"Can I be sure I'll be an individual at G.E.?

... asks John Dillingham, Union College 1952

What's it like to work for a large company? In this and subsequent ads, the questions of college students on this subject will be answered by G-E men of varying degrees of experience. What's your question? Send it to College Editor, Dept. 221-6, General Electric Co., Schenectady 5, N. Y.

JOHN G. HUTTON, General Engineering Laboratory

... It is largely the enterprise of the individual which makes him outstanding. In his own thinking he becomes a cog in a machine, not realizing that every such cog is a chosen piece, performing functions for what it is best characterized as a vital member of a team operation. So it is with the individual in General Electric. Just as in the community an individual is free to "be himself," but for his own and the community's sake he must be part of that community. General Electric's success lies in its unique ability to instill in its employees great team spirit yet at the same time to recognize the employee's inalienable right to be himself.

H. A. WINNE, vice-president, Engineering Services

... An important point which many young people overlook is that, by and large, individuals work in groups of reasonable size in either large or small companies. In the large company these groups may be called units or sections, and a number of these may constitute a department; a number of departments may make up a division; and the company may comprise several divisions. In each component the "manager" has a comparatively small number of people reporting to him, and consequently any outstanding performer quickly comes to his attention.

Furthermore, in General Electric we have a number of courses which train for advancement and we are constantly coupling the organization to recruit people for these courses, so by this separate means management keeps in touch with individuals.

On the basis of forty-two years' experience in the Company I can assure you it is difficult for the college graduate to lose himself in the organization. There are too many people watching him, although he may not realize it for some time after entering the Company.

J. L. MICHAELSON, manager, Employee Relations, General Engineering Laboratory... The Company system for periodic employee evaluation furnishes a valuable guide to the individual with respect to his progress and ability. It also imposes on supervisory personnel the requirement that they study carefully the characteristics of all their employees. The system is so arranged that ability and good performance cannot remain unnoticed. Far from remaining obscure, each individual's characteristics are evaluated in order to provide him with the greatest opportunity to make use of his talents and abilities.

J. A. SPENCER, manager, Employee Relations, Apparatus Sales... The day I began work with G.E. twenty-odd years ago, and entered the plant with thousands of other Company employees, I felt small and insignificant and much inclined to climb on the first train returning to Montana. In a short time, however, I realized that I would be considered as an individual at General Electric.

I learned that the Company was operated in units of manageable size and that each person received individual consideration. My supervisors discussed my progress with me at regular intervals. I also learned that every employee's salary is reviewed individually at regular intervals.

Through this I learned that the individual cannot become lost in General Electric—neither can he hide!

You can put your confidence in—

GENERAL ELECTRIC
The month of September for this office was really most pleasing. Our big mailing which concerns the new membership program was completed, the new Board of Directors met for the first time, and it was my pleasure to attend three very wonderful alumni meetings in Dallas, Los Angeles, and San Francisco. If September is an indication of the type of alumni activity to come this year, it will indeed be a banner year.

For the second straight year, the University can boast of an increase in enrollment in the face of declining enrollments in other institutions throughout the country. It begins to look as though we can count on a yearly enrollment of about 7,000 for a number of years to come. Underneath this very pleasant surface, lies a most crucial problem. First of all everyone seems to expect at least a small decrease in economic exchange. Therefore, the University may well expect at least a little difficulty in appropriation matters. Not because of our state legislators' reluctance to aid the institution, but because of our failure to impress upon them the sincere need for more support to keep our Alma Mater the great University it is. A second problem is quite natural. Some place along the avenue of continuing incline toward greatness every University is faced with the problem of adding to its program items that can not be adequately financed by appropriations. Some of these items make the difference between a good University and a truly great University. In both of these areas, alumni can play a very important role and through a good solid organization, all of us can have a hand in helping build a great educational institution.
The Union a Dream Come True

Comprehensive Program for Activities Worked Out by Robertson and Board

With the opening of the Memorial Student Union, the students of the University of Missouri have come into their own. From the minute it opened its doors it has been filled as planned.

All through these more than a hundred years there has been no adequate place for the students to relax; there has been no place for them to dance except in the hot spots around Columbia. For thirty years the complaint has been, “We have to go away for week ends because there is no place to dance unless we want to drink beer.”

The hot spots, mostly on the north side and the outskirts of town flourished, but for the students who definitely did not care for that kind of place, there was nowhere to go except Read Hall, and it was too small to serve the thousands of students properly.

But now!

We went to the Union Friday night. The big ball room upstairs was comfortably filled with dancers, and we were told there had been 2,000 there at the open house for new students.

In the ball room, we looked back over the heads of these dancers to those we remembered ten or fifteen years ago, and we thought about the kind of people who would have filled it had it opened then. That was the generation that described itself as sophisticated. The girls got themselves up so that they would look a little wild in their long jangling earrings, their flaming lipstick and the mascara around their eyes. They carried long slinky cigarette holders.

Perhaps those students weren’t really a bit tougher than these students who glided by us Friday night, but they did look tougher, and they would have whooped at the idea of the present tempo; they jitterbugged. Today even the music is slower and softer to fit in with the mood of the dancers. Today’s students might easily dance the slow dreamy waltz as their grandmothers waltzed it.

Thus this generation as it glided past us in this beautiful ball room seemed to belong there. This Union belongs to them, as it will to the generations that come after them. Its beauty; its charm of color and line; its spaciousness belongs to them, and they fit into it as though it were custom-made for them, as indeed it was.

Five Alums Honored By Naming of Dormitories

Five of the newer student dormitories were officially named Oct. 4, two of them women's halls and three men's. The fourth and older men's dormitory was named for Dr. Luther M. (Daddy) Defoe in 1940.

The three new men's dorms are part of a four unit group, which will be joined together in time by a recreation center for university men.

Sarah Jane Gentry, the second woman to be graduated from the University, was the granddaughter of Gen. Richard Gentry, of Boone Co., an Indian fighter, who founded Columbia. She was awarded a B.S. in 1873 and an M.S. in 1874. She taught for nearly forty years in the Kansas City Schools, most of the time being spent as a teacher of literature at the Manual Training High School, where she inspired her students with enthusiasm for the books they studied.

Two scholarships are named for her,

Sarah Gentry and Eva Johnston were early women graduates who had long and distinguished careers of teaching. The three men honored were alumni killed in three wars.

Sarah Gentry Hall, the white stone building just south of the Union is used for upper class women. It houses 159 students. Eva Johnston Hall is located just east of the men's gymnasium and houses 873 students, most of them underclass women.

One for outstanding university women, and one in Kansas City for her daughter Bertha Elston and her. Her son Allan Vaughn Elston '09, is a well known writer of western books. Her daughter Mrs. Donald Witten, Margaret Elston, was in Columbia for the ceremony naming the hall.

Eva Johnston was associated with the University from her student days 1892 to her retirement as a professor of Latin in 1939, when she was made Professor Emeritus. She went to Germany for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy.

ROBERT GRAHAM

Floyd Bruce Cramer, one of the three student volunteers who died in the Spanish American War, was born at Clinton, Mo., where his father was a merchant. Upon receiving his Bachelor of Laws degree in 1898, he enlisted in the Hospital Corps, Second Missouri Volunteer Infantry Regiment. At Camp Chickamauga, Tenn., he contracted typhoid and died. He is buried in Nevada, Mo.

Robert McGhee Graham, a member of a pioneer Missouri family, was one of the most popular students on the Missouri campus in the years just preceding World War I, in which he lost his life. His father was an extensive land owner in Montgomery Co., where he was born. At that time the farm was still owned by the family that had purchased it from Nathan Boone.

He was graduated from the College of Agriculture in 1911, after which he ran one of the family farms. In the

ALUMNUS Celebrates Fortieth Birthday

The Missouri Alumnus staff is blowing out forty candles on its birthday cake this month, and we wish you were here so that we could cut you a piece. We have invited all of its old editors we can find to our birthday party, because they put a good deal into it, or as one of them expressed it, "I gave my life's blood to that for quite a while."

HARRY E. RIDINGS

JUDGE WIGHT HOLDS RECORD

Judge J. W. (Obe) Wight of Moberly, probably holds the record for faithful attendance among the Missouri alumni at opening games. He hasn't missed for fifty-five seasons. Furthermore he can't remember missing more than three homecoming games in the 55-year span.

Back in the 1890's when the Judge began to attend games, he either had to come by train or by horse and surrey. Once he drove over and had to leave his rig at the livery stable and go home by train.

OPPORTUNITIES TO EARN

There are hundreds of job opportunities for students at the University to earn at least part of their expenses while attending school, according to Miss Helen Jones, in charge of the student employment services at the University.

More than 1,000 students were placed last year through this service. At least a third of the student body, Miss Jones thinks, received some form of financial aid during the year, and many of working students are top honor or students.

He Rang The Fire Bell For University Fire

C. M. Barnes, Marston, Mo., the man who helped ring the firebell when the University burned, was a guest at the meeting of the county presidents in Columbia Sept. 20.

He was one of the first editors of The Independent, first called The Barb because it opposed the control of the campus periodicals by the fraternities. The Independent was used, according to Barnes, by Walter Williams as a nucleus for starting the School of Journalism.

Barnes was in the University from 1891-98, and went from here to the Spanish-American War.

IN SPRINGFIELD . . .

Not being of superstitious nature, Missouri alumni in Springfield, Ill., met on Sept. 13. A picnic was held in Springfield and as has been true with this wonderful group in the past, everyone had a pleasant evening. This club can boast of not only being the most newly organized, but also one of the most active in our association.

IN WASHINGTON . . .

Alumni in Washington met on Oct. 2 and heard President Middlebush speak on the University development. Copies of The Missouri Alumnus and the O. P. I. news were distributed to those attending. Alumni in the Washington area are encouraged to join in club activities and may contact John L. Graves, U. S. Treasury Department, Committee on Practice, Washington 25, D. C.

IN DALLAS . . .

Over 90 alumni in the Dallas area met Sept. 22 at the Melrose Hotel for a dinner meeting. President Ralph Lofland presided and Bus Entsminger, Secretary of the University Association, was on hand from Columbia, to discuss the alumni and University programs.

Officers were elected and succeeding Ralph Lofland as president is W. T. Lynde. The Dallas club voted to investigate ways and means of taking part in the University scholarship programs and other plans for the coming year were discussed.

IN LOS ANGELES . . .

Approximately 110 alumni in the Los Angeles area met at the Mona Lisa Restaurant on Sept. 25. Typical of other wonderful meetings, community singing with Alex Mounce at the piano and a wide open informal discussion period highlighted the meeting. Bus Entsminger, Secretary of the General Association, discussed the new alumni program and members enjoyed meeting former classmates and friends, many of whom were surprised that they lived in the same area.

IN SAN FRANCISCO . . .

In conjunction with the Missouri-California football game on September 27, over 125 attended a noon luncheon in the International house in Berkeley. Plans for a permanent organization were made and a committee appointed to work with the Alumni Office in establishing a permanent club. Dr. D. A. Hindman, representing the University Athletic Committee and Bus Entsminger, from the alumni Office were in attendance.

County Presidents and Board Meet

Sixty-three county presidents, Board members, and general officers were in attendance at the annual luncheon for officers of the Alumni Association given by President and Mrs. Middlebush on Sept. 20.

Preceding the luncheon, all officers met in an annual business meeting which was presided over by Harold Niedorp, President of the General Association. During the meeting, the new alumni program was discussed and county officers were asked to energetically pattern their local club activities after the general association structure.

State-wide Committees

President Niedorp announced that in order to more efficiently progress towards the attainment of objectives, some state-wide committees had been appointed and suggestions as to how local county clubs could function as a part of the state-wide program would be sent to each county president.

The secretary's office has been instructed to mail to each county president a folder in which all information could be filed.

Board of Directors Meeting

On Friday, Sept. 19, a board meeting was held in Columbia and details of the state-wide organization were discussed. The board instructed President Niedorp to explain such information to the county presidents and to inform them of forthcoming events.

County Club Meetings

One of the principal objectives for the Association during the coming year is to set up a meeting in as many counties as possible. The purpose of more county meetings is to bring before all the alumni of the state more information about the University. The county chairmen were advised that the secretary's office on the campus would cooperate individually with local units and handle mailing costs and program if the club so desired.

IN KANSAS CITY . . .

The weekly meetings of alumni in the Greater Kansas City area began on Sept. 15. Missouri alumni and Quarterback club members will meet every Monday in the Phillips Hotel and view athletic pictures. As usual these meetings attract large groups of Missouri supporters and Ed Wilkinson, President this year, expects continued support. Sparky Stalcup, Harry Ice, and Harry Smith have presented programs so far this year.

Tigers Practice for Varsity Game

Spirited Play of Sophs Renews Tiger Hopes

Supposed to roll over and play dead for grid powerhouses from Maryland and California, Coach Don Faurot's Missourians confounded the experts in early-season battles.

Tiger fandom took renewed hope in the spirited play of the sophomore-laden Mizzou outfit, which had the season's first major upset within reach against Maryland—and came back the following week to turn in a highly creditable game against California's Bears at Berkeley.

Leading the Terps, 10-6, Missouri missed a golden opportunity to dump the Eastern invaders hard, when a pass play in the final 70 seconds of the game enabled Maryland to pull the chestnuts from the fire by a 13-10 count.

Against Coach Pappy Waldorf's Bears, the Gold and Black battlers were tied up 7-7 at halftime, but Cal's strong bench and the wearying effects of a 2,000 mile hop to the West Coast combined to wear down the Tigers after the intermission. Final outcome of this second intersectional duel was 28-14, California on top, but again it was a case of Mizzou's gridders putting out much more than was expected of them.

A sharper passing attack by the midwesterners at Berkeley might well have given Waldorf's men an altogether anxious afternoon.

Thus, the 1952 Mizzou team moved into its Big Seven schedule, enjoying greater stature among its followers and foes than was evident in the pre-season reckoning.

There still is no cause for undue optimism in the Tiger camp—not in the face of talent-heavy squads at Oklahoma, Colorado and Kansas. But the feeling persisted that on any given Saturday, the troops of Don Faurot might rise up and smack down one of the touted kingpins in Big Seven circles.

Admittedly, the Tigers had a manpower problem, if they hoped to trade punches with the big boys. Theirs was the chore of making a little go a long way, preserving a thin line of talent over the rugged ten-game slate.

Faurot sounded this note of caution immediately after the California game:

“We've been fortunate to lose only one key player—end Lane Goodwin—in these early contests. Don Rutter's loss, as a result of an appendectomy, is just one of those things—we do hope to have our big tackle back by midseason—but we simply can't afford to have any more of our key players sidelined by an injury. In many cases, we can't replace them with men of comparable talent.”

Using both the Split T and Spread formations in their attack, the Tigers lacked a sustained punch in their opening games. Defensevily, they were extra-tough—but the backfield of Jim Hook and Tony Scardino, halfbacking; Jack Fox and Nick Carras, halfbacks; and Bill Rowekamp, fullback had trouble moving the ball.

This sluggishness on offense Faurot hoped would be rectified by the time Missouri opened its conference slate against Kansas State at Manhattan on Oct. 1st.

Next-in-line opponents after the Wildcats was always-popular—and always dangerous—Southern Methodist, to be taken on in Columbia.

SO THE STUDENTS THINK

WE WANT WINS THAT BADLY?

There's too much “win” in athletics these days!

Fans and faculty alike clamor for winning teams in football, basketball, baseball, track.

The “win” complex even has gone so far that a certain campus humor magazine, in its latest issue, suggested that the Missouri Tigers play an easier schedule to fatten up their record.

Is the suggestion, then, that we drop good sports in favor of winning sports?

Would the students of this or any other campus prefer a win over a weaker school to a see-saw battle such as the Tigers gave Maryland in this season’s opener, a battle which won this campus more national recognition than could have almost any win?

Do we watch football games for the love of watching good football or for the love of watching the score?

Over the years, Missouri has been turning out the kind of “dark horse” material that dreams are made of. This year Missouri has a team of such sufficient respect that thousands of persons flocked to the Tiger-California game to watch a so-called “easy” victory for Cal.

In the September issue of Look, Grantland Rice, national football expert, praised Don Faurot and Missouri for the Mizzou program of getting football material within the state. Rice suggested other schools do the same.

Said Rice: “College football must return to the idea that fair play and hard play are more important than the final score.”

We'll go along with that—all the way.

M U Basketball Opens
In Columbia Dec. 13

Coach Wilbur “Sparky” Stalcup took a long look at his basketball candidates this month as the Bengal bounce-ballers taxied down the practice runway in preparation for the 1952-53 season.

Among the missing was a familiar 210-pound husky, and try as he might, Stalcup could see no one qualified to carry the shoes of big Bill Stauffer, Mizzou's stalwart center. Twice an all-Big Seven nominee, "Stauff" capped his sparkling career last year by setting new scoring records at Missouri—and was picked on Helms' first All-American squad.

Of this group, only Wilfong was a bona fide starter last season—until shelved because of scholastic ineligibility. The Puxico sharpshooter and Reiter, 6-ft. 8½-inch pivot man, could be key figures in Mizzou's basketball ventures.

Most of the pressure will be on Reiter, Stalcup says: "Bob is the boy who has to come through for us, and I'm confident he will. We'll need his scoring punch around the post, and his defensive coverage of the opposition's big man."

Approximately 20 candidates will report to Stalcup and his assistant, Gerald Hedgepeth, for opening drills this month. Among the newcomers will be Jim Luetjen and Sonny Pile, both junior college transfers, and Gary Filbert, newly returned from service after playing freshman basketball at Mizzou in 1947.

Top-rated among the returning squadmen are: Ronnie Hughes, Huston Bell, Bob Cruts and Jack Israel.

Yankees Sign Kurtz

Kent Kurtz, University of Missouri second baseman for the past three seasons reported in June to the Beaumont, Texas club of the Class AA Texas league. He has signed a contract with the New York Yankee organization.

He was the third Tiger player to sign a professional contract after the close of last season. Pitcher Dick Atkinson joined the St. Louis Cardinals' Omaha farm club, and Outfielder Junior Wren signed with the Chicago White Sox.

Kurtz, 21 years old, received his bachelor's degree in physical education last June. He is a left-handed batter.

ENROLLMENT NEAR 7,000

Enrollment for the current semester at Columbia will total about 7,000 students, according to Dr. C. W. Mc\Lane, director of admissions.

He noted that for the second straight year the freshman class is showing an increased enrollment, indicating a definite upward trend in new students entering to offset the loss of GI students. The sophomore class also shows an increase over last year.

Student Union

This is a student generation that works harder than many that have gone before. They are not very rambunctious. Many of the alumni have trouble understanding them, but so many of them, boys and girls, have jobs with which they earn part or even all of their way through college. But for the little time they have for fun, they want something lively, some place that they can be bound for. It is she who has them, a place that they can be bound for. She smiled at us. "What would it mean?"

We went from the great hall room to one of the smaller ones where the girls in bright ruffled skirts and the boys in plaid shirts were whirling through a Virginia reel. Here of course was Louise Robertson, the program director of the Union, stopped beside us and told us that the Union has been successful. It has helped to get the Soda Fountain (which will be given a more glamorous name after the trial in Read Hall). The terrace, the naming contest (and the terrace under the stars for balmy evenings) on special occasions the ball rooms upstairs.

How many of these need electricity?

You're right. All these and many more. For electricity has become so much a part of our everyday life . . . that we take it for granted. We seldom realize how many uses we make of electric service, how often we use it, how much we get for our money. Yes, its many time and labor-saving devices make life easier and more enjoyable. And, best of all, good electric service is available to almost everyone . . . at low cost.

"The Best Possible Telephone Service at the Lowest Cost"

Twenty-five years ago, on October 20, 1927, the Bell System put into writing, for all the world to see, the basic principles for the management of the business.

The policy tells the people what they have a right to expect from the company. At the same time, it commits everyone in the Bell System to a high standard of conduct for the business. The promise of "the best possible telephone service at the lowest cost" intensifies the effort to make that promise come true.

The never-changing policy of fair treatment for those who invest in the business, those who work for it, and those who use the service, will bring still greater progress in the years to come.

Responsibility to TELEPHONE USERS

"The fact that the responsibility for a large part of the telephone service of the country rests upon the American Telephone and Telegraph Company and its Associated Companies imposes on the management an unusual obligation to the public to see to it that the service shall at all times be adequate, dependable and satisfactory to the user.

"Obviously, the only sound policy that will meet these obligations is to continue to furnish the best possible telephone service at the lowest cost consistent with financial safety."

Responsibility to TELEPHONE SHARE OWNERS

"The fact that the ownership is so widespread and diffused (there are now more than 1,100,000 share owners of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company) imposes an unusual obligation on the management to see to it that the savings of these people are secure and remain so.

"Payments to share owners, limited to reasonable regular dividends, with the right to make further investments on reasonable terms as the business requires new money from time to time, are to the interest of telephone users and employees as well as share owners."

Responsibility to TELEPHONE EMPLOYEES

Many years ago, in its annual report to share owners, the company's responsibility to its employees was expressed in these words:

"While the Bell System seeks to furnish the public the best possible service at the least cost, the policy which recognizes this obligation to the public recognizes equally its responsibilities to its employees.

"It is and has been the aim to pay salaries and wages in all respects adequate and just and to make sure that individual merit is discovered and recognized."

University he played football and was known as Peaches Graham. He refused to claim exemption from war service as a farmer and was commissioned a captain at Ft. Snelling. He was sent to France early in 1918 and was killed in July of that year at St. Die. His body was returned, and 3,000 attended his funeral at Montgomery City.

Richard Yeater Stafford, native of Windsor, Mo., was graduated from the University in 1938 and died heroically four years later in the war with Japan. As a lieutenant in the Second Marine Corps, he participated in the initial assault on Guadalcanal. He was in combat until Oct. 11, 1942, when he was fatally wounded by a Japanese sniper.

A destroyer was named in his honor, U.S.S. Stafford. The citation on the ship reads in part:

"For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity as commanding officer of a marine unit engaged in an attack mission against enemy Japanese positions on Guadalcanal."

WE WANT PICTURES

We feel bad that we have not more pictures in the class notes this month, but you have not come by to see us so that we could photograph you, and you have not sent us your pictures, and so you see how dull these pages look without them.

Go on and send us pictures, because we can't have a lively looking Alumnus without them. If you take them, tell us so on the back, so that you will be eligible to compete for our prize of one paid up membership to the Association. Anyhow, do send us pictures, and we promise faithfully to return them if you want them back.

THE DAY had promised to be fair, but now the wind was shifting to the northeast under a darkening sky and whipping the water into white-capped waves that splattered against the Cora’s hull as she lay at anchor off the Cape.

Bob Martin tossed his line over the side and said, “How does it look to you, Andy?” He’d come out for a day’s fishing on Andrew Worth’s old cabin cruiser—and was depending on his friend’s judgment as to the weather and the seaworthiness of his craft.

Andy looked at the sky and shrugged. “It may blow over. May even help us get a couple of fish, for a change.”

Bob pulled in his line and grimaced at the bare hook. “Ever get caught in a real rough storm?”

“A couple of times. If this one gets much worse we’ll go back. Got caught in a mighty bad one out here some five or six years ago. Engine went dead on the way home, and Cora landed on the reef over there past the tip of the Cape. Had to hang on all night until a cutter finally came up and pulled us off next morning.”

Andy looked at the breakers piling over the reef off in the distance. “Kind of scared me, there, for a while. Couldn’t see a light anywhere, and the waves kept pounding against old Cora so she was like to come to pieces. Then around the middle of the night it suddenly occurred to me that dying wasn’t what I was afraid of. You figure you’ve got that coming to you sooner or later anyway. What worried me most of all was what would happen to the family in case I did die. I kept thinking about all the things I’d planned on doing for them—things I could have done and should have done—that I just hadn’t gotten around to doing. Know what I mean?”

Bob Martin nodded and said, “Yes, I guess I do.” He stared thoughtfully at the white-crested waves for a minute and then said, “Exactly when did you say that happened, Andy?”

“Fall of ’46. Maybe you remember that storm. It came up out of the Gulf and...”

“Yes, and I seem to remember something else, too. Wasn’t it in the fall of ’46 that you came around to my office one day? And wasn’t that the time you said you had finally decided to complete that Planned Security program I’d worked out for you at least two years before that? And did that night on the boat have anything to do with your taking out that extra New York Life policy we’d discussed?”

Andy Worth grinned a little sheepishly and said, “To tell the truth, Bob, it had everything to do with it. I never said anything to you about it before because, well...”

Bob Martin laughed. “I know. Because you thought that maybe I’d say, ‘See? That’s just what I’ve been trying to tell you right along!’”

“Yes, something like that...”

Bob shook his head and said, “No, Andy, but I must admit that I might have been sorely tempted to say something trite about an ill wind having blown you some good!”

copies from Vol. 6, 19, or 26 and would be willing to donate them would make an important contribution.

In thumbing through the forty years of a magazine, which has been continuously printed while all other magazines on the campus came and went, one is impressed with the fact that the important things about the Alumnus were in every issue, as they are today, the class notes. And so we realize just as the editors did before us, that these classmates are the life blood of the magazine.
Being your own boss has many advantages—but to score a success you'll have to answer "yes" to some challenging questions: Can you budget your time efficiently? Can you set a goal and pursue it with diligence and persistence?

If these questions sound like "you," New England Mutual offers you a chance to be on your own—to move up the income ladder just as high and as fast as your ambition and abilities can take you.

We finance your learning period, and give you the advantage of a comprehensive training program. You'll be working with college-trained associates. You'll be helping families—and businesses—achieve financial security. And you'll be representing the company that founded mutual life insurance in America—today one of the fastest growing companies in its field (resources more than doubled during the past 10 years).

This is a real opportunity to form a satisfying association with a company that has attracted men from most of the important colleges of the country. Mail the coupon for the booklet in which 15 such men tell why they chose a life insurance career, with...
