THE MISSOURI ALUMNUS is published monthly except July, August and January by the University of Missouri Alumni Association, 101 Read Hall, Columbia, Missouri and mailed to all active members in the Association. Entered as second class matter under the act of March 3, 1879. Active membership $4.00 a year; life membership $80. Member, American Alumni Council.

About the cover: Students taking ROTC have their Commencement too. They fill the Quadrangle on several Wednesday afternoons in the Spring parading before a reviewing stand, and on the final drill day numerous honors and awards are received. This photograph showing a few men in one unit was made by Lee Battaglia.

MISSOURI ALUMNUS

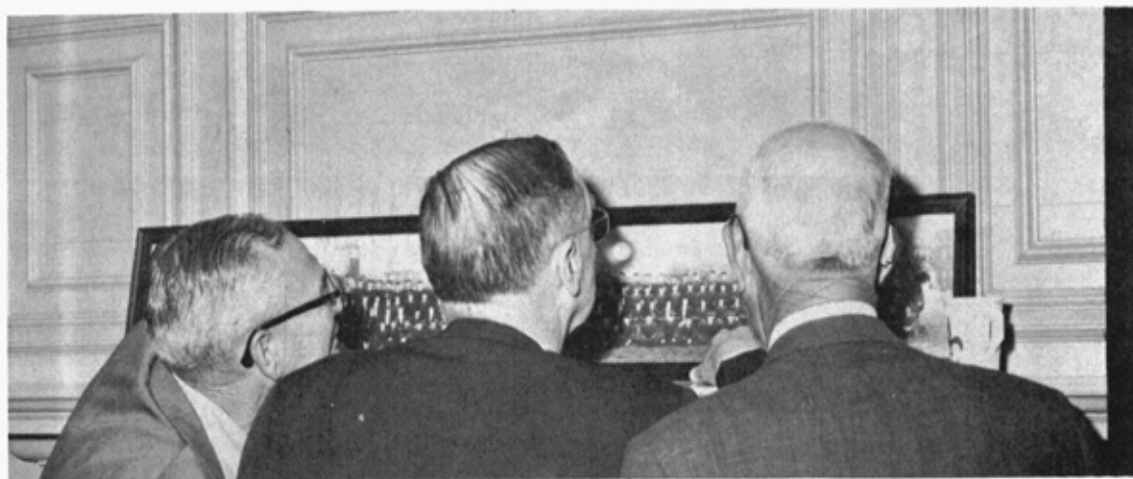

JUNE 1960

VOL. XLVIII, NO. 9

For nearly fifty members of the Class of 1910 to return for their Golden Anniversary Reunion is a tribute to their loyalty to friends and Alma Mater as well as to their mobility and good health. They came from a dozen states and several traveled great distances. A number of classes earlier than 1910 also had representatives. Total attendance, including spouses, exceeded 100. Registration (and reminiscing) began at Read Hall on the afternoon of June 6. Tours of the campus proved a popular feature. In the evening the group had a class banquet and a light program. After a coffee hour on the morning of June 7, the reunion visitors were joined by President Elmer Ellis and Mrs. Ellis at the Student Union for a luncheon. President Ellis and Alumni Director G. H. Entsminger spoke, and Jean Madden presided. Fifty-year medals were distributed. That evening a special bus took thirty of the guests to the Commencement program. Some, but by no means all, of the students of half a century ago are pictured on the following pages.

COMMENCEM

AT SUNSET ON JUNE 7 the 118th annual Commencement of the University came to a close in Memorial Stadium. Although the sky was partly overcast, the all-day threat of rain subsided and the outdoor exercises were held under ideal conditions. For the 1,456 graduates and about 6,000 friends and relatives, the temperature was pleasantly cool.

The Academic Procession formed under the east stands and proceeded in two double lines across the football field to the west side of the Stadium as the University Concert Band played. Among those receiving degrees were thirty who had completed the requirements, along with 498 others, in January. Last August 579 were graduated; thus the total number of degrees granted in the academic year was 2,533.

University President Elmer Ellis also conferred honorary degrees upon four men distinguished in the fields of education, rural sociology and journalism. Honored were Dr. Carl C. Taylor, the Commencement speaker; Dr. Roy Ellis, Dr. Lawrence A. Kimp-ton, and Roy A. Roberts. Emeritus titles were awarded five staff members of the University: R. D. M. Bauer, S.

Woodson Canada, Carl C. Wheaton, George R. Edwards, and Dr. Joseph E. Weinman. James A. Finch, Jr., president of the Board of Curators, announced that the University received during the academic year $2,638,853 in gifts and grants.

Lewis E. Atherton, professor of history, received the Alumni Association's Distinguished Faculty Award and Harold Niedorp of St. Joseph, Mo. received the Alumni Distinguished Service Award, presented by the Association's national president, William R. Toler.

In his address, Dr. Taylor told the graduates:

"All the people of the earth are gradually being drawn, or are rushing, into the orbit of our concern.

"There is no escape from these interrelationships with other people. . . . We are going to hear more and learn more about them. We will have to be more intelligent about how they influence us and how they will and can be influenced by us. This is neither vain prophecy nor vague idealism. We are already in this process of learning.

"One learns, or absorbs, from his family the attitudes, and from his family and local community experience the moral standards, which he carries into his wider human relations. But he does not develop in these face-to-face groups the intelligence required for understanding and effective functioning in those wider circles of human relationships which today offer us wider opportunities and place upon us greater responsibilities.

"It is for helping you to develop this necessary intelligence that universities like this exist. It is for leadership in helping others to understand what you have come to understand that you are today being graduated into the wide world of opportunity and responsibility."

Four receive honorary degrees

FOR OUTSTANDING ACHIEVEMENTS in their professions and exceptional contributions in the development of the American way of life, four prominent Americans were awarded honorary doctorate degrees by the University of Missouri at the 118th annual Commencement June 7.

The recipients were Dr. Carl Taylor, distinguished rural sociologist and former head of the Division of Farm Population and Rural Life of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, U. S. Department of Agriculture; Dr. Roy Ellis, president of Southwest Missouri State College in Springfield; Roy Allison Roberts, president and general manager, and former editor of the Kansas City Star; and Dr. Lawrence Kimpton, who recently resigned as Chancellor of the University of Chicago. All were awarded honorary degrees of Doctor of Laws, conferred by President Elmer Ellis. William V. Kahler, president of the Illinois Bell Telephone Company, was to have received an honorary Doctor of Science degree but was unable to attend because of illness; the degree will be awarded later.

Dr. Taylor, who received his Ph.D. degree from the University in 1918, was the Commencement speaker. He taught rural sociology and agricultural economics here for two years before going to North Carolina State College as department head for three years and then was made Dean of the Graduate School and Director of the Bureau of Economics and Social Research. He went to Washington in 1933 and served with U.S.D.A. for nineteen years. He entered the Foreign Service in 1952, and has worked on community development programs in South America, South Asia, the Middle East and India. He became a consultant to the Ford Foundation in 1955.

Dr. Taylor was presented by Dr. Elmer Kiehl, dean-elect of the College of Agriculture. "In him and in his distinguished career," the citation stated, "the University of Missouri feels that it has contributed in a way not only to American education and scholarship but also to the attempts to deal with the manifold problems pertaining to the difficult adjustment of old societies to the present world and the rapid changes resulting from the impact of new concepts of government and of technological advance."

Dr. Roy Ellis, no relation to the University's president, is a native of Missouri who received A.B. and B.S. degrees in Education from the University in 1914, earning advanced degrees from Harvard and Columbia. He was appointed professor of economics at Southwest Missouri State in 1918, and has been president of that college since 1926. Although he reached retirement age two years ago, the Board of Regents has continued him in office until an extensive building program of the College is completed.

Dr. Roy Ellis' citation said, "He has given to education planning in Missouri on the state-wide level a continuity and wisdom which have helped to shape

Emeritus titles to five

FIVE MEMBERS OF THE UNIVERSITY faculty and administrative staff received Emeritus titles and diplomas at the 118th annual Commencement exercises. The diplomas were presented by President Elmer Ellis to:

Royal D. M. Bauer, professor of accounting, who has served for 31 years. He was a member of the Missouri State Board of Accountancy in 1939-42, served as chairman of the University department of accounting and statistics from 1941 to 1956, and as auditor of the University in 1944-45. Prof. Bauer was Alpha Beta member No. 1 of Delta Sigma Pi, international professional business fraternity, at the University, and only a few weeks ago the Board of Curators approved a change of the name of the Delta Sigma Pi Loan Fund here to the R. D. M. Bauer Delta Sigma Pi Loan Fund in honor of his long service to the University, the fraternity, and the community. He has been adviser to the fraternity for 30 years.

S. Woodson Canada, University registrar, who has 38 years of service. Known to his friends as "Si," he is in demand as interpreter of the faculty by-laws. He was the first president of the Missouri College Registrars' Association. He has also headed the American Association of Collegiate Registrars and the Missouri College Personnel Association. In April he was given a special citation by the American Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers in recognition of his long service to the University and to the profession. Mr. Canada has edited the University Catalog and the schedule of courses, and prepares the University official calendar. As University Registrar since 1923, he also performs the duties of secretary to the various faculties of the University.

R. D. M. Bauer, S. Woodson Canada, George Edwards, Dr. Joseph Weinman, Carl C. Wheaton.

George R. Edwards, professor of physical education and chairman of the department, who has served the University for 34 years. Professor Edwards is still widely known as "Coach" Edwards because of his 20 the direction of educational growth and development." He was presented by Dr. Louis A. Eubank, assistant dean of the College of Education.

Mr. Roberts joined the staff of the Kansas City Star in 1909 as a reporter, after attending the University of Kansas. He served as Washington correspondent for thirteen years, and was appointed managing editor of the Star in 1928. He was named president and general manager of the newspaper in 1947. Mr. Roberts is known as an astute political analyst and has covered the national presidential conventions since 1912. He is a past president of the American Society of Newspaper Editors. In 1957 he received the Missouri Honor Award for Distinguished Service in Journalism.

Mr. Roberts was presented for the degree by Dr. Frank Luther Mott, Dean Emeritus of the School of Journalism. In the citation he said: "He has contributed in a powerful way to the outstanding position this newspaper (the Star) has achieved in American metropolitan journalism. Missouri claims him and takes great pride in the great enterprise that operates under his guiding hand. It is my privilege to present him for this honor in recognition of his long and gifted leadership in the never-ending campaign by responsible citizens to make it possible for the people to know."

Dr. Kimpton, a native of Missouri, holds degrees from Stanford University and Cornell University. A former dean of the College of Liberal Arts of Kansas City University, he went to the University of Chicago in 1943 where he was chief administrative officer of the metallurgical laboratory in charge of the atom bomb project. He was named Dean of Students and Secretary of the Faculties in 1944, and also professor of philosophy and education. Two years later he became Vice-President and Dean of the Faculties. After three years at Stanford as Dean of Students he returned to Chicago in 1950 as Vice-President in charge of development, and a year later was named Chancellor and professor of philosophy.

Dr. Thomas A. Brady, dean of extra-divisional administration, in presenting Dr. Kimpton, said he is "one of the many great educators that Missouri has produced." The citation added: "His work at the University of Chicago has been outstanding. He has won financial support for it—always a hard task for a privately supported university and doubly difficult in a period of inflation. He has maintained the university's position as a leading research center in the world; at the same time he has strengthened the undergraduate program of instruction by harmonizing the conflicting claims of general and specialized education."

In his Commencement address, "Other People," Dr. Taylor stressed the importance of a person being intelligently concerned with the growth and welfare of others with whom he is not intimately involved.

By Hardin Craig

The possibility of a renaissance

Dr. Hardin Craig, who has been a visiting professor of English at the University since 1949, is transferring to Stephens College after the Summer Session. One of his last speeches as a member of the University faculty was made at the May meeting of the English honorary society Delta Tau Kappa. This speech is to some extent a condensation of ideas which are expressed more fully in a book soon to be published by Blackwell's under the title New Lamps for Old. His most recently published book, Woodrow Wilson at Princeton (University of Oklahoma Press, 1960) is to be reviewed in the next issue of the Alumnus.

Dr. Craig, who has studied at Centre College, Princeton, Oxford, Padua; taught at Princeton, Minnesota, Iowa, Stanford, and North Carolina; and served as editor of the Philological Quarterly, has published at least fourteen major books, including such standard works as The Enchanted Glass, The Complete Works of Shakespeare, and English Religious Drama of the Middle Ages. The Alumnus is fortunate to be able to publish this sampling of some of the ideas from his forthcoming work.

MY TOPIC IS THE POSSIBILITY OF A RENAISSANCE. Let me hasten to qualify this topic. We have now a renaissance in science and technology the like of which the world has never seen. I mean therefore a renaissance in literature and other discursive subjects. By discursive subjects I mean Religion, Philosophy, the Social Sciences and the Humanities—what Woodrow Wilson called reading subjects. These subjects are marked off from science and technology by the fact that they do not yield themselves to experiment and the scientific method, except in a varying degree in factual areas, the core and heart of such subjects being dependent on observation and reflection alone. It may be said at once that not only do we not have a renaissance in discursive areas but, on the present basis, we are not likely to have one, since our methods are wrong. We are trying to achieve truth and comprehension by the use of the scientific method which breaks down before it reaches the essential nature and value of our subjects and leaves us static and unprogressive. It may be said that progress in discursive subjects is dependent on wisdom and not on mere knowledge. This may be stated in a more technical way by saying that in these fields progress is dependent on the ability to make abstractions on high levels. We need to do what Plato did in his study of the Greek life of his age, and what Milton did in the areas of religion, ethics and politics. They were both, fortunately for the world, unhampered by the scientific method. Our efforts, even when they are intelligent, are formal and positivistic; when they are ignorant, they are repetitious and pragmatical, so that the outcome is a medicosity of which we are largely unconscious. Our present system causes avoidance, so that we are taught in schools and colleges to talk and think about the incidentals and circumstances of our subjects and not to understand and enjoy the subjects themselves. I wish to enquire whether or not anything can be done about this situation, and this is put in terms of the possibility of a renaissance.

Battaglia

Let us begin with the greatest of all commonplaces—the Unity and Universality of Truth. This doctrine was held by Aristotle (supported by Socrates and Plato), by St. Thomas Aquinas (to a limited degree), by Bacon and by Einstein, who went further in its proof than any man has ever gone. The universality of truth is a potent doctrine, and, if it is true, as it is, we might ask what chance there is that the renaissance centering in the work of Einstein might bring a new birth to fields other than science and technology. Specialists in discursive areas will at once say that there is no chance for such a thing since their fields are entirely different from the field of natural science. We think they are wrong, and please remember that the doctrine of the Universality of all Truth is on our side.

This statement is important in general and for a certain reason. Of all the great renaissances of which we have any knowledge there seems always to have been a provocative cause that brought about a new direction towards which the interests and activities of men and women moved. They saw new things to be learned, new tasks to be carried out and new values to be achieved. We do not know enough about the beginnings of the great Greek renaissance of the fifth century before Christ to be able to put its origin in a nutshell, but we do know that it was ideational. We know that a great ideational force opened the whole of the world to the Greeks and that the Greeks had no formal methodology that prevented them from exploring with their natural powers the areas that lay before them. This is the explanation of the famous saying of Socrates, "I know that I know nothing, which is more than any other man knows." We know that the works of Aristotle, newly acquired from the Arabs in Spain, were the potent factor in bringing about the great European Renaissance of the twelfth century. We know also that the Italian Renaissance—what we call the Renaissance—came in and went out with Plato. It is also probable that Jean

Jacques Rousseau was the greatest single generative force in bringing about what we call the Romantic Movement. Rousseau discovered the common man. You may not like Rousseau and may think he was crazy, but, all the same, he was the ultimate creator of the United States of America.

YOU MIGHT AT THIS POINT be disposed to ask whether we, at this time in modern America, have at hand a greatly powerful idea or philosophy that, if we learned it and applied it, would stir us to action and greatness by giving us a new direction. The answer is, "We certainly have." Let me outline, as well as I can, the features of this brave new world.

1. It is, in the first place, a system of thought that accepts the facts of existence and proceeds on the basis of normal human powers and qualities. It has respect for common sense, which it seeks to enlighten.

2. In the space-time continuum, or the environment, it displays the whole world before humanity and provides an instrument created by that environment and capable of understanding it and reflecting it.

3. This means that the human brain, in its neural or sympatic organization, turns out to be as varied as its environment. It is said that the human brain has seven billion possibilities of ideation. In practice this means two things: (1) you are not as stupid as you think you are, and (2) you are not any stupider than you choose to be. In this connection let me pass on to you a piece of advice from A. N. Whitehead, who says, "Cultivate the habit of careful elucidation." This brain moreover operates as a unit and without intermediaries. It thus frees us at last from the figments of faculty psychology—memory, imagination, judgment, will, and thus rids us of an age-old incubus.

4. We have a new concept of the nature and operation of thought or cognition. The operation of the mind, deducible from Minkowsky's demonstration of the space-time continuum, turns out to be a process in the fourth-dimension and is therefore incomprehensible to us. This mystery of cognition has filled our world with superstition, such as the foolish and egotistical concepts of the nature of genius, divine intervention in purely human matters and supernaturalism in general. This discovery takes the crimp out of an egotism that believes in the practice of blaming somebody else or on destiny or bad luck, and makes human beings themselves solely responsible for their actions, their thoughts and their achievements.

5. Finally and gloriously, we learn that cognition is automatic. Truth, moral impulse and creativity come to men and women as naturally as walking or the digestion of food. The conditioning factors are sincerity, clear observation and patient determination in the search for truth or that total satisfaction that tells us when truth has arrived, for, when complete satisfaction arrives, truth is at hand without further effort on our part. Total comprehension is thus the measure of mentality. There is nothing quite so foolish as sitting down to think or, let us say, doing nothing intellectual until we get a Guggenheim fellowship. This automism of course calls loudly for freedom, which in the field of practice turns out to be an eternal idea. Freedom is the basal need of our academic world and of our American civilization at this time. Woodrow Wilson saw this and preached it in convincing and eloquent words. This liberty from the grasp of the borrowed scientific method is the sine qua non of progress in the field of the humanities, not only in formal matters but in creativity. The new concept of cognition is the rationalization of the "Know thyself" of the great Greeks.

There is also a new discovery and development in the ancient field of logic that opens a vast and rich territory in all discursive subjects. It is in these areas that our greatest needs are to be sought for. So far we have been dependent on miscellaneous gleanings from the past—tradition, authority, and the tentative applications of the discoveries of psychologists. We have contented ourselves with the wisdom of Plato and with a few gleanings from Bacon and other wise men. In these absolutely necessary areas we have done nothing for ourselves or thought it possible that anything could be done. The Italian mathematician Giuseppe Peano (1858-1932) made a discovery that ought to have been made centuries ago, namely, that the copula or the is of the proposition often means, not identity, but "belongs to the class of." "Reynard is a fox" means Reynard belongs to the class of foxes. From this simple beginning of new, sound and far-reaching concept of abstraction or classification has been developed by symbolic logicians and has made possible thought on high levels of significance. By the knowledge and use of it we might again play Plato's game and come to a far better understanding of ourselves and our age. From it we might learn such desirable things as how to get along with the Russians, how to stop inflation and how to prevent or cure adolescent delinquency. We need to know more and to think more effectively in our own affairs. These and innumerable experiential things are knowable and our present status is due to our ignorance and our wrong methodology. We are backward and unprogressive as compared with what we might be.

NOW, WHAT ARE WE GOING TO DO ABOUT THIS? Speaking academically, the first thing to do is to come to an understanding of the scientific method and its limitations. To misuse it as we do makes us the victims of mere speculation, invented causes, and the truncated induction. We forget that we in discursive fields have to go all the way. What we often do is to find out a few things and at once come to a conclusion or, as we say, form a hypothesis. This partial discovery we regard as an eternal truth, and from that point on we cease the search for truth, become advocates and begin to argue. Truth does not reside between the

Journalism Honor Medal Winners

SIX PROMINENT JOURNALISTS and a famous American business newspaper were presented Missouri Honor Awards for Distinguished Service in Journalism in ceremonies at the University's School of Journalism on May 6.

One of the recipients, Sir Winston Churchill, could not be present but sent his response in a message read by Her Britannic Majesty's Consul, George L. Merrells. A seventh journalist, David Brinkley of television newscasting fame, received the honor award and medal in a special presentation May 4 following his address during the 51st annual Journalism Week.

The medals were presented and citations read by Dr. Earl F. English, dean of the School of Journalism. The other medalists honored were: Chet Huntley, prominent co-worker with Brinkley in NBC's news telecast; Cowgill Blair, publisher of the Joplin (Mo.) Globe; James S. Copley, chairman of the corporation of the Copley Press, publishing 15 dailies and a weekly in Illinois and California; J. Russell Wiggins, executive editor and vice-president of the Washington (D. C.) Post and Times-Herald; Cranston Williams, general manager of the American Newspaper Publishers Association; and the Wall Street Journal, with Bernard Kilgore, president, accepting the award.

Sir Winston Churchill was cited "in recognition of your ready pen, devoted over the years not only to the effective advocacy of causes, but also to the production of articles of general information and opinion on public affairs. . . ." Sir Winston replied in his written communication: "I am indeed sorry that I cannot be present personally. . . . It is a most worthy concept that the University should through their awards seek to endorse and assist the profession of Journalism which has come to play so prominent a part in all our lives. . . . I am honored that your choice for this Medal should have fallen on me, and I send you all my warm thanks and my hopes and good wishes for the future."

Mr. Blair was cited for "making the Joplin Globe and Herald-News one of the finest non-metropolitan daily newspaper organizations in the nation;" Mr. Copley for "his organizational genius . . . his interest in education for journalism . . . and his devotion to public causes;" Mr. Huntley for his "accurate, mature and incisive reporting;" Mr. Wiggins for "articulate leadership in practical movements for the advancement of the contemporary American press;" Mr. Williams for his "wise guidance of American newspaper policy in many difficult situations;" Mr. Brinkley "for his remarkable career as a broadcast news writer, reporter, special events supervisor, news editor and commentator;" and Mr. Kilgore heard his newspaper praised for "its faithful reporting throughout the past seventy years of the financial and business news of the United States."

Chet Huntley and J. Russell Wiggins shared the speaking program at the Journalism Banquet.

New division, new dean

C. B. Ratchford

THE UNIVERSITY EXTENSION DIVISION, a single administrative unit combining all extension and off-campus educational services of the University, comes into existence July 1 and will be headed by Dr. C. B. Ratchford as Dean.

President Elmer Ellis said the new division will embrace the operations of the present Agricultural Extension Service and the Division of Continuing Education, as well as all other activities of an extension nature as now conducted by any division of the University at Columbia and Rolla.

Dr. Ratchford is now Director of the Agricultural Extension Service and will continue in that post as well as serving as dean of the new division. Dr. Amos J. Snider will continue as Director of the Division of Continuing Education.

President Ellis emphasized that the consolidation will not reduce any of the services now furnished to the people of Missouri by any of the extension services, but should, instead, bring effective expansion of these services through better coordination between the many departments of the University and through efficient utilization of all facilities, both on the campus and in the many communities throughout the State.

"This is an effort to bring more and more of the available services of the University into all counties and cities of the State," Dr. Ellis said. "By effective use of county extension offices, more of the non-agricultural services will be available in the rural areas, and more of the agricultural type services will be available in the cities. We can have what amounts virtually to an extension center in every county, where the citizens may request and receive solutions to many of their problems."

Dr. Ratchford pointed out that many small communities are faced with declining populations, and this is making it difficult for them to provide the services so essential to our modern standard of living. Other communities are experiencing unprecedented growth, he said, and while they are experiencing a different type of problem, it is just as acute as those of the declining populations.

"The vast majority of Missouri's counties are rural," Dr. Ratchford said. "In these counties the traditional distinction between farm and town people has disappeared. The townspeople realize their dependence on a strong agriculture, and the farm people realize the importance of their towns to having essential educational services, health services, roads, public utilities, and the like. Both town and farm are realizing they face common problems and must work together to solve these problems. And all of our off-campus services will coordinate our efforts to help solve those problems."

Both President Ellis and Dr. Ratchford emphasized that all funds appropriated primarily for agriculture and for rural people will continue to be aimed at this objective. Also, all of the programs in adult education, correspondence, instruction, conferences and institutes, and educational film library service will be continued and increased by the consolidation of efforts.

"Dr. Snider has done an outstanding job in directing these services, and he is planning to expand them wherever the communities need and ask for these educational services," Dr. Ratchford said. "With our consolidated program, Dr. Snider can use our county extension offices as community centers where he and his excellent staff can more effectively serve the people."

"All of our extension activities in recent years, both rural and urban, have demonstrated to leaders throughout the State how the University can assist in developing various phases of progress," Dr. Snider said. "Farm people as well as urban people are vitally interested in business, legal matters, zoning, water conservation and use, roads, electricity, education, health, welfare, and a multitude of other problems."

"The crying need in Missouri and elsewhere," he said, "is in the area of liberal education for adults. The joining of hands with the Agricultural Extension Service makes available hundreds of staff members presently employed through which this service can be rendered. Truly the 'borders of the State will be the borders of the campus.'"

M.U. gifts and grants gain in past year

The University of Missouri at Columbia received a total of $2,638,853.78 in gifts and grants during the year May 16, 1959, through May 16, 1960, it was announced at the Commencement exercises by James A. Finch, Jr., of Cape Girardeau, president of the Board of Curators.

This was an increase of $903,887 over the amount received during the preceding year. Mr. Finch reported the gifts came from 2,019 individuals, commercial companies, foundations, and national and state organizations. Of the total, $1,298,150.99 was given to support research at the University, and $728,925.94 was given for instructional purposes, including funds to support summer institutes for high school teachers.

There was a total of $225,150.42 given the University to supplement the student loan funds; and $256,564.88 for scholarships, fellowships, prizes and awards. Gifts for the year also included equipment and facilities, including books and rare museum pieces, valued at $35,683, and miscellaneous gifts and grants of $94,378.55.

Mr. Finch reported that the donors included 134 corporations, 40 foundations, 51 governmental agencies, 160 organizations, societies and other groups, and 1,634 individuals. These 2,019 donors made 2,266 separate gifts and grants during the year.

Mr. Finch gave special attention to the more than 1,600 individuals who donated to the funds this year.

"Many of these are alumni and former students—gifts made through the Alumni Association and known as Achievement Giving. Such continuing support from the alumni and former students makes it possible for many projects to be undertaken which otherwise might not be achieved. The continued interest of alumni and former students is greatly valued by the Curators," he said.

Honorary degree for Ellis

Washington University conferred the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws upon President Elmer Ellis of the University of Missouri at its 99th Commencement in St. Louis on June 6. President Ellis was the Commencement speaker.

The citation for President Ellis, presented by Dean Lewis E. Hahn of the Graduate School, stated:

"He is internationally renowned for his contributions to American political, economic, and intellectual history of the period from 1860 to 1940. As a scholar, teacher, administrator, humane individual, and wise counselor at home and abroad, he has labored effectively to improve college teaching and advance the cause of higher education. Under his leadership a great university is becoming greater."

In his address, President Ellis said that some of the states in the Midwest are doing too little to expand and improve their colleges and universities, and the region has become relatively less important nationally than it was forty years ago.

"Good education is good business," he said. "By this I mean that good education pays big dividends for communities, for entire states and nations."

High alumni honor to Harold Niedorp

The Distinguished Service Award of the University of Missouri Alumni Association was presented to Harold Niedorp of St. Joseph, Missouri at the University's Commencement on June 7.

Niedorp, who heads an insurance company bearing his name, is a former national president of the Alumni Association. He served two terms, beginning in 1950. Niedorp is a founder of the St. Joseph Alumni Club and served six years on the Association's national board as a district director. He received a Business Administration degree in 1925.

The current president of the Association, William R. Toler of Columbia, made the presentation during the Commencement program after presenting the Association's first Distinguished Faculty Award to Professor Lewis Atherton.

Niedorp has given 25 years of continuous, aggressive alumni participation on behalf of the University in northwest Missouri. His leadership helped establish areas of support for the University, and he has shown active interest in all phases of University alumni activities.

The Distinguished Service Award is one of the highest honor bestowed by the University and its Alumni Association. Previous recipients were Robert E. Lee Hill, David Warren, Dr. Frank G. Mays, and A. L. Gustin, Jr.

Citations of merit are awarded to four alumni

The Alumni Association Citation of Merit was awarded to four well known alumni by two University divisions in ceremonies on the campus this spring.

Cullen Coil, LL.B. '32, commissioner of the Supreme Court of Missouri, was honored during Law Day. He is a former president of the University Alumni Association and has long been prominent in alumni affairs. He was instrumental in helping to launch the annual giving program.

During Business Week, the University's School of Business and Public Administration honored three graduates who have achieved success in business and industrial fields. All hold B.S. in Business Administration degrees. Those honored were: Paul A. Gorman, '29, president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, New York; John P. Miller, '35, vice-president for finance of Spencer Chemical Company, Kansas City; and Lester Milgram, '39, president of Milgram Food Stores in Kansas City.

Miller is a member of the University Athletic Committee and is president of the Missouri State Chamber of Commerce. Milgram, who has headed his firm since 1958, is a member of the Board of Governors of the University Alumni Association of Kansas City. Gorman rose through the ranks to his high position with A.T. & T.

Medic pre-Commencement

James A. Finch, Jr., president of the University's Board of Curators, was the speaker at a pre-Commencement program for the first students to complete four years of study at the University's School of Medicine. At the regular Commencement, M.D. degrees were awarded to 59 graduates.

In his talk, Mr. Finch reminded the students that the primary motive for re-establishing the four-year School was the need for more doctors in rural Missouri. He said the people of Missouri will be disappointed if the School does not send a constant flow of doctors in rural areas. The speaker said he did not mean to imply that the people of rural Missouri need or expect all medical school graduates to go to rural areas but, he added, the School has a definite obligation in these areas.

The pre-Commencement services were held in Jesse Auditorium.

Spring alumni meetings

A roundup of spring meetings shows several outstanding gatherings both in and out of state.

District meetings in Missouri were held at Trenton April 19, at Rolla April 26, and at Warrensburg May 11. These District meetings all attracted crowds of over one hundred local alumni. President Ellis spoke at Trenton and Warrensburg where Grundy County Chairman Gordon Balckmore and Johnson County Chairman Bill Tucker, respectively, handled local arrangements. Dean Loran G. Townsend of the University's College of Education spoke at the Rolla meeting which honored his division and which was planned and carried out by Phelps County Chairman B. W. Robinson.

Recent out of state meetings have included a luncheon in Dallas on May 12 with Jean Madden holding forth; a delightful tour of the Houston port facilities on May 13 by the Tiger alumni crew of the good ship Sam Houston, provided for the evening by Vaughn Bryant of the Houston Port Authority; and a dinner meeting in Tulsa June 2 at which Alumni Secretary Bus Entsminger provided the program.

Journalists name Martin

Frank L. Martin of West Plains, Mo. was elected president of the Journalism Alumni Organization at its annual meeting on the campus in May. Mrs. Mary Banks Parry of Columbia was elected vice-president, and Mrs. J. W. Caudle of Columbia was named secretary-treasurer. John Stapel of Columbia was re-elected as Journalism Alumni representative on the University Alumni Association's national Board of Directors.

Dean Earl F. English reported on contributions to the School's Golden Anniversary observance and of future needs of the division. Stapel reported an increase of journalism graduates as active members of the University Alumni Association and as contributors to annual Alumni Achievement giving.

Cochran keeps title

The bright spot of the 1960 track season was the series of gargantuan heaves by Tiger discus thrower Dick Cochran. Cochran capped his efforts with a winning throw of over 188 feet in the National Collegiate Championships at Berkeley June 18. The throw, which left the nearest competitor a dozen feet behind him and again made Dick the national champ, was singled out by Olympic Coach Larry Snyder as one of the three or four top performances in the star-studded, record-smashing championships.

Other bright spots in the season included the unique performance of five Tigers who brought home five individual firsts from the big, post season Central Collegiate Meet in Milwaukee. Cochran won the discus; sophomore Don Smith won the shot, sophomore Jim Baker the 440, and Lane Patterson and Bob Hanneken the 220 and 3 mile respectively.

As a team the Tigers rose to unusual heights for upset wins over Iowa and Army, but managed to finish only fourth in the Big Eight, unquestionably the strongest track conference in the country.

Cox to All American team

Sophomore shortstop Ron Cox, brightest star of a good-hit no-pitch Missouri baseball team, has been named to the Collegiate Coaches All American Baseball Team. Cox, who batted .407, hit 7 home runs, and batted in an all time team record of 36 runs in 21 games, paced the Tigers' substantial attack all season. This was some achievement in itself because Simmons' bombers averaged over 9 runs per game and amassed a phenomenal team batting average of .336.

Woefully absent was pitching support. Tiger hurlers floundered with an earned run average of over 6 runs per game and only 3 complete games.

The odd combination produced a season record of 12 wins and 9 losses, a 4th place finish in the Big Eight, and a few more gray hairs for Hi Simmons.

The Clark family and M.U.

The Clarks of Columbia—three sisters and a brother—believe in going to the University of Missouri, and one sister and the brother have traveled far since their campus days. Mrs. R. D. M. Bauer, (Helen Elizabeth Clark, B.S. Ed. '24), lives at 204 S. Garth, Columbia. Mr. Bauer, a veteran faculty member at the University, this month became professor emeritus. Mrs. Jack McCuaig, the former Margaret Acheson Clark, and her husband attended M. U. in 1934-35 and now live at 6705 North Holmes, Route 4, Kansas City 16, Mo. with their three children. These are the stay-at-homes, but the other half of the Clark family have left Missouri far behind. Miss Dorothy L. Clark, B.S. Ed. '34 and A.M. '42, is a missionary-teacher and is with the Sudan Interior Mission, Ilarin, Nigeria, West Africa. Her headquarters address is Sudan Interior Mission, 164 West 74th, New York 23. The brother is Commander Charles W. Clark, B.S. C.E. '30, who is a Coast and Geodetic Survey Officer. His present assignment is Executive Officer, USC and GSS Pathfinder, working in Alaskan waters on hydrography and oceanography. Commander Clark is married and has two daughters; his home is at 2829 East 113th, Seattle 55, Wash.

When you cook better... live better... Electrically!

"It's like having a whole staff of chefs cook dinner for you..." That's what homemakers say after they try one of the new automatic electric ranges.

And you'll agree with them! Imagine a wonderful world where all the work and worry of cooking is gone forever—with an electric range that almost thinks for itself. Time and temperature controls cook delicious meals without your even having to watch... when you live better—cook better electrically.

See the new electric ranges at your dealer's right away... and

LIVE BETTER...Electrically

Mr. and Mrs.--the Doctors Boydston

THE FIRST HUSBAND AND WIFE TEAM to graduate at the same time from the University of Missouri School of Medicine since it was re-established as a full four-year school in 1956 received their Doctor of Medicine degrees at the University's June Commencement.

They are Dr. W. Wayne Boydston, Trimble, Mo., and Dr. Catherine O. Dunstan Boydston, formerly of Eldon, Mo. They were married last October, but they have gone through the entire four years of medical study together at the School of Medicine; served their preceptorships in general practice together; are interns now at Kansas City General Hospital No. 1; and plan to set up a joint general practice on completing their internships in June, 1961. The Boydstons hope to practice somewhere in rural Missouri and eventually open a clinic.

The Boydstons first met as students in the School of Medicine, but have been "partners" in all the courses, including their fourth-year block assignments. Both elected preceptorships in general practice, and served them last year under Dr. Kenyon S. Latham, California, Mo.

PHOTOGRAPHER LEE BATTAGLIA, whose distinctive work has appeared in the Alumnus for three years, has left the University campus to take a position with the National Geographic Magazine in Washington. As we get the picture, he made the move for money. That is all right, and understandable, if one attaches that much importance to living. Lee could have stayed around indefinitely taking pictures for the Alumnus, for art's sake, without the degrading influence of money. The best photographer is the hungry photographer; he who is adequately paid and adequately fed endangers his art, and the Alumnus did all it could to nurture Lee's artistry. Battaglia is gone, but luckily he stocked our larder with a number of his excellent photographs which will show up in the coming months. Also coming up will be a regular send-off item for Lee; it was planned for this issue but we wanted a picture of him to go with it. Naturally, he didn't have one.

THE CAMPUS is really going through a beautification process these days, and the landscaping program now under way holds great promise. Some of the buildings have a great need for murals to enhance their attractiveness. In this respect it has been suggested that something be done to dress up the outside east wall of Jesse Auditorium. This barren expanse, seen by busy traffic along South Ninth street daily, is enough to cause an outdoor advertising man to drool; what a spot, he must be thinking, for a Bull Durham or Clabber Girl pitch. This hardly is in line with the idea suggested, of course, but whoever comes up with a plan to decorate the red brick wall appropriately is assured of lasting fame. Perhaps page thirty-six should conduct a contest.

TIME WAS when University freshmen, denied the use of cars, yearned for their sophomore year and riding comfort. Now that dream is blasted. A new rule says sophs can't have cars, either, unless they maintain a 2.75 grade average or show a definite need. The regulation is applauded by the shoe leather interests and Dr. Barbara Moore. It is to be hoped that the sophomore doomed to a pedestrian existence will not feel inferior, and that his car-driving classmate will not look down on him as a person of weak mind and strong legs. It is pleasanter to contemplate the advantages of the new dictum. It may mean a few more parking spaces. It may prove a boon to scholarship in the early years of student life. The enterprising sophomore-pedestrian may become adept at hitching rides or cultivating the 2.75 sophomore with car for double-dating purposes. And the old grad may look back on his roughing-it campus days with the boast: "Why, I walked to classes till I was a junior."

IT HAS BEEN said that faculty and staff members will be charged $20 to $35 a year for parking privileges on University lots, beginning in the fall. Since $20 to $35 represents a year's savings in many cases, it can be expected that the academic air will be filled with flying chalk and erasers, and the Tokyo riots may seem mild in comparison. Already there is talk of petitions in protest. One professor who was disturbed by the proposal solved the dilemma, temporarily at least, by receiving a grant for a year's study abroad. The word is that the parking fees will be graduated as to rank, and that each patron may have his own special stall, with his name attached. This lends itself to all kinds of status struggles. The $20 a year parker undoubtedly will have his name on a tin plate. But the high level parkers will surely try to outdo each other. The geology or archaeology professor's name most likely will be chiseled in stone; the horticultural professor probably will decorate his name plate with branches or leaves; and the law professor who fails to work in a scales of justice design is just not entering into it. Obviously, there is no end to the possibilities. Also, the proposed system of fees could be used to promote greater teaching and research. The faculty member making an outstanding contribution in either field would be rewarded with a certificate for a semester's free parking. And certainly the emeritus title should carry with it life-long parking privileges.

THE POSSIBILITY OF A RENASCENCE

affirmative and the negative of a debate. It is not subject to majority opinion. Our present logical procedure is stultifying.

If and when we have banished this intruder from discursive fields, we shall have before us an open road so broad and so clearly marked that no highway in the history of human advancement has been so viable. It is obvious that every individual of every age and sex, every individual who will take the trouble to learn what our own age has to tell us and who has the will to implement his or her common sense can as an individual emerge from the slavery of routine, the dishonest tyranny of advertising and the social compulsions of the amusement business. Such persons, equipped with self-selected eternal ideas, might live their own lives and exploit their unknown but God-given powers in the normal and necessary ordinations of life. Such individuals would themselves constitute a renaissance. This is in line with the ancient belief that the most important thing about any human being or nation is its philosophy.

In our academic world our chief enemy is specialization, since it often produces in practice fragments of men and women not whole men and women. By the very act of devotion to a single part the leaders have blinded themselves to the all-important whole. They know no Greek, no Latin, no philosophy, no religion, no science, no history, no psychology, and no logic, and yet, by a strange twist of the human personality, they think they know everything. But let us be fair, for the chances are that these dogmatic and fragmentary men, after they have done all they can to block every idea of change, betterment and progress, will ultimately be capable of seeing the truth and may, as in earlier renaissances, swing as a potent body into the new direction. Therefore let us not despair of the possibility of a real renaissance in our own people and our own country. Truth though slow on its feet will ultimately arrive. Let us break down the barriers if we can. At least let us avoid the pitfalls that lie along the opening of the way. In any case let us, if we can, get on the road to the Eternal City and plod our way like brave and stalwart men and women.

Perhaps I have not made myself clear. Let me make one more effort in the name of John Milton, who saw, much to the disgust of literary critics and aesthetes, that the temptation is the crucial issue in the regaining of the lost paradise. Jesus, having pursued his formal education to excellent effect, went to the River Jordan to consult and to hear the teachings of the greatest living prophet, John the Baptist, who received him as the Messiah. Then after the fashion of young divines he went into the wilderness for forty days in order that he might have it out with himself and determine the will of God by prayer and contemplation. A very affable Satan borrowed from the Book of Job came to Him in His hunger and offered Him a choice among the three most fashionable ideas in current Jewish life. It is a marvelous test of the knowledge of Scripture. Jesus is advised to turn stones into bread and thus look out for No. 1, and He replies, "Man doth not live by bread alone." Secondly, Jesus is taken up to the top of a high mountain and shown the regions of the world and urged to restore and occupy the throne of David. Jesus says, "Get thee behind me Satan!" Thirdly, Jesus is taken to the pinnacle of the Temple and advised to create a sensation by throwing Himself down and thus rise on a popular tide to great fame and influence, and Jesus's reply is "Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God." Jesus thus rejects the best advice of the age, or, as we say, vocational guidance in the choice of a profession—that of the Pharisees, the Sadducees, and the fashionable Roman party of progress with a big P. What He did was to go home to His mother's house in Nazareth and wait until He certainly knew the will of God. After a period, we do not know how long, Jesus began His ministry by the calling of the fishermen Peter and Andrew, whom He invited to become fishers of men. His task, like yours and mine, was the achievement of salvation for Himself and His fellowmen. So, at least, thought John Milton.

years as head basketball coach at Missouri. He resigned from coaching in 1946 to devote full time to the job of secretary of athletics which he also held at that time, and to teaching in physical education. His basketball teams finished in the conference top half of percentage ratings in all except two years of his long coaching career; the Tigers won the conference championship once and tied for it twice. He played varsity basketball here for three years. Professor Edwards is a former president of the National Basketball Coaches Association and served as a member of the national basketball rules committee.

Dr. Joseph E. Weinman, professor of veterinary anatomy, who has been on the faculty for 14 years. He engaged in private practice at Lincoln, Neb. from 1923 until his appointment to the School of Veterinary Medicine faculty in 1946. Before that he taught gross anatomy in St. Joseph Veterinary College for three years. He first entered private practice in Nebraska in 1913 after receiving his degree from the Kansas City Veterinary College.

Carl C. Wheaton, professor of law, who served on the faculty for 15 years. He was professor of law at St. Louis University from 1926 to 1942, and then was given war-time leave of absence to serve with the National Labor Relations Board, the War Manpower Commission, and the Federal Trade Commission. He joined the faculty of the University School of Law in 1945. Earlier in his career Professor Wheaton taught law at Macalester College in St. Paul, Louisiana State University, University of Cincinnati, and Northwestern College of Law in Minneapolis where he was associate dean.
