"¡Valiente!" cried the Spanish admiral

He cheered as his launch fished this man and seven more waterlogged American sailors out of Santiago Harbor, Cuba, on the morning of June 4, 1898. This was straining Spanish chivalry to the breaking point, for Richmond Hobson (right) and his little suicide crew had spent the previous night taking a ship into the harbor entrance under a hail of cannonade and deliberately sinking her to bottle up the Spanish fleet.

Hobson, who planned and supervised every detail of the operation, from placing the scuttling charges to dropping anchor under fire, was actually an engineer, not a line officer.

In Santiago Harbor, he led his first and only action against the enemy. But his cool-headed daring made him as much a hero of the day as Admiral Dewey. And proved again that America's most valuable product is Americans.

These Americans—proudly confident of their nation's future—are the people who stand behind United States Series E Savings Bonds. They are the people who, by their spirit and abilities, make these Bonds one of the world's finest investments.

That's why there's no better way to protect your future than by investing in America's future! Buy Bonds regularly!

It's actually easy to save money—when you buy United States Series E Savings Bonds through the automatic Payroll Savings Plan where you work! You just sign an application at your pay office; after that your saving is done for you. And the Bonds you receive will pay you interest at the rate of 3% per year, compounded semiannually, for as long as 19 years and 8 months if you wish! Sign up today! Or, if you're self-employed, invest in Bonds regularly where you bank. They're as safe as America!

For your own security—and your country's, too—invest in U. S. Savings Bonds!

It's good to see so much interest in our University and its financial needs. Many of you have written that you are glad to learn of the needs so that you can advise others on these facts.

I have heard this question raised. Does the University need as much as its request would indicate? Here are some general facts that speak for themselves.

There is no other institution in Missouri (or, for that matter, I don't know of any State Institution), that is forced to operate its plant with classes beginning at 7:30 A.M. and continuing through the noon hour (staggered lunch hours) and even some night classes.

This type of schedule is extremely unpopular with students and faculty, yet it is the condition that this University is forced to operate under.

The future of our Alma Mater will be designed in this year of 1955. If she is to be ready for the rapidly increasing enrollment and its expected demands by 1960, she cannot wait two more years before receiving funds to handle the operations, buildings and staff necessary to serve the people.

Here are some percentage figures that will bring you up to date on the Governor's recommendations pertaining to the proposed decrease of requested funds by Missouri's institutions of higher education.

Talbert Portrait in Whitten Hall

A PORTRAIT OF THOMAS J. TALBERT, professor emeritus of horticulture at the University, was presented on January 3 to the Department of Horticulture and now hangs in Whitten Hall.

Prof. Talbert holds the longest record of service as chairman of the department—28 years—from 1922 until his retirement in 1950.

Of the eight others who have served as chairman of this department in the College of Agriculture in its 76 years of existence, Dr. John Charles Whitten had the next longest tenure, from 1894 to 1918, a period of 24 years. It is for him that the Horticulture Building is named.

Prof. Talbert was one of Dr. Whitten's many illustrious students, receiving degrees in 1913 and in 1917, and continuing his studies here, at California, and at Kansas State College.

GREAT ACCOMPLISHMENT

In his presentation tribute, W. R. Martin, Jr., extension professor of horticulture and secretary of the Missouri State Horticultural Society, sketched some of Prof. Talbert's accomplishments, then described what he called "the really great accomplishment that will always cause present and future Missourians to mention Talbert and Whitten in the same breath."

"These men," he said, "will always be remembered and honored for their ability to take raw freshmen from Missouri and elsewhere, and in four years or more transform them into outstanding men that guide the nation's horticultural destinies. You will find these former students of Dr. Whitten and Prof. Talbert in practically every state and in many foreign countries."

He referred to the oil painting of Dr. Whitten which hangs in the main entrance of Whitten Hall and added:

"It is significant that the horticultural industry groups in the state have decreed that a similar portrait of Thomas Jesse Talbert should also be placed in Whitten Hall so that his students and their sons and grandsons can forever be familiar with the man who has guided Missouri's horticultural destinies for so many years."

Prof. Talbert, a native of Barry County, was acting food administrator for Missouri during World War I. During his tenure as department head, he secured separate ear-marked state appropriations for outlying horticultural experiment fields, thus permitting his assistants to study and solve many problems that had to be investigated in the various producing areas of the state where they occurred. He was active in national horticultural groups, and was president of the American Pomological Society in 1941-

45. He wrote several outstanding textbooks as well as a wealth of scientific papers, Agricultural Experiment Station bulletins, circulars and contributions to periodicals.

CONTINUES WRITING

Since his retirement as chairman he has served as professor of horticulture, University of Tennessee, Martin Branch, and as dean of the Honolulu Christian College. He continues his writing and various types of interest, in his office at Whitten Hall. Prof. Martin called him "a living example to the rest of us as to how we may profitably and enjoyably use our time if we successfully reach the age prescribed by the University for our retirement."

In accepting the portrait, the present chairman of the Department of Horticulture, Dr. R. A. Schroeder, said: "It seems particularly noteworthy that the producers of all of the kinds of horticultural crops should unite through their respective organizations in making possible this outstanding portrait of Professor Talbert. It is truly a tribute, and speaks of the high regard they hold for him."

The painting was presented on behalf of the Missouri State Florists Association, Missouri State Nurserymen's Association, Vegetable Growers Association of Missouri, and the Missouri State Horticultural Society, at a dinner meeting of the society.

NOBEL PRIZE WINNER WILL REVISIT CAMPUS

Dr. Frederick C. Robbins, '38, Nobel prize winner in medicine and physiology, will spend a day on the campus February 21, visiting with School of Medicine faculty members and delivering two lectures on polio. He is now professor of pediatrics at Western Reserve University Medical School.

Missouri Memo

WHAT THE FORECASTERS have been saying about spiraling college enrollments is reflected in the current totals at M. U., which further indicate that the rise is under way. A ten per cent increase over a year ago is reported. For the second semester, there are 7,626 students on the campus at Columbia (704 more than at the same time last year), and late registrations will add another 75. Usually the mid-year drop is from 6 to 10 per cent, but this time it is only about 3 per cent. At Rolla the registration of 1,385 brings the total for all divisions to 9,011 students, compared with last year's total of 8,024 and representing an overall jump of more than 12 per cent.

FOR A PERIOD OF SEVERAL WEEKS, the University's television station, KOMU, is the originating point of a network production. This is the Ozark Jubilee, a country music show assembled at Springfield, Mo. It goes out over the ABC television network. It will emanate from Springfield after the ABC station there is equipped with network origination facilities.

NOT MANY OF US are engaged in work which includes a tour of Europe every summer. Marjorie Hall, '28, well known dance instructor on the west coast, is one who can look forward to this annual experience. Her Hall Dance Institute in Santa Maria, Calif. has for several years sponsored a summer dance study tour in European countries. The 65-70 day journey for dancers, teachers, and students is organized with a well established travel organization. Those on the trip study ballet, modern and folk dancing, and attend outstanding performances. Miss Hall formerly was an instructor at Christian College.

A SOLID LINEUP of alumni is represented in the slate of officers recently elected by the Missouri Associated Dailies. Ollie Maxwell, '25, Boonville Daily News, is the new president; John Shea, '35, Lexington Daily News, vice-president; William Tucker, '38, Warrensburg Star-Journal, secretary; and Bill Bray, '48, manager of the Missouri Press Association, treasurer. The outgoing president is William Van Cleve, '24, Moberly Monitor-Index.

THE PLUSH SEAT COMES TO M. U. after 116 years. For the first time a large audience may be seated comfortably at a University function. This rarity will be offered by the new Jesse Hall Auditorium. We have sat in these seats and have found their specifications conforming most restfully to our own. Without bothering to check our facts, we say there has never been such a comfortable seat of that type on the campus before. True, there are well upholstered lounging chairs and sofas in the Union, which also has a storehouse of folding chairs with fair leather-covered padding. But we are talking about permanent, nailed-down seats with mohair backs and bottoms, of which there are some 1900 in the new building. Gone are the thin, hard, wooden seats of the old place, although they remain in Neff, Library, Education and other auditoriums where gatherings continue in back-aching discomfort. In the modern custom, these Jesse Auditorium seats are of varying widths, from about 19 to 22 inches, which may induce some guests to seek out a resting place comparable to their dimensions; and the seats are staggered, that is, not directly in front of each other, so that milady may wear a larger hat without blocking the view. Moreover, the rows are farther apart than usual, allowing more knee room. These conveniences may well herald the breakdown of the hardy pioneer spirit of large campus audiences, but if this be luxury, then leave us live it up.

POSSIBLY THE FIRST big event to be staged in the new Jesse Hall Auditorium will be the Savitar Frolics. This annual variety show by organized houses is scheduled for March 17-18-19. For the past several years it has played to packed houses at the Stephens Assembly Hall. It consists of half a dozen musical playlets and usually involves three or four hundred student performers.

Two New Curators; McHaney Stays

THE TERMS OF THREE CURATORS expired last month, but there were only two changes in the Board's personnel as Powell B. McHaney of Clayton accepted reappointment by Governor Donnelly for another six-year term.

The two new appointees are Randall R. Kitt, Chillicothe lawyer, and Oliver B. Ferguson, Fredericktown publisher. All three are to serve until January 1, 1961.

Mr. McHaney, who is president of the General American Life Insurance Company, formerly was president of the Board of Curators. It was understood that he did not seek reappointment, due to the pressure of his civic duties, but agreed to serve again at the personal request of the governor.

In an editorial, "Three Good Curators," the St. Louis Globe-Democrat comments that Governor Donnelly "has selected men who will add strength to the Board during a critical period in the University's history," and adds: "In persuading Powell B. McHaney to accept reappointment, the governor has not only assured the University of Mr. McHaney's vigorous leadership for another six years, but has also provided a continuity of policy which is highly desirable."

Mr. Kitt, a Republican, succeeds Dr. Glenn W. Hendren of Liberty, a Democrat. Mr. Ferguson, a Democrat, succeeds William P. Elmer of Salem, a Republican. Both new members, like Mr. McHaney, are Missouri graduates. Mr. Kitt, '30, was Livingston County's state representative for four terms, in two of which he was Republican majority floor leader. He is general counsel for the Missouri Bankers Association. He was graduated from the University's School of Law, from which his father, the late Paul D. Kitt, was graduated in 1898.

Mr. Ferguson, '40, since 1946 has been editor and publisher of the Fredericktown Democrat-News, winner of many Missouri Press Association contests. He has served as president of the Southeast Missouri Press Association, and the Junior Chamber of Commerce and Rotary Club at Fredericktown, where he is a bank director and a member of the library board and the park commission.

Long interested in University affairs, Mr. Ferguson is a member of the Quarterback Club. He is a member of Governor Donnelly's staff as honorary colonel. He was graduated from the University's School of Journalism after receiving an A.B. degree from Central College in 1937. He served in the Army Air Corps in 1943, and was news chief of the Office of War Information at Beirut, Lebanon, in 1944-45.

Other members of the Board are James A. Finch, Jr. of Cape Girardeau, president; Mrs. Bryon T. Shutz, Kansas City; Fred V. Heinkel, Columbia; James S. Bush, St. Louis; Lester E. Cox, Springfield; and J. A. Dagg, Memphis.

DALLAS CLUB HANGS OUT WELCOME SIGN

The Dallas Alumni Club meets the first Monday of each month at the Golden Pheasant Restaurant, 1417 Commerce, at 12 noon. President Harry A. Guy wants all alumni to know they're welcome to drop in on these regular sessions, including any alums who are just passing through the city.

The Dallas M. U. folks are already thinking about plans for next fall, when the Tigers meet the Mustangs in the Cotton Bowl on the opening night of the 65th Texas State Fair.

PIGS AND CORN . . .

plus LEADERSHIP

PIGS AND CORN AND CLOTHING are only three of the numerous projects that make up the hard core of 4-H Club work, but other enterprises are developed as the concept of this rural movement grows, and the most significant of these is the relatively new leadership training program.

Missouri may be well ahead of other states in the emphasis it gives to this phase of preparing the farm boy and girl for more active roles in the life of their community.

Training is also given to the unsung volunteer adult leaders whose time and effort help guide the activities of 4-H clubs in their vicinity.

The theory back of the overall training program is that a county agent's services are multiplied to the extent that leaders are developed to give guidance to young people in the development of their youth program.

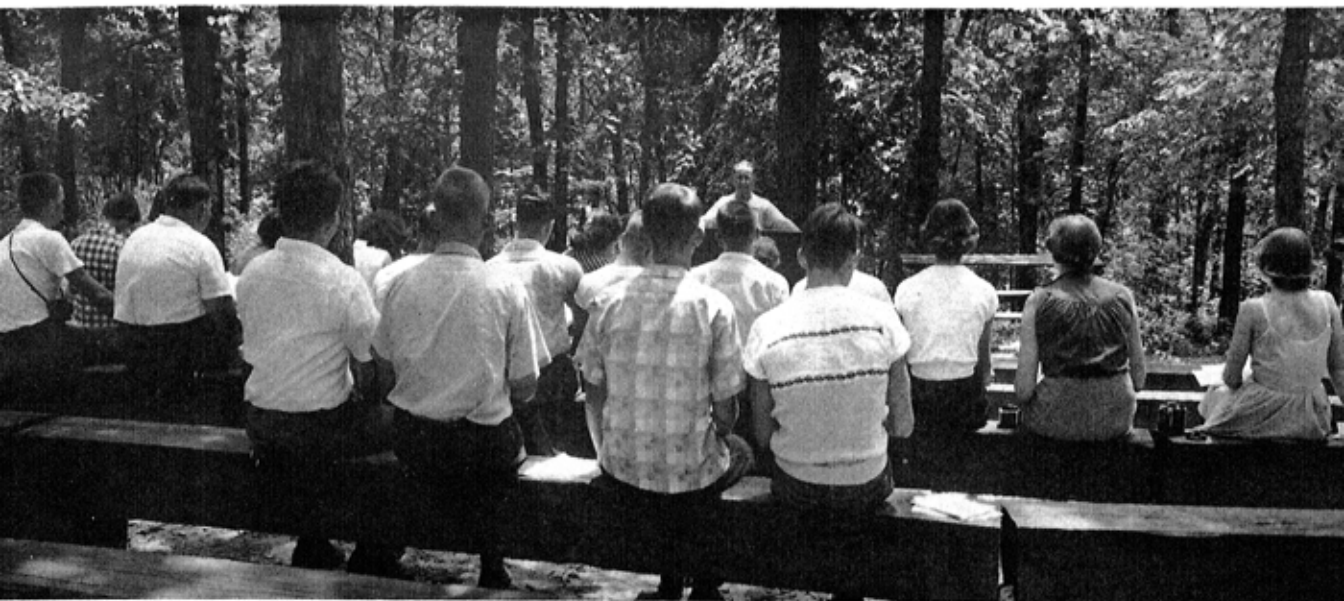

Alumni interest in 4-H Club work is based on many factors. The 35,000 Missouri boys and girls, in effect, are off-campus students of the University, receiving educational benefits through the extension service of the College of Agriculture. Many will come to the campus later as students, as their parents did. Many a successful farmer or business man, himself a graduate of 4-H work, retains a lifelong interest in the organization. Many of these 4-H alumni have foreseen the need for developing a program of leadership, and they applaud and encourage the present efforts.

Last summer, for the first time, a camp was held for 143 Junior Leaders at the Lake of the Ozarks State Park where an intensive program was arranged to stimulate leadership activity. The age of the youngsters ranged from 14 to 18.

A work session in song-leading is conducted at the first Junior Leadership Camp.

Youthful leaders attend this outdoor follow-up work session on public speaking as part of their training at the Junior Leadership Camp, Lake of the Ozarks. The first camp, held last summer, was attended by 143 Junior Leaders.

A highly capable instructional staff (all graduates or former students of M.U.) held daily sessions with the Junior Leaders. W. Clark Ellzey of the Stephens College faculty, who teaches Education for Marriage, lectured to the group each night. His topics included boy-girl relationships, directed at the upper teenager. During the day he would counsel with the youngsters.

ROBERT S. CLOUGH

TRAINING IN SPEECH

Mrs. Helen D. Williams, assistant principal of Hickman High School in Columbia and director of the well-known Verse Choir, conducted sessions on public speaking. In the 4-H program, importance is placed on communications as a vital force in effective leadership. As a means of demonstrating what they had learned, meanwhile getting actual experience, the young leaders composed and delivered speeches eight minutes in length. Those with special interests were organized as a Verse Choir under Mrs. Williams' direction.

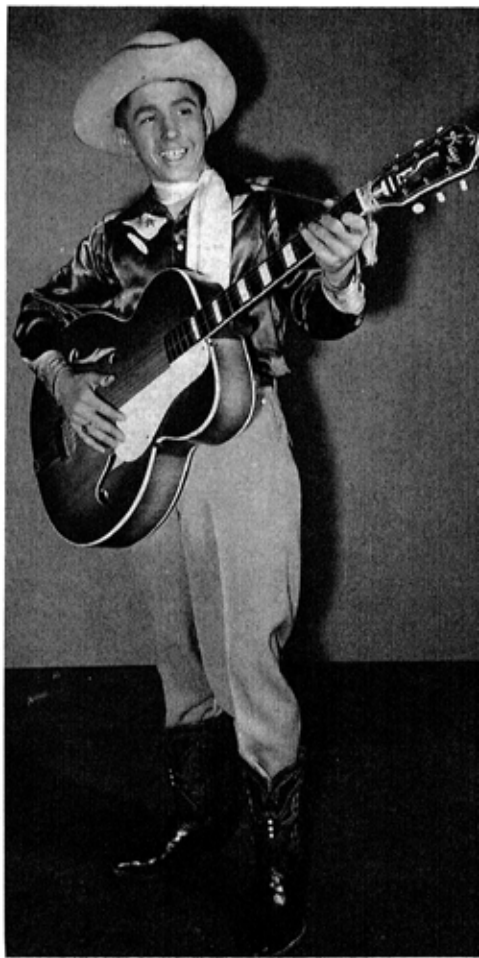

For experience in teaching recreation and games, the Junior Leaders had the guidance of Miss Charline Lindsay, State 4-H Club Agent, and John Kadlec, former Tiger football player and now freshman line coach.

Others chose presiding and photography as their special interests.

Altogether, the boys and girls had a full schedule of activities during the camp, and returned to their home communities better qualified to lead their groups.

Thus far the number of 4-H members who have chosen leadership train-

Development of musical abilities is encouraged. The western-garbed youngster, Dean Barber of Clark County, was a Missouri representative on the "Share the Fun" program at Chicago during the National 4-H Club Congress. Prof. Robert S. Clough, at left, has been state 4-H Club Agent since 1938, formerly was county agent in Pettis, Jackson and Johnson counties.

This smiling lad chose poultry as his 4-H project, learning good production practices in poultry as recommended by the College of Agriculture and passed on by county agents and project leaders. The girl at left is one of 8,920 signed up in 1954 in food preparation projects; they prepared 146,186 dishes and 42,601 meals during the year.

A series of institutes for project leaders was started in 1952. The leaders are brought in on a district basis for these institutes at which four subject-matter specialists are on hand to handle instructional sessions.

Special training for adult leaders had its beginning in 1949, also at the 4-H camp on the Lake of the Ozarks. About 85 persons attended the first session. In the last three years eight such meetings were held. Theoretically, every adult leader in the state would get the benefit of this training every three years.

So, there are three leadership training programs: Summer camp for adult leaders, institutes for project leaders, and summer camp for Junior Leaders. Missouri has perhaps the best developed program of any state in which the training of 4-H administrators is the objective.

Robert S. Clough, extension professor and State 4-H Club Agent, says that Junior Leaders "can write their own ticket." They are usually chairmen of various committees with the opportunity for initiative in planning and carrying out objectives. Four-H Clubs are free to choose their own programs and there is hardly any limit to the scope of activities open to them.

As Mr. Clough explains it, the 4-H movement resulted because educators felt that formal education was neglecting things at hand and that farm boys and girls needed to deal more closely with activities related to rural living. Thus the wide range of projects developed, so that the youngster learned through experience. He was not taught how to feed an animal; he learned by feeding the animal. It was a doing program, not essentially a study program.

While this approach became the basis of the 4-H program, a new concept emerged in the 20s. Progress of the organization was to be measured in meeting the needs of the rural youngsters, rather than from the standpoint of agricultural need or income. The important aspect of the program was the boy and the girl, not the pig and the corn.

This concept was implemented in the 30s. It was recognized that youth must have broader experience, in working together among themselves, with other people. There was to be more give and take, more cooperation, more development of self-reliance. The program must be creative, evolving from the boys and girls themselves, and not as a recipe handed to them.

Government, etiquette, personal improvement in behavior and appearance, safety, wild life conservation—these are some of their group activities which become a doing program, not solely a study program. Others are health, in which fly control or rat control, for example, is actually put into effect; and recreation, with the staging of tours, picnics, softball games and the equipping of playgrounds. Then there are the basic on-the-farm projects that are numbered by the score. In all of these the opportunity for leadership is wide open and inviting. It is an opportunity that the 4-H program in Missouri is endeavoring to meet.

Last year 3,590 4-H boys and girls chose vegetables as one of their projects and had 1,137 acres in vegetables. VIC EATON SIGNS WITH PITTSBURGH STEELERS

An eleventh-round draft choice of the Pittsburgh Steelers, Missouri quarterback Vic Eaton this month signed a contract with the Steelers calling for $6500.

The 195-pound senior from St. Joseph led all conference passers in 1954 and helped pilot the North squad to a 14-7 win over the South in a Christmas Day Blue-Gray game at Montgomery, Ala.

Eaton and tackle Charley Bull, Tiger co-captains last season, both were drafted by Pittsburgh, but Bull has not yet signed a contract.

The pros also chose two other Missouri players—ends Jim Jennings and Harold Burnine. The Green Bay Packers claimed Jennings' services, while Burnine was tapped by the New York Giants. The latter—Mizzou's top pass-catcher in '54—has one more year of competition in Tigerland, and plans to use it. He was subject to draft because originally he enrolled at Mis-

TIGER CAGERS ENTER VITAL STRETCH DRIVE

Mid-February road games with Colorado and Nebraska—two formidable opponents to be met in three nights—looked like the tell-tale dates in Mizzou's stretch-run drive for the Big Seven basketball flag.

Going into these crucial battles, the Tigers were tied with Colorado for the loop leadership at 5-1. Nebraska knocked the Buffs out of exclusive possession of first-place with a victory at Lincoln.

After this tough two-game road trip, Coach Sparky Stalcup's Black and Gold courtmen were due to play three of their four remaining games on Brewer's friendly home court. Iowa State, Colorado and Kansas were left on the home slate, while last-place Oklahoma provided the last away-from-home appearance.

Due to report in the southland this month at their respective big league training camps, former Tigers Junior Wren and Bob Loschke worked out with Coach John Simmons' 1955 squad in the Brewer field house batting cage for a week prior to their departure.

Wren is Chicago White Sox property, while Loschke is in the Detroit organization.

The Alumnus Reviews

THE SELF-MADE MAN IN AMERICA by Irvin G. Wyllie, 204 pp.
Rutgers University Press, New Brunswick, N. J., 1954.

THERE HAS BEEN MUCH COMPLAINT in this and other countries that no man was regarded as successful unless his success was in money-making. Artists have starved to death from neglect; school teachers have struggled along without money or prestige, preachers have saved countless souls without any earthly reward, while the millionaire has lived and died as the venerated American. The rags to riches legend has been extolled as the great American achievement from press and the pulpit. Yet Irvin G. Wyllie, professor of history at the University, is the first scholar to examine the myth and objectively explore it.

In the beginnings of this country, he says, "Though it was an American conceit that the self-made man was peculiar to our shores, he had been known in other lands." In England the merchant classes rose to power, and English guide books for success were much read in this country. But it was "no accident that the best-known self-made man was Benjamin Franklin, the product of Puritan Boston. . . . Through his 'Poor Richard's Almanack' he publicized prosperity axioms, which have probably exercised as much practical influence on Americans as the combined influence of all formal philosophers." Actually this book today, as well as his autobiography, is considered showing off the least attractive side of the many-sided Franklin, but even today it is all that many people know of him.

Thus Benjamin Franklin became "the first object of adoration of this cult, the convenient symbol which linked the success tradition of two centuries." Oliver Wendell Holmes, "who was no special friend of the business upstart, believed that America could be justly proud of those self-made men and that any enterprising young man might rise to the elite."

This cult had a definite pattern. A boy had to be poor, preferably born on a farm or in a village, where he learned sterling principles, be deprived of as much formal education as possible, and, like Dick Whittington, go to the city to seek his fortune. His inner qualities, inculcated by his revered mother, who was his guiding star, were, according to the myth, what made his rise to wealth possible. Of the qualities that made men rise to millionaires, industry was the most highly praised. "Hard knocks, hard work, long hours, and constant plugging produced results." Toward the middle of the century, the ambitious young man was warned against the frivolous pleasures.

In the chapter on "God and Mammon" Wyllie shows how the success-creed was extolled by preachers, who considered financial success a reward for industry and righteousness. "Virtually all the leading Protestant denominations, with the exception of the Lutheran, produced at least one nationally known clergyman who honored the wealth-through-virtue theme. . . . Henry Ward Beecher established himself as an expert on self-help long before he became a famous preacher, and he is quoted all through the book, as the success cult was one of his favorite themes. There was no reference among the preachers of large city churches in the middle of the century to how hard it was for a rich man to enter the kingdom of heaven. These clergymen argued that God required every man to lead a successful and useful temporal life, as well as a spiritual one. Their business methods were not scrutinized until some half a century later. Theodore Parker went so far as to describe the merchant as a "moral educator, a church of Christ gone into business . . . a saint in trade . . . the Saint of the nineteenth century is the good merchant; he is wisdom for the foolish, strength for the weak, warning to the wicked, and a blessing to all." Only the fact that the Victorian sense of humor was limited can explain why someone in the congregation failed to burst out laughing at this description of the merchant saint. In other words

under the American cult of success the laying up of treasures on earth had become a positive religious duty. "According to the theology of success, God always rewarded the industrious, the frugal, and the sober with wealth."

From the day of Franklin on, the self-help advisers have concerned themselves with the relation of education to success. Until the last decade of the nineteenth century a common school education, apprenticeship, and a program of self culture were standard preparation. As late as 1890, the average American had not gone beyond the fifth grade. A man was qualified for a job if he could read, write a legible hand, and cipher accurately. Andrew Carnegie, who was opposed to college education and never employed a college graduate if he could help it, was a strong advocate for these self-help programs. All through the country there was great prejudice against college graduates, except of course of professional schools, as indeed not even the crassest self-help advocate expected or desired his doctor to be self educated. Carnegie delighted in showing how few college graduates were found among the successful men in the United States. Horace Greeley told an audience at the Cooper Union that although there were few unemployed laboring men in New York, there were at least 1,000 college graduates unemployed because their college training had unfitted them for the humblest positions.

"The worst part of this success doctrine," Wyllie believes, "was that it callously condemned the majority who failed and charged them with delinquency. It reserved a halo of merit for the big winners, and suggested, at least indirectly, that success required no explanations and failure permitted no excuse."

When the time came that the trusts were threatened by Theodore Roosevelt and his Big Stick, defense of the wealthy, self-made men was loud from the pulpit, the rostrum, and the press, who proclaimed them not robber barons, but the noblest of benefactors.

This book represents original thinking as well as sound scholarship, which is not permitted to clog the book, a book written for the layman as well as the history student. It is a book that ought to have been written and has been written just as it ought to have been. The trouble is that the people who need to read it most very likely will not read it, but it is too late to do them any good anyhow, but not their sons.

His concluding chapter is one of the most interesting in the book.

The University is to be congratulated on a faculty which includes men like Dr. Wyllie.

Dr. Alphin, who is 40 years old, received his B.S. degree at Washington and Lee University, majoring in biology and chemistry; his M.S. from the University of Virginia, majoring in biology and genetics; and his M.D. degree from Virginia in 1947 after an interim period of three years study as a Fellow in Neurology at the Institute of Neurology, Northwestern University. He was a faculty member at Washington and Lee and at the University of Virginia.

RELIGION IN LIFE WEEK ON CAMPUS MARCH 6-10

Religion in Life Week, an annual event, will be observed on the campus March 6 to 10, sponsored by the Y.M.C.A. and the Y.W.C.A. The purpose is to bring to the campus outstanding persons in business as well as religion with the idea of helping students solve problems, help them think through fundamental religious values and to recall the part that religion plays in everyday life.

Among the visiting lecturers are Robert C. Mayfield, '33, former secretary of the General Board of Lay Activities of the Methodist Church, and Dr. Merrimon Cunnigim, dean of the Perkins School of Theology at S.M.U. Mr. Mayfield, native of Lebanon, Mo., received a law degree here in '35.

IN HOUSTON, TEXAS . . .

A sound color movie of the Ole Mizzou campus brought back memories to oldtimers and younger ones at the Missouri Alumni Club dinner meeting January 14. Thirty-three attended the affair at the Town House. Discussion of entertainment plans for 1955 and appointment of five committee chairmen by President M. L. "Ken" McCubbin were main events of the brief business session.

Tentative plans for a party at Grand Prize Brewery were discussed. Claude M. Quigley, Jr., A.B. '41 and A.M. '42, with Standard Oil of Texas, was named chairman of this committee.

Other chairmen are: membership, Bobbie Dee Davis, A.M. '50, secretary of club; nominating, Mike Bogle, B.J. '48, past president; summer picnic, Tom F. Brawner, B.J. '28, On-to-Dallas and "Beat SMU," Cooper Hawthorne, MU student in '51 and '52 and associate professor of Air Science and Tactics at Missouri U. from 1949 to 1953 while a member of the U. S. Air Force.

This was the last Houston meeting for Billie Nelson and Dale Milne, MU graduates of 1942. Captain Dale is leaving the Air Force soon and they are returning to their old home in Missouri, where they are good prospects for another alumni club. Dale was ramrod of the highly successful club picnic here last August.—Claude C. Curtis, reporter.

R. B. Oliver Honored

The Cape County Bar paid special honor to R. B. Oliver on January 24 for his record of 50 years as an attorney in Cape Girardeau. At a dinner meeting, his career as a lawyer was reviewed by Elmer A. Strom, '28, and a scroll signed by all members of the bar was presented to Mr. Oliver.

Admitted to the practice of law in 1904—the year he received his LL.B. at Missouri—Mr. Oliver joined his father, the late Senator R. B. Oliver, in establishing the firm of Oliver & Oliver.

At the time the organization of the Little River Drainage District was under way and, with his father, Mr. Oliver helped to direct the formation of the district, for which he has been an attorney since.

For more than 40 years, Mr. Oliver also has been the attorney for the Cape Special Road District; has long been general counsel of the Missouri Utilities Co., and is the attorney for two Main street improvement districts formed to further plans for flood control.

Mr. Oliver has served as president of the Cape County Bar and was vice-president of the Missouri Bar Association in 1922. He served as a member of the State Board of Bar Examiners from 1930 to 1947. In addition to practicing in the local courts, Mr. Oliver has been before all the appellate courts and the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals as well as the Supreme Court of the United States, particularly in cases involving drainage and levee matters.

The January Alumnus came yesterday, with that picture of the famous fire of January 10, 1892 which destroyed the main building and gave us our six noble columns. I went at once to my 1906 Savitar and took out a colored postcard of that fire scene, a card that had lain there many years.

How terribly hot that old fire wast! Despite the snow on the ground in the picture, despite the snow on the ground here now, and the below zero temperature, overnight that postcard curled up from the heat until the opposite corners almost touch!

I am so sorry to have the current Alumnus spoil the traditional story about the columns. When friends ask me the significance of my 6 by 8 inch marble replica of the columns, I like to tell them that tale for freshmen: I show them a picture of the columns, ivy-grown, all but one, the one in honor of the only dead president who was an atheist! But, by the picture used on page 5 of the January issue, there is no ivy anywhere. I'm distressed. But I think I shall go on telling the old story, much as I hate the thought of telling a lie!

Success to you with the Alumnus. Your winter cover scene will stir the memories of those who tramped the old campus around, say, 1900, when the Eighth Street entrance was the approach most used. I can remember stopping to enjoy a similar appearance of this very campus brook. Thank you for the reminder.—Harley Howe, '06, 108 Brandon Place, Ithaca, N. Y. (Mr. Howe has retired as professor of physics at Cornell.—Ed.)

The great snowstorm mentioned during the past two months occurred during the Easter holidays in 1926. I recall it most vividly even though I was not on the train, but remained in Columbia. Several from our rooming house were on it and on their return told of the long night spent in the snowdrifts between Columbia and Centralia.—Floyd A. Powell, '28, '29, managing editor, Hickory Daily Record, Hickory, N. C.

OUR NEW AUDITORIUM

THE CAMPUS IS ABOUT TO SEE the new Jesse Hall Auditorium, the largest meeting place at the University (excepting Brewer Field House and Memorial Stadium), and the only modern auditorium at the University.

It is enclosed in an extension of the East Wing, the first major alteration to Jesse Hall since its construction some sixty years ago. The remodeled wing extends about 65 feet, toward South Ninth Street, beyond its original location.

The new Jesse Hall Auditorium has a capacity of 1,920 seats, 1,180 on the main floor and 740 in the balcony. The mohair theater-type seats are green, the dominant color in the Auditorium's decor.

The new Auditorium in no way resembles its predecessor. It has even been "turned around." Its audiences will face the east; in the old building they faced the south. There are no wooden floors and wooden seats to creak and splinter. No posts to peer around or hide behind. No sidewall sections of seats facing each other instead of the stage.

Acoustically ideal, the new Auditorium again is unlike the old, which was a sort of echo chamber where one cough, one late arrival, or even one squirm, might disrupt whatever proceedings were being presented.

The University community surely will be brought closer together through this new central meeting place as cultural events grow in number and scope.

In the following pages the Alumnus presents pictures of more features of the Auditorium.

The stage is 35 feet deep with a proscenium opening of 55 feet in width and 20 feet in height. The overall stage width beyond proscenium is 88 feet.

THE LARGE STAGE is one of the fine features of the new Jesse Hall Auditorium and it is an innovation in campus architecture. It has a proscenium width of 55 feet, and a depth of 35 feet. It is large enough for a full symphony orchestra or for a large chorus, and by use of the proper curtains it can be reduced in size for recitals and lectures. The equipment is such that it can be used for dramatics.

For several years concerts in the University Series have been staged in the Field House, and when enrollment was at its peak it was necessary to have dual performances to accommodate all the students. These concerts now will be held in the new Jesse Hall Auditorium, and the system of dual performances will be resumed to compensate for the reduction in the number of seats in making the switch from the Field House.

Actually, with its modern lighting and acoustical arrangement, the Auditorium should prove far more desirable for all musical presentations, and an audience of 1,900 persons in comfortable seats likewise is preferable to an even larger audience seated in folding chairs and on benches as provided by the Field House.

On the exterior, the stage and other extensions to the east have been designed to match as nearly as possible the elevation of Jesse Hall itself. Considerable effort was made to get the old style bricks to match. As a part of the alterations a new enclosed east stairway for Jesse Hall extending up to the fourth floor was planned. At the first floor it becomes the principal entrance to the auditorium lobbies.

On entering the building at this point a broad stairway leads to the first floor where the east corridor of Jesse Hall has been set aside and enlarged as an Auditorium lobby, and provided with a ticket office. Opening from this is the main floor foyer of the Auditorium. Doorways lead from it into the Auditorium aisles. On the second floor is a similar lobby and foyer serving the balcony.

The Auditorium proper has been provided with indirect lighting on the main ceiling and beam lights for the stage. The entire front edge of the balcony has a housing for concealing the array of spot lights that are used for theatrical productions. Also at the front of the balcony is a platform for a future television projector and camera.

A feature of the Auditorium is the arrangement of the side walls and ceiling in planes set at various angles with and without sound-absorbing panels to assist the acoustical effect. The acoustical design was very carefully checked by a physicist in this field. The upholstered seats themselves are an integral part of the acoustical system. The aisles of the concrete floors will be carpeted.

At the back of the balcony is a projection booth for motion pictures and stage spot lights. Also nearby is a sound control booth for the sound amplifying system.

Television was not overlooked. A complete system of conduits and control stations for future television has been provided so that programs here can be televised and so that out-

The electric control panel backstage contains more than 100 switches, rheostats and controls for operation of lights and equipment throughout the building. The spiral stairway shown at right is to be used by stage workmen arranging backdrops and drapes. It leads to two work balconies and to the scene grid loft 48 feet above the floor.

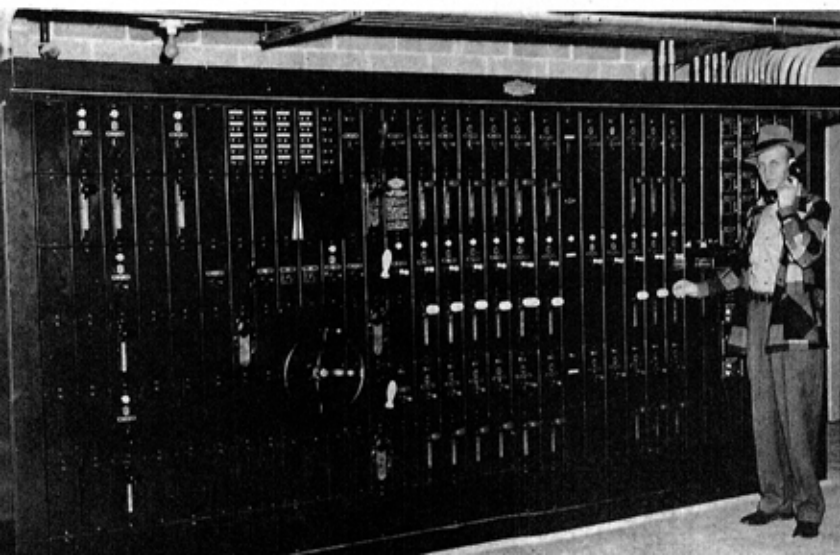

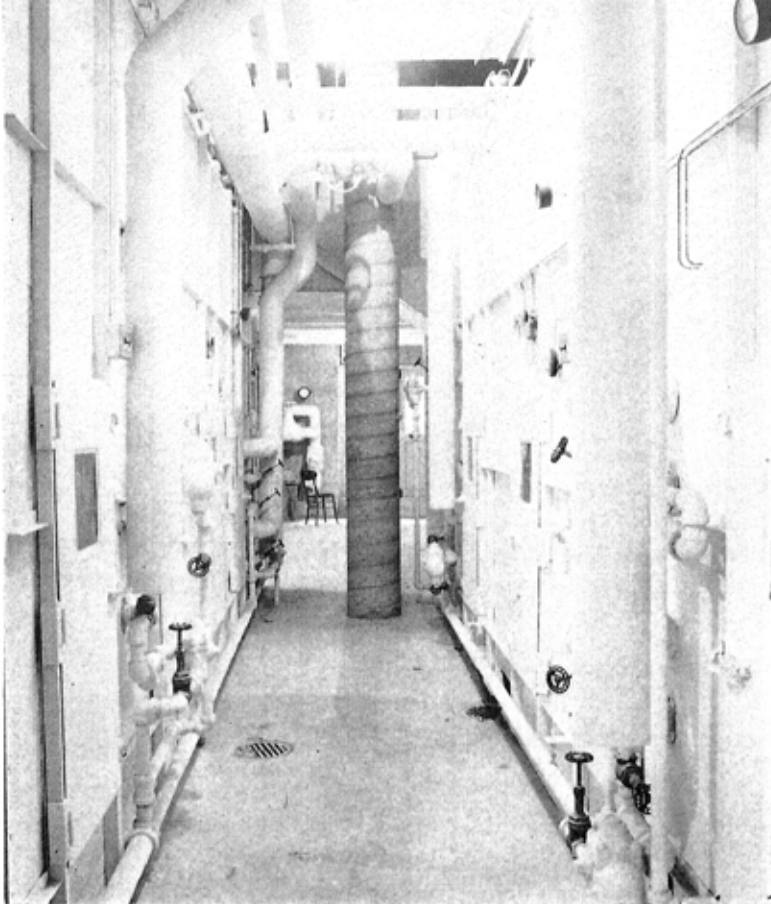

While size of the stage and Auditorium is impressive, performers will not be "lost" in comparison, as this picture indicates. Stage curtains, aisle carpeting, and sound system were to be the final installations before public opening of the Auditorium.

side television programs can be shown on the screen.

The stage itself has a gridiron for hanging scenery and the various curtains and cyclorama. The scenery is controlled by a modern counterweight system. The lighting system is centered in the large stage switchboard which has dimmers for the house lights, stage footlights, border lights and spot lights. At either side of the stage and under the stage are dressing rooms and storage rooms.

There are no windows in the Auditorium because there is a complete system of ventilation which has been arranged for future air-conditioning. Funds were not available to install the necessary compressors and cooling tower.

Some of the air-conditioning equipment is shown here. Although a complete system of ventilation has been arranged, air-conditioning must await additional funds to install necessary compressors and cooling tower.

Looking north on the main floor foyer. Doors at right open to first floor aisle in Auditorium. A similar foyer on the second floor leads to balcony.

A rehearsal room for the University Band was planned for the space under the Auditorium proper, with space for instrument storage, library and offices. The funds available did not permit completion of this much-needed facility. It is assumed that money will be available soon for this work.

The old Auditorium was poorly arranged, inadequate, and criticized as a fire hazard. Many studies were made to remedy these defects within the limits of the original space. None could be worked out that would solve these problems.

In 1944 the administration of the University, working with the architects, Jamieson, Spearl, Hammond and Grolock, determined that the best way to provide a well designed medium size auditorium was to turn it around so as to get an adequate stage on the east with the seating area occupying the entire old Auditorium space together with an extension to the east. Studies and sketches were made and completed in 1944 to determine the size and arrangement. These formed the basis for requests to the Legislature for funds which finally became available in 1952. The present building is the culmination of those early studies. The Legislature appropriated $1,250,000 for this work and the entire amount has been expended.

CLASS NOTES

00 FOREST S. LYMAN says he is retired and praying for rain, but no results. He lives at 563 W. Park, Olathe, Kan. He says CRAIG RUBEY, 20, who played basketball here and later coached, operates a chain of gift stores around Kansas City and has lately opened a branch in Olathe.

AVA STEELE Williams lives at Ranier, Ore., where her address is Rt. 1, Box 211.

ROSALIE GERIG Edwards is a foreign teacher, interpreter, and translator. She lives at 1012 W. Redwood St., San Diego, Calif.

CHARLES A. GREEN has retired to 186 S. Oak Knoll, Pasadena, Calif.

THOMAS H. GIDEON was Magistrate Judge at Springfield, Mo., but returned to private practice last month. He is anxious to hear from his classmate OSCAR O. ASKRAN, whose address on our files is 909 White Building, Roswell, N. M., but a letter there apparently failed to reach him. The Alumni office too would like to have his correct address. Judge Gideon lives at 1932 W. State, Springfield.

THEODORE ELY HAMILTON, 319 King Ave., Columbus, Ohio, has taught romance languages at Bucknell, Cincinnati, Vermont, Illinois and Missouri universities. He is connected with Ohio State now. Dr. Hamilton (Ph.D., '08) made Phi Beta Kappa here. He has edited French text books and written articles in connection with French, besides having two volumes of his poems published. He has toured Europe three times, studying in France and Spain. Among other organizations, he is a member of the Massachusetts Society of Mayflower Descendants, and took part a dozen times in the "Pilgrims Progress" during the Plymouth Tercentenary in 1921, and was present for the Tercentenaries of the Massachusetts Bay Colony and Harvard University.

01 HETTIE MARGARET ANTHONY is a college professor at Maryville, Mo. The 1901 Savitar said of her, quoting Kipling, "She was clever, witty, brilliant, sparkling beyond most of her kind." Her address is 212 North Ave.

RUSSELL A. SHAW, retired lawyer who lives at Joshua Tree, Calif., half of the year and in Bigfork, Mont. the other half, has a sweet-cherry orchard on the east shore of Flathead Lake in Lake County, Mont., and he and his wife go up there in summer to look after the harvest. They have three married daughters and four grandchildren. He writes, "I am 77 years young."

EDWIN D. SMITH, 276 Dixon Ave., Dayton, Ohio, is engineering consultant, Montgomery County Ohio Sanitary Department.

GARLAND C. BROADHEAD, a retired engineer, lives at 602 Sanford Place, Columbia, Mo.

CHARLES CLAUDE GUTHRIE is professor emeritus, physiology, School of Medicine, University of Pittsburgh. He lives at 806 Hill Crest Ave., Columbia, Mo.

02 THOMAS O. RAMSEY has had as active life as a teacher, 36 years as a classroom teacher and eight as an administrator, as he had when he was a student on the Missouri campus. He retired in 1946 but his wide interests keep him busy. He prepared for retirement long before it came by investing in rental property. He does the painting and decorating himself. He keeps his ties in the teaching profession through membership in the Retired Teachers Association and is president of the group this year. He conducts the annual bar examination at Gonzaga, and is jury commissioner for Spokane County. He has served as president of the Missouri Society, which is one of the largest state groups at Spokane, where he lives at E. 44 31st Ave.

THEKLA KAHN Woodhull (Mrs. W. S.) lives at 6265 Azalea Lane, Paradise, Calif.

ELIDA KIRCHNER Muench (Mrs. Hugo) lives at 3516 Grim Ave., San Diego, Calif.

WALLACE M. BENSON, who is retired, lives at 411 Raton Ave., LaJunta, Calif.

LUCY MOREHEAD SCHAEFFER lives at 730 S. Logan St., Denver, Colo.

03 EARL B. SMITH is design engineer for Army Ordnance at National Bureau of Standards, Washington D. C. since 1952, after he became Emeritus Professor of mechanical engineering at City College, New York City. He played left end for the Tigers in 1900-02. He lives at 3 Pooks Hill Road, Bethesda, Md. and hopes that some of his classmates write to him.

BURNS STEWART is retired and lives at 1597 Eastmoreland Ave., Memphis 4, Tenn.

WALTER A. HIGBEE, Lancaster, Mo., is Judge of the Circuit Court, 37th Judicial circuit of Missouri.

Dr. WILLIAM H. GOODSON, of 37 Moss St., Liberty, Mo. says he is still so busy practicing medicine that he has very little time to recall the past, but he does talk to the students in his neighborhood who attend the University and tells them that they have chosen well.

E. E. LUSHBAUGH is in the structural steel business. He lives at 235 Westminster, Jacksonville, Ill.

WALTER M. KRAFFT is retired and lives at 6501 N. Fairfield Ave., Chicago 45, Ill.

04 TOM K. SMITH on January 2 completed his fiftieth year in business in the city of St. Louis. He started with Little and Hays Investment Company at 903 N. Fourth St., which is in the same block as the Boatman's National Bank, of which he is chairman of the Board of Directors today. He lives at 23 Kingsbury Place.

HENRY C. WESTOVER is retired and living at 1210 Howard St., Glendale, Calif.

FREDERIC F. ESPENSCHIED says he retired from business as a sales engineer in January because he was "just plain tired of working." Married and has two daughters, he lives at 3373 Stuyvesant Pl. NW, Washington, D. C.

Dr. CAROLINE MCGILL is practicing medicine at Butte, Mont., where she lives at 58 W. Quartz. Her class was the last class to "begin our course in the old Medical Building and first to enjoy the privileges of the new anatomical laboratories, the only class ever excused from description anatomy two months before the close of school because we were competent to master the subject in that time; the only class ever called on to make World's Fair records of blood-pressure and to mount pathological sections to be taken to the New York Pathological Association." We want all that medical class to return next year when the new teaching hospital of the Missouri four-year medical school is ready to open, and see that here is a fifty year dream coming true.

R. C. (BOB) WHITE is retired but says he is still whistling to and for his old mates. He lives at 14 N. Kingshighway, St. Louis 8, Mo.

EVERETT FRIEZE is practicing law at Bolivar, Mo.

The new junior high school of Webster Groves, Mo. has been named after JAMES T. HINSON, who was principal of the Webster Groves High School from 1907 to 1943, when he retired. The Memphis (Mo.) Democrat writes, "It is to be hoped that some of his sincerity and enthusiasm may be imparted to the spirit of the school and that his presence may become traditional there."

06 CHESTER STARR decided to retire as rural health director for the Missouri Farm Bureau while he could still enjoy life. The Farm Bureau News said of him, "His keen foresight and business ability in the farm cooperative field resulted in his pioneering a number of services that have since become universally accepted. And those services he envisioned have been responsible for a higher standard of living and greater freedom from financial worries for millions of farm people." He and his wife are spending the winter in the Rio Grande Valley in Texas, but continue to call Jefferson City their home.

EDWARD R. ROMBERG is retired and living at A569 Beatty Drive, Riverside, Calif.

R. A. KIZER, 1150 Dolores Ave., Douglas, Ariz., is draftsman for the Phelps Dodge Copper Co.

JANE A. HARRISON, who has retired, lives at LaPlata, Mo.

VEIT A. HAIN was president of the Fliin and Drefflein Engineering Co., Chicago, until he sold out his interests and retired in 1948. He is married and has two sons. He has lived at 802 Garland Ave., Hot Springs, Ark. since his retirement.

07 T. E. BRIELI, 4225 Laclede Ave., is treasurer of the Briell Rodgers Cotton Goods Co.

FRANK D. LOMBAR lives at 136 Hawthorne Dr., Danville, Va.

B. W. TILLMAN, 57 E. Daniel, Champaign, Ill. says, "We are proud of Missouri University's accomplishments in athletics. Best wishes from an old standby captain of the football team." He was captain under Coach Monilaw in that year we beat Kansas 7-0, something that happened all too rarely in that period. Tillman is now retired from the Agricultural Extension Service of the University of Illinois.

SUSIE FRAKES Dean (Mrs. F. E.) can be reached at 1133 Lincoln St., Denver, Colo.

08 D. HOWARD DOANE, 5144 Delmar Blvd., St. Louis 8, Mo., writes that the Doane Agricultural Service, which had its beginning in 1919, is celebrating its 35th anniversary this year. The booklet published to celebrate its birthday states, "The purpose of the newly organized company was to provide sound management and guidance for persons who owned farms as an investment and for farm operators who realized that 'outside help' of professional caliber could make their land even more profitable." Doane, who was known on the campus as "Howd Doane" says "It has been a grand experience in having a part in building our organization. Graduates of the University of Missouri have contributed materially to its development, growth, and accomplishments. Our first retiring president, TRUE D. MORSE, '24, is now Under-secretary of agriculture. REX R. BAILEY, '22 our current president, and our secretary, A. DAVIS ELKIN, '18, all are products of the University of Missouri." This organization now has branch offices in more than 30 cities and towns. It has branched out in various related directions with Doane, chairman of the board, still its guiding force.

E. F. KETTER, 1100 Jefferson St., Mexico, Mo., although he retired four years ago, still is consulting engineer in civil and mining engineering. His son, ROBERT LEWIS KETTER, '50, is now with Lehigh University, Bethlehem, Pa., where he received his A.M. and is working on his Ph.D., which he expects this year. Bob's wife was LOLLY ZIMMERMAN, '50. MARY BARBARA KETTER, '36, is now Mrs. J. L. Farrell, and MAUDE ETHLYN KETTER, '35, is the wife of J. D. DAVIES, '35. The Kettlers have 15 grandchildren.

EUGENE F. SALISBURY, Grandview, Mo. Rt. 2, is chief engineer for the Kansas City Southern Railway. He is also a member of the Mississippi River Commission. He married AMANDA PAINTER, and they have one son, WILLIAM PAINTER. Gene was one of the best all-around athletes on the campus in his time, as he lettered in football, baseball, and track. He is the author of "Influence of Diversion on the Mississippi and Atchafalaya Rivers."

JOHN BENJAMIN HILL is trying to be contented with the rank of Emeritus. He is working with his wife, Helen, on a text "Genetics and Human Heredity," a 525 page volume to be published some time this winter by McGraw-Hill. He was at the Pennsylvania State College 1909-49 and was visiting professor, University of Miami, 1949-52. His address is Box 286 State College, Pa.

CHARLENE SHEPARD Wilson (Mrs. G. R.) has lived at 917 McClellan St., Wausau, Wis., except for the few years she lived in British Columbia. She has one married daughter who has presented her with two grandsons and a granddaughter.

MITTIE V. ROBNETT Spence with her daughter MARY VIRGINIA, '37 and husband, Dr. E. L. SPENCE, vacationed in Alaska last summer, going as far as Kodiak and Anchorage. They live at 301 College Ave., Kennett, Mo. A son, Dr. George David Spence, practices ophthalmology at Charlottesville, Va., and has a son, 2.

CHARLES ALFORD CLIFFORD, who is retired, lives at 5523 Secrest Dr., Los Angeles, Calif.

BERTHA ELLIS BOOTH, Hamilton, Mo., is a writer and retired school teacher. She taught Greek and Latin 20 years in universities, but quit because of increasing deafness. She writes features for the Kansas City Star and the St. Joseph papers. One of her hobbies is local history, and she is considered the best authority on the history of Caldwell and Harrison counties. She is writing a book on early Mormonism in Caldwell and Daviess Counties, 1836-38. She says she wants us all to buy copies.

CAROLYN BENTON Cockeair, 5711 Holmes St., Kansas City, Mo., who has had a long and varied career in teaching and lecturing, has resigned as director of the Great Books program in Kansas City to give a semester-long course on Shakespeare on television, running from February through May. It is offered for credit by the University of Kansas City. She has the almost impossible goal of making Kansas City as conscious of Shakespeare in the next six months as it has been of baseball in the last six. She feels that starting with Hamlet, she may come near to achieving her goal.

09 PAUL BAYLISS was made a life member of the American Society of Civil Engineers in 1953. From 1945-52, he supervised the new building program of the Missouri School of Mines. His address is 5316 Pershing Ave., St. Louis 12, Mo.

WALTER G. SMAUDER is an industrial engineer and lives at 4544 Fairway, Dallas, Tex.

JAMES E. WILDISH, since retirement from Kansas City Junior College, is teaching at the University of Kansas City. His wife is the former HARRIET NEWCOMER, '08. They live at 115 N. Lawn, Kansas City, Mo.

10 CARL L. RISTINE, well remembered as one of Roper's Tigers and captain of the '10 team, is living at 4100 Malaga Ave., Coconut Grove, Fla. He lost his only daughter about two years ago and his wife about six months after that. This Christmas his only grandson, Hugh Rowland Roberts, 8, accompanied by his parents, visited him. "Curly," as we all knew him, was well known during a long and successful career as a Missouri lawyer.

HARDAGE L. ANDREWS is president of the Jones and Lamson Machine Co., Springfield, Vt. He lives at Collingwood Road, Bridgeport, Conn. He was active in the Engine School when he was on campus.

C. J. BONER is the author of a book on the "Manufacture and Application of Lubricating Greases," published by Reinhold Publishing Corp. He is chief research chemist and director of laboratories, Battenfield Grease and Oil Corporation. He lives at 218 W. 68th Terr., Kansas City, Mo. The 1910 Savitar said of him that he was always busy and had no time for the ladies; it looks as if his industry has paid off.

LOUIS V. STIGALL, long associated with the State Highway Department of Missouri, is practicing law at St. Joseph, Mo., where he lives at 1850 Clay St.

HYMEN AARON SELTZER, president of H. A. Seltzer Co. St. Louis, lives at 8964 Delmar Blvd., University City. The 1910 Savitar said of him that "he knows St. Louis from one end to the other." This doubtless comes in handy even today.

LOUIS J. PORTNER, who practices law in St. Louis, has moved to 10090 Springwood Dr., Clayton 24, Mo.

JESSE J. BOOTH has retired after 40 years of service with United States Steel. He lives at 1213 Girard Rd., Pittsburgh 27, Pa.

GEORGE ALLEN RIDGEWAY, 800 Washington, St. Jefferson City, Mo., is civil engineer for the Missouri State Highway Department.

FRANK SETTLE is a Tulsa attorney at law with offices in the Philtower Bldg. He served on the Tulsa Board of Education 15 years, three as president. He was chairman of the Tulsa County Red Cross for three years during the last war. He is now president of the Tulsa Farm Club.

THOMAS ROBERT POWELL since retiring is ranching California style. He reports, "The old man, tied down to his little enterprises after 68 years of more-or-less worth while thrills and adventures, including law practice (hardly worth mentioning), war years with the F.B.I. and more years—many more—with other law enforcement agencies, now plants things and pulls 'em out, feeds the chickens and the gophers and tries, painfully, to separate the memories that are good from those that burn like a white-hot brand." He has "four fine children by his second wife." He reports "got a card from good old FRANK HOLT and wife, '09, sojourning in Gay Paree with their new Citroen." Also that O. D. CHRISTMAN, '09, a retired Missouri state engineer comes by and says "Hi" (too infrequently). He lost his wife about a year ago. He saw HATTON HULETT, '11, just once. Mr. Powell lives at 1204 E. State St., Ontario, Calif.

ROBERT V. AYCOCK is director of the City National Bank and Trust Co., past president of the Kansas City Country Club, director of the Kansas City Auto Supply Co. and the Kansas City Club, but he is president of the Grand Avenue Bank of Kansas City. The 1910 Savitar said of him, "He is handsome, dignified, and accomplished. Plays everything from piccolo to shortstop." Yes, he really was on the varsity baseball team.

JOHN D. FRISTOE, Jr., 6309 Walnut, Kansas City, Mo., is proud to announce the advent of a grandson, Norman Lee Fristoe of Las Cruces, N. M., his fourth grandchild, whom he hopes will be the fourth of the name and fourth generation to attend "Old Mizzou." (We hope so too). His other grandchildren are his daughter's. Some time ago he saw the notice of the wedding of FAWN KYGER, '11, and MAX MOREHOUSE, '11, and he hastened to look them up and renew the good associations of the past. He also reports that he has heard recently from his cousin HUBERT M. HARVEY, '07 from Blaine, Wash.

Dr. EDGAR S. FORTNER has his own clinic, where he is practicing surgery. He is associated with his daughter, Dr. Lucille L. Fortner, who specialized in pediatrics and internal medicine. A son is following his father's footsteps in surgery in California. Dr. Fortner owns a stock farm with Polled Hereford cattle and lives at 1360 State St., Salem, Ore., which he says is one of the prettiest cities in the United States.

HARRY C. STUMP, who has retired, lives at 255 N. Elm St., Nevada, Mo.

11 ARTHUR BEVAN, 1006 W. Washington St., Champaign, Ill., is now principal geologist, Illinois State Geological Survey, where he has been employed since 1947. For eighteen years before that he was state geologist of Virginia. He has prepared for his retirement with numerous ardent occupations: stamp collecting, kodachrome photography, landscape gardening, and interpretation of technical geology to laymen; also kodachrome lectures on Virginia and the Rocky Mountain region. He is a "survivor" of the first field camp of the University at Lander, now Camp Branson, and he would undoubtedly say today if he visited it that the geology campers are a bunch of sissies compared to his hardy group, for the Camp now is as comfortable as any other camp, and a really outstanding corner of the Missouri campus. Now you can have a hot bath any night, but the campers had to wade out into the cold Popo Agie up to ten years ago, except for Saturdays when the primitive hot water heater was fired. Arthur Bevan has a long paragraph devoted to him in Who's Who. We are quite sure about one thing—he is never going to be bored after he retires next year.

ELECTRICITY
WILL YOU USE
IN 1970?

We doubt you can find a quick answer to such a question. But a long-range forecast of your requirements for electricity between now and 1970 shows that we will need to build two additional power generating plants costing more than $100 million. Of course, this would be only part of the expense of providing new service facilities during the coming years.

Ample, dependable electric power at reasonable rates is absolutely essential to the future development of this community . . . and to the economic welfare of every citizen.

Actually, it is important to you that your power and light company earn a living wage. So long as we do, we can provide the kind of service you and our other customers deserve . . . and we can grow to meet your future demands. Only by making a fair return can we attract the savings of people who must invest the money needed for future expansion.

GENERAL ELECTRIC EDUCATIONAL AND CHARITABLE FUND OFFERS:

A new way of giving colleges the financial help they need

The G-E Educational Fund announces a plan to match an employee's gifts to his college, up to $1000 in one year.

One out of every two colleges and universities in the U.S. is today operating in the red, and rapidly increasing enrollments mean they face a mounting deficit every year.

To American industry, which depends on healthy schools for its trained man power, the question is, "How can we help—and encourage others to help?"

A "Corporate Alumnus Program" is now announced for 1955 by the Trustees of the General Electric Educational and Charitable Fund. Here is how the plan works:

For every gift made by a G-E employee to an accredited four-year U.S. college or university at which he has earned a degree, the Fund will make a gift to the same school. Within the limits of the plan, it is the intent to match each employee's contributions, up to $1000 in one year, on a dollar-for-dollar basis. This is in addition to the scholarships, fellowships and grants-in-aid provided by the Fund.

The Corporate Alumnus Program will not itself lift the colleges' dollar burden, but it will be a good start in stimulating increased alumni and industry support—and, as we see it, a good example of progress in the American way.

Progress Is Our Most Important Product
