Briefs by Bus

Contrary to what some people may believe, state universities are the major source of college teachers. There is somewhere in the neighborhood of 800 colleges in America with 16 of these producing one-fourth of the nation's college teachers in liberal arts and education. Of the 16 "major producers" 11 are state universities and Land-Grant institutions. It should be a matter of real pride for Missouri alumni to know that here is another area in which our University excels. The University of Missouri is one of the 16 "major producers."

College enrollment in America, now at 3,800,000, will definitely reach 6,500,000 before 1970. If we are to maintain even our present level of academic support, America's annual expenditure for higher education—which is now 5.4 billion dollars—will have to top 9 billion dollars by 1970. Undoubtedly the most important factor to be considered in this dramatic challenge is what to do about the low faculty salaries. The nation-wide average is now $6,810 (this pertains to higher education, or above the high school level). In today's keen competition for the highly qualified mind the number of people who are remaining in college teaching is steadily on the decline. Many of America's big corporations are beginning to see the prime importance not only to their lifeblood, but to American society as well. It is a growing concern on the part of corporations that if they default in their corporate obligation to support higher education they will be forcing huge government spending to fill this need. In that case, they realize that they will pay the bill anyway, via taxes, and in doing so they will pay more.

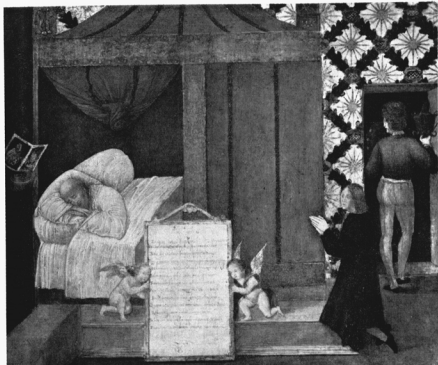

The goal of every American should be to keep this country educationally strong. There can be no continued prosperity for individuals, corporations, or any phase of a democratic government in a declining America. The key to prosperity for the future then remains firmly in educational advancement. BUS ENTSMINGER

Commencement on June 6

Annual Commencement exercises—the University's 119th—are set for Tuesday, June 6 in Memorial Stadium, with the traditional academic procession starting promptly at 6:30 p.m. President Ellis will confer degrees on approximately 1,500 members of the June graduating class. The Commencement program will also include the names of an additional 507 graduates who completed their requirements for a degree in January. The Commencement address will be given by Dr. Karl R. Bopp, president of the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia, who holds four degrees from the University and is a former member of the faculty. His subject will be "Pursuit of Quality."

Dr. Thomas A. Brady, dean of Extra-Divisional Administration and chairman of the Committee on Public Exercises, said that in case of rain the Commencement program will be held in Brewer Field House.

Commencement is also Reunion time for Missouri alumni. This year the classes of '36 and '11 will be featured. Activities begin with registration at Read Hall and tours of the campus on Monday afternoon, June 5, followed by the class banquets at 6 p.m. The 25-year class meets at the Student Union, the 25-year class at the Daniel Boone Hotel. At noon Tuesday, June 6, all the returning alumni will attend a luncheon at the Student Union. At the Commencement exercises, a special section will be reserved for all the class members.

The Kress Foundation paintings include this small Ex Voto, dated 1501. It is by Mainieri and is almost modernistic in its color combinations.

Valuable art collection for University

By Dr. Fern Rusk Shapley

At the inauguration of the University's Museum of Art and Archaeology, on April 11th, fourteen paintings, ranging in date from the early fifteenth century to the mid-eighteenth, were presented to the University by the Samuel H. Kress Foundation. Half of these paintings come from the Kress Collection which was installed at the National Gallery of Art, Washington, D.C., in 1941. The others also are connected in one way or another with the formation of the National Gallery's Kress Collection, which has undergone many changes in the past twenty years. Originally it was almost exclusively Italian, of the Renaissance and pre-Renaissance periods; but it has been gradually varied, largely through exchange, releasing many of the Italian paintings. With these, supplemented by new acquisitions, the Kress Foundation developed a program of donations to other museums and to universities and colleges. Eighteen museums, chiefly in western and southern states, were given large Kress collections and about twenty universities and colleges are now receiving smaller donations, designed as study collections.

All but one of the paintings in our Kress Study Collection are Italian, but their chronological and regional range is wide. Earliest among them are two small panels (each 10 x 6½ in.) by the early fifteenth-century Bolognese artist Michele di Matteo. They represent John the Evangelist and The Virgin in half length and probably came originally from the left section of an altarpiece predella. The intense, tragic expression of the faces is typical of the early Bolognese school, as is the lovely translucent coloring.

Representing mythology in art is this painting (almost five feet square) of "Thetis and Hephaestus," painted by Paris Bordone about 1550.

"The Portrait of Giovanni Battista Silva," by Filippo Abbiati (1640-1715), was purchased by the Kress Foundation from a private collection in Milan.

A small, but remarkably beautiful, Processional Cross (20 $\frac{1}{4}$ x 16 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.), in a style recalling Benozzo Gozzoli, to whom, as well as to an immediate follower, it was formerly attributed, is now classified as the work of Amedeo da Pistoia. Its iconography—the Virgin, John the Evangelist, and God the Father in quatrefoil terminations of the Cross on which Christ hangs; the pelican feeding her young from her own blood, above Christ; and the skull, below—is typical of the Crucifixes, large and small, that decorated early Renaissance churches or were used in their ceremonies.

The Siennese School is represented by Fungai's large panel (48 $\frac{3}{4}$ x 18 $\frac{3}{8}$ in.) of St. Louis of France, identified by his crown and his scepter tipped with fleurs-de-lis. The style of the work dates it about 1510, when Fungai was under the influence of Pintoricchio, who had a few years earlier painted the great series of frescoes in the Piccolomini Library in Siena.

One of the most charming pictures in the group is a small Ex Voto (11 $\frac{1}{2}$ x 13 $\frac{3}{8}$ in.), almost modernistic in its daring color combinations. It is by the Ferrarese artist Maineri and is dated 1501 in the long Latin inscription which poetically expresses gratitude for the recovery of the elderly man shown lying in his canopied bed while a young man kneels near by and a servant leaves the room through an open door.

From about the same date, but unusual in composition and technique is the Madonna and Ecce Homo (13 $\frac{5}{8}$ x 8 $\frac{7}{8}$ in.) by a master of the School of Verona formerly identified by Berenson as Domenico Morone. The picture is painted directly on canvas, without any preparatory ground and probably served originally as a church standard. The composition is divided horizontally. In the upper section is Christ, standing in a marble sarcophagus; he wears the crown of thorns and is surrounded by other symbols of the Passion. In the lower section, beneath the inscription REGINA CELI, the Madonna, holding the Child, is seated in an open landscape against a red brocaded cloth.

The well-known Milanese artist Bramantino is the author of a half-length Madonna and Child (18 $\frac{5}{8}$ x 14 $\frac{1}{4}$ in.) dating from about 1520. The delicate gradations of light and shade and the slight smile on the Virgin's lips bear witness to the influence of Leonardo on the Milanese School.

Disputed by scholars as to its precise authorship, but clearly North Italian of about 1520 and usually attributed to the Brescian artist Romanino, is the half-length figure of Christ Blessing (21 $\frac{3}{4}$ x 16 in.). Its rich colors and poetic expression relate it to Giorgione and it was, in fact, shown in an exhibition of "Giorgione and His Circle" in 1942.

One of the most beautiful paintings in the collection and the richest in color, an enthroned Madonna and Child (44 x 18 $\frac{3}{4}$ in.), was attributed to the same artist, Romanino, when in the Kress Collection at the National Gallery of Art. A few years ago it was recognized as the middle panel of a triptych, the two wings of which, representing St. Helena and Tobias with the Angel, are now in the Ashmolean Museum, Oxford. In 1872 the triptych was described as it had hung intact in the Galleria delle Torri de' Picenardi before it was sold in Milan in 1869 to an English antiquarian. At that time all three panels were ascribed to an artist from Cremona, Altobello

"Madonna and Child," painted some time between 1510 and 1520 by Altobello Melone. A middle panel of a triptych, it is 44 by 19 inches in size.

Melone, the attribution accepted for them today.

The small predella painting (11 x 14½ in.) of The Temptation of St. Anthony has been published by Borenius as possibly part, originally, of the altarpiece which Bartolommeo Montagna painted in 1517 for a church near the artist's home, Vicenza.

The large canvas (55¾ x 51 in.) painted by Paris Bordone about 1550 was catalogued when in the National Gallery of Art as Minerva at the Forge of Vulcan but is perhaps more convincingly identified as Thetis and Hephaestus (Vulcan), representing, therefore, the mother of Achilles procuring armor for her son from the god of metalworking. The lightness and buoyancy of the figures suggest that this painting may originally have been an over-door decoration and may have been associated with two other mythological paintings by Bordone, one in the museum at Göteborg, the other in the National Gallery, London.

There are two portraits in the collection. In one (42½ x 30¾ in.), dating probably about 1680, the sitter is identified, by an inscribed letter in his hand, as Giovanni Battista Silva, member of a Milanese family. But the artist, although consistently recognized as Milanese, has been disputed. Suida, comparing the work with a portrait in the Ospedale Maggiore, Milan, attributes it to Filippo Abbiati, Magnasco's master in Milan.

The other portrait (18 x 15¼ in.) is Pietro Rotari's delightful interpretation of his young wife. It comes from the collection which Catherine the Great formed at St. Petersburg, where she employed Rotari to paint for her a large number of his characteristic heads of pretty girls; two of them are now in the Kress Collection at the National Gallery of Art.

More in the vein of genre than of portraiture is The Laughing Man (30 x 24¼ in.) by the Mantuan painter Bazzani, whose brilliant brushwork attests the admiration he felt for such artists as Rubens and Crespì.

Finally, the one non-Italian painting in the collection is also the only one which is a copy. It is the large canvas (72 x 52½ in.) of The Sacrifice of Isaac, after Rembrandt's famous version of the theme in the Hermitage Museum, Leningrad. The copy is probably contemporary—or nearly so—and can afford the art student profitable exercise in determining whether it is by Bol, as one scholar has suggested, or by some other pupil or follower of the great Dutch master.

The Kress Study Collection now hangs in a new gallery specially prepared for it on the fourth floor of the new Library addition, a gallery open to all yet integrated here with the reading room, the books, the seminar room and the studies for art and archaeology. With such a location the paintings will serve best as a true study collection and they are already being used in a variety of ways for the teaching of art history. At the same time, they furnish a substantial nucleus about which the painting collections of the Museum of Art and Archaeology will be built.

Toward international understanding

By Ram Nandan P. Singh

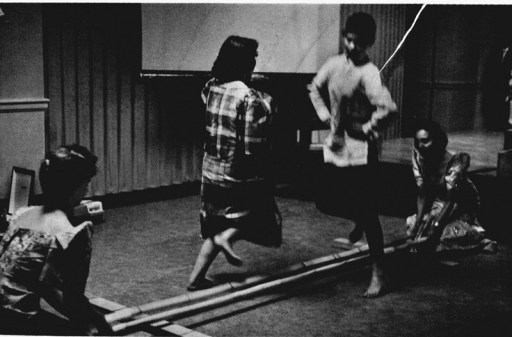

Exchange of students between countries is as old as organized education itself. We are well aware of the extent to which students of the Roman World frequented the schools of Athens and Alexandria. In our own days international exchanges form an essential groundwork in creating cooperation between peoples in different cultures of the globe. As a long term measure, they bring men and women as human beings face to face with each other. People no doubt vary greatly in their thinking and acting, but the ultimate aspiration of every human breathing soul is the same. The exchange also confronts people with first hand experience with other cultures and establishes a link in communication which is so vital in creating better understanding.

Six countries of the world account for the greatest number of foreign students enrolled. Population-wise this is as follows: U.S.A. 55,000; France 16,827; U.S.S.R. 12,565; Argentina 11,001; United Kingdom 10,443; and Federal Republic of Germany 9,643.

The University of Missouri with 270 enrolled from more than forty countries has in recent years helped bring the local community and student body together. The orientation program called Operation: International Friendship, organized in September, 1960, featured a reception for all new foreign students. It provided an opportunity to meet and talk with University officials, faculty and student leaders. On the following days there were luncheons, more panel discussions, tours, and a picnic at the Cosmo Park sponsored by the Columbia Lions Club.

The preceding year witnessed remarkable programs in the field of international relations and it is worth noting some of these programs organized by the University Cosmopolitan Club. This organization is a University-recognized body, membership in which is open to all foreign students and interested American students.

Nations on Parade: The program usually takes place during the spring semester and includes an international dress pageant and an exhibition of arts and crafts from various countries. This all-day entertaining program is eagerly awaited by the Columbians and local students.

Around the World in Sixty Minutes: A colorful and entertaining travelogue program featuring dances, jokes and customs of various countries.

The Feast of Nations. Attended by about 380 people, this international dinner was one of the most successful programs on the campus. The University YM-YWCA cooperated with the University Cosmopolitan Club members who prepared delicious dishes from twenty nations and served them at one dinner table. A variety show was presented. Dr. Elmer Ellis, our University president, was the guest speaker.

Arts and crafts from Thailand are among the exhibits at popular Nations on Parade event.

The Embassy Whirl: The International clubs of Stephens and Christian colleges cooperated with the University in putting on this "social night" which consisted of ballroom dancing and an international floor show.

Courtship, Marriage and Love Around the World was a panel discussion organized by the University international organizations; the panelists brought out interesting ideas of prevailing customs in matrimony in different parts of the globe. Ideas That Moved the World featured short biographies of great men of the world, their beliefs and philosophies.

The president of the University holds a reception once a year in honor of all foreign students. In the past year, the Columbia Council of International Students, the University YM-YWCA and the Columbia Council of Church Women have made valuable contributions in this history-making process.

The frontiers of international relations have widened considerably in the last two years. A good example of one such process in action presently is the YM-YWCA International Seminar called "Acquaintance in Depth." The idea was initiated to confront these "non-official ambassadors" with opportunities so that there could be more than just casual acquaintance with their American counterparts. A series of eight meetings were planned on such topics as President Kennedy's Peace Corps, customs and superstitions, international games, etc. Four of the seminars have already been held.

As programs get older, new ideas and plans need to be brought in to sustain lively interest of our foreign visitors as also our own people. To study in a land other than one's own is an opportunity of far reaching consequences. At the same time it brings in its trail problems never seen before.

The campus organizations who have fostered such activities are to be complimented for sharing with us their knowledge and skills. The writer is very optimistic that this operation in international understanding will expand to a dimension unconceived so far, and with careful handling, will open up horizons toward better human resources throughout the globe.

The Fine Arts building

When the University's new Fine Arts Building opened for business several months ago, it brought into a single area three far-flung departments that for years had been ill-housed. Until moving day, the Art Department was scattered in attics and five temporary structures. The Department of Music lived dangerously in crumbling Lathrop Hall. The Speech and Dramatic Art Department was more substantially centered in the basement of Jesse Hall, but lacked a suitable stage for too long a time.

Now the three-in-one arrangement of the Fine Arts Building, which stems from a plan suggested by President Ellis when he was Arts and Science dean, provides modern and efficient housing—as well as a lift in morale—for each of the newly relocated departments.

Almost from the day it was occupied, the building became a bustling cultural center with its concentration of activities in music, art and drama. The public is quickly getting acquainted with the new facility, being attracted to presentations in the art gallery, the University Theater, and the music recital hall.

Meanwhile, instruction to students is enhanced by the most modern of teaching facilities, many of them designed or specified by the department heads.

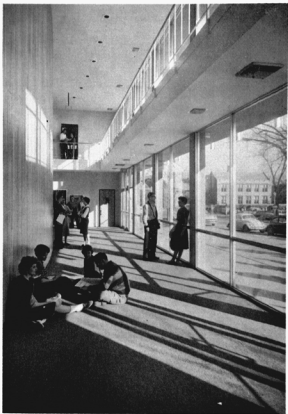

The Fine Arts complex consists of two main units, two stories high, with a connecting art gallery between them. The building fronting on Lowry Street houses the music and drama sections; the other main building, fronting on University Avenue, is the home of the art department.

The music-drama building may be said to have two auditoriums "back-to-back;" one is the recital hall and the other is the University Theater. Surrounding them are two floors of classrooms, offices, studios and other facilities needed in the development of musical and dramatic presentations. Music alone has 40 practice rooms and 22 teaching studios. The University Theater has an 88 x 32 foot stage house and a 40 x 30 foot scene shop as well as an arena-studio theater seating about 85.

The $1,800,000 building was built from funds provided by the 75-million-dollar State bond issue.

THE PEOPLE OF MU-SHAN

Howard R. Long, A.B., B.J. '30, A.M. '41, Ph.D. '48, who spent the academic year of 1957-58 as visiting professor of journalism at National Chengchi University in Taiwan, Free China, returned with three thousand pictures of a nearby Chinese village.

Dr. Long, former faculty member of the University School of Journalism, now chairman, department of journalism, Southern Illinois University, chose about one hundred fifty of these pictures which appear in The People of Mushan, which was published recently by the University of Missouri Press.

The people pictured are self-respecting workmen, merchants, farmers, housewives, teachers, and school children, on the streets, in the fields, home, school, temple and church. The people follow the ancient patterns of Chinese life and tradition along with some methods they have borrowed from Japan, Europe, and America.

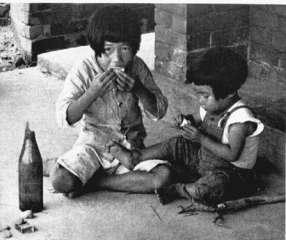

The student of sociology and culture can learn a great deal about the residents of a Chinese village from this book of pictures. The reader will be fascinated by the depiction of life completely alien to that he sees in the United States. Then he will come to the realization that the people of Mushan, despite the lack of modern conveniences we demand, are very much like Americans, and that there is truly a universality of mankind.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR: Dr. Long, while serving as visiting professor in Taiwan, was guest editor of the China Post and represented that newspaper during a month spent in the Philippines. After leaving the Far East, he traveled through Europe; in London he was invited to join the Institute of Journalists. The Guild of British Editors invited him to spend last September in Britain, and he addressed the group at Wadham College, Oxford. In 1959 Dr. Long was elected president of the American Society of Journalism School Administrators. He was manager of the Missouri Press Association in 1941-49. His book has been widely acclaimed; one critic places it "among the notable photographic art works of recent years."

R. Beverly Price

R. B. Price

A Distinguished Professorship in Law

R. B. Price, LL.B '04, president of the Boone County National Bank and since 1922 treasurer of the University, has endowed the establishment of a Distinguished Professorship in Law at the University, beginning with the academic year 1961-62.

The faculty member holding the chair will have the title of the "R. B. Price Distinguished Professor of Law." The position is being established in the name of both Mr. Price and of his grandfather, the late R. B. (Beverly) Price, who died in 1924. The grandfather was co-founder and for many years president of the Boone County National Bank, and was the grandson's immediate predecessor, from 1872 to 1922, as treasurer of the University.

University President Elmer Ellis said Mr. Price has agreed to endow this permanent Distinguished Professorship annually during his life-time, and also with a bequest in his will. The endowment will supplement the University salary of the appointee to the position, who will be a regular member of the University faculty.

In commenting on the endowment, President Ellis said:

"This is an outstanding example of how Missourians interested in the highest quality of education can influence the University of Missouri in this direction. State funds alone will never provide for all the outstanding professors needed to make M.U. the best university in the world for Missourians. Contributions such as that of Mr. Price are a most valuable contribution to the future of Missouri. Moreover, it is a gratifying example of the loyalty shown to the University by its alumni."

Dean Joe E. Covington of the School of Law said he greatly appreciates the establishment of the new position, and considers the endowment "one of the finest things that has ever happened to the School." A chair of Distinguished Professor of Law will add considerably to the prestige of the School, the Dean said, and equally important, will enable the School to obtain faculty members of high professional ability who without the special inducement would hesitate to give up a more profitable private practice to accept a teaching appointment at the University.

Mr. Price said that the endowment really has its roots in 100 years of close family interest in the University, beginning with his grandfather. He said he had already planned to endow the professorship in his will, but that he recently learned that the Distinguished Professorship might be of important help to the University at once, and that now would be an opportune time to establish the chair. In addition he "also felt it would be personally satisfying to witness during my lifetime the benefit the establishment of the chair would bring to the University." He said he therefore decided to make the equivalent of the income on the major endowment available at this time.

Mr. Price's grandfather, one of Boone County's and Columbia's leading citizens for nearly 70 years, was a strong supporter of the interests of the University of Missouri. He was active during the last part of the past century in the successful efforts to keep the University in Columbia, at a time when there were strong efforts to relocate it elsewhere. The grandfather helped raise and contributed to funds that were needed to keep the University here. He received the honorary Master of Science degree from the University in 1873. He also was an honorary Phi Beta Kappa.

The grandfather, who was generally known as "Bev" from his middle name, was born in 1832, and came to Columbia about 1855. In 1857 he and Moss Prewitt founded the Columbia banking firm of Prewitt and Price. Mr. Prewitt was R. B. Price's great-grandfather. In 1871 the banking firm was nationally chartered as the Boone County National Bank with "Bev" Price as president. He held the position until his death.

R. B. Price, who has been with the bank since October, 1903, started as a bookkeeper while attending the University. Later he became the vice-president, with his grandfather as president, and he succeeded to the presidency in 1924. Edwin Moss Price, father of Mr. Price, was a teller with the bank, but preceded his father, "Bev" Price, in death.

Professor of versatile interests

by Arthur B. Pine

When the best student in your Marriage Education class gets a divorce at the end of the semester, you'd think you'd want to quit teaching. Not Professor Robert W. Habenstein. As an associate professor at the University, Habenstein has taught courses in marriage problems and 13 other sociological subjects and still loves teaching enough to withstand almost anything. "Teaching is a lot like brushing your teeth," he says. "You may think it's getting to be old hat, but if you once get away from it for a while, you're sure something's missing from your life. You feel as though you've neglected an obligation."

With such wryly displayed enthusiasm, Habenstein has made fast friends of students and staff members, who enjoy his droll humor and respect his excellent scholarship. As a scholar, Habenstein has written or co-written five complete books, 10 major research papers, seven articles, three sociological reports and six book reviews. As a teacher, he has extracted good results from his students by his personal concern in their work and his obvious confidence in them.

"I expect my students to do fairly well," he says. "I like to think that as a teacher I'm a resource for intellectual growth, not a machine that dictates class notes." Habenstein applies this philosophy not only in his classroom and office, but after class, also—in frequent coffee sessions he and his students enjoy. Some of the most active discussions and imaginative learning emerge from the casual atmosphere of the after-class coffee-break—and Habenstein is as good a teacher in front of a doughnut as he is before a blackboard.

Besides being a popular professor, Habenstein also is a recognized scholar. He has researched a variety of subjects ranging from The Role of the General Duty Nurse in Missouri Hospitals to the Utilization of Negro Troops in the U.S. Armed Forces—a study he did in U.S. Army camps during the Korean war. In spite of such a great interest in all phases of life, Habenstein has gained a considerable reputation for his knowledge of funeral customs. He has done full surveys on mortuary education and customs and written numerous articles and three lengthy books on the subjects.

With a grant from the National Funeral Directors Association, Habenstein and William M. Lamers have recently published a 973-page book, "Funeral Customs the World Over," a scholarly work written in layman's language. Time Magazine listed the book as a "ponderous but morbidly fascinating volume" on "how the other half dies . . . It goes a long way toward reconciling its readers to the sentimental (and expensive) horrors of the usual U.S. funeral. The rest of the world, it seems, is not much better off."

Lamers and Habenstein also collaborated for an earlier book, "The History of American Funeral Directing," and Habenstein wrote a third volume, "The Future of Funeral Service Education."

While Habenstein has done a lot of work in studying mortuary practices, he hasn't quite buried himself in the subject: His other cultures include a revision of "The Family in Various Cultures," by Queen and Adams, and "Professionalizer, Traditionalizer, Utilizer," a study of general duty nurses, which was written with Edwin Christ, formerly of the University. And other work has included research papers on "The Unattached Worker," "The Changing Community," "Social Conditions and Social Problems in Gary," and others. At present, his main field of interest is in studying professionalization and surveying family and kinship.

Habenstein's own family, which includes his wife, Jane, and three daughters, has had varying effects on his classroom work. Since his eldest daughter, Kay, was born, Habenstein has used incidents of her behavior as examples in his classes in family relations. "As Kay grew older," Habenstein says, jokingly, "naturally some emphasis was placed on whatever age group she was in. I suppose you'd have to have taken the course for 10 years or so to hear the full story!"

His family also was responsible for the nickname, "Hobby," by which he is known to his friends and colleagues. "My father was called Hobby," he says, "and so were all my brothers. That made it a bit confusing at family reunions." But "Hobby" has carried over to the sociology department. There, Habenstein is the only "Hobby," and his grey-speckled crew-cut and casual dress make the identification complete.

In his office—an almost skin-tight room that appears cluttered by a desk, a table and 900 books—Habenstein holds conferences with his graduate students and prepares groundwork for new research projects. Active in University life, he was instrumental in formulating the new sociology honors program, of which he is departmental director. The sociology department will offer 21 hours of honors work within the next year. In the past 11 years, Habenstein has served on several University committees, including those for the accreditation of junior colleges, the improvement of college teaching, and traffic safety. He is the departmental representative to the Graduate Council and has been chairman of more than a dozen M.A. and Ph.D. committees.

Habenstein's higher education began in Cleveland, where he earned a diploma at Fenn's Night College. He later received an A.B. in sociology from Bowling Green State University in Ohio and also was graduated with a B.S. in Ed., magna cum laude. From 1946 to 1950, he attended the University of Chicago and received his A.M. and Ph.D. degrees there. He also has attended the Family Studies Center, Summer Institute. He is a member of eight professional associations.

Habenstein has worked as an educational adviser, research associate and instructor. He was a lecturer in sociology at Indiana University and did research for Joseph D. Lohman at the University of Chicago, the National Funeral Directors Association, and International Public Opinion Research, Inc. For two years, he was book review editor of the Sociological Quarterly magazine. He came to the University of Missouri in 1950 and, except for a one-year sabbatical leave, has continued here since then.

During the summer, Habenstein will teach at UCLA, and in September, he hopes to leave for a year to do research. "I find I really miss teaching when I'm on leave," he says. But research is another facet of a professor's work, and Habenstein has applied for a $50,000 grant from the National Institute of Mental Health to study Extended Kinship in an Urban Milieu—"In other words, What Relatives Mean to People," Habenstein says.

Versatility in research is a valuable asset to any scholar. For Dr. Habenstein, changing topics is like "painting the living-room ivory and then switching to green for the parlor. You just get a kick to finish one color and then start the next." With each project he completes, Habenstein broadens his sociological spectrum with a thick coat of scholarship that he hopes will rub off on his students. And from all indications, it undoubtedly will.

Stalcup heads coaches

Missouri basketball coach Sparky Stalcup was recently selected by his coaching colleagues as president of the National Association of Basketball Coaches at their national meeting in Kansas City in conjunction with the N.C.A.A. finals.

Sparky, who has served as head coach at Missouri for sixteen years and who is dean of the Big Eight coaches, was elected to succeed William Henderson of Baylor for 1961-62. He had previously served on various committees of the National Association, and he had also served a term as Secretary.

Spring game ends in tie

In the final spring football scrimmage the Black team made up of first and third stringers had to scramble from behind to tie the White second and fourth squads 7-7.

Voted the outstanding player of the game was junior fullback Andy Russell, who in addition to his strong running and brilliant defensive ability showed a new talent in pass receiving which may be highlighted this fall. Russell, sophomore Keith Weber, junior Jim Johnson and Junior Carl Crawford were singled out by Coach Dan Devine for their strong play in the number one defensive secondary.

Most obvious generalities about this spring's game and next season's team were the strength and depth of the interior linemen and the converse concerning halfbacks.

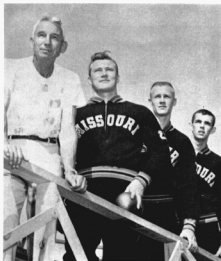

Bob Teel

Bob Teel, assistant coach

Former Tiger track great Bob Teel has accepted the position as assistant track coach at the University effective June 15.

Teel captained the championship Missouri track team in 1949, and he holds the Missouri school record in the broad jump at 25' 1/4" set in the 1948 Big Seven-Southwest Conference Track meet.

Bob has served as coach and most recently as Athletic Director and Principal at Sydney Lanier High School at Montgomery, Alabama for the past six years. A native of Webb City, Mo., Teel and his wife, the former Shirley Rich, have four children.

Coach Botts, Don Smith, Jim Baker, Bob Hanneken.

Track team's fine season

Missouri's track team in general and a couple of individuals in particular are enjoying one of the finest seasons in many years for Tiger thinclads.

The team has performed well in three big relay meets at Arkansas, Kansas and Drake, despite the fact that it has been shaped as a well-rounded dual meet team in contrast to some which are recruited and trained for the big, prestige relay events. It has also won dual meets in convincing fashion over a strong West Point team and conference rival Iowa State. The only loss, and it was a close one, has come at the hands, or perhaps it would be more appropriate to say at the feet, of defending National Champions Kansas.

New school records have been set in the 440, 880, mile, four-mile, and distance medley relay teams, and new individual records have been set in the shot put, 440 yard dash and two-mile run. Junior Don Smith put the shot 57 feet 3 inches in the Arkansas Relays; Junior Jim Baker ran the 440 in 46.9 seconds against Kansas; and senior co-captain Bob Hanneken broke the two-mile mark with a 9:06 effort also against Kansas. Other marks in jeopardy are the 220 yard dash, the mile and the half-mile. Baker in the 220, Hanneken in the mile and sophomore Jerry McFadden have all dipped below existing marks in relay efforts which do not go into the individual books at press time. Hanneken has added a new mile record to his skein with a 4:08.3 effort against Kansas State, breaking Bill McGuire's ten year old 4:10.7 mark; and Smith exceeded his previous best with a 57' 7 3/4" put.

'Hi' adds some gray hairs

Missouri's completely unpredictable 1961 baseball team has undoubtedly added a few gray hairs to Hi Simmons' distinguished thatch. The outlook published in Missouri's 1961 baseball guide called for "Uncertain pitching, with burden on young hurlers . . . Otherwise there are lettermen at every position except second base . . . Bengals return four top hitters from 1960: Reilly .471, Cox .407, Orf .346, and Mehrer .336 . . . (from) the hardest hitting team in M. U. history . . ."

As you may already know or have surely guessed by now, the Tigers have fashioned a very respectable 10-3 conference mark to date mainly because of fine pitching by Larry Bohannon, Bobby Jenkins, Rich Peterson and Jim Card, and despite the glaring impotence of the veteran batsmen. In fact, as of May 4, the Tigers were hitting a full 100 points below their team average of a year ago; and interestingly enough, the only respectable average was being carried by sophomore Mike Hunter (.348) playing second base, the only position up for grabs at the beginning of the season.

The Tigers have been unsuccessful to date in their efforts to overhaul the high flying Cowpokes of Oklahoma State, the defending champs who sport a 15-0 record; but there's still a chance if the Tigers can go into the season finale May 19 and 20 at Stillwater without losing any more ground to Colorado in Columbia May 12 and 13.

A 10-3 record in this tough league needs no apologies but in all fairness to Hi's coaching skills and the talents of his ball players, it should also be pointed out that the Tigers have lost three of their nine regulars. First baseman Eddie Mehrer qualified for graduation early when he made up a delayed grade after the season's start, and right fielder John Meives and third baseman George Hulett have been lost by injuries. Meives suffered a skull fracture in a collision with a teammate during the Kansas game and Hulett fractured his ankle in a practice game. Add these to last spring's broken jaw for Gary Starr and a broken ankle for Dan Reilly and baseball has suddenly become a pretty risky sport at Ol' Mizzou.

Norm Stewart

Stewart takes job in Iowa

Norm Stewart, assistant basketball and freshman baseball coach, has accepted the position as head basketball and assistant baseball coach at Iowa State Teacher's College in Cedar Falls, Iowa.

After starring in both basketball and baseball at Missouri, Stewart signed pro contracts with the St. Louis Hawks basketball team and the Baltimore baseball organization. After one year in each sport, he returned to Missouri; and he has coached here for the past four years.

Norm, his wife, the former Virginia Zimmerley (1955 Homecoming Queen) and their sons Jeffrey, age 3, and Lindsey, age 1, will leave for Cedar Falls about June 15.

A blessing or a menace?

THE ROLE OF ALUMNI IN ATHLETICS

Take the case of the loyal alum who wants that promising athlete to attend his alma mater . . . what steps should he take? How does he stay within the rules? What is the risk of putting his school on athletic probation?

The June Alumnus takes a close look at the pitfalls of excessive recruitment practices and points up NCAA regulations that must serve as a guide to the interested and thoughtful alumnus.

NEXT MONTH IN THE MISSOURI ALUMNUS

Activities of alumni organizations

DISTRICT 13

The South Central Missouri Alumni meeting was held at West Plains March 27. Nearly 100 alumni from all over the District were in attendance.

District Director Bob Hinds of Willow Springs and host Howell County Chairman Paul Penn shared the M.C. duties. University President Elmer Ellis was the principal speaker, and he addressed himself to the subject of the University and the State. Alumni Secretary Bus Entsminger also reported briefly on alumni affairs. Prizes were awarded the following: Charles E. Covert, LL.B. '97, Houston, Mo., for earliest class represented; Mrs. Joe Whetstone, for being the youngest person present; John H. Long, Thayer, for having the most children who attended the University; and Charles White, Seymour, for traveling the greatest distance.

An interesting sidelight to the successful meeting developed the next morning. Bus had been asked to stay over for a talk at the noon Rotary meeting the next day, and Frank Martin, editor of the local paper, promised him a 7-pound bass if he would go fishing with him the next morning. Bus's 7½ pound catch made front page news in Martin's Daily Quill.

ENGINEERING

Sixty loyal and interested Engineering Alumni were on hand for the annual Engineering Alumni Luncheon in conjunction with St. Pat's week March 17.

President Sam Rudder presided at the meeting and gave a report of Engineering Alumni activities during the year past. Harold Bragg of Marshalltown, Iowa was elected president for the coming year, and he proposed emphasis on reunions of several Engineering classes in conjunction with next year's Luncheon.

Dean Huber O. Croft introduced the recipients of the Engineering Medals awarded at that morning's Convocation.

KNOX COUNTY

On March 21 Knox County Alumni Chairman Bill Gates, Agricultural Extension Agent at Edina, Mo., called a meeting of Knox County alumni for the dual purpose of building membership and viewing the Orange Bowl Highlight film. Both projects were successful. The film was enjoyed by the fine turnout of alumni, and 13 new members were added to the county roll, insuring Honor Alumni Chapter status for Knox County.

JOHNSON COUNTY

Johnson County Alumni Chairman Bill Tucker of Warrensburg held a meeting of the area alumni in Warrensburg on March 22. Nearly 100 alumni responded to the bombardment of mail and press notices about the meeting. Alumni Secretary Bus Entsminger held forth at a question and answer session on alumni affairs and activities after the dinner and this was followed by a showing of the Orange Bowl Highlight film.

MEMPHIS

Baseball Coach Hi Simmons was the featured speaker at the Memphis alumni meeting on April 5. Fresh from a 1-0 victory over Memphis State that afternoon, Hi was in rare form for the fine turnout of Memphis area alumni. Alumni Chairman Howard Broemmelsick presided at the enjoyable meeting, and the Orange Bowl film was shown after the formal program.

E. Marion Brown honored

Dr. E. Marion Brown, veteran pasture researcher, was presented a book of letters from friends, fellow researchers, and former students, at a dinner in his honor held recently at the University. Brown, professor of field crops has retired after thirty years of service as a joint employee of the University's field crops department and the Agricultural Research Service of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Making the presentation was Dr. Joe D. Baldrige, associate professor of field crops and co-worker of Brown.

Brown was commended for his teaching and for his research in forage crops. His findings have helped form the basis for pasture management recommendations throughout the mid-west. He now plans to devote his time to management of a family farm in Mississippi and Scott Counties. He is a native of Charleston. Dr. Brown received three degrees from the University—B.S. in Ag. '21, A.M. '30, Ph.D.

Dr. E. Marion Brown (right), is presented volume of letters by Dr. Joe D. Baldrige.

JEFFERSON COUNTY

The Jefferson County alumni met at the County Court House at Hillsboro on March 28. County Chairman Dwight Schubel presided at the meeting and Jean Madden of the alumni office talked on alumni affairs. The Orange Bowl Highlight film was shown after the meeting. Dan Foster of Crystal City was elected chairman of the County Executive Committee for the coming year.

JEFFERSON CITY

Once again the now traditional Cole County Alumni Dance was a big success. Measured by any standard: the big crowd, the beautiful decorations in Jefferson City's Missouri Hotel ballroom, the hard work of County Alumni Chairman Mary Lee McHenry and her crew, or the obvious enjoyment of those who attended, this was a smash.

The dance was held on Saturday, May 6, the evening of the final spring football game, and the theme revolved around the gridiron Tigers. Intermission, or should we call it halftime, featured the colored film highlights of the 1961 Orange Bowl.

Bob Dallmeyer, guardian of the gate, estimated the crowd at about 250. Once again our reputation as clairvoyants is shattered. We once predicted to this group that alumni dances would not succeed well. We would like to publicly amend this to say that alumni dances will succeed admirably, given care, attention, promotion, and hard work in generous servings. J. M.

Howard acting president

Dr. Joseph T. Howard, Ph.D. '60, dean of the College of Theology, Central Philippine University, Iloilo City, Philippines, has been named to serve as acting president of the university during the furlough of the president, which began in April. Dr. Howard will continue his duties as dean.

Dr. Howard, graduate of Baylor University and Central Baptist Seminary, and Mrs. Howard first went to the Philippines in 1947, when he assumed the deanship and she joined the history faculty. Dr. Howard has been pastor of Central Baptist Church for a number of years. The family has had two furloughs, the second one in 1958 when he came to the University to complete requirements for his doctorate in rural sociology. He also studied in the Rural Seminary of the Missouri School of Religion. His special interests are in rural church, diffusion of farm information, occupational opportunities for rural population, and youth work. The Howards have two daughters, attending college in Texas, and a son. According to the CPU Bulletin: "The whole Howard family have found a special place in the hearts of Filipinos among whom they have ministered. To most people in this region of the country, especially at CPU, the Howards have come back home."

Mrs. Shapley with President Ellis and Henry Andrae (left) in Museum of Art and Archaeology, after she presented paintings to University.

Leader in art research

Dr. Fern Rusk Shapley, a distinguished graduate of the University, made the presentation of the fourteen paintings from the Samuel H. Kress Foundation of New York City to the University on April 11. She is shown above with University President Elmer Ellis and Henry Andrae of Jefferson City, a member of the Board of Curators, who accepted for the University. The story on these paintings, beginning on page one of this issue, was written by Dr. Shapley.

"We are very fortunate in being selected to receive one of these study collections," said President Ellis, "and we are particularly fortunate in the selection of paintings chosen for our collection."

The paintings were hung in a gallery of the University's new Museum of Art and Archaeology, which is on the fourth floor of the new Library Building.

Mrs. Shapley is Curator of Research for the Kress Foundation, and until her recent retirement was the assistant chief curator of the National Gallery of Art in Washington. She is a member of an illustrious family, several of whom hold degrees from the University. Her degrees are A.B. 1913, A.M. 1914, Ph.D. 1916 and an honorary Doctor of Fine Arts in 1959 for her "great influence upon the development of our national collections of paintings and her studies in the field of Renaissance Art."

One of her brothers, the late Dr. Henry P. Rusk, B.S. Ag. 1908, M.S. 1911, was formerly dean of Agriculture at the University of Illinois, and also received an honorary degree from the University, in 1950. Another brother, Dr. Ralph Rusk, is professor emeritus of English literature at Columbia University. Mrs. Shapley's husband, Dr. John Shapley, A.B. 1912, is professor of art and archaeology at Catholic University in Washington. Her brother-in-law, Dr. Harlow Shapley, A.B. 1910, A.M. 1911, is the world-renowned astronomer who received an L.L.D. from the University in 1927.

New's the time to make the change to a MODERN ELECTRIC RANGE . . .

More and more families are switching to Electric Cooking every year!

HERE'S WHY:

NEW CLEANLINESS Ask any woman who cooks with an Electric Range why she likes it and she'll usually say: "It's so clean . . . really clean!" Yes, kitchen walls and curtains do stay fresh-looking. Pots and pans—even the range itself—remain sparkling bright. And honestly, there's just one simple reason why! Flameless Electric heat is as clean as Electric light.

NEW FULLY-AUTOMATIC FEATURES

A modern Electric Range practically cooks by itself . . . gives you more freedom with less work and worry. Automatic oven controls are simple and sure. For surface cooking, you have precise measured heats that cook automatically.

Frank Shull, III, (center) discusses a life insurance program for A. Richard Malkin and his wife Marjorie. Mr. Malkin is a Contract Negotiator for the Federal Systems Division of IBM.

The early success of Frank Shull, U. of Maryland, '58 — some observations

Following his first full year of life insurance selling, Frank Shull was named "Most Valuable Associate" of his agency. And not the least of his accomplishments that year was the sale of nearly $800,000 of new life insurance.

To achieve success in a new career so rapidly is unusual — but less unusual in a New England Life sales career than in many others. There are good reasons. Tangible reasons, such as screening and training. Our candidates must, from the start, measure up to demanding standards. Then they participate in programs of study and practice at a General Agency, under the expert supervision of men who are themselves eminently successful. Finally, special schools at our home office hone their skills even further, building confidence along with competence.

But there are also intangible reasons for success — the variables in each of the candidates — ambition, motivation, character. The first may well determine his income, the second his attitude toward his profession, the third the manner in which he serves his clients. There can be no real success, early or otherwise, unless a man has all three attributes in the highest form.

If a career with New England Life sounds good to you, let us know. We'll see that you receive more information about the opportunities for men who meet our requirements. Write to Vice President John Barker, Jr., 501 Boylston Street, Boston 17, Mass.

Since this is the penultimate issue of the magazine in this publishing year, it is a proper time to take stock, not of all the wondrous things accomplished, but rather of some of the errors committed and to ask forgiveness. Also, this may be the only excuse we'll ever have to use the word "penultimate." Of course, there's a June issue still to come, with its opportunities for further bloopers rampant, what with Commencement and the reunions to be chronicled. (Last June we identified one reunion returnee with a name that at once proved to be non-existent.) But to bare more recent lapses: The official notice of the Alumni Association election has been duly published, but with one oversight—it called for nominations of two years ago, rather than for the coming year. In the story about Dean Matthews and the students, a listing of his staff omitted the assistant director of student affairs for women, Mrs. John Simmons, who, thank goodness, is an uncomplaining and jolly person. In the excellent story by Art Pine on his interview with Saul Pett, it was stated that the AP man had won the Sigma Chi Award which, of course, should have been the Sigma Delta Chi Award, printers and proof-readers please note. It is becoming common knowledge that our back cover, an engraver's plate, each month repeats an error, something about percentages, which has been admitted earlier with a promise of correction when funds become ample. Many groups at the Orange Bowl were pictured in the February issue. One of these was Nebraska Coach Bill Jennings with members of his family; we have since learned he has only daughters, but in the cutline we gave him a young son, obviously a stray. Doubtless there were other boners that have not come to light. Fortunately, no protests were sounded by any of those victimized; we heard only from persons who spotted the errors, and they seemed unduly gleeful. The mistakes did not strike us as funny when they were exposed, and they do not seem funny now. They give the culprit a sudden feeling of ineptness and stupidity, although in rational moments he realizes there are sinister forces beyond his control (fallout, the tides, etc.) constantly conspiring to bring these misdeeds about. The guilty person's embarrassment fades slowly, but he must not give in to these crushing blows. So, it is likely that we shall go on erring like a human, but displaying great strength of character in overriding the despair wrought by such weakness.

People still ask about Mary Paxton Keeley, former managing editor of the Alumnus. Well, she still has the knack of being at the right place at the right time. Recently, to get the right angle on a picture, she mounted a chair for added shooting height. She lost her balance and fell. But she had chosen the spot for her mishap wisely. She was already in the hospital. Aides rushed to her rescue and plopped her in bed for several days. Still a bit shaken, she has since made a flying trip to Minneapolis and will soon be roaming the Medical Center, completing her picture series. But Mary Pax will do no more chair climbing, which was a fool stunt. She said it, we didn't. J.C.T.

...OR IS THERE?

Leukemia now gives its young victims only months of life. But there is hope for those with this form of cancer. That hope is research.

Research has already extended the lives of many leukemia patients by months and even years. Research alone can find a way to stop this cancer of the blood-forming tissues once it has mysteriously begun. And every day that a leukemia patient lives allows science one more day to find a cure—or even a new way to extend his life a little longer.

Every year leukemia kills 2,000 children and 10,000 adults, and the incidence is rising. Every year the American Cancer Society allocates more and more money to research specifically related to leukemia. Last year, it allotted nearly $1,000,000 to such research, out of a total research expenditure of about $12,000,000. Much more money is needed this year. The more you contribute, the faster research on leukemia and other forms of cancer will progress. Guard your family! Fight cancer with a checkup and a check! Send your contribution to "Cancer," in care of your local post office.
