumni Association's All-American Dean

Retiring after 20 years as dean of students, Matthews is this year's recipient of the Association's Distinguished Service Award.

The great middle,
stretching as it does quite far to the left and to the right, must ask the questions and weigh the answers.
Liberals must help reject that which is evil in the solutions, even as the conservatives must help expel that which is evil in the problems.
Violence, for instance, is intolerable
on either side. . . .
Suppression of free speech is intolerable
on either side. . . .

Television news correspondent Walter Cronkite, right, pauses with Chancellor John Schwada before delivering the commencement address for the June graduates in Brewer Field House. Cronkite also received an honorary doctor's degree from the University, as did Frank Ackerman, St. Louis industrialist-engineer noted for his work with mentally retarded children.
