About the cover: This month's cover will win no prizes for beauty—it's a reproduction of representative Alumnus covers over a half-century period, and at no time in those fifty years did anyone give a moment's thought to how any nine of the cover designs would look when put together. But now we know.

THE MISSOURI ALUMNUS

is published monthly except July, August and January by the University of Missouri Alumni Association, 308 Jesse Hall, Columbia, Missouri and mailed to all active members in the Association. Entered as second class matter under the act of March 3, 1879. Active membership $4.00 a year; life membership $80. Member, American Alumni Council.

Around the University

Color television of network programs became available in Central Missouri this fall over the University's station, KOMU-TV.

All Missouri high school juniors and seniors and all junior college sophomores, along with their parents and school officials, have been invited to attend the fifth annual University Day, October 13, on the campus. They will be special guests at an "open house" throughout the University. The special day is aimed at providing a better conception of the values of higher education, and to help students plan for education beyond high school or junior college.

The third annual M.D. Day program at the University on Nov. 9-10 will include a scientific session of postgraduate educational activities. Most of the program events are scheduled for the Medical Center.

The University Concert Series opens with Uday Shankar and His Hindu Dancers, Oct. 31. Other events scheduled: Soprano Lois Marshall, Nov. 14; Violinist Michael Rabin, Dec. 3; Carlos Montoya, Spanish flamenco guitarists, Feb. 5; Hans Richter-Haaser, pianist, Feb. 13; St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, with Vladimir Golschmann conducting, Feb. 19; New York String Sextet, April 25.

The three buildings of a new student housing group now nearing completion have been named for the three immediate past governors of Missouri. President Ellis announced that the Board of Curators has named the dining hall unit of the new housing group James T. Blair, Jr. Hall. The north residence hall unit is designated Phil M. Donnelly Hall, and the south residence hall is designated Forrest Smith Hall. Following the recent policy of the University, the entire group will be known as the Blair Residence Hall Group.

The University of Missouri and Washington University of St. Louis both presented honorary degrees to former President Herbert Hoover at ceremonies dedicating a library-museum at Hoover's birthplace near West Branch, Iowa. The presentation took place on the former chief executive's 88th birthday, Aug. 10. University President Elmer Ellis and Chancellor Thomas H. Eliot of Washington University were present to confer the degrees. Governing boards of both universities had previously approved awarding the honorary doctor of laws degree to Mr. Hoover, M.U. in 1925 and Washington in 1949, but Mr. Hoover could not be present on either occasion. President Ellis said the Curators of the University voted at their meeting on June 6 to suspend for this special occasion the rule that the recipient must be present on the University campus to receive an honorary degree. Washington University took similar action.

The University, which has always ranked high among the public universities in the number of alumni listed in Who's Who in America, ranks now in the top ten such institutions having the most graduates whose biographies appear for the first time in the 1962-63 edition of that publication. The University, with its School of Mines at Rolla included, ranks tenth; the other nine institutions generally have much higher enrollments than Missouri.

In a new book, Renaissance, Dr. Edward H. Weatherly, professor of English, has brought together representative selections of ten writers from one of the most brilliant periods in the history of literature. The paperback volume published by Laurel Masterpieces of World Literature contains edited selections from the fourteenth through the early part of the seventeenth century with the inclusion of brief comments on the lives and works of the individual authors.

THROUGH THE YEARS WITH

By Donald K. Woolley, B.J. '57

When the Missouri Alumnus was launched as a regular publication (following a short-lived "quarterly") in October 1912, its 66 pages (6½ by 9¾ inches) contained a variety of stories, articles and alumni notes—ranging from the serious to the light-hearted. Managing Editor Harry E. Ridings opened the new magazine with a feature story on the new dean of law—Edward Wilcox Hinton, LL.B. '90. The initial issue also contained a book review of "Ancient, Curious and Famous Wills." The book, written by former student Virgil M. Harris, included wills of Plato, Virgil, Augustus Caesar, P. T. Barnum and Mary Baker G. Eddy.

A feature story on "A New Departure in Instruction" mentioned that "The faculty accordingly proposes to institute certain groups of courses especially planned for those who wish to excel in various branches of knowledge, and open only to those who have made it evident that they can profit by them . . ." Thus, Missouri's honors curricula began to take roots.

Vaughn Bryant, '11, recalled in a humorous article the production of the play "Hundred Dollar Bill," produced with co-eds in the chorus in April of 1911. Another article told of University paths named for girls—and of the girls.

Then as now, football was of interest to the alumni, and an article "With the Football Men" with a picture of Prof. C. L. Brewer, head coach of football, was included in the first edition. C. P. Lemire was the 1912 captain.

"M" men were reminded of a reunion to be held November 2—the day of the big football game with Nebraska.

"While at the University he was not considered especially bright" was included in the article "Gene Field at the University." This article recalled that "Eugene Field must have paled the traditional Peck's Bad Boy into a model Sunday School lad of enviable reputation by the pranks he played while a student at the University of Missouri." The article, reprinted from the University Missourian of Jan. 8, 1912, recalled that Field once painted the University president's horse.

Editor Ridings gave credit to Hiram Phillips, T. E. '80, C.E. '91, as the magazine's first subscriber—$2.00 then paid for nine issues of the magazine and membership in the Association.

Notes of the Classes began with the Class of '49.

Of particular interest was a letter by Oscar E. Riley, then a copy-reader on the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. Editor Ridings must have agreed with Riley as he reprinted the letter which told the course the Alumnus should follow. In short—"If the magazine is really alluring, packed with interest, it will bind alumni together with links of steel."

Time was to be the judge.

Football took over the second issue with a "Flash Announcement" on the cover that Missouri had beaten Oklahoma 14-0. The unhappier score of 28-0 (Missouri losing) was mentioned in an article recalling the University's first football game—against Washington University on November 27, 1890.

"Profit in MU Athletics" reported that the year's largest surplus was from football—over six thousand dollars. Basketball reported a surplus of $67.73 with baseball and track showing a loss. A five-dollar activity ticket that year contained 36 tickets—eight for football, ten for basketball, three for debating, nine for baseball, three for track and three for tennis.

The "new" football rules were explained. Hereafter the teams would have four downs instead of three to make their ten yards; only one coach would be allowed on each sideline and a touchdown would count six points instead of five.

The third issue of the Alumnus gave unhappy news of Missouri losing to Kansas, 12-3. Some 52 "M" men came back for their first annual reunion and the magazine also reported that G. C. Taylor, Armstrong, Mo., was milking five cows daily and delivering the milk to Columbia homes to pay his expenses while in school. A budding capitalist, he owned the cows!

School Ranks High Early

"M.U. Is First-Rank School" headed an article telling of a Federal government ranking system which placed Missouri in a group with Princeton, Cornell, Dartmouth and Harvard. Rank was determined by the amount of work required for various degrees.

Herman Hoelke, St. Louis, former student, took a "walk around the world" for $350. As can be seen through the Alumnus years, walking, motor-scootering and hitchhiking around the world for as little money as possible was a topic which always seemed to interest Alumnus editors.

Throughout most of the Alumnus' fifty years, when the football teams were winning, they usually found space waiting on the pages of the Alumnus. When the teams were losing, readers were lucky if they could find the scores in the magazine. Stories on money for the University—or lack of it—were always assured of space. By the fourth issue, the Alumnus magazine was in the swing of things.

The first issue had had an article on a proposed Constitutional Amendment (No. 9) which would put a tax of one mill on each dollar of assessed valuation with the money going to the fund for public education in general.

This issue, however, started hitting closer to home for the alumni. An article "For Love of Alma Mater" dealt with remembrances and gifts to the University by alumni. Typical was the loan fund established by the Class of '08 (and added to by '09 and '10). Not so typical were the electroliers donated by the Ag alums for each side of the entrance to the State Farm. (Who remembers what an electrolier was?)

And, the magazine reported that the University had asked the state legislature for $200,000 for a new library building.

In another article, an alumnus recalled how he worked his way through the University (apparently prompted by the previous article on Taylor and his cows). Jobs while at M.U. included washing windows, floors, carpets, buggies and dishes at Stephens College, sawing wood, collecting and delivering laundry, selling aluminum and helping pave Broadway.

This was the year, 1912, that women were to wear the varsity "M" for the first time.

The fifth issue of that first year told of the Kappa Alpha house burning at 713 Hitt Street, class periods being separated by ten minutes instead of five, and the announcement of plans for a new capitol building at Jefferson City. Whether the latter was included because of the University's request for $200,000 to build a new library is not known.

The sixth issue—March 1913—told of Delta Tau Delta initiating a 55-year-old student (whose son was a member), the Beta Theta Pi moving into a new $30,000 chapter house at College and Keiser avenues, and the Extension Division of the University offering 66 correspondence courses.

A. Lincoln Hyde, assistant professor of bridge engineering, predicted "I think the moving picture will become a great factor in educational work" as it was announced that lessons would be taught with moving pictures in the School of Engineering. There had been no moving pictures on campus for educational use.

The April issue—No. 7—announced the installation of Sigma Delta Chi fraternity on campus; total enrollment of 3,288; and that there were 119,020 volumes in the University library.

O. F. Field, instructor in physical training at MU, pronounced "Young men who have grown up on the farm are not as well developed physically as young men who come to the University from the cities." If this upset the farm organizations it was not reported in later issues of the Alumnus.

"Around the World on $2.24 a Day" began as a series by Herman Hoelke. His economy travel plan listed expenditures totaling $15 for two weeks in Japan and ship passage from Seattle to Yokohama for $43.50.

E. H. Burnam, '49, recalled in Issue No. 8 that he had attended the University when board and lodging, including fire and light, was only $2 a week. A candle was furnished daily for each room which had two students.

Hoelke continued touring the world for $2.24 a day in this same 1913 issue and it was announced that a course in the construction, care and operation of automobiles was to be offered for the first time by the School of Engineering.

Still a Good Story

The Alumnus looked backward to recall that the first woman graduated from the University in June, 1870. This issue also included the first of what was to become a popular and periodic feature, "The Story of the Columns." To constant Alumnus readers, this feature was to become as traditional as the Columns themselves. New editor—new story on the Columns!

ALUMNUS continued

This particular story, however, gave the legend that no vines grow on the last column because they are named after the first six presidents of the University—and the sixth one was bald.

The Alumnus ended its first year with Issue No. 9. The magazine reported that it had 1325 subscribers (it now has more than 10,000), out of a total of some 4400 living alumni (including the Class of '13, just graduated). Expenses for that first year of publication included $24.50 for rent on a typewriter and the editor and manager's salary of $400. The year ended with a balance of $211.72 in the bank.

Commencement exercises that year were held in a tent, Dean Walter Williams was voted a trip around the world by the board of trustees of the Kahn Fellowship Fund, Miss Anne Shaw was elected Savitar Queen, the University had a new six-cylinder, seven-passenger White automobile, and Alpha Tau Omega and Kappa Kappa Gamma were building new chapter houses.

The ten graduate students in the dairy husbandry department at the University made it the largest graduate department on campus and the largest graduate school in dairy husbandry in the whole United States.

Thus, with $211.72 in the bank, the Alumnus ended its first year of publication. The magazine was a success, was being supported reasonably well by alumni and was trying to be "really alluring, packed with interest."

Future issues would determine whether it could stay that way.

Now, the Next Nine Years

The second volume of the Alumnus opened with the joyous news for football fans that Missouri had been a 69-0 victor in the October 4 football game. Against Drury! The joy was short-lived however, as readers soon learned of the 24-7 defeat by Illinois in the following week's game. Director of Athletics Brewer was quoted as saying "They beat us because they had a better team than ours . . ."

Homer Croy, '07, destined to become a frequent contributor and item of interest in future Alumnus issues, wrote: "Gee, I'm glad I went to M.U.! Every day I rub up against graduates from eastern colleges . . . and every day I feel sorrier for them. An eastern college alumni meeting is a frigid affair . . . they are all of the gasoline crowd. Eastern college men use their alumni society as an employment office. When we Missouri people get together it is for fellowship. We don't care whether a man has a million or a hole in the heel."

This issue also gave print to a statement which the editor could have left in type and run periodically—it could be run today: "But every classroom has been filled and the University is still in need of more buildings." The article? It was called "Over the 3,000 Mark" and referred to increased enrollment.

The second issue of the second volume (Nov. 1913) reported on 215-pound, one-armed V. P. Carpenter who went out for freshman football and was given a trial as guard.

The race problem was nothing new in 1913—that was the year the Alumnus reported that Nebraska planned to withdraw from the Missouri Valley Conference rather than play schools which insisted on drawing "the color line."

O. F. Field (the physical education instructor who had previously commented on the fitness of farm boys vs. city boys) lamented that 80% of the men University students had spinal curvatures and in the same issue the students of the School of Engineering decreed that only the waltz, two-step and modified forms of the Boston would be permitted at dances.

Throughout the second year, the Alumnus dutifully reported the following: members of the home economics class were preparing meals for seven persons at a maximum cost of $1.00; the contract for the main library building was awarded for $158,332 (it finally cost $200,000); Missouri was sixteenth in size of Universities; Homer Croy left on a trip around the world (probably for more than $2.24 a day); a class in walking was organized at the University (a five-mile hike three times a week required); and that Dean W. W. Charters of the School of Education went down on "cantaloupe" in a spelling match with Stephens College (as a strong advocate of simplified spelling he said that "cantalop" ought to be right). Dean Walter Williams returned from his around-the-world trip and the University Cafeteria was serving about 950 meals daily at an average price of 12½¢.

The third volume of the Alumnus announced that women lead in grades at the University; Homer Croy had reached Bombay; a $250 reward was being offered for information leading to the location of one Lester A. Omer, a student who had disappeared from the University mysteriously (later issues didn't mention his ever being found); and the MK&T Railroad advertised "comfortable one-night service to and from St. Louis. Leave Columbia 11:50 p.m. and arrive St. Louis 7:03 a.m." As the year wore on, the editor reported that Homer Croy had returned from overseas and said "I'd rather spend ten minutes with a plate of Missouri fried mush than with the Hanging Gardens of Babylon." (Fried mush evidently preceded the Boone County Ham as a symbol)

An article in 1915 reported that "The State Legislature evidently considers the stamping of several hundred pairs of feet on the floor immediately above one's head conducive to study. At least, the Legislature failed at its recent session to make an appropriation for a new women's building and gymnasium—one of the most urgent needs of the University."

And, the Missouri Writers' Guild was organized, and Delta Delta Delta entered the University as the newest sorority.

Library, Cigarettes, Union

Volume Four began in 1915 with a feature article on the new library building. The second issue that year reported that "The Columbia City Council has given the cigarette in Columbia a knockout blow. An ordinance was passed recently, to go into effect Jan. 1, 1916, forbidding the sale of cigarettes or cigarette papers in Columbia." Punishment was up to $100 fine and/or 30 days in jail. (Later issues of the Alumnus failed to report the enforcement or repeal of this ordinance. One of the failings of Alumnus editors seems to be their lack of follow-up on these stories. Smoking might still be a misdemeanor in Columbia!)

April 1916 marked the beginning of a long campaign for a Student Union at the University. Articles such as "What Missouri Union Would Do," "Unions at Other Universities" and "Constitution of the University of Missouri Union" highlighted issue No. 8 of that year.

The first issue of the fifth volume of the Alumnus announced that the publication would go bi-weekly and that the Missouri Union would get the old Columbia Club Building for its activities.

An article on the University's finances announced that "present difficulties are not without precedent

Reprinted from Vol. I, No. 1, The Missouri Alumnus, October 1912.

The first monthly ever published by the alumni of the University of Missouri is the Missouri Alumnus. And this is the first number of this first monthly.

The mission of an alumni monthly is to tell men and women the things of interest about their Alma Mater and about their fellow-alumni. This we shall strive always to do.

The results which attach to a successful alumni publication, in addition to the pleasure to individuals of gratified interest in fellow-alumni and Alma Mater, are various and far-reaching. The benefits to the institution and to the alumni association need not be calculated. A magazine which is interesting and helpful to read is its own sufficient excuse for existence.

At the University of Missouri publications for the alumni have been attempted in the past, and have not lived long. They have been planned as quarterlies, and this in large measure is responsible for their short lives. Alumni desire news as well as interesting stories, and a chronicle of events issue quarterly does not entirely satisfy present-day standards of news.

To make promises of what The Missouri Alumnus will be is treacherous; it involves the risk of an ugly gap between promise and performance. Ideas have been obtained from other alumni publications, particularly The Michigan Alumnus, but no notion of what our publication should be is so deep-seated that it may not be changed to conform to the wishes of the Missouri alumni. In some respects The Missouri Alumnus is following no precedents.

Whether or not this is the sort of publication the Missouri alumni want will be determined by their support of it—by the number of two-dollar remittances sent to the association.

The response of alumni when the magazine was only an idea has equalled the expectations of those most interested and most enthusiastic about it.

The magazine is now a reality. With response to the reality in the same goodly proportion as the response to the idea, the financial success of the first year is assured beyond a doubt.

Quotes From Letter Writers Reprinted From The First Issue.

"Say, kinda put a little ginger into your athletics. I am always for something that boosts old M.U."—S. D. Dow, B.S. in Ag., '08, Sedalia, Mo.

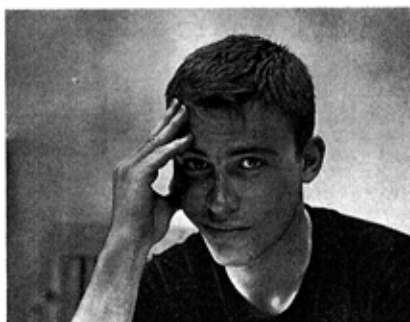

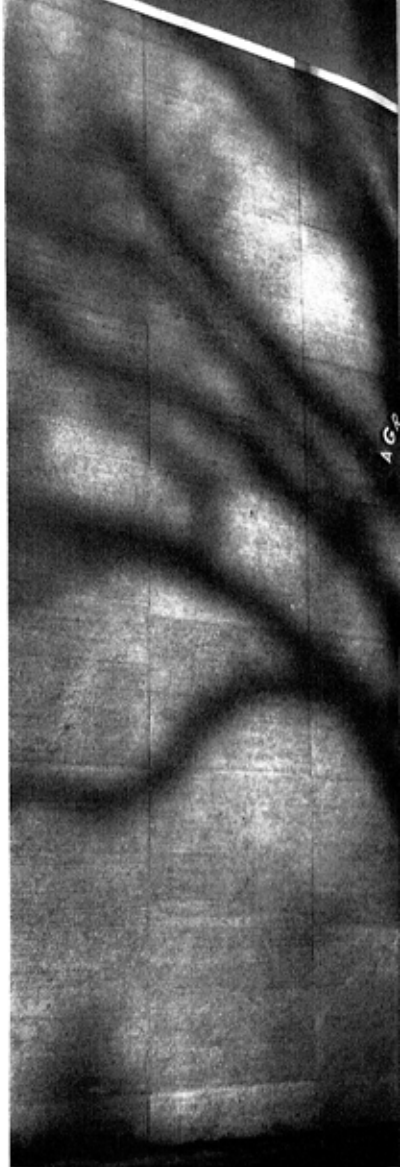

"I'll be glad when the first issue appears."—H. A. LaRue, B.S. in C.E. '07, C. E. '09, White Hall, Ill.

"The University has long needed such a medium. Heretofore, when a man has been graduated that ended it; there was little to encourage him to remember the University. The alumni magazine is a start in the right direction. If I can do anything to help you, just let me know."—Vaughn Bryant, journalism '11, alias "Bill Smart," now reading exchanges and writing Missouri Notes for the Kansas City Star.

"The magazine will do more towards maintaining the interest of the distant alumni in the varsity than any other single agency; success to the proposition."—Wray E. Dudley, B.S. in E.E. '05, Pittsburgh, Pa.

"Every alumnus of M. U. will be proud of a large and enthusiastic Alumni Association. The work of organizing should be continued persistently until every class is organized of which there are living members."—C. M. Barnes, B.L. '98, Marston, Mo.

"Have no idea for the magazine in stock at present, as I hardly know just its style and plans. But will try to contribute later, regularly each issue."—Oscar E. Riley, journalism '11, A.B. '12, care The Globe-Democrat, St. Louis.

Readers of the Alumnus are familiar with the photographic talents of George W. Gardner, whose work has often appeared in the magazine. Two of his pictures carried in the Alumnus last year were selected among the twenty-three best photos to appear in alumni magazines in the United States and Canada. One was the portrait of the mime on the March cover (reproduced in the lower right hand corner of this month's cover); and the other was a portrait of Dr. Donald Drummond. They were chosen in the American Alumni Council Magazine Competition and were exhibited at the AAC conference.

George Gardner was the 1962 winner of the National Collegiate Photography Contest. He is a senior in the College of Arts and Science, majoring in anthropology. George, just turned 22, was graduated from New Hope High School, in Bucks County, Pennsylvania, and became interested in photography as a means of recording a winter spent on a wilderness trapline in the Adirondack Mountains. His varied experience includes hitchhiking across the U.S. and a summer spent in Japan last year. He made the trip to the Far East on a tramp freighter, American owned but manned by Japanese crews; the scene at right above was taken at sea. The photo at left above shows a mountain village, Hokkaido, a large hot springs resort on a northern island of Japan. In the center is a detail of the Agriculture Building on the University campus.

A shortage of Gardner photos in this issue is due to the fact that the roving young photographer made a motor scooter trip to Mexico in the summer and was late getting back to Missouri.

FIRST WOMAN J. SCHOOL GRADUATE RECALLS EARLY NEWS CLASSES HERE

By JOE FARMER

"An old ruler as long as it is not," replied Mrs. Mary F. Keeley, to the late Dean Walter Williams, when he asked her when she would like to have her name on her graduation cap.

With Mrs. Keeley's only, a student was established at the University of Missouri School of Journalism. Less than two years ago, in 1959, graduating journalism proudly display the red tassel as it was worn by Mrs. Keeley, then Miss Mary Patton, the only woman in the first regular graduating class of the School of Journalism. The class consisted of seven students and included the late John P. Travell, famous journalist in China for many years, and D. H. Lewis, who now teaches Accounting and Statistics at the School of Business and Public Administration here.

When Mrs. Keeley, now teaching journalism and creative writing at Christian College, attended the University, there were only three students on the faculty of the School of Journalism. No advertising classes were taught. The Columbia Missouri was published under the name of the University Missouri and the University student paper was the Independent. One factor, however, has never changed: teaching Henry and Principles of Journalism.

Mrs. Keeley had little competition for the position of editor of the weekly paper on the student paper, but the original owner the paper attracted Walter Williams. His statement that the paper was the only one in the state to carry an edition principle, but Mrs. Keeley played loyalty to them above the competition of the character of Misses. At that time Walter Williams was a graduate student in his second of three to attend a journalism school. Mrs. Keeley said, "The price was like a man of a newspaper being and I thought I would like to do it."

Mrs. Keeley fondly remembers since when she was the only woman in the School of Journalism, was subjected to more adverse treatment. One of the strangest was that of interviewing the owner of a printing plant. The owner turned out to be a Jew who "I got the interview," Mrs. Keeley says, laughing.

MRS. KEELEY

After her graduation, Mrs. Keeley discovered that women in journalism were an oddity. No "standard" newspaper would hire a woman, so she sought employment on the scandalous "yellow" paper, the New York Daily Mirror (later called the Daily Mirror), at the University of Missouri, the so-called "yellow" newspaper.

During World War I, Mrs. Keeley spent one year in France with a YMCA Center unit. On the way across, she met the editor of a paper called the Underground. She didn't take a newspaper for the American edition in France, however, because she was "too busy giving them news."

Mrs. Keeley has also worked as a reporter on other newspapers, in the author of several books, and has written numerous plays. The latest of which deals with the story of the conquest of the Missouri Indians.

Even after joining the faculty at Christian College, Mrs. Keeley was uncomfortable in handling the Christian College Alumnus, student publication which recently celebrated its 50th anniversary. She maintains her loyalty to her alma mater by sending only her best journalism students to the University.

could compete in majesty and masculinity with a well-bred bull.

The cover that perhaps caused the most commotion was an X-ray photograph of a wild duck, furnished us from the Conservation department. This seemed to baffle everyone, including the editor at first glance, and more than one member wrote us that we were nuts to use it; there was no doubt, however, that it was an eye-stopper.

Another cover that caused a good deal of trouble, but it was worth it because it established the fact that there was one well-kept secret on this campus, a secret that had been kept for years and years. We planned a very special cover on the fiftieth anniversary of the coming of St. Pat; he was to be shown selecting his queen by means of the computer that had just been completed by the engineers. This involved considerable trick photography, but that presented no difficulty, for this was duck soup to Andy. The catch was that we had to borrow the actual costume that St. Pat wore. When we requested the loan of it from the dean, he said he did not know where it was and he did not know anybody who knew. We thought he was joking at first, but he finally convinced us that St. Pat did not trust him with the secret. We cased the joint, and nobody knew as far as we could find out. But three days later we had a telegram from Washington, D. C. that the suit we needed would be waiting in the dean's office the next day, and there it was. So someone else dressed up as St. Pat, and viewed the five beautiful queen candidates through the computer. We firmly believe that someone in the Engine School must know who and where St. Pat is, but no one else knows who that is.

This was a fortunate time to be on the staff of the Alumnus because there were so many things happening to record. The coming of Dr. Elmer Ellis to the campus as president marked the beginning of this new era, and the magazine tried to cover this with pictures and articles and interpret what this meant to the University. Both Dr. and Mrs. Ellis were gracious about having their pictures taken many times.

The first excitement was the opening of the long awaited Student Memorial Union, which was photographed and described. A picture story showed a beautiful freshman involved in its various activities. The University Laboratory School marked its fiftieth anniversary without any fanfare, as the Alumnus did a picture story of its activities, with the cover a picture of Miss Mary Polk Jesse, one of its beloved teachers surrounded by her small pupils.

The tearing down of Jesse Auditorium was covered and pictures taken of its beautifully carved woodwork and magnificent chandelier, which repose now in the storehouse, where the chandelier will remain until some time in the unforeseeable future when some imaginative builder will hang it again and our grandchildren will view its splendor. However, that is the only part of the old auditorium with its bad acoustics and clumsily placed pillars that is missed, for the new auditorium is all that was hoped for and a delight to photograph.

Recollections of a Former Editor

By Mary Paxton Keeley

I came to edit the Alumnus at the end of an era in the University, when there was to be much to record. Two things influenced the changes I made; the first, that I had lately been addicted to photography, and second, that I encountered Andy Tau, who took nearly all the pictures we used during my time on the staff. At the end of two years he had taken so many really good photographs that we were able to hang a show of them in the gallery of the Student Union.

Bus Entsminger was kind enough to let me use all the pictures that I could manage to have taken, sometimes two picture stories a month, though I admit he did remind me from time to time of the increasing cost of pictures we were using and they cost plenty, but he never said No. The most important picture, I felt, was that on the cover, which had to be an eye-stopper whenever possible. Two of our covers caused a good deal of comment; in one of them the head of a Hereford bull. The Shorthorn people complained because a Shorthorn had not been used instead of a Hereford, and the other people at the Ag School asked why in the world a man had not been used with the bull, but the answer, of course, was that no man

Hal Negbauer, B.S. in B.A. '50, of 660 Madison Ave., New York 21, is the subject of an interesting interview that appeared in the July 7 New Yorker which began: "A friend of ours who gets around has told us that one of the most active large-scale-lunch hosts in town is Mr. Hal K. Negbauer, a real estate broker who specializes in the leasing of midtown space for offices. Since the spring of 1960, he has entertained some seven hundred and fifteen people at twenty lunches." Mayor Wagner has been among guests of honor featured in informal talks. At these lunches Hal is helped by his wife, the former Babette Grimes, Arts '50. As president of the New York chapter of the Alumni Association, Hal is hoping for a heavy turnout of area alumni for the next meeting, set for Nov. 2.

George Venable, for many years band director at the University, has been a guest in the Big Springs Nursing Home, Humansville, Mo., for more than a year and bedfast for several months. Messages for him may be addressed in care of Chester Hoff, Box 38, Stockton, Mo.

A former Missourian, Mrs. Irvin (Gussie Kahn) Barth, AB, BS Ed. '06 writes from Country Club Dr., Carmel Valley, Calif., where she has lived since the death in 1931 of her husband, Judge Irvin V. Barth, AB '97, AM, LL.B. '99, that although older in years she remains young in spirit. A knee injury four years ago precluded further travel, so she has been unable to return to the campus for class reunions. She serves on the Board of Masters of The Cowan School, a private, co-educational preparatory school owned and operated by her granddaughter, Mrs. Jack J. (Janet Sloss) Cowan and Mr. Cowan. Mrs. Barth's daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Sloss, live in San Francisco.

Too late for the June issue, the Alumnus received a most interesting letter from Ens. Barney Calame of the U.S. Navy. Barney, B.J. '61, writing from Long Beach, home port of his minesweeper, said he had just got his battered copy of the February magazine after returning from a trip to South Viet Nam. His ship is constructed entirely of wood, "so coming across the Pacific at 10 knots can get rough; we left Hong Kong 26 February and arrived in Long Beach 20 April." Barney had some nice comments about the Alumnus and an idea for a future article. His mailing address is USS Esteem (MSO 438), Fleet Post Office, San Francisco.

Harold R. Jordan, A.B. '51, is president of the Oakland (Calif.) World Trade Club, which last spring sponsored World Trade Week. Included was an international banquet and dance at the Hotel Claremont. The events were a tremendous success. Hal, who headed the planning committee, is employed by States Marine-Isthmian Lines, largest U.S. flag steamship line; all the ships are freighters. Mrs. Jordan is the former Martha Wilcoxson, B.S. in Ed. '52. The Jordans have five children ranging in age from one to seven: Roy, Melinda, Sarah, Kent, and Pamela. They live at 221 Mountain Ave., Piedmont 11, Calif.

Claude F. Ratliff, Jr., B.J. '53, has been promoted to western advertising director of the New York Times. He has headquarters in Los Angeles, where he opened the advertising office of the Times three years ago as manager, following five years as a sales representative with the paper's representative firm. He formerly managed the University's television station in Columbia. His address is 833 Canyon Crest Dr., Sierra Madre, Calif.

Miss Ada Wilson was the subject of an interesting feature story in the Olathe (Kan.) Daily News last month. In 1907 she made history at M. U. by becoming the first woman to graduate in civil engineering. Today, at 80, she leads a very active life, working in her yard most of the time, reading and doing fancy needlework in the evenings. She never got a chance to practice her chosen profession. By the time she graduated her parents were too old to run their dairy farm alone, so Miss Wilson and her sister managed it until 1943. Miss Wilson was back on the campus for her class reunion last spring. In college she took engineering because she liked math. She was qualified to teach physics and chemistry, but she didn't like teaching. Miss Wilson feels a woman should get just as much education as she can and has as much right to a college degree as a man. She pointed out that the first woman to graduate from the M.U. School of Law was the late Mrs. Carey May Carroll Sprague, '96, who was a native of Olathe. The news of these alumnae was forwarded by another M.U. graduate who lives in Olathe, Mr. Forest S. Lyman, B.S. in E.E. '00, E.E. '03.

Dr. Shirley Hill, AB '48, a former Kansas Citian now associated with Stanford University, is a research associate in Stanford's institute for mathematical studies in the social sciences. She is also on the staff of the school's experimental project in elementary school mathematics. Her work frequently takes her to Africa, where she participates in a math project in the elementary schools of Accra, Ghana. Miss Hill conducted the seminar on experimental programs in primary arithmetic at the University of Kansas City last summer. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Haddon Hill, 6043 Forest Ave., Kansas City, Mo., she received her doctorate last year at Stanford.

Music of Middle Ages Comes to Life

One of the most exciting events was the opening of the University television station KOMU, which broadened the usefulness of the University to this state more than perhaps is realized even today. This was covered from every angle, the emphasis in the pictures on those fascinating machines; yet the personnel were not neglected.

The first shovelful of dirt tossed for the new Medical Center was photographed at eight o'clock one glowering autumn morning, a prize picture titled the Birth of a Medical School. Later I had the fun of photographing the hospital when it was moved from the old to the new plant.

When the Engineers celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of the coming of St. Pat to this campus, four of those who started the event wrote in their version; President Jesse took a dim view of their creativity.

Some of the articles printed at this time included some little known facts about some outstanding campus figures of the past. Veblin on the Missouri Campus by Dr. Scott, who taught with him in the early days of the B and P A School, showed a different side of Veblin, perhaps the most famous man who ever taught here. The article and portrait of Dr. Arthur McComas, called the father of the Crippled Children's movement in Missouri, paid a deserved tribute to this long-time friend of the University. A profile of James Sidney Rollins, named by the legislature The Father of the University stressed his genial personality, when all other writing about him seems to have stressed his official side. A splendid portrait of Jesse Wrench, by Bill Rhodes, with an appreciation of him appeared, as well as many stories at other Intriguing music so old and unfamiliar that it has the sound of something new—that is the repertory of the Collegium Musicum, a group of University students and faculty members dedicated to the presentation of sacred and secular music from the Middle Ages, the Renaissance, and the Baroque era.

A half dozen concerts have been presented on the campus with pleasant results. Audiences have found the obscure music highly listenable to a surprising extent; they have discovered the music, presented by vocal and instrumental groups, rhythmically varied and not without considerable humor and novelty.

The goal is to perform the music with the instruments called for originally, and this is not an easy task. In some instances appropriate reproductions of the ancient instruments have been acquired, but their modern counterparts must of necessity be used also.

The organizer and director of Collegium Musicum is Dr. Andrew C. Minor, professor of music history and theory. The programs thus far have offered Medieval sacred and secular music, Renaissance chansons, madrigals and rounds (so popular in 15th and 16th century bestiaries), and ensemble music for brasses; and 17th century cantatas and anthems. On several occasions the programs have attracted capacity audiences at the University's Fine Arts Center, which is acoustically well suited to performance of this music.

While much research has been done in the history of music before 1750, many important problems in the area of performance remain unsolved. The best solution to these problems calls for live performances on authentic instruments, guided by the latest scholarly thinking on the subject. Many graduate and undergraduate music majors are enthusiastic about learning to play the old instruments—so much so that some have purchased less expensive ones for themselves. However, when the students graduate and leave, they take their instruments with them, so the problem facing Collegium Musicum remains. To make their programs authentic and more meaningful, they must have the proper instruments.

Without the harpsichord, for example, rendition of music in the Baroque era is limited, as there is no substitute for the harpsichord as a continuo instrument. This would be the most costly of all the desired instruments, and Collegium Musicum would be cheered to acquire others that are far less expensive. Accurate reproductions of old musical instruments are made by German craftsmen, copying them from originals found in European museums. To date, the shawm and cornetto (or zink) have been reproduced for the University by Otto Steinkopf, well-known Berlin instrument maker. The shawm is a double reed instrument, the predecessor of the modern oboe; the cornetto is a woodwind with the fingering of a recorder, but with a mouthpiece similar to a trumpet. (Shown on the opposite page playing the shawm is Linda Lowe, graduate student.)

Other additions that would lend authenticity to the performances include: the serpent, a coiled wind instrument of wood covered with leather; a viola de gamba, an early stringed instrument of the viol family—as is the viola d'amore which produces soft, clear, ringing tones; a rebec, a kind of violin used during the Middle Ages; the lute, minstrel harp, tuned hand bells, krummhorn, rankett, dulciane, sordune, and the radleir (a medieval hurdy-gurdy). A collection of these and other old musical instruments would enable the group to have full consort (complete families of instruments) available to capture the fascinating sounds of the Medieval, Renaissance, and Baroque eras.

Collegium Musicum hopes to further the cause of widening the understanding and appreciation of our rich musical heritage. In this connection, the University of Missouri Press has under consideration a plan to publish an illustrated book and to issue an album of recordings by the University group.

times. In all the history of the University only one other man has been so beloved by students, and he is commemorated by Defoe Hall.

The Alumnus, too, did some campaigning at this time. We tramped all around Lathrop Hall, perhaps a little fearful that gobs of the ceiling might konk us as we photographed every crack and prop in the building, and we did the same for the old B and P A building, though it was not as dilapidated. We like to think that we may have hurried the coming of the new Fine Arts Building by our pictures of that ramshackle old building which had been condemned so long by the city.

We told the story of Robert Levi Todd, who with his first cousin composed the first graduating class of the University, and whom the Alumnus ought to honor especially, because he organized the first alumni association and was its president. But he performed an even greater service when he prevented the Federal colonel from burning the University down during the Civil War. Col. Merrill, in a rage because Confederate troops had galloped into town and taken all the Yankee horses with them, was about to set fire to the Main building of the University, when Little Bob Todd, as he was called, stepped up to him and said he would ruin the colonel if he burned that school building, and the colonel knew he could as he was a first cousin of Mrs. Abraham Lincoln. It is to be hoped when the long wished for Alumni House is finally built that it will justly be named Robert Todd House.

In closing it seems appropriate to offer appreciation to N. H. Meriwether, who has printed the magazine for the twenty-seven years since he came to Columbia, and who has always given the Alumnus his personal attention.

The redecorated Hawthorn Room, formerly the Grill Room.

Appetizing Changes at the Union

The three food service areas of the Memorial Union have undergone a drastic transformation during the summer months. Students returning to the campus may well have wondered how so sharp a change of face could be effected in so short a time. Two of the areas have new names, too: the snack bar is now the Bengal Lair—complete with a tiger skin adorning the west wall—and the Grill Room downstairs has become the Hawthorn Room. The cafeteria, richly deserving an imaginative designation, is still called the cafeteria. All three places have been remodeled and redecorated tastefully and to the extent that they bear scant resemblance to their original appearance.

The overall effect of the two large revamped areas is one of brightness, newness, and comfort, with a modern touch. This impression is given by the cafeteria and the Bengal Lair, where new booths, tables, chairs, ceilings and flooring have been installed. On the other hand, the Hawthorn Room has taken on the appearance of a dining room of an earlier day, as the designer intended; the lighting fixtures have an antique glow to them, and the wallpaper is in harmony. A further Gay Nineties note is added by the new waiting alcove, furnished with chairs and a divan copied from period pieces in the Henry Ford Museum.

Gone from the former snack bar are the three bays where patrons were served. Gone is the soda fountain counter where patrons stood waiting for their orders which they carried to tables or booths. In their place is a so-called "skip-a-step" serving plan which is attracting attention in the restaurant world. The foods are grouped and placed so as to enable patrons to go around others ahead of them if they desire, rather than wait in line. This system works even better in the cafeteria downstairs where four separate serving areas are arranged in saw-tooth pattern to make the skip-around maneuver simple, obvious and advisable. Faster service is assured by this cutting of corners in the field of etiquette. The cafeteria is much larger now, having taken over the space formerly occupied by the University Book Store.

The tiger skin in the Bengal Lair is one presented to the University two years ago by Wynne Casteel, an alumnus who lives in Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Gay colors and more comfortable furniture brighten the cafeteria downstairs. Serving areas are in background at left. Removal of the book store gave cafeteria considerable additional space.

Looking south in the Bengal Lair, the former snack bar on the first floor, which has undergone extensive remodeling and decorating. As in the cafeteria, all tables, booths and chairs were replaced.

Will Favorite's Role

Uneasy lies the head that wears a pre-season football crown. For Coach Dan Devine, the favorite's role was downright disconcerting this back-to-school month of spiraling footballs. After four seasons at Ol' Mizzou where his teams never have finished lower than a tie for second place in the conference, Devine fidgets on the hot seat this fall. Missouri is picked to lead the Big Eight pack home, and be some shakes nationally.

"We've lost seven starters," grouched the M.U. coach recently, "and six other key players through scholastic ineligibility who could have helped us this year. I don't see how anybody could be real high on us."

Alas, Coach Devine should have done his moaning earlier and louder—last spring, for instance, when the forecasters were researching their September magazine articles.

The Saturday Evening Post's Pigskin Preview picked M.U. as the nation's 12th best team and Look magazine had the Tigers 16th. Paul "Bear" Bryant, Alabama coach, esteemed Missouri highest—No. 8 nationally—in his syndicated story for a Sunday magazine supplement.

Within the Big Eight, actually, Missouri was not a predominant favorite over the likes of Oklahoma, Nebraska, Kansas and Iowa State. The prediction was a tightly-bunched race, with any of those five teams capable of taking the title, and only Colorado, Oklahoma State and Kansas State destined for the lower environs.

There'll be a rich crop of classy sophomores, quoth the experts, to excite and entertain Big Eight fandom come autumn.

Each team is proud of at least one, touted rookie back—with Gale Sayers of Kansas, Tom Vaughn of Iowa State, Kent McCloughan of Nebraska, and Missouri's Johnny Roland among the most-heralded newcomers.

For Oklahoma, the "good sophomore" angle took a sour turn earlier this month when Tommy Pannell, brilliant new quarterback who engineered a win over the Sooner Alumni last spring, broke an ankle and was lost indefinitely.

In Tigerland, as Mizzou moved toward its opener with California in Berkeley, puffed-up Tiger followers were feeling their oats. Ignored for the moment were Devine's protestations of "no breakaway speed" and an "untested second-unit line."

Twenty lettered holdovers, fullback and end depth, and an abundance of good overall talent were major assets cited by the fan-in-the-street. Too, the chirpers were quick to delineate the merits of sophomores Roland at halfback, and Keith Weber, the nifty quarterback who was lost to the team after six minutes of the 1961 opener. Knee surgery finished Weber last fall. The poised Jefferson Citian was mending nicely until he strained the other knee in a baseball game two months ago.

That knee buckled in the second week of September drills, as Weber was directing the Bengals' No. 2 backfield, and Missouri's coaching staff had to re-evaluate their quarterback strength. Weber's readiness, it appeared, might be an on-again, off-again proposition all season.

Operating at first-string all the while was Jim Johnson, the senior left-hander who played chiefly on defense as Ron Taylor's relief last fall. His first-string backfield mates were Roland and Bill Tobin at the halfbacks, and Andy Russell, fullback.

Paul Underhill, a hefty and quick 214 pounds, could be the offensive fullback, should Russell be earmarked for heavy defensive duty.

Depth among the M.U. backs will permit training of a defensive secondary to work almost entirely as specialists. Veterans Carl Crawford and Vince Turner—possibly Johnson and Russell, both experienced defenders—and sophomores Gus Otto and Vince Tobin are the best possibilities. The highly versatile Roland may double here also. Insofar as possible Coach Clay Cooper, in charge of the deep defenses, will try to develop a set combination as was true in 1960.

Up front, Missouri's No. 1 line will be all new except for ends Conrad Hitchler and Don Wainwright, the only returning regulars; however, line coach Al Onofrio has 1961's tough, alternate line returning intact. Filling the gaps are such familiar names as Tom Hertz and Roger Phillips, guards; Jimmie Vermillion, center; and Jerry Wallach and Dave Gill, tackles. Gill is the only non-letterman.

Biggest concern is maturation of a second-team line, notably at the guard positions. However, the expectation is that Hertz and Phillips will be called on for at least 45 minutes of duty in early games.

Two daughters and two grandsons of the late Judge Berryman Henwood look over new exhibit case at the Law Library. The daughters are Mrs. Sinclair S. Gottlieb (left), and Mrs. Marion Henwood Truesdale, both of Jefferson City. The grandsons, sons of Mrs. Truesdale, are Budge (left) and Bruce.

Memorial to Judge Henwood

A large glass display case made possible through a gift to the University from the estate of the late Judge Berryman Henwood of Jefferson City, widely known Missouri jurist, has been installed as a memorial to Judge Henwood in the lobby outside the Law Library in Tate Hall, the University's School of Law building. The case is being and will continue to be used to display legal materials of historic or other broad interest. Currently the case contains a collection of the published legal writings of John D. Lawson, dean of the University of Missouri Law School from 1903 to 1912, and a number of historic law books, some dating back several centuries.

When Judge Henwood, who received an LL.B. degree from the University of Missouri in 1904, died in March, 1955, he bequeathed to the University $1000 to be used by the School of Law for law books or some permanent fixture in the Law Library. The purchase of the case was decided upon after the two daughters of Judge Henwood, Mrs. Sinclair S. Gottlieb and Mrs. Marion Truesdale, both of Jefferson City, indicated a preference for a permanent fixture.

Dean Joe E. Covington of the School of Law and Guy H. (Bus) Entsminger, director of Development and Alumni Activities, said the gift was much appreciated and contributed a worthwhile asset to the School of Law. Entsminger said gifts of the type from Judge Henwood "are necessary for the long-range growth and development of the University as well as being desirable acquisitions."

Judge Berryman Henwood was born in Hannibal, Mo., and after receiving his LL.B. cum laude from the University of Missouri entered the practice of law in that city. He served as Hannibal city attorney from 1909 to 1913. He was Commissioner of the Supreme Court of Missouri from 1927 to 1930, and Judge of the State Supreme Court from 1930 to 1933. He then practiced law in St. Louis until January, 1935, when he took up practice in Jefferson City. From 1936 to 1947 he was trustee in bankruptcy of the St. Louis Southwestern Railway. He retired in 1952.

Chicago alumni meet Oct. 30

The new Chicago chapter of the University Alumni Association is staging its second annual dinner meeting at the Lake Shore Club Tuesday, Oct. 30, with festivities getting underway at 5:30 p.m. The club, at 850 North Lake Shore Dr., was the scene of last year's highly successful "premiere" which drew an attendance of more than 300 persons.

Paul Christman, president of the chapter, will preside at the dinner beginning at 7:30. On hand from the University will be Bus Entsminger, director of Development and Alumni Activities; and Jack Taylor, Alumnus editor, who will be on the entertainment program with his humorous presentation of "Timothy Hays, Whoopup, Mo." The executive committee has plans to produce a "really big name" special guest for the occasion.

Reservations are being handled by the secretary, Mrs. Edward Miller, 2851 South Parkway, Chicago 16, Apt. 402.

Football special to Lincoln

The traditional biennial football special train from Kansas City to Lincoln for the Missouri game with Nebraska on Nov. 3 is shaping up as another big success. At last reports, 24 cars were assured for the trip, on the Burlington Lines, and it seemed possible that two trains might have to be made up. The $14.95 (football ticket included) round trip begins from Union Station in Kansas City at 8 a.m. with arrival in Lincoln at 12:30 p.m.; the return starts half an hour after the game, with arrival in Kansas City about 9:30 p.m. The Greater Kansas City Alumni Chapter is cooperating with the Burlington, whose general passenger agent is R. S. Caird, 114 W. Eleventh, Kansas City 5, Mo.

Marlin Perkins back home

On October 1, thirty-six years after his first job there as a street sweeper, R. Marlin Perkins will return to the St. Louis Zoo as its director. Perkins, who prefers his middle name to his first (Richard), will take up duties this fall succeeding George P. Vierheller, who recently retired after a 42-year zoological career that included giving Marlin Perkins his first job.

Perkins presently is director of Chicago's Lincoln Park Zoo. He first came into national view when his locally televised program about animals at the Lincoln Park Zoo, "Zoo Parade," was put on the NBC network. The show, given an award as the best children's program on television in 1951, continued until 1957. A commitment to tape 13 more television shows from the Lincoln Park Zoo keeps him from taking over at the St. Louis Zoo until October 1.

The St. Louis Zoo's new director is a native of Carthage, Mo., and spent two years at the University studying zoology and animal husbandry before going to work for Vierheller in 1926 as a street sweeper. An inveterate collector of snakes, he soon found his career at the reptile house and was named curator of reptiles. The Zoo's collection was built up to one of the finest in the country under his direction. Bitten four times by venomous snakes, his closest call came in 1928 when he was struck by a gaboon viper, a deadly West African reptile for whose bite there was no known antidote. Through other serums, Perkins pulled through . . . the viper didn't.

From the St. Louis Zoo, Perkins went to Buffalo, N. Y., in 1938 to become director of its zoo. He went from there to the Chicago Lincoln Park Zoo in 1944. His career has included numerous trips to Africa, South America and various parts of the United States to collect snakes and photograph wild animals. Perhaps his most famous expedition was in 1960 when he and Sir Edmund Hillary, conqueror of Mt. Everest, went to the Himalayas to search for the "abominable snowman." After the unsuccessful search Perkins expressed the belief that the snowman was a myth.

Alumni leaders' meeting

The annual Alumni Leaders' meeting is scheduled for October 6 in Columbia, with several changes from the format of previous sessions. The event will start at 10:30 a.m. with a brunch in Room 201 of the Memorial Union, followed by a short business session at which University President Elmer Ellis and Alumni President Edward W. Sowers will outline objectives for the coming year. Adjournment is set for 12:30 p.m. Busses will be provided to take the group to the stadium for the Colorado-Missouri game. The alumni leaders are guests of President Ellis at the brunch and the football game. The national board of directors of the University Alumni Association will hold a meeting preceding the brunch.

Magazine wins top award

A first place award was won by the Missouri Alumnus for Faculty Reporting in the 1961-62 Publications Competition of the American Alumni Council. The award was announced at the Council's annual conference held last June in Banff, Canada. In addition, two photographs that appeared in the magazine were selected for a collection of the 23 best photos used in alumni magazines during the year. The photos were made by George W. Gardner, University student. Nearly a thousand alumni publications are eligible to compete for the national awards.

In the category on Faculty Reporting, magazines were entitled to submit four entries. The interviews that brought the top national award to the Alumnus were: "A Poet and Higher Education," an interview with Dr. Donald Drummond; "Problems Talked Out," an article on the University's Mental Hygiene Clinic for which various staff members were interviewed; "Professor of Versatile Interests," an interview with Dr. Robert W. Habenstein. All three of these articles were written by Arthur B. Pine, B.J. '60, A.M. '62, now an ensign in the Navy. The fourth article in the winning group, "Is Jack There?" was a staff-written account of Dr. Jack Matthews' lighter experiences as dean of students at the University.

Dr. Terry Bladow, M.D. '62, Des Moines, Ia., was represented in the 23 Best Photographs with a photo he took of a stage scene. It appeared in the Christian College Magazine, then edited by his wife, Suzanne Wilson Bladow, a 1959 journalism graduate.

Alumna tells Joplin tales

TALES ABOUT JOPLIN . . . Short and Tall, Evelyn Milligan Jones, Harrigan House, Joplin, Mo.; 1962.

Most of the histories of small towns are simply old timers' tales slanted to gratify their descendants. The fear of being sued for libel by descendants or the reluctance to move away restrains the writers from using their best material. But this book holds back little about Joplin's most colorful founders. Besides this, the writer documents all material possible, having checked every name, place and date. But the legend is what makes the pages highly entertaining.

In the roaring days of Joplin, when the surrounding mines were booming, no Missourian would have had to go west to find excitement. The movie people had not come along yet, or certainly wild west movies would have been shot there; even to this day one passing through the town on a Saturday night finds the place buzzing with a rough kind of excitement, usually expected west of the Rockies. A third way this book differs from other small town histories is that the reader does not have a dull moment, as it is written with charm and humor. One may quote briefly to illustrate this.

Merchants offered free water before the coming of the waterworks, which came sooner because Pat Murphy saw the rusty dipper hanging from a nail on the side of the water barrel "taken up by a livery stableman, fresh from his chores, plunge his arm, dipper and all into the barrel."

Jimmy Worth, one of the most colorful characters around early Joplin "was able to indulge his wildest fancy—a challenging wardrobe. . . . He wore loud suits, often with a bold stripe or an oversized check. . . . His ties made a stabbing splash of color . . . or perhaps he chose to obscure the tie with a large diamond stickpin. When he donned his diamond rings as well, he was known to hire a detective to stand nearby as guard. . . . He showed off by lighting his stogies with a $20 bill. Jimmy had money to burn. His shoes were his dearest fancy. . . . He could make them light up by working a switch in his pocket. He also had a vest with light bulbs down the front which flared up whenever Jimmy pressed his chin against his collar. No lightning bug was ever better prepared."

"Joplin at one time had a saloon almost every other door. Miners who traveled from one digging to another spread the fame of one Joplin establishment, 'The House of Lords,' named so at the suggestion of an Englishman. This was a bar with a dining room opening off of it, and a gambling establishment on the second floor, and those who wanted to keep on climbing found a third floor populated with 'ladies in waiting.' Its food was as famous as were its ladies. The owner said, 'We had tables for ladies, and when they ate there, they had to act like ladies, even when they were not.'"

There are interesting stories about Scott Joplin, called the father of ragtime, who played the piano there for a year.

Evelyn Milligan Jones, who spent four years in Columbia, as a student in Christian College and the University, is widely known in four states as a book reviewer. For over three years she did a series of radio talks on local history, out of which came this story of Joplin, on which she worked several years.

The book may be had either in hard covers or paper back. It is amusingly illustrated by Betty Nolan.

Sam Shirky's duties change

Sam B. Shirky, associate dean of the University of Missouri's College of Agriculture for sixteen years, was awarded the title of associate dean emeritus September 1. He has reached the mandatory retirement age of 65 for University staff members in major administrative positions. However, he remains on the faculty as a full-time staff member in another position.

Mr. Shirky's new job is director of University technical education services. His primary responsibility is supervising the work of Photo Service, the University's printing and photography service. His official title is associate dean emeritus, professor of agriculture, and director of technical education services.

Mr. Shirky, a native of Carroll County, Missouri, holds B.S. and A.M. degrees granted by the University in 1918 and 1919. His first experience as a College of Agriculture faculty member was as an assistant in the agricultural chemistry department during the 1918-19 school year.

Following a year of farming near Richmond, Mr. Shirky joined the College staff as a full-time faculty member in 1920. From 1920 to 1946, he held various titles including superintendent of short courses, assistant to the dean and director, assistant professor, associate professor, and professor of agriculture. In 1948, he was named associate director of the Agricultural Experiment Station.

James S. Berlin

Meet 'Smokey the Bear'

Whether dressing up as "Smokey the Bear" to promote conservation, developing recreation areas, planting young trees or protecting wildlife, "It's a wonderful life," says James S. Berlin, BSF '57.

The young University graduate who is now district ranger at Clark National Forest in southeast Missouri further believes that "If I had it to do all over again, I'd make the same choice without qualms."

Doing "It" all over again would be going through the University's School of Forestry and studying mathematics, chemistry, physics, accounting, business law and taking courses like silviculture, the art of growing and caring for a forest. "It" would also include attending the University's Poplar Bluff summer camp for instruction in the techniques of saw mill cutting, dry kilns, marking timber, cruising (estimating how much timber stands on a given territory), skidding timber out of the woods and laying out roads and trails.

"It" would all be in preparation for a career in forestry, either for private industry or in government service, such as attracted 31-year-old Berlin.

The "Smokey the Bear" impersonation is part of the Forest Service's 12-year advertising campaign to help prevent forest fires. A favorite duty of Berlin's, he gets in his costume of bearskin, mask, hat and pants, and is immediately surrounded by children eager to tell "Smokey" how they are personally helping prevent damaging forest fires.

Actual fire fighting is of course an important part of Berlin's work. Leaving the fire lookout tower manned by an assistant, Berlin is thus ready for the actual fire fighting. Most of the fires occur when brush blazes, set by farmers trying to clear their land, get out of control. Another type of fire presents hazards to the forests during squirrel hunting season. Hunters trying to smoke squirrels from hollow trees sometimes fail to extinguish the fire and a potential forest fire is born. A number of fires are also set on purpose each year. Rakes, shovels and "brute force" become the prime weapons against fire in the Van Buren National Forest District as heavy fire fighting equipment such as bulldozers cannot be used on the hilly terrain.

Particularly attractive to Berlin is the freedom and responsibility of the ranger's life. As boss of 77,000 acres in his district, he's responsible for marking, cutting and selling timber, putting out fires, developing recreation areas, planting young trees and protecting wildlife. To do all this, Berlin spends three days in his woods and two days in the office.

Berlin finds Missouri's Springs and Falls equally beautiful. Fall offers the hunting season, and although he is a quail and partridge hunter, Berlin can't bring himself to shoot deer. He is quick to point out, however, that open seasons on deer and other game are necessary to prevent overpopulation of animals in the national forests. As Missouri winters and the forests are particularly kind to deer, if it weren't for the open seasons, the deer would multiply so fast "they would eat us out of house and home," Berlin says.

Another major facet of Berlin's job is putting the Clark Forest back into production. From land that 30 years ago was burned over and exhausted and worth as little as $1.25 an acre, production last year of pine and oak lumber reached 5-million cord feet. And, the land is now a hunter's paradise. To help keep the Clark Forest in its present state, and to further improve the area, required the planting of 84,000 pine seedlings by hand last year.

Keeping the public informed as to the activities of the Forest Service is no small chore either. Last year a Visitor Information Service was started to encourage people to visit the national forests and see how they are managed. Interpretive trails with marked trees and shrubs have been laid out in Clark Forest as well as a miniature forest with an acre wildlife clearing, a tree plantation and a timber stand improvement demonstration to show why certain trees must be killed to let others grow.

The man who once considered law or engineering before he settled on forestry as a career finds only one aspect of his job that disturbs him. The days in his office require a necktie and as he says, "I never did like to dress up."

New p. r. job for Newman

Robert A. Newman, A.B. '55, B.J. '56, has been appointed public relations manager of Hotpoint, a division of General Electric Co., in Chicago. He was formerly public relations manager of Brunswick Corp. of Chicago and secretary of the Brunswick Foundation, Inc. Earlier he was with Caterpillar Tractor Co.

Newman was on the steering committee which formed a new Chicago chapter of the University Alumni Association. He is treasurer of the M.U. Journalism Club of Chicago, and a member of the Public Relations Society of America and the Chicago Association of Commerce and Industry.

Newman lives at 518 Wildwood Dr., Park Forest, Ill., with his wife, the former Sallie Taylor of Lee's Summit, Mo., and four children. Mrs. Newman, a former student, is a member of the executive committee of the new Chicago Alumni chapter, which has its second annual meeting scheduled for Oct. 30.

07 B. A. WILLIAMSON, BS EE, of 5821 Meridian St., Los Angeles 42, Calif., writes: "I have begun to wonder if the University of Missouri continues to turn out graduates in engineering courses." Mr. Williamson goes on to say that he reads about doctors, lawyers, farmers and teachers in alumni literature, but there seems to be a scarcity of news about engineering alumni, particularly those of the 1907 era. "I would like to think the graduates in engineering in 1907 are worthy of mention," he says. Well, the Alumnus would be happy to record as much news as is available about '07 engineers, or those of nearby years, and it welcomes such reports in the hope that Mr. Williamson may find his class notes reading more enjoyable.

11 STOCKTON FOUNTAIN, BS Agr., real estate dealer at McAllen, Tex., was recently presented a pin for 37 years of perfect attendance at Rotary clubs. A fellow club member, who is an amateur statistician, figures Fountain attended 1,850 Rotary luncheons in the 37 years, consuming 150,000 English peas and two tons of mashed potatoes. Mr. Fountain, who came back to the campus for his 50th class reunion, has a pleasant way of sending greetings to the Alumni Office—in the form of Texas grapefruit. His address is P. O. Box 654, 701 Cedar, McAllen, Tex.

12 Dr. PATIENCE HAGGARD, AB, BS '13, AM '23, Ph.D. '30, has resigned after 32 years as teacher and administrator at the State University College at Potsdam, N. Y. She has accepted a position as professor of English at Union College, Barbourville, Ky. Dr. Haggard went to Potsdam in 1930 as dean of women and professor of English. Since 1948 she has devoted full time to teaching. In addition to her four degrees from the University of Missouri, she also has studied at Columbia University, the American Academy at Rome, Italy, the University of Chicago, the American School of Classical Studies at Athens, Greece, and Brandeis University. For nine months she did graduate study and research in Europe, Egypt, Crete, Constantinople, and the Greek Islands. A native of Mexico, Mo., Dr. Haggard taught in high schools at Jackson and Mexico, Mo., before joining the faculty of Hardin Junior College, also in Mexico. Later she was associate dean and instructor of English at Stephens College, Columbia, Mo., and dean of women and professor of Latin at Alabama College, Montevallo, Ala. Members of the State University College's 1962 graduating class honored Dr. Haggard as an "outstanding teacher" at Moving-up Day exercises last May. She was also cited by the yearbook this spring. One of the organizers of the original "Expression in the Arts" course, Dr. Haggard set the pattern, and for many years managed, the annual freshman trip to New York City. She is a member of the American Archaeological Institute, the American Philological Association, the Vergilian Society, Pi Lambda Theta, Delta Kappa Gamma, and has been a member of the National Education Association for 45 years.

FRANCIS E. LONGMIRE, BS Agr., lives at 710 W. Vermont Ave., Urbana, Ill.

13 VOLNEY McFADDEN, AB, LLB '14, counselor at law at Mount Vernon, N. Y., has done considerable traveling since his retirement four years ago as attorney for the Veterans Administration. He and Mrs. McFadden flew to Europe last March to visit several countries and attended an audience with the Pope. Previously they had flown to Bermuda, Mexico City and Puerto Rico. They spend most of their summers at their Vermont farm, Skygate, at Andover near Chester. Mr. McFadden is still an usher at Riverside Church where he has been a member of the board of ushers for more than three decades. Last year he received his 50-year Masonic pin. He is a past commander of the Fidelity post of the American Legion. The McFaddens have two sons and three daughters (all graduates of universities) and eight grandchildren. One of their sons is a doctor and the other is a lawyer. Mr. McFadden's office address is 164 Claremont Ave., Mount Vernon, N. Y.

14 MYRON WITTERS, AB '12, LLB, was honored with a special award for 50 years service in the law fraternity of Phi Alpha Delta, presented by the Washington Alumni Chapter at a banquet in June. Mr. Witters resides at 2100 Plymouth St. N.W., Washington 12, D. C.

15 JAMES HAND, Jr., BS Agr., of Rolling Fork, Miss., was presented a certificate of recognition for being chosen "Man of the Year in Mississippi Agriculture" by the Progressive Farmer magazine at the Delta Council Annual Meeting. Mr. Hand, a past president of Delta Council, is chairman of the Flood Control Committee.

16 T. D. GLAZE, AB, BS Ed. '16, AM '27, and his wife, the former GLADYS PENNINGTON, AB '12, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary in Wichita, Kan., in June. Their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. J. Harry Browne, of North Brunswick, N. J., were hosts for the event. Mr. Glaze taught school in Missouri for many years. After moving to Wichita 20 years ago, Mr. Glaze became associated with Boeing Company until his retirement in 1956. The couple resides at 1004 Litchfield, Wichita.

19 FRANK H. SHELTON, BS EE, vice-president and former treasurer of the Empire District Electric Co., retired in May after 43 years of service with Empire and affiliated companies, 39 years of which were with the Empire Co. Mr. Shelton is a member of the Missouri Society of Professional Engineers and the American Institute of Electrical Engineers. He and Mrs. Shelton reside at 930 North Sergeant Ave., Joplin, Mo.

20 H. P. NIEDERMEYER, Arts, is a member of an advance group of the Office of Civil Defense which has been transferred to the Pentagon at Washington, D. C. from Battle Creek, Mich. He is program officer in the Communications and Warning Division. From 1946-56 he was chief of the St. Louis Field Office of the Federal Communications Commission. In 1956 he joined the Federal Civil Defense Administration which in 1958 merged with the ODM to become the Office of Civil and Defense Mobilization. Former Columbians, he and Mrs. Niedermeyer (CLAYLAIN COSTOLO, Arts '21) now live at 4301 Columbia Pike, Apt. 519, Arlington 4, Va.

WILLIAM WENDELL HOLMAN, BS Agr., MS '39, has returned home after six years in India with AID, the Department of State agency which administers U.S. assistance programs in underdeveloped countries. During his tour of duty for AID in India, Mr. Holman was instrumental in the development and expansion of agricultural extension services. Some 143 training centers (100 for men, 43 for women) for village level workers were established, and thus far have trained some 40,000 extension workers. Mr. Holman's work took him to all parts of India visiting extension workers in the fields, organizing agricultural information services for farmers, attending workshops and seminars and working with the Directors of Agriculture in every Indian state. Mr. Holman states that "India has some wonderful, well-trained people, but a lot more practical demonstration at the grass-roots level is needed." He first joined the foreign aid program in 1952 for a two-year assignment in Egypt on leave of absence from the University of Missouri. Mr. Holman was Agricultural Extension Specialist with the College of Agriculture from 1928 to 1955. He is a member of two agricultural honorary fraternities, Alpha Zeta and Gamma Sigma Delta. His wife, Rose, who was once assistant agricultural editor at the University of Missouri News Office, was with him in India. The Holmans are retiring and plan to devote their time to the operation of their two farms near Columbia and Moberly. Their Columbia address is 701 Greenwood.

Frederick L. Hisaw

Professor Hisaw Retires at Harvard

Frederick Lee Hisaw, who received his A.B. (1914), B.S. (1915), and A.M. (1916) degrees from the University of Missouri and went on to become one of the world's most eminent zoologists, retired last summer from Harvard University as Fisher Professor Emeritus of Natural History. He is a leading authority on the physiology and evolution of reproduction.

Professor Hisaw's research touched the full range of zoology, but he is best known for his pioneering work in endocrinology. He is the discoverer of relaxin, a hormone which by widening the opening of the pelvis in animals facilitates birth of the young. From his laboratory at Harvard have come hundreds of new findings about the reproductive cycle of mammals and its control by the pituitary and ovarian hormones, as well as new knowledge of the evolution of this complex system in vertebrates from its simplest beginnings in lower forms.

In 1956, Professor Hisaw received the medal of the Endocrine Society, the highest honor that the Society bestows. He also holds the Gold Medal of the American Society of Gynecologists.

He is a Senior Fellow in Harvard's Society of Fellows, and a member of the National Academy of Sciences, the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, and the American Philosophical Society. In 1937 he served as President of the American Society of Zoologists.

Dr. Hisaw gives his birthplace as "Capps Creek, at the mouth of Crow Hollow, a mile west of Jolly in Newton County, Missouri." The town of Jolly no longer appears on maps of Missouri but can be found on maps of about 1910 or earlier. Hisaw attended elementary school but never a regular four-year high school. He was tutored in various high school subjects by a teacher, part Cherokee Indian, who owned a large farm about ten miles from Jolly.

Following a year in the University High School at Columbia, Mo., Professor Hisaw enrolled in the University of Missouri. After receiving his A.M. degree, he attended the University of Wisconsin where he received his Ph.D. in 1924. He helped to support his wife and himself during those years by teaching at the University of Mississippi and Kansas State University. He was Professor of Zoology at the University of Wisconsin when he joined the Harvard faculty in 1935. He became Fisher Professor of Natural History in 1953.

Professor Hisaw and his wife have two children. A son, Frederick, Jr., is an associate professor at Oregon State University.

and the American Bar Association. His business address is 570 First National Bank Bldg., Oklahoma City, Okla.

23 Dr. HOWARD A. RUSK, AB, DS '47, is professor and chairman of the Department of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation at New York University Medical Center, with responsibility at Bellevue Hospital as chief of physical medicine and rehabilitation service. He is also associate editor of the New York Times and is well known for his excellent medical writings. The honorary degree of doctor of medical science was conferred upon him by the Woman's Medical College of Pennsylvania at the occasion of his address at Commencement in June. His wife, GLADYS HOUX Rusk, also is a graduate of the University of Missouri.

24 CURTIS N. PAINTER, BS BA, has been designated executive vice-president of the Armstrong Cork Co. Mr. Painter joined the company in 1924 and has served in its Memphis, Minneapolis, and Atlanta offices. He was named vice-president and general manager of Floor and Industrial Operations in October, 1952. He was designated senior vice-president in the president's office and elected to the company's board of directors in February, 1961. His home address is 1525 Ridge Road, Lancaster, Pa.

26 Dr. MELVIN A. MULVANIA, BS Med., 12 S. Dale Dr., Lima, O., visited the Alumni Office on July 20. His son, Rodney, is a freshman at the University of Missouri and his brother, WALTER MULVANIA, LLB '31, lives in Rock Port, Mo.

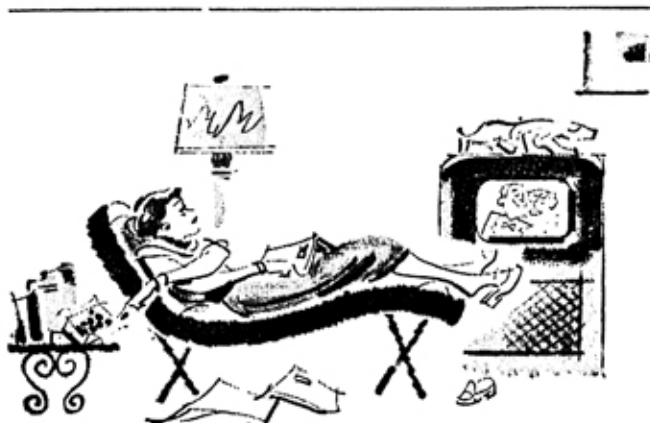

Dr. WILLIS C. BEASLEY, AB, AM '28, has been appointed associate professor of Kinesiology in the Departments of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation at Baylor University College of Medicine, Houston, Tex. He received his Ph.D from Ohio State University in 1931. While at M. U. he was a custodian of the Anthropological Museum of the Department of Sociology and was a graduate Fellow in Psychology. He has been an instructor in psychology at Johns Hopkins University and from 1935 until this year has been associated with the U. S. Public Health Service. He was a biophysicist with the Institute for Neurological Diseases and Blindness and the National Heart Institute. He was recently director of the Kinesiology Laboratory at the Kenny Rehabilitation Institute in Minneapolis. Mrs. Beasley is the former HAZEL LANCASTER, BS Ed. '22.

H. MAURICE ROBINETT, BS BA, has been promoted to general rate engineer at Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. in St. Louis. He joined the company as rate engineer and has held similar jobs at Kansas City, Mo. and Topeka, Kan. He and his wife have one daughter.

JAMES FORSEE, AB, BS Med. '27, was promoted to major general in ceremonies in Bethesda, Md. He is commanding general of the U. S. Army Medical Research and Development Command at Bethesda. Born in Hallsville and a former resident of Columbia, he received his MD degree from the Washington University Medical School in St. Louis. General Forsee was cited in the ceremonies for his WW II record as a commander of the Second Auxiliary Surgical Group in the North African-Mediterranean and European theater of operations and for his contributions to scientific literature in the field of thoracic surgery. Some of his important assignments include chief of the surgical service at Fitzsimons Army Hospital in Denver, Colo., chief in the department of surgery and professional services at Walter Reed Hospital, Washington, D. C. He is a diplomate of the American Board of Surgery and his decorations include the legion of merit with oak leaf cluster 30 HOWARD BUTCHER, AM, school administrator for 40 years, retired in June. For 20 consecutive years he has served as secretary-treasurer of the 24-county Southwest Missouri Teachers' Association, and 26 years as principal of Joplin's North Junior high school. More than 14,000 junior high students have come under his influence during his career. He also holds a degree from Southwest Missouri State College and did graduate work at the University of Colorado and University of Missouri in education and school administration. He and his wife were honored by students and faculty with dinners and gifts. The Butchers reside at 3434 Oak Ridge Dr., Joplin.

31 Mrs. Mont C. Draper (CENA CHRISTOPHER, AB) has written an Irish play, "The Bells of Melodoon," which will be produced this fall by the Musettes, one of the six groups making up the Kansas City Children's Community Theater. The hour-length play will be produced as a trouping play and will be presented in the elementary schools of Kansas City. Mrs. Draper is the author of many children's plays in addition to puppet plays, a children's book, Ridge Willoughby, and an adult novel, Papa Says, published by Liveright's. Mrs. Draper has just completed a novel of a pioneer family in El Dorado, Ark. The novel is entitled Mother, the Overseer and will be brought out this fall with an autographing party in El Dorado to celebrate the 93rd birthday of Mrs. James A. Rowland, central character in the book. The Drapers live at Red Oaks, Warrensburg, Mo.

Catherine (Bille)
Ware Wight

Gave Up Writing to Work with Writers

When the California Writers' Club held its annual conference in Berkeley, California, in May, it was under the leadership of a president who candidly admits to never writing anything "unless somebody tells me to." She is Catherine (Bille) Ware Wight, AB '22, BJ '23, former newspaper-woman and non-fiction writer who gave up writing so that she could work with writers. Although she insists she got into the club by the back door (normally a writer has to have published a non-vanity press book or have had three or more stories in national magazines within the past three years), Mrs. Wight has enough stamina and humor so that the new post will hardly throw her for a loop.

Born in Sedalia, Missouri, Mrs. Wight enrolled in the University of Missouri at the end of World War I. Previously, she had attended Wolcott School in Denver, and Hollins College, Roanoke, Virginia. She recalls living on Ninth Street in Columbia, just across the street from Neff Hall, in an old house known as "The Warehouse." When she was honorary R.O.T.C. colonel here she met the now famous authority on rehabilitation, Dr. Howard A. Rusk. Her lifelong friendship with Dr. and Mrs. Rusk influenced her own interest in rehabilitation work. In 1924, she married William W. Nielsen, manager of the power and light company in Santa Fe, New Mexico. She wrote advertising for her husband's company, as well as articles for the Fred Harvey Company and various travel magazines. After Mr. Nielsen's death, she worked with the Indian Detours, was director of publicity and public relations for the New Mexico state relief program, and was a newspaper society editor.

As president of Theta Sigma Phi alumnae in San Francisco, Mrs. Wight helped organize the group's annual Authors' Party at the Press and Union League Club, and has served as a volunteer worker at the May T. Morrison Rehabilitation Center for seven years where she acts as adviser on news sheets put out by the patients. In addition, she actively participates in art, music and other civic groups in San Francisco where she has lived since the death of her second husband, Commander Stanley Griswold Wight, USN.

Mrs. Wight says that while at the University, she managed to be president of Theta Sigma Phi, society editor of The Missourian, active in campus affairs, and acquire two academic degrees, but her main course was her most influential one: Campusology. She considers it the basis for her success in public relations. "After all," she says, "I always seem to think people are more interesting than print."

RUTH BROWITT, AM, a long-time teacher in the Macon school system, retired in May. She had been at the elementary school for 43 years, including 33 years as principal. She was honored at a dinner at the school in May and received a gift from the University of Missouri, presented by PAUL HESS, AB '41, LLB '46, who is president of the Macon County Alumni Association of the University of Missouri. He is also a former student of Miss Browitt.

N. C. HAINES, BS BA, is with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration in Washington, D. C. He and his wife, Anna, are native Missourians.

H. D. QUIGG, AB, BJ, a New York newspaperman, returned to his hometown, Boonville, in May, to give the commencement address for the graduating class of Boonville High School. A graduate of the school himself, he served as city editor of the Boonville Daily News before joining U. P. International, for which he covered many of the most important news events of international scope. He is the son of Mrs. H. D. Quigg, who resides in Boonville. The Rev. RUSSELL L. LOCKE, BS Agr., Mrs. Locke, and their four children arrived in the States in July for a year's furlough from their missionary assignment to Nigeria. Both Mr. and Mrs. Locke are advisers to the association of Baptist churches around Owerri, Nigeria. Mr. Locke preaches in revivals, teaches study courses, and helps establish new churches and promote all types of church activities. Mrs. Locke works with the Woman's Missionary Unions of the churches. Both teach in the associational pastors' school (he is also director), which trains men of the area who feel led to preach but cannot attend a theological seminary. Mrs. Locke says that teaching English has its difficulties, such as having to tell students to put a "full stop" at the end of sentences. In the school she conducts at home for her children, she finds even more unorthodox problems: Her preschoolers, Stephen Russell and Charles James, demand attention while she teaches Judith Levina and Martin Anderson. There are also frequent interruptions for snake-killing and door-answering. Before their missionary appointment in 1955, Mr. Locke was a pastor in Louisiana and an agricultural instructor in Missouri. He and Mrs. Locke attended Southwest Baptist College, Bolivar, Mo., and New Orleans (La.) Baptist Theological Seminary. They will visit his family in Half Way, Mo., and with Mrs. Locke's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Williams in Alton, Mo.

This page from the Alumnus in 1920 told of Coach Bob Simpson's stars, including Jackson V. Scholz, Chuck Lewis, George Massengale and Brutus Hamilton.

as is shown by an account of early struggles and misfortunes."

Later the Alumnus reported that the Union had enrolled 600 members the first week and that "The State Appropriations for the University of Illinois and for the University of Wisconsin are each four times those of Missouri." In 1916 Columbia's population reached 15,000 and the magazine ran another story on the Columns.

As 1917 dawned, the Alumnus began a running account of a fight between University President A. Ross Hill and the legislature. The Alumnus, supporting President Hill, reported that the alumni and students were "up in arms" for the University. This particular fight involved the possibility of moving the School of Engineering to Rolla. President Hill, the alumni and most newspapers were in favor of keeping it at Columbia.

It was announced that 500 had left the University to serve their country. The Alumnus called for support (and money) for an M.U. Ambulance Unit to go to France. In June 1917, 28 M.U. men left New York for France as a result of the promotion.

By Volume Seven (November 1918) the Alumnus was back on a monthly schedule—whether because of the war or editorial fatigue is not known because Volume Six has disappeared from Alumnus files. This seventh volume featured: a call to honor M.U.'s war dead; report of an influenza epidemic at the University; enrollment of 1650; President Hill in hot water again—this time in a feud with doctors; and a proposal to erect a memorial tower and building. Ward A. Neff gave the School of Journalism a building that year; the students planned to publish "The Mule—The Magazine With a Kick;" and the telescope in Laws Observatory on the West Campus was dismantled.

In Volume Eight, President Hill was charged by 11 former students with "intolerance and general high-handedness" but was supported and cleared by the Board of Curators.

A Prophecy on Russia

As we look back, a chilling prophecy was made by one Albert Heinz, a graduate of the University who was doing YMCA work in Siberia and Russia as a representative of Tsing Hua College, Peking, China. In the October 1919 issue of the Alumnus, he wrote "Oh, if the American people or the American government could only see and believe the horrors of this Bolshevik terrorism and fanaticism, they would not sit idly watching 'democracy struggling against aristocracy for expression.' It is not democracy in any form or principle but an insanity, idiotic terrorism set up by the ignorant, idle, unprincipled rabble."

That same issue also told of twenty professors and instructors in the University of Kansas and the Kansas State Ag. College being blackballed by a Miss Lizzie Wooster, state superintendent of schools, because they used tobacco. According to Miss Wooster, "Teachers set a bad example by smoking." She was reported trying to eject them.

Professor Harry G. Brown was elected temporary secretary of a group of 20 faculty members applying for a charter in the American Federation of Teachers, A.F. of L.

The January 1920 issue reported that plumbers at Northwestern University received $8 a day while professors received not more than $4. (The ratio probably remains about the same.)

In 1920 both Gen. John J. Pershing and Maj. Gen. Enoch H. Crowder received honorary Doctor of Laws degrees from the University. Fire burned the SAE fraternity house during the summer of 1920 and Homer Croy wrote "Turkey Bowman."

The Memorial Union campaign opened in November of 1920 and by March, 1921, some $225,000 in pledges had been made. In September 1921 the pledges reached $500,000 and ground was broken for the building in November.

In January 1922 the Alumnus retold the story of the burning of the Old Main Building and thus "The Story of the Columns" again.

And so ten years of the Alumnus came to an end.

This review of happenings chronicled in the Alumnus through the years will be continued in next month's issue.

James T. Blair, Jr.

1902-1962

Tragedy struck a double blow on the night of July 11 in the Jefferson City home of former Missouri Governor James T. Blair, Jr. and Mrs. Blair. Both were the accidental victims of carbon monoxide poisoning.

Mr. and Mrs. Blair were former students of the University in the 1920s. She was the former Emilie Garnett Chorn of Kansas City.

Mr. Blair had a distinguished career in public life, climaxed by his term as governor from 1957 to 1961 during which numerous governmental reforms were put into effect. There had been speculation that he might run for governor again in 1964. Early in his career he served as city attorney of Jefferson City and was a member of the House of Representatives, where, at 28, he was the youngest man ever to serve as majority floor leader. He was also the youngest ever to be president of the Missouri Bar Association, in 1930. Later he was on the Jefferson City Board of Education, served as mayor of the city, and as lieutenant governor for two terms.

Mr. Blair was a native of Maysville, Mo. and attended Staunton Military Academy, Southwest Missouri State College, the University, and Cumberland University in Tennessee, where he received his law degree. In 1958 he was honored at Law Day ceremonies here, receiving an Award for Distinguished Service in Law. In 1960 the University conferred upon him an honorary LL.D. degree, an honor he received earlier from Cumberland University. After serving in the European Theater during World War II for three years, he finished active service as a lieutenant colonel.

He was entitled to wear the Air Medal, the Bronze Star, the Legion of Merit, the Presidential Unit Citation, and eleven battle stars.

His father, the late James T. Blair, Sr., was a Supreme Court judge and his brother, Sam C. Blair, is Cole County Circuit judge. Another brother, William C. Blair, formerly was Cole County probate judge and is now postmaster of Jefferson City.

Mr. and Mrs. Blair are survived by a son, James (Jim Tom) Blair, III, Arts '51, and a daughter, Mrs. Mary Margaret Hayes, and five grandchildren. Mr. Blair, in addition to his two brothers, leaves his mother, Mrs. Grace Ray Blair, and two sisters, Mrs. Margaret Ewing, Arts '28, and Mrs. Chapman Turner, B.S. in Education '28.

Praise of Mr. Blair for his administration as governor was widespread, coming from the press and from men in high places. He was hailed by many as "a great governor." As the St. Louis Globe-Democrat said editorially: "Missouri was never better governed than during the four years he and his wife spent in the Governor's Mansion." He inaugurated many new programs, including a modern centralized budgeting system under the governor's office for the first time. He brought about significant advances in Missouri's mental health program and advocated improvement of the higher education system. He improved collection of taxes that brought the state additional millions each year. He was responsible for raising the salaries of state legislators.

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch wrote of him: "He would have an important place among Missouri governors for his fiscal reforms alone. Gov. Blair made sound appointments, and St. Louis still owes him a debt for its Police Board." The Kansas City Star said: "Jim Blair was a part of Missouri. He sensed the fact and so did the people. He was a natural born politician who wanted the best for his state, an aristocrat with the common touch."

James W. Burch

1893-1962

J. W. Burch, Director of the Missouri Agricultural Extension Service for nearly a quarter of a century, died of a heart attack at his farm home near Rocheport, Mo., August 26. His going was in harmony with his life. He taught a Sunday School class that morning, as has been his custom for many years. After a good country dinner he had a nap, prescribed by his physician, and then—his leave taking.

A penchant for incisive decisions earned for Jim Burch a captain's commission in the first World War. Later it made him a successful county agent, Animal Husbandry Specialist, Assistant Director and Director of the University's Agricultural Extension Service.

His was a dynamic and engaging personality. Good judgment, quick decisions and fairness won the respect and loyalty of his staff. Thus he moulded the Missouri Extension Service into a great organization. The team work that he developed was the envy of Extension directors in other states.

It was my good fortune to be closely associated with Jim over a period of some thirty years. In all that time there was never an exchange of unpleasant words. I never ceased to marvel at his aptitude for working with people. His good nature and keen sense of humor carried him through many trying situations.

Though best known, perhaps, for the Balanced Farming program that he developed, his forceful leadership was felt in all areas of Missouri farming and farm life. Under his direction the Home Economics phases of the Extension program, dealing with family living, were widely expanded. From a dozen or so home demonstration agents he enlarged the organization to place Home Economists in most of the state's 114 counties.

The Balanced Farming program brought to thousands of member families a more adequate income and a higher standard of living.

His leadership was felt far beyond the boundaries of Missouri. Delegations from many other states and foreign countries came to Missouri to study the program he developed. As chairman of the Extension Organization and Policy Committee of the Land Grant College Association he was instrumental in bringing effectively to the attention of Congress the benefits of Extension work and the dividends to be had from more liberal appropriations.

Jim was one of the few Extension directors who have served in the Land Grant College Senate, a group composed primarily of university presidents. He was awarded the Distinguished Service Ruby by Epsilon Sigma Phi, Award of Merit by Gamma Sigma Delta and the Superior Service award by the United States Department of Agriculture.

Though his salary was ever a modest one, he acquired and profitably managed a 1,200 acre livestock farm. The farm was his laboratory and served to keep his thinking straight and clear. Never did he allow it to interfere with his duties as Extension Director. Our admiration for his capability as a farmer is in no sense diminished by the knowledge that his faithful, lifetime partner, Mrs. Edna Maddox Burch, who survives him, has been a most capable assistant farm manager and has contributed immeasurably to his many and varied successes.

A sister, Mrs. Warren T. Rash of Middlesboro, Kentucky is a graduate of the Missouri School of Journalism. Another sister, Mrs. Nelson Allen, deceased, and a brother, Byron, of Kirksville, attended the University. A second brother, Charlie, lives in Kansas City.

Mr. Burch was director of the Extension Service from 1935 to 1959 when he relinquished the position upon reaching the University mandatory retirement age of 65 for administrative positions. However, he continued on the staff serving as Animal Husbandry project leader, the position he held prior to becoming director.

His many friends may be interested to know that a scholarship in his honor is being set up. Provisions of the scholarship will be announced at a later date.

deaths

THOMAS JEFFERSON JACKSON SEE, AB, BL, SB, '89, retired naval captain and internationally famous mathematician, astronomer, author and lecturer, on July 4 in Oakland, Calif. at the age of 96 after a long illness. A native of Montgomery City, Mo., he received a degree in mathematics at the University of Berlin in '92 and the next year helped to establish the University of Chicago's Yerkes Observatory in Williams Bay, Wis. For several years he was in charge of its Department of Astronomy. In 1896 he was appointed to the Navy by President McKinley, and then was professor of mathematics for two years at the U. S. Naval Academy. Capt. See went to Vallejo, Calif. in 1902 as officer in charge of the Marc Island chronometer and time station. At various times he was an observer or in charge of surveys at the University of Missouri, the University of Berlin, Lowell Observatory at Flagstaff, Ariz. and in Mexico City. He wrote more than a score of books and papers on astronomy, physics and mathematics. He advanced numerous theories during his lifetime of work in science, seeking to explain the "why" of phenomena. He attempted to explain the cause of gravitation through a wave theory. He attributed earthquakes to sea-water leakages. Radio waves, he said, bend around the earth and travel more quickly at night. He examined 200,000 fixed stars and discovered nearly 600 new stellar systems. Capt. See is survived by his son, Ernest, who lives in Los Angeles.

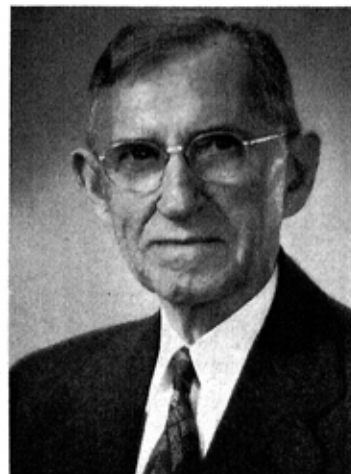

Dr. CHARLES CONOVER, BS Agr., '95, Aug. 23, in Kansas City, Mo., at the age of 90. While a student at the University of Missouri, he was a star halfback on the football team.

WILLIAM C. HOCK, BL, LLB '99, June 1, in Fort Worth. An attorney for oil firms for many years, he retired in 1956. He won highest honors on his law thesis at the University and later practiced law in Kansas City before moving to Fort Worth. He was a member of state and national Bar Associations and a member of Phi Beta Kappa. He was known as an outstanding bridge player. His wife, of 1601 Frederick, Fort Worth 7, Tex., a daughter and a brother survive him.

GEORGE WOLFF, Jr., '99, May 1, in New Haven, Mo. Until 1955, he was president of Wolff Milling Co. in New Haven. He is survived by his wife and a daughter, MYRTLE WOLFF Dalzell, BS Ed. '24, AB '26, of 1321 Chichester Ave., Orlando, Fla.

Dr. MARY STEELE BAPTISTE, BS '00, AM '01, at Pasadena, Calif. on May 20. Formerly president of the United Chemical Co., Kansas City, she gave her Jackson County farm home to two churches and a school district; the junior high school at Hickman Mills, built in 1959, was named in honor of Dr. Baptiste. She received her doctorate degree in biological sciences from the University of Pennsylvania and left her teaching position at a women's college in Mississippi for marriage in 1913. She succeeded her husband, the late JOHN M. BAPTISTE, Med. '10, as president of the chemical company which he founded, and retired to Pasadena in 1959. She is survived by her sister, Miss STELLA E. STEELE, BS Ed. '09, AB '10, of 336 S. San Gabriel Blvd., Pasadena 19, Calif.

WILLIAM BENJAMIN ROLLINS, BS ME '03, ME '05, on June 8 in Kansas City, at the age of 81. He had undergone surgery a few days earlier. Mr. Rollins was president of the W. B. Rollins & Co. consulting engineering firm from 1913 until his retirement in 1959. In World War II he was project engineer at Ft. Leavenworth, Kan. He was also resident engineer at Ft. Riley, Kan. He graduated at the top of his engineering class and served on the faculty while taking advanced studies. He was a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, Tau Beta Pi, and the state engineering societies of Missouri, Kansas, Colorado and Iowa. Mr. Rollins was one of the founders of the Engineering Foundation and served as its president. He was a Mason and a Shriner, and a member of the Sons of the Revolution. He was a trustee of the Linwood Boulevard Methodist Church. Ben Rollins' interest in the University continued throughout his life. He is survived by a son, J. WOODSON ROLLINS, BS BA and AB '36, of 801 W. 69th St., Kansas City; a daughter, Mrs. WILLIAM F. SWINDLER (BENEFITA ROLLINS, AM '39), 205 Griffin Ave., Williamsburg, Va.; a sister, and four grandchildren.

JESSE RAYMOND WILLIAMS, AB '06, BS Ed. '06, on March 17. He lived at 10601 Biscayne Blvd., Miami, Fla. Survivors include a brother, Dr. F. L. WILLIAMS, also an alumnus, who lives at 1001 N. Yakima, Tacoma, Wash.

Judge ROY B. MERIWETHER, LLB '06, at Macon, Mo. on July 26 after an extended illness. He was appointed in 1912 as judge of the Missouri 10th Judicial Circuit to fill an unexpired term and was elected in 1946 and re-elected in 1952, serving until his retirement in 1957. Judge Meriwether for many years was a popular and well known citizen of Monroe City, Mo. where he served as city attorney for 21 years. He was Monroe County prosecutor in 1917-19, and was president of the Monroe City Board of Education for 17 years. He was prominent in church, civic and fraternal activities. He is survived by his wife.

G. V. "Gus" KENTON, BJ, '10, May 21, in Kansas City, Mo. A vice-president, secretary and treasurer of the Farm and Home Savings Association in Nevada, Mo., for 20 years, Mr. Kenton was active in civic affairs and sports groups. In 1951 he became president of the Heart of America Savings and Loan Association in North Kansas City, which later merged with the First Federal Savings and Loan Association. Mr. Kenton retired in 1961. He is survived by his wife, Lillian, of 4519 West 54th Street Terrace, Rockland Park, a daughter and a son, and two sisters.

Judge C. W. TERRY, Arts and Law, '14, on July 19, in Jefferson City, Mo. He is survived by his wife, Camdenton, Mo., three daughters, Mrs. Richard (NETTIE TERRY) Brown, BS Ed. '43, of Dallas, Tex., Mrs. William Andrews, Kansas City, Mo., Mrs. John Dozier, Quincy, Ill., and six grandchildren.

Dr. BERT CLAIR RILEY, BS Agr. '14, on June 28 at Gainesville, Fla. where he was dean of the University of Florida's General Extension Division for 43 years. In 1914 he organized the Indiana University Extension Division and in 1917 he performed a similar service at the University of Arkansas. He went to Florida in 1919 and organized the General Extension Division and became its dean; he was founder and first director of the State and University radio station. Dean Riley was president of the National Extension Association and the Southern Colleges and Universities Extension Association. In 1924 he founded the national honor fraternity, Blue Key, and was president emeritus and national executive officer. He is survived by his wife, of 511 N. W. 15th St., Gainesville, Fla., two sons, a daughter, a brother and a sister.

As indicated on the cover and in a few other pages of this issue, the Alumnus has reached the half-century mark. This is a proud accomplishment for any magazine, and we propose to devote space in a few issues to our Golden Anniversary. That the Alumnus continues to exist is due to the backing and encouragement it receives from the alumni and the University. In the 50 years since this publication started, magazines by the thousands have come and gone. Consider just a few that have bit the dust: Collier's, the American, and Capt. Billy's Whiz Bang.

Each fall, when a new publishing year begins, we go to our printer to find out what the new set of Roman numerals should be to designate another year's volume of the magazine. We go to the printer because it was he, a few years back, who discovered that the combination in use for the volume number was incorrect. We hadn't noticed it, and neither had our readers. Our printer did not go to college but he has become an authority on Roman numerals through years of figuring them out for editors who did.

In glancing over fifty years of the Alumnus (and the rest of Don Woolley's review will appear next month) it is interesting to note that editors of the past have not been too concerned with numbers. For instance, the same volume number ran for two years; and the failure to change dates from month to month cropped up now and then. But the importance of numbers being correct was shown recently when one University class of 105 students reported to Room No. 110 in the Arts and Science building. It turned out to be the women's room.

In April when these offices moved from Read Hall to the third floor of Jesse, those affected looked forward to a summer blessed with the cool breezes of air conditioning. The cold blasts were expected to set in late in July; then came word that the system would be in operation early in August (1962). During the humid days of each succeeding month of summer, it was of some comfort to contemplate the expected benefits of air conditioning. As of now, the system is not yet installed. We know that some quarters of Jesse do have air conditioning, notably the Auditorium; and in passing down certain corridors we have shivered as some of the icy air floated through keyholes and cracks. Then, too, one of the crosses we had to bear during the hot months was to listen to inhabitants of certain offices complain how cold it was, and how they had to wear sweaters to ward off pneumonia. So, there is sufficient evidence that air conditioning is a reality in some places. But not in our place. We're not complaining, you understand; anyone housed in Read Hall for a decade becomes very hardy and philosophical about such mundane things as heat and cold. In one room up here several open end pipes jut out from a wall; this is part of the fantasy—they are supposed to induce hope that there is some connection here with air conditioning. Then, on registration day, tons of equipment were hoisted to the third floor corridor; more of the ruse, you see, to give the impression that heat is to be provided this winter (the radiators were removed last spring). We hope things work out. If there's a run on footwarmers and oil stoves, you'll know they didn't.

Early last summer, when Ace Stotler closed down the Union's eating places until September, we protested that one-third of the world's population goes to bed hungry at night. The shutdown was to allow for extensive renovation. After surveying the results and patronizing the Union eateries, we say all is forgiven. The far-sightedness of the long closing is justified. However, we have found a disturbing development in the revamped self-serving system—students are being taught bad manners. In two self-serving areas, the foods are arranged so as to invite "skipping a step." In fact, you are urged to do this—to go around the person in front of you if you desire, and on to the next serving area. All around are little folders advocating this practice, and the announced reward is speedier service. Heretofore, people have been brought up to keep their place in line; to step out ahead of others was to invite scorn. Now, under the skip a step system, everybody can be a heel. Some students were slow to catch on; they had their genteel upbringing to overcome. But youth is resilient and adaptive, and soon they were sweeping the ends and hitting the middle for good yardage with their trays. Well, just so they resume the social amenities after college. If they don't, it's easy to picture a future alum, crumpled in a heap at the foot of an irate cafeteria line somewhere, and someone observing: "They say he always got his food in a hurry at Missouri."

Dogs have always been news on the campus. Tripod was the most famous one, of course. Recent graduates may remember Tanya, the Rhodesian Ridgeback of Lambda Chi Alpha—a mug shot of her appears in last year's Savitar along with photos of the fraternity brothers; well, Tanya's short happy life ended via a hit and run truck along Providence Road just before school started. This sad note is included here to illustrate that page thirty-six strives to bring news to its readers that they can get nowhere else. And coming up in future columns are such features as "Status of Rail Travel in Boone County," a broad transportation study which will be illustrated—watch for photos of Brown's Station (now torn down) and of the ground where the McBaine station once stood. Also in the works is a report on the elevator that has been installed in Jesse Hall, with an attempt to analyze its peculiarities, and a discussion of an antique wash basin in the men's room on the third floor. How to be 33 $\frac{1}{3}$ % richer and 100% prouder They'll need more than money. You help give your family a better world, too, when you buy U.S. Savings Bonds.

Keep freedom in your future with

U.S. SAVINGS BONDS

Blinders on the mind. Communists read what the government permits them to read. You can bet this doesn't include the truth about our way of life and why it's better.

You do a lot more when you buy a U.S. Savings Bond than earn money. And it's something you can be pretty proud of.

You see, money invested in U.S. Savings Bonds does two important things. It grows one-third in value to help you plan a more secure future for yourself and your family. But it goes to work for your country right now, helping to keep the American economy stable—and helping demonstrate to the world the strength that grows out of freedom.

No other investment works so hard to build financial security for your country today, and for your family tomorrow. Buy U.S. Savings Bonds regularly. You'll be proud of it.

Bonds are fireproof! Every Bond you own is registered in Washington. If anything happens to them, Uncle Sam will replace them free.

Four benefits to you with Series "E" Savings Bonds

1. You get 3 $\frac{3}{4}$ % interest to maturity.
2. Your Bonds are replaced free if lost.
3. You can get your money anytime you need it.
4. You can save automatically where you work.
