New MU policies released in response to Fall 2015 protests

Last Thursday, the Ad Hoc Joint Committee on Protests, Public Spaces, Free Speech and the Press released its approved, revised and new policies regarding free speech and protests on campus. The new policies ban camping on university grounds, the use of bullhorns and attaching signs to the interior or exterior of university buildings.

Column: Greek life pairings should not be gender-based Columnist Bizzy Emerson explains why dismantling the years-long tradition would be valuable, allowing chapters of the same gender bonding opportunities.

“I personally would love to work alongside another sorority during Homecoming. I feel it would aid in cultivating deeper relationships between PHA chapters, as well as promote unity among women working toward a common goal. While I’ve enjoyed working with fraternities in the past, this is would be an interesting and dynamic change that would make Homecoming and Greek Week totally unique and new experiences.”

Mizzou Energy Action Coalition calls for UM System to divest from fossil fuels

Calling for a divestment from all fossil fuel stock by 2020, the MEAC resolution passed unanimously in a joint session of 11 student organizations. The UM System currently has $10 million invested in fossil fuel stock and companies; MEAC president Frankie Hawkins said calling for divestment means the university would sell its stock in those companies. With the support of the joint session, MEAC will present its resolution to President Mun Choi on May 3.

Board of Curators discusses possible tuition and fee increases

A plan proposed at the April 27 Board of Curators meeting calls for a 2.1 percent increase in both resident and nonresident tuition. Trulaske College of Business and College of Engineering students could see a 9.5 percent and 6 percent increase in supplemental fees, respectively. These fees do not appear on tuition cost estimates. A decision about tuition structure changes could come at a September meeting.

Carrie Fisher shares her spotlighted life through her writing

Star Wars icon Carrie Fisher died on Dec. 27, 2016, but her life lives on in the books she wrote. In The Princess Diarist, which is a compilation of journals she kept while filming Star Wars, she writes about her weed-and-sex-filled affair with Harrison Ford. Fisher struggled publicly with bipolar disorder and drug addiction, and that comes out in her books, too. “No topic is off limits,” MOVE senior staff writer Nat Kaemmerer writes. “It’s like she’s reliving all this for the first time and breaking it down for both her audience and herself.” Read the rest of the review here.

In fandoms:

Star Wars day was celebrated on May 4. As a belated celebration, check out columnist Nat Kaemmerer's recent review of Carrie Fisher's "The Princess Diarist".

In social media trends:

Instagram feeds were populated by pictures of a woman in a red swimsuit after SunnyCo. clothing offered swimsuits in exchange for posting the image. It's unclear whether the company will actually follow through on their promises for free suits, which typically run $64.99. After overwhelming demand, the company posted a statement reserving the right to cap the promotion when they deemed it necessary.

If you're feeling festive:

International Tap House is hosting a Stop Day Cinco de Mayo Fiesta. Drink specials will be announced the day of, and free Taco Bell is rumored to be involved as well. The party kicks off at 4 p.m. on May 5.

If you like art galleries:

First Fridays will be going on from 7 p.m. to 12 a.m. This event is a free art crawl featuring music, snacks, drinks and art demonstrations. In addition, this month's event will be Cinco de Mayo themed. Rose Music Hall will feature The Fried Crowdaddies as live music. Astrono Beads and Native Alignment will be selling crafts, and local artist Matt Hall will have a pop-up exhibit at the Dogwoods Artist Workspace.

If you're into documentaries:

Head to a free documentary film festival! This event will highlight the work of the Jonathan B. Murray Center for Documentary Journalism's first graduating class. Each student created a documentary film as a final project, and topics range from Broadway dancers to nuclear bunkers. Check it out May 10th from 10 am to 9 pm at the Missouri Theater.
