Weekly Roundup

1 Missouri graduates set to swim at Rio Olympics

By Peter Baugh

Dominique Bouchard and Mack Darragh are preparing to compete for Canada in Rio. The two are training partners in the Tigers' post-graduate training group. Both Bouchard and Darragh are looking forward to getting to know other athletes at the Olympics. Darragh is excited to see different cultures, and Bouchard is eager to meet other athletes with similar mentalities.

2 News and notes: Missouri basketball preps for trip to Italy

By Alec Lewis

The entire Missouri basketball team will take their quadrennial international trip to "the boot" on Aug. 5. While basketball is a priority on the trip, coach Kim Anderson said a professor will come along and teach a class the team is taking. Between games, they will visit Vatican City and the Leaning Tower of Pisa, and they will wrap up with a cruise on Lake Como.

3 Former athletics director Mike Alden talks state of Mizzou Athletics

By Alec Lewis

Former athletics director Mike Alden spoke to reporters on Thursday about J'den Cox, first-year football coach Barry Odom and the athletics director position. Alden held the Tigers' athletics chair for 17 years. He said about Mizzou Athletics' search for a new director: "Mizzou is going to attract an outstanding candidate, I'm sure of it, and I know I look forward to the next step.”

1 The unceasingly silly “BoJack Horseman” is one of TV’s best shows By Jack Cronin

“BoJack Horseman’ is more than a collection of zany misadventures, clever puns and cultural satire. It’s also a brilliant drama, exploring dark themes like fame, loneliness, depression and the impossibility of happiness.”

2 Must-see Netflix originals for fall By Regina Anderson

“There’s no wrong way to binge, so whether you stock up Red Bull and get through the show in one night or sneak in episodes during your free time at the Student Center, as long as you take the time to watch these shows, you’re good.”

3 Man Seeking Movies: The all-female “Ghostbusters” is a comedic delight By Jack Cronin
