UNIVERSITY OF MISSOURI BOARD OF CURATORS:

Theirs' the power and the glory--

NEW SOURCE OF ELECTRIC POWER

For Kansas City Area

HAWTHORN STATION, Kansas City Power & Light Company's new steam-electric generating plant began operation in April. This new power station, which is located on the Missouri river near the Northeast Industrial district of Kansas City, will have a capacity of 132,000 kilowatts around mid-year when the second generating unit begins producing electricity. In addition, a 99,000-kilowatt turbine-generator will be completed in April, 1953. This will bring Hawthorn's total plant investment to almost 40 million dollars and increase its capacity to 231,000 kilowatts—70 per cent more electric power than was available in our service area before the plant began operating.

In the days ahead, as we work and plan for the growing needs of our customers . . . of our country . . . this company, like other investor-owned utilities, will be ready with vital electric power to make this area strong . . . preparing for defense . . . working for peace.

"To pass the winter in close quarters in a torpid state" is the definition of the word hibernate. The term, hibernation, may be most frequently associated with bears, but the return of the spring sunshine and moderate temperatures makes us feel that we have experienced at least a modified version of it.

Among the surest signs of spring in Columbia are the visitors who come to the campus, most important of whom are the high school boys and girls gathering information and impressions which may effect their destiny. These visitors come singly, by twos or threes, or as members of family groups or high school parties. It is the privilege of the University to present to these youngsters challenges that will perhaps inspire them to the fulfillment of their dreams and the realization of the virile hopes of youth.

Letters to the alumni office often indicate in the writer a wholesome degree of that psychic illness, college nostalgia. We detect these symptoms in a recent communication from James F. Reid, California, who requests a bit of general information, as follows:

"I would like to know, for example, if Gaeb's and Jack's Shack still are afternoon favorites of the students. . . has the Student Union ever been finished. . . does the Varsity Theatre still have Thursday night vaudeville shows. . . is the scent of snowflakes on a fur coat mingled with perfume as wintery wonderful as it once was. . . do upperclassmen still ask the frosh why the center column has more ivy. . . have the Journalism School lions ever roared. . . is Dean Prunty still at Stephens College. . . and does he still wear those white gloves. . . is there a little Kappa Alpha Theta that practices her ballet dancing while enroute to class. . . You've made me Home-sick!"

LAW SCHOOL DAY

April 27-28, '51

The Law School Day program celebrating the 79th anniversary of the founding of the University of Missouri School of Law will be held Saturday, April 28, 1951. For convenience of former students and friends of the school attending the annual gathering, the usual spring events including the Law School Foundation dinner in the honor of student members of the Missouri Law Review, the honorary initiations of Phi Delta Phi, Phi Alpha Delta, and Delta Theta Phi law fraternities, and the reunion of former members of these fraternities, have all been arranged as part of the Law School Day program. Reunions of the classes of 1931, 1936, and 1941 have been arranged. Hotel reservations should be made either with the hotel or through the secretary of the Law School not later than April 20.

Present officers of the Law School Alumni Association, elected October 29, 1949, are:

President, R. B. Oliver, III, Cape Girardeau

First Vice President, Flavius Freeman, Springfield

Second Vice President, Frank Edwards, Mexico

Third Vice President, Robert Eastin, Kansas City

Secretary, Waldo C. Mayfield, St. Louis

Representative on General Alumni Council, Lue C. Lozier, Jefferson City.

The opening event will be the annual dinner given by the Trustees of the Law School Foundation honoring the student members of the Missouri Law Review. The dinner will be given at the Daniel Boone Hotel on Friday evening, April 27. Preceding the dinner a reception will be held for the Trustees of the Foundation and those participating in the program. The Honorable Walter A. Raymond of Kansas City, President of the Missouri Bar, will be the principal speaker at this dinner. Guests of the Foundation will include the Administrative officers of the University, members of the Board of Curators, members of the Law School faculty, and their wives. The Trustees of the Foundation have again invited as their guests the first year students in the Law School. Approximately 200 persons will attend. Presiding at the banquet will be Judge Ray E. Watson of Joplin, President of the Law School Foundation.

The Trustees of the Foundation are:

Latney Barnes, Mexico
R. B. Caldwell, Kansas City
Lynn M. Ewing, Nevada
Norwin Houser, St. Louis
Oak Hunter, Moberly
Laurance M. Hyde, Jefferson City
William E. Kemp, Kansas City
Paul G. Koontz, Kansas City
Samuel H. Liberman, St. Louis
Lue C. Lozier, Jefferson City
Roland F. O'Bryen, St. Louis
James A. Potter, Jefferson City
Lewis V. Stigall, St. Joseph
Kenneth Teasdale, St. Louis
Ray E. Watson, Joplin

On Friday night, April 27, for all alumni who may have returned to Columbia early there will be an alumni dinner at 7:00 o'clock at the Tiger Hotel. There will be no program and the occasion will be merely a reunion affair. Judge R. B. Oliver, III, President of the Law School Alumni Association, will be in charge. The classes of 1931, 1936 and 1941 will hold their annual reunions at that time.

At 10:00 a.m. on Saturday, April 28, Judge Oliver will preside at a meeting of alumni in the Law School Library. Election of officers of the Law Alumni Association will be held. Following this meeting Phi Delta Phi, legal fraternity, will confer honorary membership on a distinguished member of the profession. Coffee will be served during the morning to all visitors in the Discussion Room of Tate Hall.

At noon Mr. and Mrs. Boyle G. Clark will give a luncheon at their residence, 245 Greenwood Avenue, in honor of the members of the graduating class and all members of the bench and bar who have returned to Columbia for Law School Day. Alumni, former students, and friends of the school are invited.

At 2:00 p.m. the Junior Finals of the Case Club Competitions will be heard in the Law School Library by a special court assembled to hear these arguments, consisting of Judge W. E. Bennick, St. Louis Court of Appeals, Judge J. Henry Caruthers, Court of Common Pleas, Cape Girardeau, and Judge Lawrence Holman, Ninth Judicial Circuit, Moberly. The students making the arguments are:

John R. Gibson, Springfield
William H. Leedy, Jefferson City
Royal M. Miller, La Plata
William W. Shinn, Kirksville

Also at 2:00 p.m. the Trustees of the Law School Foundation will hold their annual meeting. At 4:00 p.m. the annual initiation and meeting of the Order of the Coif will be held, at which time honorary membership is conferred on a distinguished member of the profession, this ceremony being held in the Law School Library and open to the public. The honorary initiate this year is the Honorable Frank C. Mann, Springfield, Missouri.

The afternoon program will be followed by reunions of Delta Theta Phi, Phi Alpha Delta, and Phi Delta Phi.

The honorary initiate of the Phi Delta Phi legal fraternity will be Judge James M. Reeves of Caruthersville, Missouri.

The honorary initiate of Phi Alpha Delta legal fraternity will be Judge Joe W. McQueen, 16th Judicial Circuit, Kansas City, Missouri.

The honorary initiate of Delta Theta Phi legal fraternity will be Mr. Edward D. Summers, Reviser of Statutes, Committee on Legislative Research, Jefferson City, Missouri.

The day's program will conclude with the annual banquet at 7:00 p.m. at Rothwell Gymnasium, at which Governor Forrest Smith and members of the Missouri Supreme Court and Federal Judges in Missouri will be guests of honor. The Honorable Glenn Winters, Secretary and Director of the American Judicature Society, will be the principal speaker at the banquet on Saturday night, April 28, in the Gymnasium. His subject will be "Frontiers in the Administration of Justice."

M. U. Professors Chosen For Hoblitzelle Award

Dr. William A. Albrecht and Dr. C. E. Marshall, both University professors of soils, were two of the three scientists named by a Virginia regional committee to be considered for the $5000 to be awarded this year by the Hoblitzelle Foundation for outstanding contributions to agricultural science. Dr. Donald Forscha Jones, geneticist, Connecticut experiment station, was the third scientist chosen.

Of the students from other countries enrolled in the University during the fall semester, China has the largest representation, 31 students. Germany is second with 13 representatives. A total of 31 countries were represented during the semester. Fifty percent of these students are enrolled in the graduate school.

Information—Please

The 1950 Mystical 7 group is now in the process of publishing a Mystical 7 directory. Letters have been sent to every former member in the organization's files requesting information and support of the directory plan.

The files, however, are incomplete and the organization requests that any Mystical 7 alumnus who has not received a letter please send the following information to Mystical 7 in care of the Alumni office as soon as possible:

Full name; present address and occupation; date and place of birth; year graduated and degree; activities while a student; if married—wife's maiden name and date of marriage; children's names and ages.

The organization, founded in 1907, has no directory at present and the active group feels that such a book would be valuable to both the individual members and the organization as a whole. They are requesting that all Mystical 7 alumni support the project by contributing to the directory fund.

The book will be 6 x 9 in size, 112 pages, cloth bound, and will contain information on all members plus other features concerning Mystical 7. Frank Sallee, president, is in charge of the project; John Dawson is in charge of the membership list; and Jerry Smith will design and edit the book.

The Mystical Seven directory now in the process of publication will look like this. The gold and black cloth-bound volume will contain information about members, plus other features concerning Mystical 7.

A human being is a chap who will split his sides over the family album and then look in the mirror without cracking a smile.—Cominco Magazine.

Brown to New School, N. Y.

Dr. Harry Gunnison Brown has resigned his position on the faculty of the School of Business and Public Administration of the University of Missouri to accept appointment to the staff of the New School for Social Research in New York.

Dr. Brown was professor emeritus of economics at the University, and had been teaching part time since his retirement last June after thirty-five years on the faculty. From 1942 until 1946 he served as acting dean of the School of Business and Public Administration.

The New School for Social Research has secured fifteen of the most distinguished retired educators in the Nation to add to its staff this winter, and Dr. Brown is one of this group.

Dr. and Mrs. Brown are making their home in Scarsdale, New York.

Recent Student Organizations

The University of Missouri Committee on Student Affairs recently voted official recognition to three student organizations on the Columbia campus and approved national affiliation of a fourth.

The committee approved a request of the Chi Delta Club for affiliation with Delta Chi, national fraternity. The local chapter has been organized on the campus for about a year and has approximately fifty members.

Granted official recognition were the Freshman Medical Class, the University of Missouri Stratoliners, and the C. V. Riley Entomological Society.

The Freshman Medical Class is an organization of all freshman students in the University School of Medicine.

The University of Missouri Stratoliners is an organization of tall students, both men and women. Persons eligible for membership are women students who are five feet nine inches or taller, and men students who are at least six feet. It is primarily a social organization.

The C. V. Riley Entomological Society is a revival of an organization which was discontinued during the recent war. Affiliated with the department of entomology, its membership is open to any student, either graduate or undergraduate, enrolled in the University.

The Riley Entomological Society is named for C. V. Riley, native Missourian and the first great entomologist from the midwest. Mr. Riley was a lecturer in entomology at the University of Missouri from 1869 to 1878. He was also the first State Entomologist of Missouri, a position he held currently with his connection with the University, and lectured in entomology at the University of Kansas.

MRS. C. W. TURNER

Sheley - Turner Wedding

Since 1940 students in the graduate school of the University have been guided by a very charming lady, Miss Dannelle Sheley. On April 1 Miss Sheley resigned as secretary to the dean of the graduate faculty, and on April 6 was married to Dr. Charles W. Turner, professor of dairy husbandry at the University of Missouri.

Coming to Columbia in 1933 from her home in Jefferson City, Missouri, Miss Sheley was employed in the department of mechanical engineering and industrial education. In 1933 she joined the office staff of the President of the University, and in 1940 was transferred to the graduate office.

Dr. Turner came to the University in 1919 after graduation from the University of Wisconsin. He received an A.M. degree from the University of Missouri and a Ph.D. from Wisconsin in 1927. Dr. Turner has been granted the Fulbright Award for a year of study and research in New Zealand, and has been given sabbatical leave of absence from September 1, 1951, to August 31, 1952.

Dr. and Mrs. Turner will leave San Francisco by plane on August 3 and will spend a week in Honolulu before arriving at Auckland on August 13.

Dr. Turner will study at the Ruakura Animal Research Station of the New Zealand Department of Agriculture near Hamilton. While in New Zealand he will also give a series of lectures at the Massey Agricultural College.

He has been a member of the University faculty for thirty-two years and has won world-wide recognition for his work at the Missouri Agricultural Experiment Station. In 1940 he won the Borden Award in dairy production, presented by the American Dairy Science Association.

The Department of Rural Sociology

By NORMAN JOLLOW

"The Department of Rural Sociology is the fact finder behind the policy maker," Dr. C. E. Lively, head of the department said. Before legislators can pass laws for the benefit of the public, someone has to dig out the facts and show a need for such laws and regulations. The Rural Sociology department does this for the rural population of Missouri.

The purpose of the department is to study the humanities within a society with an effort to dislodge the malfunctions if any. Primarily a research body, the department must investigate, test by trial and error, and try to root out any troubles so that the rural populations may have better living conditions.

Rural sociology is interested in the people, their quantity, quality, and the ways in which they live and function, particularly in relation to one another and to the non-rural population. But, it is also concerned with the problem of getting information about agricultural improvements to the farmer.

Function of the Rural Sociology Department is to facilitate such rational action among rural people and among others concerned with agricultural and rural life. The department has three duties to perform.

I. It must assist rural people by democratic means to formulate socially desirable goals.

II. It must devise, suggest, and demonstrate effective ways and means of achieving these goals.

III. It must test the progress made toward that ultimate achievement.

FOUR PROJECTS

To date, the department is engaged in four major projects. Since no professor devotes more than half time to teaching, there is ample time to spend on these research projects.

The latest of these projects is a naval research program. The navy is interested in the calibre of its instructors and wants to know what goes to making a good teacher. The program has been given to three colleges, Cornell, Michigan State, and Missouri. The Missouri project has been divided between the rural sociology and the psychology departments.

Since the arrival of Dr. Lively in June, 1938 the department has become actively concerned with the problem of rural health. A study is being made of the morbidity or sickness rate of rural Missouri, with the hope that the people of these areas can be educated in improved conditions of living in order to reduce the illness rate.

The department is also seeking to locate the barriers to the dissemination and use of scientific information to Missouri farmers. The problem grew out of efforts to investigate the status of the low-income farmer. The department wishes to determine what type of information reaches the farmer and the source from which it comes.

A fourth project deals with rural social geography. This program, is designed to reveal the social and economic characteristics of rural life in the various counties so that state and national programs of agricultural improvements can be more fully adapted to local conditions. It is based upon the principle that no general program of improvement will work successfully everywhere without some modification.

NAVY PROJECT

In July, 1950, the University was one of three universities selected by the navy's research department to delve into the problem of teacher education. Interest in the project comes from the great need for competent teachers by that branch of the service. They hope to discover whether formal education or practical experience is the best background for the prospective navy instructor.

The University turned its problem

The Department of Rural Sociology of the University of Missouri functions because of the efforts of these. They are, seated left to right, C. M. Coughenour, instructor; Mrs. Jo Emma Miller, Helen Stonecipher and Florence Long, secretaries; and Dr. C. E. Lively, chairman of the department. Standing, left to right, are Lawrence M. Hepple, associate professor, Group Organization and Leadership; Ivan F. Nye, assistant professor, Research in Extension personnel; Robert L. McNamara, professor and associate in Community Health; Cecil L. Gregory, instructor, Statistics and Research methods, and Herbert F. Lionberger, assistant professor, research in Dissemination of Farm Information.

over to the rural sociology and psychology departments who began work in September, 1950. Funds for the project were granted by Congress and the Navy estimates that the program will run five years.

Members of the rural sociology department have divided this problem into two parts. First they are investigating the county agents now in the field. The agent's job is to develop an education program which will meet the necessities of his county. He works with an advisory board set up by the farming organization responsible for the establishment of the agricultural extension service in that county. The extension service itself is sponsored by federal funds and is the largest adult education service in the country. It brings the results of scientific experiment in agriculture and home economics to the farmer.

A battery of tests is given to each agent and his characteristics are studied to compare the more successful agent with the less successful. At the same time, a study is being made of seniors in the College of Agriculture who intend to go into county agent work. The students are given the same tests taken by the agents in order that similar background records may be developed.

By working forward and backward with the result, it is hoped that some means can be found to recognize in the student characteristics that make the agent successful.

At present, the work is in the data collecting stage. Prof. Ivan Nye is collecting the information and this part of the job is expected to be completed within a few months.

RURAL HEALTH

In studying the rural health program, the department aims to obtain accurate information about the health needs of rural people and the health agencies serving them. Results of the study will point out changes farm families should make in their present living conditions to reduce the illness rate. They will indicate also the extent to which better medical and health services are needed.

Previously the morbidity figures obtained could not be considered accurate because only one visit a year was possible and people were too likely to forget some illnesses of their family throughout the previous year. Another disadvantage is that the results of such a survey go out of date too quickly.

As a result of recent sampling tests, the department now finds that a relatively small sample of 200 families can be substituted for 1600 such families without any significant sacrifice of accuracy. This means a saving of 87 per cent in the program family visitation. It will now be possible to visit the co-operating families more frequently and to obtain highly accurate record of illness and related conditions, such as food habits, housing, and health information required without increasing the cost of the project. Further, the results will apply reliably to as many as 60,000 farm people.

Cecil L. Gregory conducted research requiring 2,000 correlations for the material needed to produce one bulletin for the Department of Rural Sociology. This is the only department of the University which has their own IBM machine for use in departmental research.

In regard to the survey, Dr. Lively, who has applied the sampling method to the survey, said, "I think the whole thing points to a new approach to the study of illness. By being able to reduce cost and study illness in this manner, we should be able to open up a new educational approach so that we can begin to tell farm families what conditions of living they need to improve in order to reduce the illness rate."

When Dr. Lively came to Missouri in 1938, he found that Missouri lagged far behind in rural health and in desperate need of improvement. In the summer of 1939, he began rural health studies in Lewis County. The following summer he extended his studies to five counties. The survey now covers 20 counties.

Thirteen years ago in Missouri, such diseases as tuberculosis, brucellosis, and malaria were common. In some rural counties, only 50 per cent of births were registered, and self-prescribed patent medicines and home remedies were the usual methods of treating illnesses. Physicians serving rural territories, relatively numerous in former years, were thinning out. Many areas were poorly served by physicians and there were even fewer dentists.

A survey is now being made to determine what has happened to the rural physician since 1910; where they came from, how long they stayed, where they went and why they left.

The department is still studying the situation and making reports. This program, supervised by Prof. Robert L. McNamara, requires constant study. Some solutions have been found as a result of the program, and further improvements have been suggested; and farm people have benefitted greatly from the many bulletins turned out by the department on their findings.

FARM INFORMATION

Dr. Herbert F. Lionberger is in charge of the research on the barriers to the dissemination and use of scientific information by Missouri farmers. Dr. Lionberger has found that the low income farmers are interested in gaining information that will help them, but it appears, they need more education to make better use of what information is available. This, said Dr. Lionberger, is a strong argument for better rural school facilities.

At present, the main sources of information to the low income farmers are their newspapers, magazines and radios. Most of this information originates with the Agricultural Experiment Station and the Extension Service. Bulletins from farm organizations seldom reach him, for the low income farmer is not the "joiner," as is the more successful farmer.

To date, no single method for best reaching the farmer with information has been found. Indications are that a combination of all avenues is best.

RURAL SOCIAL AREAS

The determination of rural areas in which there is a high degree of similarity with respect to population, social organization and culture follows logically the determination of homogeneous areas for other purposes.

Agronomists distinguish areas of similarity with respect to soil and factors affecting plant growth; agricultural economists distinguish type-of-farming areas, and the botanist makes definite plans based on plant geography, but the shifting and complex population of the state of Missouri makes a geographical survey of the people of Missouri more difficult. To find the homogeneous areas and to establish definite social and economic characteristics of rural life in the various counties and to reproduce this information in material usable to cooperating agencies is the nature of the research being carried on under the supervision of Cecil L. Gregory in the department of rural sociology. As the number of reliable measures of rural cultural variation increases, it will be possible to set forth more completely the rural social areas of the State.

TEACHING PROGRAM

At present, the department of Rural Sociology offers courses amounting to 30 credit hours, plus the usual amount of credit that may be carried in special problems and research courses. In nature, the courses range from the Introduction to Rural Life, for freshmen, through Group Organization and Leadership, Rural Youth, Rural Community, Social Aspects of Rural Health, and Farmers Organizations, to advanced Rural Sociology and Techniques of Social Investigations. Thus, the department offers work at both the undergraduate and graduate levels.

The undergraduate courses are regarded as especially useful by students preparing for extension work in rural work in rural communities, and in other similar work. The courses in group organization and leadership, taught by Dr. Lawrence Hepple, are particularly notable in this respect.

Although most of the advanced candidates have sought the A.M. degree, a number of doctorates have been granted. The department does not duplicate the work of the other departments of sociology, located in the College of Arts and Science. Instead, it works in close cooperation with it. Students majoring in rural sociology take required courses in social theory and anthropology in the department of Sociology and Anthropology.

"The Fruits of Your Labors Shall Make You Known"

A proverb of the woodcutters in former days was, "A good workman is known by the chips." The fruits of the labors of the Department of Rural Sociology of the University of Missouri are in evidence in this display of bulletins published in recent years.

MISSOURI HEADLINERS

Rural sociology is a late comer among the departments that serve the farm population of Missouri.

In 1919 a department of rural life was established in the College of Agriculture. This department combined the work of both agricultural economics and rural life until 1925. In 1921 the late Professor E. L. Morgan was added to the staff of the rural life department and courses in rural sociology and rural community organization were added to the offerings. It was not until 1926 that rural sociology was established as a separate department.

Inquiries have come to our office regarding the identity of the young lady pictured in last month's story, "What is a Girl." This little miss is Cheryl Ann Entsminger, now three years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bus Entsminger, 905 Hope St., Columbia.

Two members of the staff of the State Agricultural Extension Service were married recently in Columbia, Missouri.

Miss Pauline Drysdale, assistant professor and state home agent, was married on March 17 to John B. Mitchell of Blythesdale, Arkansas, who is now studying for an advanced degree in the rural sociology department at the University of Missouri.

Miss Eleanor Pincomb, also assistant professor and state home agent, was married on March 10, 1951, to J. A. Armstrong, a dairy farmer in Montgomery County.

Dr. JOHN P. RYAN, who served as visiting professor of speech at the University last year, died February 27 at his home in St. Louis. He has been Director of Education for the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce for the past year. Dr. Ryan was a pioneer teacher of speech, and was for many years head of the department of speech at Grinnell College in Iowa. He had also taught in the universities of Wisconsin, Illinois, West Virginia, and Denver. He was past president of the Speech Association of America.

FRANK LUTHER MOTT

Dean Mott Retires; English Appointed

Dr. Frank Luther Mott will retire on July 1 as dean of the University of Missouri School of Journalism, and Dr. Earl F. English, associate dean at the School, will succeed Mott as dean.

Dean Mott, who joined the University faculty as journalism dean in 1942, will take a leave of absence in the coming fall semester. He then will return to the university as a full-time professor of journalism, in which capacity he plans to continue "five more years until I reach the age of 70." A winner of a Pulitzer prize for American history in 1939 for his "History of American Magazines," Dean Mott is author of seven books and has written numerous magazine articles of a professional nature as well as fictional. He plans to devote more of his time to writing and that is the main reason for his retirement.

Dean English, a native of Michigan, joined the M. U. staff in 1945 after eight years' teaching at Iowa University. In his high school and college days, he worked as a printer, pressman, reporter and feature writer. He spent nine years as a high school instructor in vocational printing in Peoria, Ill. Dean English is a specialist in typography. He has done considerable instruction and research work at the Missouri journalism school in the facsimile and television fields.

Dr. and Mrs. English have two daughters. One will be graduated in June from Stephens College and the other is a freshman at the University.

Journalism Week, May 1-5

Memorial services honoring the late Charles G. Ross, '05, LL.D. '36, former journalism faculty member who died while serving as President Harry Truman's press secretary in Washington during the winter, have been scheduled on May 4 as a part of the journalism week program at the University. Joseph Pulitzer, Jr., publisher of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch will present an oil painting of Ross to the school as a feature of the memorial services.

Marquis Childs, Washington columnist and former Post-Dispatch correspondent, will be the featured speaker at the journalism banquet scheduled on the night of May 4.

Rucker to Journalism Staff

Frank W. Rucker, until recently co-publisher and general manager of the Independence (Mo.) Examiner, will join the faculty of the University of Missouri School of Journalism as an associate professor of journalism on June 1. He received a Bachelor of Journalism degree from the University in 1913 and has been with the Independence Examiner since that time. During the annual Journalism Week activities at the University in 1932 Rucker was awarded one of the School's medals for distinguished service in journalism.

M.U. Alumni, Washington, D. C. Report Summary of Active Year

From March 28, 1950 to February 23, 1951, Lt. Com. Herschel Schooley presided at eight meetings held by the University of Missouri Alumni Association in Washington, D. C., with an average attendance of 56. This group has a mailing list of 277, with approximately 100 dues-paying active members. Monthly meetings, except in July and August, were held at the Lee House, outstanding among these meetings being the one of May 25 when approximately 100 alumni and guests paid tribute to Charles G. Ross who passed away in December, 1950; and the Buffet Ham Brunch of November 19, which had the largest attendance in the last seven years of the Association in Washington.

At the meeting held February 23, 1951, new officers for the 1951-52 year were chosen and plans made for an interesting year to come. Hon. John T. Barker, the first honorary alumnus of the group, was chosen as president. Other officers are, first vice-president, John L. Graves; second vice-president, Joe M. Hicks; secretary, Miss Katherine Helm; corresponding secretary, J. E. Wild; treasurer, Wm. L. Browne; assistant secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Margaret Le M. Ashburn, and sergeant-at-arms, Frank B. Sheetz.

Correspondence concerning the organization may be addressed to Miss Katherine M. Helm, 1725 New Hampshire Ave., Washington 9, D. C., or to J. E. Wild, Clifmar Road, Randallstown, Maryland.

M. U. Representative

Percy F. Swindle, professor of physiology at Marquette University in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, represented the University of Missouri, his Alma Mater, at ceremonies March 1 celebrating the one hundredth anniversary of the granting of a charter to Milwaukee-Downer College.

Prof. Swindle received A.B. and B.S. in Ed. degrees from the University of Missouri in 1911, and a Master of Arts degree in 1912. He is now director of the physiology department at Marquette University.

The University of Missouri will offer another degree, that of Bachelor of Science in Statistics, with a selected curricula set up within the School of Business and Public Administration to fulfill requirements for the degree.

Miss Anna Finley of Columbia will retire at the close of the school year after 42 years with the Columbia school system. Miss Finley attended the University during the summer sessions 1910-40.

FRANK McNAUGHTON

Alums are Commentators For Kefauver Hearings

Frank McNaughton, top congressional reporter for Time for ten years, was chief commentator on the Time Inc. sponsored television coverage of the Kefauver Committee hearings on crime at Foley Square Courthouse in New York. Time, together with the American Broadcasting Company, presented an eye witness viewing of the Senate Crime Investigating Committee hearings as a public service through March 21st. Time also sponsored the program over TV in Philadelphia, Detroit and Chicago.

McNaughton's long experience in Washington as Time's congressional reporter has given him a tremendous background knowledge for his job. He has covered Congress longer than most Congressmen have been there and is currently serving his third term as Chairman of the Periodical Press Gallery. Forty-four, of Scotch-Irish descent, McNaughton comes from Westboro, Missouri, and attended the University 1927-30. He got his reporting experience on a succession of dailies in Oklahoma, Louisiana, Nebraska and Missouri. He was with UP in Washington before he joined Time there in 1941.

During the recesses of the hearings, McNaughton discussed the testimony with other Time and Life correspondents and informally interviewed them on their coverage of crime in the cities where they are reporters, thus contributing many unexpected and colorful facts about the witnesses. Among these reporters was Edmon B. Ogle, chief of the Time and Life news bureau in Denver, Colorado, and formerly assistant to the managing editor of the New Orleans States. Ogle described in general the crime situation in New Orleans and added interesting personal details about witnesses.

EDMON B. OGLE

Ogle, who attended the University School of Journalism in 1937, is a native of Greeley, Colorado, where he attended Colorado State College of Education. He started out as a freelance writer and joined the staff of the States in October, 1937. Ogle is 36 years old, has a wife and six children, and will make his home in Denver.

"The Game Birds in Hawaii"— Outstanding Publication

Charles Schwartz, A.B. '38, A.M. '40, and Mrs. Schwartz, the former Elizabeth Morrow, Ph.D. '38, were presented with the annual award of the Wildlife Society for the most outstanding publication in wildlife management and ecology for 1949-50—"The Game Birds in Hawaii." The book, published in 1949, was the result of 18 months work in Hawaii by Missouri's artist-naturalist team while on leave of absence from the Wildlife Conservation Commission of the State of Missouri. The work was done for the Territorial government.

Mrs. Schwartz, formerly a zoology instructor at the University, and her husband are both employed as biologists by the Missouri Commission. Schwartz, believed by many to be the foremost wildlife artist in America today, has recently had a series of magazine wildlife sketches published as "Conservation Sketchbook."

FORTUNE Tells Doane Story

The March 1951 issue of FORTUNE magazine tells the story of Doane Agricultural Service, which was founded in 1918 by D. Howard Doane, '08. Five of the six officers of Doane Agricultural Service are alumni of the University of Missouri. They are H. Davis Elkin, '18; Rex R. Bailey, '22; T. D. Morse, '24; Andrew J. Berwick, '32, and Mr. Doane.

St. Pat Leads Annual Parade

Last month the students of the University's College of Engineering again brought to the campus the festivities of St. Pat's Week,—a knighting ceremony, parade, beard growing contest, Green tea, laboratory displays, hamburger show, banquet and coronation of a queen at the annual ball.

This year St. Patrick lead the royal procession perched on the blade of a bulldozer. He was followed by the five candidates for Queen of Love and Beauty, the 1951 favorite being Miss Joan Highbarger of Lincoln, Nebraska. Among the unique floats displayed by various engineering departments was a locomotive driven by remote control and an armored tank which fired confetti.

Along with the green confetti, the songs of old Erin, St. Pat and his shillelagh, the mist and the Blarney Stone went a more serious atmosphere also. The highest honor bestowed on the guard of St. Pat, the Knight summa cum laude, was bestowed on K. K. Gillan, professor of civil engineering; R. B. Moorman, professor of civil engineering; S. P. Reynolds, chief engineer of the St. Francis Levee Board; and H. N. Muller, Jr., assistant vice-president of Westinghouse Electrical Corporation.

The oldest living graduate of the College of Engineering was honored during the knighting ceremony. He is Sterling Price Reynolds, 88, of Caruthersville, Mo. Reynolds is now in his 51st year as chief engineer of the St. Francis Levee board of Missouri.

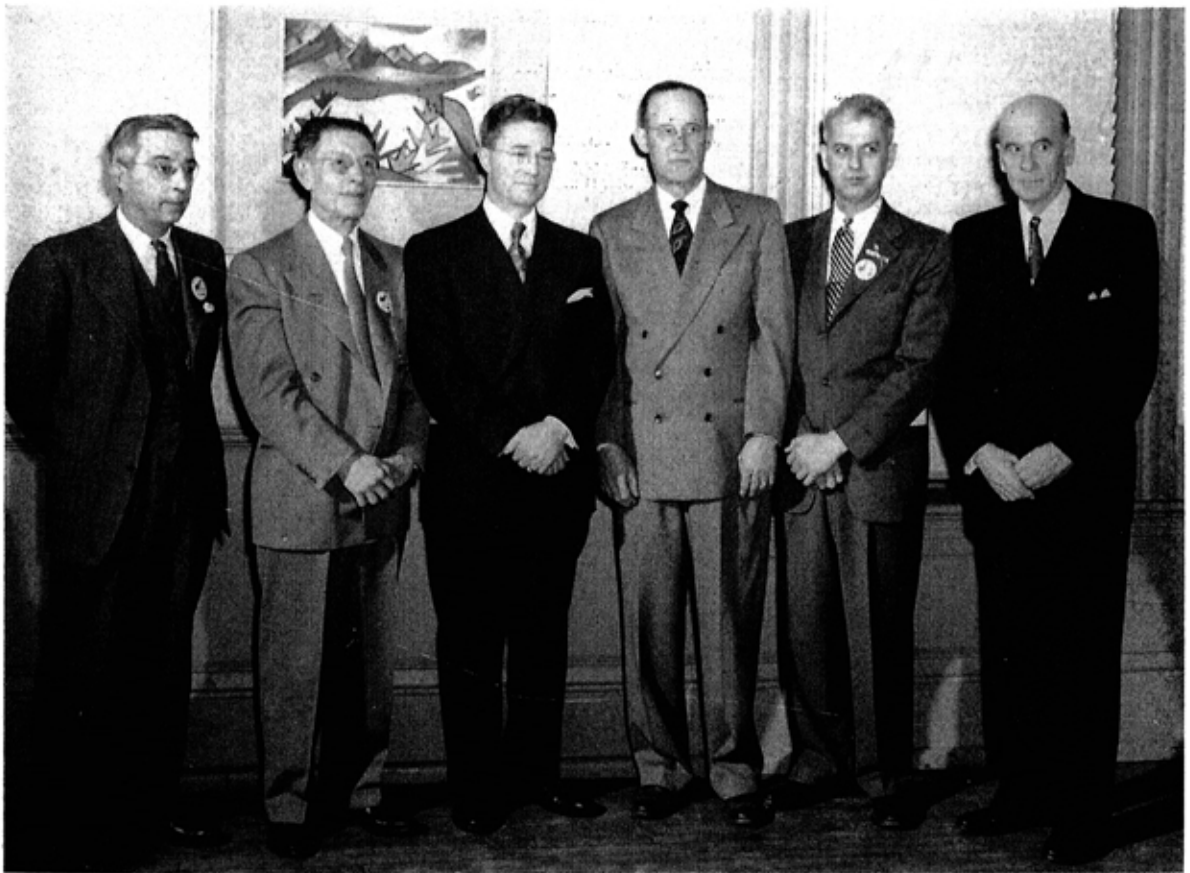

The first Missouri Honor Awards medals for Distinguished Service in Engineering were awarded at the Engineer's Convocation in Brewer Field House on Friday morning. The special awards, with distinction equal to the highest professional honors attainable, were awarded to Carl Wright Brown, Chief Engineer of the Missouri State Highway Department, and to William V. Kahler, recently elected President of the Illinois Bell Telephone Company. Mr. Brown received a B.S. in Civil Engineering Degree from the University of Missouri in 1910, and Mr. Kahler the same degree in 1922. A bronze medal and a copy of the citation were presented by Dean H. O. Croft of the College of Engineering.

H. H. Muller, Jr., Pittsburgh, Pa., was the principal speaker at the closing session of the week. His topic was "Management's Key Men—Engineers."

The annual meeting of The Engineering Alumni Association was held immediately following the luncheon on Saturday, March 17. Officers elected for 1951 were as follows: President, Paul Ogden, Columbia; 1st vice-president, A. M. Finley, St. Louis; 2nd vice-president, B. J. George, Kansas City; Secretary-treasurer, G. K. Gillan, Columbia, and Representative to the general alumni association, L. W. Helmreich, Jefferson City.

Regional directors chosen for the ten divisions of the State of Missouri are W. E. Herzog, St. Joseph; H. H. Holmberg, Moberly; B. W. Rudder, Mexico; C. L. Pratt, Kansas City (Kansas); F. G. Chance, Centralia; I. C. Hicks, Clayton; R. R. Bassett, Joplin, M. D. Mitchell, Springfield; W. J. Eddlemon, Willow Springs, and H. B. Garrison, Sikeston, Missouri.

It was voted to increase the annual dues from $1.00 to $2.00, and to have included in this membership fee a subscription to the Missouri Shamrock.

Participating in activities of Engineers' Week at the University of Missouri last month were, left to right, Dean Huber O. Croft; B. D. Simon, '10, Columbia, a member of the board of the Missouri Engineering Foundation Board; William V. Kahler, one of two recipients of the University's first Honor Awards for Distinguished Service in Engineering; L. A. Nickell, '11, Columbia, another member of the Engineering Foundation Board; H. N. Muller, Jr., principal speaker at Engineers' Convocation, and Carl Wright Brown, another recipient of the Honor Award.

'All God's Children'

By ELLEN ORR

Children are a wonderful invention. They make us old before our time with their antics. They keep us working our hands down to the second knuckle to afford the things for them that we didn't have ourselves. We expect them to be angels and they wind up taking after the imp side of the family (the other side of course . . . certainly none of MY family wear anything but halos . . . what am I saying?)

Children are our hopes for tomorrow. Every ambition we had we want our children to reach the goal for us.

They are very powerful too. They start out getting you up at 2 a. m. in the morning when it hasn't been too long when you were just getting home at 2 a. m.

They raise you out of dead sleep at 5:30 because they want to give you time to get the 6 o'clock bottle ready on time.

They have changeable seat covers that are forever needing to be changed, and mothers and fathers willingly and lovingly perform this duty when nothing but a child would make them do so much work for no reward except a smile, a goo, and a burp.

They get into fights with the neighbors' children (who are probably brats only you wouldn't say so for the world), and they need so much attention they keep mamas and papas out of a lot of mischief just having to tend to sister and junior.

They start off to school, and we sigh with relief thinking that we'll leave the rest of their upbringing to the teacher. But this can't be done and before we know it we're back struggling over the antics of Peter Rabbit, and the mysteries of the multiplication table.

We yell with anguish over report cards and confide to each other that schools are better and nicer, but the children are still allergic to applying themselves to study (just like in our day, only we won't admit it).

We see them through the recitals, the programs, algebra and sewing, and ask ourselves and each other how long growing pains last and does anybody suppose we'll ever live to see a normal day when there's no game to attend, no program to put on, no party to fix for. We keep wondering why home is more like a Grand Central Station, with everybody going and coming.

And sometimes we sneak off and read books on child training, and ask each other a few questions about behavior problems of other people's children, on account of you can't raise them in a cage like birds, and they run in flocks like sheep. Sometimes parents sort of gang together and say we'll stick together and then some wide-eyed youngster tells her mother, "But Mother, simply everybody is going. You couldn't want me left out!" or the boy says "All the boys are going frogging, so please, can't I go too?" We ask our teachers and our preachers and the everyday public to help us by being Good Examples too. Simply nobody wants a child to pick up cussing 'Just like Daddy' or tell a few lies. "Mamma at a Party." So we begin to mend our ways, and reft the halo that's been gathering dust in the back of the closet.

We take them to church instead of sending them to church. And try to raise them to stand for Progress and Decency in our Town.

Recently we had a sort of National Home Week when people turned attention to the kind of homes we are giving to the children of today. It was a good idea. It doesn't take just money alone to make for a happy home.

It takes a family that has love in it . . . as someone has so wisely said 'Love means doing for' . . . it is a home where we do for each other. We teach our children that God comes first; we teach them the Ten Commandments, and the new ones about loving thy neighbor instead of giving him a black eye. And as we go along, we re-learn those truths for ourselves. So I'm not too worried about this world. As I said before, Children are a wonderful invention. They are a highly fine safety valve to make us grown folks behave.

Ellen Orr—Columnist

Lillian Eleanor Ellis was born on a farm near Ackerman, Mississippi; was an honor graduate of Mississippi Woman's College at Hattiesburg in 1929 with a major in English and French. She attended the University of Missouri in 1931. After doing some graduate work at Missouri, Miss Ellis returned to the deep South, where she has become "planter, housewife, columnist and lecturer."

In 1933 she married Thomas A. Hester, Jr., soil conservationist and graduate of Mississippi State College at Starkville. In her career, Mrs. Hester has worked on newspapers, typed deeds and mortgages at the Chancery Clerk's office, worked for a lawyer, closed estates, taught school, and, quote, "beginning in a sort of timid manner," she has become a writer and a lecturer.

Mr. and Mrs. Hester and sons, Tommy, now fifteen, and John William, thirteen, live at Last Jump-Off Plantation near Shelby, Mississippi, where they specialize in certified seeds and livestock. But suppose we let Mrs. Hester tell us . . . "Never in my wildest dreams did I ever think I'd settle down on a farm. You see I came from a farm and I told my poppa if I ever found out which way was town, I would go there and stay . . . I married this Agriculturist . . . a professional man who leaves every morning about 7:30, returns at 5:30, and expects me to run the place in his long-drawn out absences. An Agriculturist is a profession where he earns money in the profession so he can buy a little farm somewhere."

Writing under the name of "Ellen Orr," Mrs. Hester writes a column concerning the life of a farmer's wife for the PROGRESSIVE FARMER. A column, Delta Special, appears in the weekly DELTA FARM PRESS, this paper being edited by William McNmee, a '49 graduate of the University of Missouri's School of Journalism. Other feature articles by Ellen Orr have appeared in issues of THE LAND, a quarterly magazine.

Telling the truth about farm life and relating incidents which failed to seem funny as they happened, has made Mrs. Hester popular as a lecturer for both local and neighboring groups. We are happy to publish in this issue, Ellen Orr's article, "All God's 'Children'."

Miss Alice Louise Martin, a junior in the College of Arts and Science, was crowned 1951 Showme Queen at the University of Missouri on March 17. Her home is at Sikeston, Mo.

SPRING FOOTBALL

Veteran holdovers were few—hardly enough to make two tables of bridge—as Missouri's footballers waded into the final week of their spring refresher course.

The overall Tiger crop is green, very green—and quarterback is a start-from-scratch proposition. Mizzou lettered 30 gridmen in 1950, and only 11 of these have eligibility left. Military service calls may trim the list even further.

Of the 65 candidates now in suit, the number of lettermen actually working out has been sliced to seven, with four players excused for one reason or another. Halfbacks Harold Carter and Junior Wren are competing in spring sports—Carter in track, and Wren with the baseball team; center Bill Fuchs has been given a waiver to devote more time to his pre-med studies; guard Jack Lordo and Harold Mickens, who won his "M" as a halfback in 1949 are among the absentees, their 1951 status doubtful because of the draft.

By positions, Missouri's meager nucleus of experienced hands breaks down like this: Ends—Maurice Udell and Bill Hampel; tackle—Paul Fuchs; guards—Bob Castle and Lordo; Centers—Bill Fuchs and Roger Kinson; halfbacks—Carter, Wren and Bill Wilkening; fullback—Bill Burkhart.

Biggest gaps are apparent in the Tigers' offensive structure. Except for three men—Kinson, Hampel and Wren—the regulars are all gone. Defensively, the No. 1 lineup is not so threadbare, but beyond the six first-string defensive standbys, there is absolutely no depth.

That once-over isn't very reassuring, least of all to Coach Don Faurot and his staff who must teach a lot of football savvy to this rookie-laden gang during the spring workouts.

"Our aim," says Faurot, "is to sort out the better prospects among the newcomers this spring, and bring them along as far as possible. In this way, we'll be able to spend more time with the September crop of incoming freshmen who will be immediately eligible for competition in the conference."

Outwardly, the Tiger boss isn't fretting about his shortage of seasoned manpower. Last year's freshman squad, which beat Iowa State by two points and lost to Kansas by a conversion kick, was regarded as the best post-war yearling outfit at Missouri. Even though the squad has since lost a couple of standouts—halfback Nick Ricciotti and end Harold Burnine—others should move up.

The heavy influx of recruits points up the rebuilding job ahead—but their presence ought to produce a salty scrap for positions. That's a far healthier situation than a year ago when too many "name" seniors—secure in their jobs—failed to play up to their clippings.

Yes, there's room aplenty for hustling, able-bodied newcomers at all stations. The need is most acute at quarterback where graduation lopped off Missouri's first three signal-callers—Phil Klein, Bob Henley and Bob Hailey.

Right now, six quarterbacks have been getting close scrutiny from Faurot and Chauncey Simpson, backfield coach. These hopefuls are: Walt Trueblood, a B-teamer from Kansas City; Bill Reynolds, St. Joseph; Bob McFarland, Clinton; Bob Schoonmaker, Lebanon; and John Hartwig, St. Charles—all off the freshman squad; and Jim Hook, a junior from Lee's Summit. Two more will report in September, and Dick Wilson, another frosh prospect, is convalescing from an accidental head injury.

Digging into his new personnel, Faurot switched two men to the Split T. driver's seat this spring, and the early returns, at least, have been promising. The newcomers are Bob Schoonmaker, 185-pound freshman halfback from Lebanon—and Jim Hook, an aggressive blond from Lee's Summit who won his frosh numeral at fullback two years ago.

Beyond any doubt, this pair has jumped off to an early lead in the opening lap of the 1951 quarterback derby.

Both are well-knit youngsters at 5-ft. 11, with Hook a somewhat lighter but still compact 170 pounds. Passable throwers right now, they are sure-handed with the ball but most impressive as runners. Each has the speed and drive to get yardage of the Split T's famed "keep" play.

Mechanically, Schoonmaker and Hook fill the bill, but neither yet has the tools so vital to sound quarterbacking—maturity, judgment and leadership. Only time—specifically those Saturday scrimmages between now and Missouri's Sept. 22 opener with Fordham—will develop these traits.

"Green as a field of young wheat," is Faurot's sizeup, "but they're ripening fast."

Despite his duck-footed gait, Schoonmaker is deceptively fast. One of the state's most sought-after athletes on his graduation from high school, Schoonmaker played offensive halfback and defensive linebacker for the M.U. freshman team in 1950, and numeraled in basketball.

Hook, nickname "Gabby," returns to football after a fruitless chase for his varsity letter in both baseball and basketball. Clay Cooper, assistant backfield coach, induced the Lee's Summit junior to draw his gear this spring, and give the wide-open quarterback position a try. Up to now, anyway, Cooper's hunch looks good.

Others may move up. Truchlood, for instance, who is a year the wiser for his junior varsity trials, has the poise and all-around equipment to step in and take over. Then there's Fessler who will have to make his bid in September.

Behind them, three freshmen also figure. They are: Bill Reynolds, possibly the best passer of the lot, from St. Joseph; gritty Bob McFarland from Clinton; and John Hartwig, a 6-ft. 1 redhead from St. Charles.

From this group, Faurot hopes to unearth one or more front-line prospects for varsity duty this autumn.

Practical gardener that he is, the Missouri coach knows they pay off on the autumn harvest.

He doesn't give a hoot about flowers that bloom only in the spring.

Baseball

When the first robin comes to town Coach John Simmons begins to mold some semblance of a baseball team. Since the hopefuls are not high powered recruits and he must develop his team from the members of the squad that report in answer to the school wide call for candidates, you have only to look at the previous years records and you can appreciate what a great job Coach Simmons does with his material. This year represents even a greater task since inexperience plagues the beloved coach who has a way of drawing the most out of his charges.

Working toward an April 7 opener with Washington U., the Mizzou coach has given top priority to the task of remodeling what is often termed the nerve-center of any team's defense. In the five, so-called key positions—catch, pitch, short-second combination, and center field—only one Tiger veteran is back.

That holdover is Kent Kurtz, the slight second-baseman from Columbia who is a good bet to open at his old stand; otherwise, new players will have to provide the club's defensive backbone.

At shortstop, Don Lamb—a 1950 squadman from Blewitt high in St. Louis—and Roger Webb, junior from Teresita, are showing the way in a bid for Captain Bill Eatock's old hang-out. The centerfield vacancy right now is the property of Jack Patchett, a speedy 155-pounder from Chillicothe whose batwork, ball-hawking and strong arm could make up for the loss of Bob Wachter, a .333 hitter last year.

Chief threat to Patchett's security is Ralph Monroe, a junior from Overland. Elsewhere in the outfield, Captain Bob Harting of Soldan high in St. Louis has staked out a solid claim to left, while Junior Wren—football halfback from Kansas City Central—is in right.

With both the shortstop and center-field berths in reliable hands, the most urgent need is for a dependable battery. At the moment, the biggest teaser confronting Simmons is to single out three or four pitchers and a couple of catchers most likely to carry the load. The Tigers lost both ends of their veteran battery last season when hurlers Bob Smith and Roger Englert, and Catchers Rocky Alexander and Bob Murray finished up.

Between them, Smith and Englert handled almost 70 per cent of Mizzou's chucking over the 20-game schedule. Smitty won 5 and lost 2, finished with a 1.77 earned run average. Alexander and Murrey did all the receiving.

Back for mound duty are Floyd Eberhard and Gene Crenshaw, two righthanders who lettered but were used mostly in relief. A third righthander with some 1950 combat innings to his credit is Dick Atkinson, a slim, freckled junior.

Next-in-line candidates include: Ernie Hurzwurm, junior from St. Louis McBride with an assortment of stuff but inclined to be wild; sophomores Bob Loschke, Don Boenker and Bill Rau. Loschke, who may alternate some with Bob Phillips at first base, and Rau are the lefties in the outfit.

In the catching scrap, sophomore Herb Gellman—a hefty target at 6-ft. 2 and 210—rates the edge, with Carl Barbour of Sedalia and Hannibal's Bob Wallace, both rookies, pushing the grid tackles from Maplewood.

If you are on the campus this spring or if Missouri plays in your locality try and get down and cheer the team on. These are athletes representing your alma mater just as much as the fall athletes and they appreciate hearing an occasional cheer from a true athletic fan.

An Ozark Vacation?

Missouri's trout season opened March first and in certain impounded waters "fish may be taken from January 1 through December 31." Incidentally, the executive director of the Lake of the Ozark Association estimates expenditures of 30 million dollars in that area in 1950 for recreation and sports. The 250 resorts in the area plan to accommodate about 12,500 persons daily through the coming season.

TRACK

A shuttle relay team composed of Missouri's four top flight hurdlers captured first place in the Purdue Relays on March 31. Their time of 30.2 seconds is only one-tenth of a second slower than the American indoor record set by Michigan State in 1949.

A Simpson Hopeful

George Simpson, son of Missouri's backfield coach, reached the first big milestone in his hurdling career recently by winning his high-hurdle race in an invitational meet at Central College.

A junior at Hickman high school, Simpson sped to victory in the time of :07.8 seconds—one-tenth of a second faster than the existing Class A record. His time, however, is not a new mark since it wasn't recorded in a state meet.

With that effort, "Seabiscuit"—as his mother kiddingly dubbed young George last year when he first started hurdling—began to earn his sobriquet. And, too, the oldsters, who recalled another Simpson's peerless hurdling some 35 years ago, were quick to point out that here was just another chip off the old block. Bob Simpson—George's "Uncle Bob" that is—was a world-renowned hurdler at Mizzou from 1915 to 1917.

Proudest of all, of course, was George's father—Chauncey—who has encouraged his son's track interest by contributing valuable hurdling tips. That was the former Mizzou track coach's specialty during his undergraduate days at Missouri and Kirksville State College.

It just naturally runs in the family, you see.

BASKETBALL

Missouri's 1950-51 cagers, whose seasonal record of 16 wins and 8 losses gave Coach Sparky Stalcup his best mark over a five-year hitch at Mizzou, after dumping Oklahoma, Nebraska and Colorado in a final surge toward league winning Kansas State.

As a team, the Tigers rubbed out a point peak, when they came in with a 1251 point-total. This figure tops the 1238 aggregate fashioned just last year. It averages 52.1 points in each start, while MU's defensive allowance of 48.8 points doled out to each foe should put Mizzou in the nation's top-ten bracket for the fourth straight year. Last season, Missouri finished defensively with 48.2 mark.

The Bengals counted 32 per cent of their field-goal attempts, and 63.3 per cent at the free throw line. Don Gosen led all shooters on a percentage basis, hitting 49 per cent of his floor tries—while among the regular starters, sophomore Gene Landolt was the No. 1 shot-maker. He canned 39 per cent, and was only one-half a percentage point off Bill Stauffer's pace in free-toss accuracy, too. Stauffer dumped in 70.3 per cent of his charities, Landolt 69.8.

Spring Visitors

Missouri Conservation officials last month estimated there were 50,000 Blue and Snow geese at one time in the Squaw Creek Refuge in Holt County near Mound City. These geese, who flock together, apparently demonstrate a phenomenon of a two-way route on their annual migrations. In the winter they fly down the Mississippi Valley on the east of Missouri, and on their flight north they move along the western side of the state. Squaw Creek Refuge is a traditional stopping place for them on their northward migration.

1931

MADELYNE ROUSSIN WARNHOFF of St. Clair, Missouri, sends regrets at being unable to attend the Reunions in June, and her reason a rare, also very unfortunate, one. Quote: "I think it would be nice to attend, but if I came I probably would be the only one present with a broken back. . . . It wasn't fun when I got this broken back, and it was still less funny when they put the plaster cast on me . . . hung me by the heels . . . but I have learned something Walter Winchell doesn't know—the meaning of "The Thing." Perhaps you could make a feature event for your program by having someone sing "The Thing" and let me furnish the sound effects, which I can render to perfection by thumping on my plaster cast. If you haven't had the experience of a broken back, you'd better not have any hankering to have it." Others of the class of '31 will be wishing Mrs. Warnhoff a speedy recovery and a "coming out" party soon.

WARM UP

"Mr. Kent will see you in a few minutes," the receptionist said pleasantly.

"Thank you." Tom Wilson went to the far side of the room and sat down. This was his first "big" call, on his own, as a New York Life agent and he was nervous, frankly nervous.

Tom picked up a magazine and turned a few pages idly. He had that same tense feeling in his stomach that he had the day he pitched his first big baseball game in college. Tom put the magazine down and let his mind wander back to the baseball diamond and that first big game.

He remembered warming up, he and the catcher, standing along the first base line. Then Tom had gone over to talk with his mother, who was sitting just behind the screen where she could see every pitch. Her understanding smile turned out to be the best part of the warm-up.

Tom had been so proud of her, looking as smart as any of the girls and, when she laughed, looking almost as young. Nobody would have guessed that she had borne the cares of the family all alone, helped only by the memories of her husband and an income from the life insurance he had so thoughtfully left her.

Tom had been proud of his father, too, for the love and forethought which had made it possible for his mother and himself to live and grow, not hemmed in by want. In fact, it was the deep realization of all the things life insurance had made possible for his family—and could make possible for others—which had led Tom to become a New York Life agent himself . . .

The receptionist's voice punctured Tom's thoughts. "Mr. Kent will see you now."

"Fine," he said. He got up and started to Mr. Kent's office. The warm-up was over. He had the confidence he needed now.
