Good Home Study Lighting Saves Students' Eyes

Have you ever tried reading for an hour at your child's study desk? Many parents who wouldn't dream of neglecting their youngster's diet or health unwittingly fail to provide adequate home study lighting.

A simple, planned study center that provides the best possible lighting for the eyes' needs will help improve grades and form good study habits.

How to Brighten Study Hours

1. Use a flat-topped desk or table with a dull light-finished top. Dark woods may be covered with pastel blotters.
2. Place desk or table against a wall, away from family activity. A tackboard fastened on the wall over the desk may provide better light reflection.
3. Study chair should be high enough to place the eye position about 14 inches above the desk top.
4. Choose the proper lamp for the seeing job. Wall pin-up lamps are popular with students of all ages, and provide even light over the entire desk. Use 100-watt bulbs and diffusing bowls. Avoid shades that are too dark or too bright. Overall room lighting should be used to avoid bright light and shadows in the study area.

So many things are happening around the campuses that I am beginning to feel sure that spring is . . . about to spring. The weather may fool you and there may be no other way to determine the actual arrival of "Hink" weather, but let me tell you that one of the most accurate barometers is a leisurely saunter in and among some of the buildings.

Everything seems to be going on at once. With the arrival of St. Pat during the past month, there seems to have come to every other department an awakening of frenzied activity.

It's just like Times Square at noon (of course I've never seen Times Square at noon but that's how Tom Keating would put it). Just to give you an idea of what's going on, here are some of the activities and likewise the plans for activities yet to come.

Engineers week, B.P.A. week, Forestry Club banquet, University Concert series, Workshop production "Madwoman of Chailot," State class B and C indoor track meet, State class A indoor track meet, FFA convention, State High School Drama Festival, State High School Speech contest, and many more.

Seeing preparation for all of these programs plus those we didn't mention is one way that I know spring is here in Columbia.

Don't forget the class reunions in June. Several letters have come in from class members who already indicate they plan to return. Classes of 1902, 1912, 1922, 1932 and 1942 as well as 1926 and 1927 are honorees this year.

Word comes from Washington D. C. Alumni informing us of another fine meeting in the Capital City. Missouri alumni held a rousing party at the Lee House, April 3. This was a C-C-C-C party. Cinema, cards, chatter, cocktails and culinary arts. Hats off again to a grand alumni group. All of you in the Washington area are missing something if you don't get in touch with this group. John L. Graves is president so contact him for full particulars. Address: U. S. Treasury, Committee on Practice, Washington, D. C.

Them was the Days

By W. C. CURTIS

Winterton C. Curtis (right) joined the faculty of the University of Missouri in 1901 as an instructor in zoology. In 1939 he became Dean of Arts and Science and in 1947 became Dean Emeritus of the faculty of Arts and Science and Professor Emeritus of Zoology. Henry M. Belden (left) joined the faculty on September 1, 1895, as an assistant professor of English, and became Professor Emeritus in 1937. This picture was taken recently as Dr. Curtis visited with Dr. Belden in the latter's home.

Ceremonies were in order last fall on the fiftieth anniversary of the establishment of our chapter, the Alpha of Missouri. Of those who received the charter in the fall of 1901, Harry Belden and I are the only ones now living in Columbia, the only other survivor being Professor Raymond Weeks. Weeks was invited to attend the dinner, which was the principal event of the celebration, but was unable to do so. He sent us a letter and one of his recent poems. Belden was unable to participate actively because of deafness. Hence, the remarks upon "The Establishment of Alpha of Missouri" fell to me. I had not spoken on any such occasion since my retirement five years ago and felt an even greater embarrassment in advance of the event than commonly the case when I was doing such things periodically. In my speech I explained my status, introduced Professor Belden, read the letter and the poem from Weeks, and spoke briefly upon the events I recalled most vividly in the academic year 1901-02 as related to Phi Beta Kappa. The introduction of Belden and the readings from Weeks gave the necessary scholastic introduction and enabled me to make my remarks in lighter vein with return to a serious touch in closing. When I sat down I had the feeling that the speech had gone over better than anything of the sort I could remember since my remarks on the Scopes Trial at the Zoologists' Dinner in Kansas City, December 1925.

However, in thinking of my speech the next day I realized that I had omitted an intended reference to Leslie Cowan and also one of my major topics, the Mark Twain Dinner. Moreover, I was not sure that I had made clear my other two major points. The stories under these two points were there, but what did they illustrate? I think some in the audience noticed these deficiencies, although in such speaking one "depends on his memory for the stories and his imagination for the facts," as the congressman put it, and the audience is taken by the humor rather than the argument. It did seem to go over and yet I was consumed, as so many times in the past, with the desire to make that speech again and as I intended when I "rose to speak."

As I have the time now-a-days to indulge such fancies, I am setting down for the record this speech as it should have been made at the Semi-Centennial Dinner of Phi Beta Kappa, Alpha of Missouri, December 4, 1951, at the Tiger Hotel in Columbia, Missouri:

"Mistress President,* distinguished guests, members of the Alpha of Missouri. I should explain at the outset my status with reference to the establishment of our chapter fifty years ago this fall. I began my service at the University, a green Ph.D. from the John Hopkins University, in September, 1901; so I was not one of those who petitioned for the charter during the preceeding academic year. I participated in the receipt of the charter and in the organization of the chapter because I was a member of Phi Beta Kappa from Williams College and because it was expected that members of the society on appointment at the University would be ipso facto members of this chapter. The legal point involved gave rise to a controversy to which I shall presently refer.

Fifty years ago—it seems like yesterday, and yet it was a long time ago. Why that was before Leslie Cowan came to the University of Missouri, and I have it on the authority of our distinguished alumnus George Wilson that Mr. Cowan was the first white child born west of the Mississippi River. And, as you all know, ten presidents of this university have served under him.

A first order of business in the chapter organization was the selection of graduates who should be initiated as alumni members. I recall a protracted series of evening meetings, in what is now the Board Room in Jesse Hall, during which the discussion of these selectees became at times controversial. Faculties were then much the same as now. As David Harum has it, "There's as much human nature in some people as there is in others." Professor Weeks, who was always a warm friend of his students, proposed more individuals than some of us thought proper from a single academic field. After one of these meetings he remarked that my being there gave Lefevre two votes. No one who did not know George Lefevre and understand his high sense of honor can appreciate his indignation when this remark was reported to him. But we had our sense of humor, and for many years I was referred to as "Lefevre's vote" by the inner circle of my acquaintances. There are a few still living who call me that on occasion.

My other nickname of those happy days was "Instructor Curtis." The occasion for this was a telephone conversation I had with an older member of the faculty whom some of us thought rather pompous and not particularly competent. He had difficulty in getting my name and, perhaps in the pride of a recently acquired Ph.D. which my colleague did not possess, I repeated over the phone "This is Doctor Curtis." (It was long before the plague of three Curtises had descended upon our faculty) The reply came back, "Oh! yes, yes, Instructor Curtis." Mrs. Frank Thilly still calls me by this title.

*Marjorie Carpenter of Stephens College presided in admirable fashion as Vice-President of the chapter and in the absence of the President, George M. Ewing. As one of the students who came often to our home in her undergraduate days, she called upon Mrs. Curtis to rise and spoke with appreciation of what our Sunday night gatherings had meant to her generation of students.

The underlying struggle on the faculty in those days was between Harvard and Hopkins. Professor Weeks, who was a loyal Harvard man, was much concerned. He went so far as to write a member of the Harvard faculty that matters here were serious—the Hopkins men were closely organized and in fact constituted a "Yellow Peril." It happened that this Harvard professor had a sense of humor and showed Weeks' letter to Jonas Viles, who was then considering an appointment here. Jonas came to us the next fall (1902), and was received by our group with open arms as a kindred spirit, for the "Yellow Peril" included more individuals from other institutions than Hopkins men. We met often at Thilly's of an evening—as one of the opposite faction remarked, "If you are looking for Thilly's on Saturday night, go to the columns and follow the noise."

As a follow-up of the "Yellow Peril" tradition, we later instituted a group known as the "Kangaroos." The unique feature of this organization was that those who voted to elect were not themselves members and those elected never knew they were members.

The second highlight of that glorious year, as I remember it, was the Commencement in June, 1902, when Mark Twain received an honorary degree from the University and was our guest at the Phi Beta Kappa Dinner. There was a string of big wigs in attendance and Mark ribbed us all in his inimitable manner when it came his turn to speak. With Thilly as toastmaster it was a grand event. I forget whether the dinner was open to the ladies or only the after-dinner speeches. I remember that there was a prolonged controversy over their attendance despite the fact that many of our elected alumni members were women, Lefevre maintaining that such an event must be a men's dinner because you "couldn't have such an official dinner with women in attendance."

But most of all I remember—and the establishment of the Alpha of Missouri was a part of it—the stimulating atmosphere I found at the University of Missouri in that glorious year of 1901-02 and the dozen or fifteen years that followed. The foundation for this had been laid in the decade of the nineties under the leadership of President Jesse. I have often said in recent years that if this university ever has as good a faculty for any day and generation as we had then it can be more than satisfied. I found here in September 1901, such men as Belden, Gerould, Lefevre, Loeb, Marbut, Seares, Thilly, and Weeks. Soon there came to us Duggar (discoverer in his old age of aureomycin to crown a distinguished career), Hill, Hedrick, Viles, Westermann and others of like quality, and later such men as Davenport, Hudson, Lovejoy, and Shepard. If you doubt what those men were then and later, note the records they made here and elsewhere for unfortunately most of them left us for larger salaries and greater opportunities in other institutions. What a university we could have had if they had remained on the campus.

Raymond Weeks joined the faculty of the University of Missouri in 1895 as Professor of Romance languages, and remained here until 1908. He joined the faculty of Columbia University in 1909, and is now Professor Emeritus of Romance languages, living in Manakin, Virginia. This picture is from an oil painting by Drew.

Twenty five years, say 1890 to 1915, is a brief span in the history of a university. As a fellow scientist, I must agree with our speaker of this afternoon that we "ain't seen nuthin' yet."* Nevertheless "them was the days." The men of those days, the living and the dead, charge us—carry on.

Yes, it was a long time ago, but "them was the days." We were all young together, we believed in the University of Missouri and of course we believed in ourselves. And the world seemed all at our feet.

So, "There ye arre," as Mr. Dooley

*President Arthur H. Compton, who gave the dinner address, had spoken at the Arts and Science Assembly in the afternoon on the subject "Science and the Destiny of Man." To introduce this discussion he referred to an experience in Washington, D. C. His taxicab driver was doing the honors by pointing out the landmarks, to which Compton acquiesced although he was quite familiar with Washington. On one of the buildings was the quotation "The present is but the prologue." "Do you know what that means?" asked the driver. "It means 'you ain't seen nuthin' yet.'" would say. This is the speech as I intended to make it the evening of December 4, 1951. But the written word is not the spoken one and reading it as here written with what I intended to say in full setting I have the feeling that perhaps this would not have pleased the gathering as much as did the spoken word—off the cuff with the main points not so clear but the stories intact.

The Alpha of Missouri chapter of Phi Beta Kappa has completed distribution of the directory which was compiled as a part of the activities of the Fiftieth Anniversary program last December.

The directory contains 1184 names of members elected to Phi Beta Kappa membership by the Alpha of Missouri chapter. Of these, 941 were elected as members in course while students at the University of Missouri. 191 were elected as alumnus and graduate members. The number of honorary members is 52.

Of the 1184 members named, 195 are known to be deceased.

The directory includes all members elected since the time of the establishment of the chapter in 1901.

The present address of a substantial number of members is unknown. Please report information concerning these members to the Alumni Lists Office, University of Missouri, for completion of records.

SCHOLARSHIP AWARDS TO KANSAS CITY AREA

The University of Missouri will grant nine scholarships, six of them in its Columbia divisions and three in the School of Mines and Metallurgy at Rolla, to Missouri high school seniors of the greater Kansas City area who have winning entries in the Kansas City Science Fair to be held April 19 to 25.

Similar scholarships are also being awarded in the St. Louis area for the Greater St. Louis Science Fair.

CRISLER WRITES MISSOURI ARTICLE

Dr. Robert M. Crisler, former Columbian, was co-author of an article, published in the January issue of the Journal of Geography. Entitled "Recreation Regions in Missouri," it classifies the recreation areas of Missouri into eight regions and gives a short description of each. He wrote the article while serving as assistant professor of geography at Washington University.

Dr. Crisler, who received his A.B. degree at the University of Missouri in 1941 and his A.M. and Ph.D. degrees at Northwestern in 1947 and 1949, is now serving as a first lieutenant in the Central Intelligence Agency in Washington, D. C.

The Law School Foundation Dinner

One of the finest tributes to good scholarship is the annual dinner given by the Trustees of the Law School Foundation in honor of the student editors of the Missouri Law Review. This is the opening event of the annual Law School Day reunion program which brings from five to six hundred members of the legal profession to Columbia each year.

The students honored are selected after their first year in the Law School on the basis of their scholastic standing. Their contribution to the Missouri Law Review consists in preparing publishable notes on recent cases and comments on problems in the law. Their work represents productive scholarship at its best and is made available to the profession. In each issue of the Review of over one hundred pages, the student work will consist of approximately half of the printed material. Each student prepares three notes a year and receives one hour of credit. Because this work indicates to the profession the ranking of the student in his law studies and gives a clear indication of the maturity of his mind and of his ability of expression, it is the best recommendation which a student can carry with him when seeking employment with law firms and the legal departments of corporations.

The list of dinner guests each year, in addition to the students who are honored and the Trustees of the Foundation, include members of the Board of Curators, members of the Board of Law Examiners, members of the bench and bar who are on the Law School Day Program, and their wives, and the first year Law students. A total of 150 to 200 persons usually attend. Since the war approximately 700 first year students have been the guests of the Foundation.

These scholarship dinners were begun in 1935 by the late Earl F. Nelson, A.B. '04, LL.B. '05, and after his death in 1945, Mrs. Nelson, A.B. and B.S. '05 has continued to support these dinners through generous contributions for this purpose to the Foundation.

The officers and trustees of the Foundation are: Louis V. Stigall '10, President, St. Joseph; Lue Lozier, '18, Vice-President, Jefferson City; Latney M. Barnes, '35, Vice President, Mexico; S. P. Dalton, '18, Secretary, Jefferson City; R. B. Price, '02, Treasurer, Columbia; R. B. Caldwell, '07, Kansas City; Richard J. Chamier, '33, Moberly; Lynn M. Ewing, '27, Nevada; Roy W. Harper, '29, St. Louis; Norwin D. Houser, '31, St. Louis; Laurence M. Hyde, '16, Jefferson City; Paul G. Koontz, '18, Kansas City; Samuel H. Liberman, '18 St. Louis; Roland F. O'Bryen, '27, St. Louis; James A. Potter, '02, Jefferson City; Kenneth Teasdale, '18, St. Louis, and Ray E. Watson, '16, Joplin.

Mrs. Earl F. Nelson, A.B., B.S., '05, generous contributor to the Law School Foundation dinner, comes from a Chillicothe family which has been well represented at the University. Her father, Thomas Dick Jones, attended the University in 1872-73; two sisters graduated from the University; Esther Jones Gibbs, B.S. in Agr. '21, and Julia Jones Elkin, A.B. '23; also two brothers attended the University: Charles Mervin Jones, 1911-12, and Thomas Edgar Jones, 1912-13. Her husband, the late Earl F. Nelson, A.B. '04, LL.B. '05, was a member of the Board of Curators of the University 1937-1943 and one of the founders of the Law School Foundation.

BUSINESS WEEK RULES CAMPUS

This year it was brown derbys—300 of them—which predominated the University of Missouri campus from March 28, as the Annual Business Week program was held.

The brown derbys were in evidence for several days before classes in the School of Business and Public Administration were dismissed at noon on Thursday, and The Bosses Bowl was held in Jesse Auditorium featuring the introduction of the Ideal Boss and Ideal Secretary, and numerous skits were given.

On Friday William S. Low, president of the A. P. Green Fire Brick Company, Mexico, Missouri, and Bill Veeck, president of the St. Louis Browns, addressed the main assembly of Business Week. Other events of the second day were a luncheon at Harris Cafe; panel discussions from 2 to 5 P.M.; a coffee hour in Read Hall; and the Bosses' Ball from 9 P.M. to midnight in Rothwell Gymnasium.

Miss Lovene Kraus and Jim Joyce, both seniors in the Business and Public Administration School, were selected ideal secretary and boss at the Bosses' Ball. Miss Kraus, Chesterfield, and Mr. Joyce, St. Louis, represented Alpha Kappa Psi, professional business fraternity.

Business Week faculty advisers are: S. G. Wennberg, chairman; W. N. Casella, R. C. Manhart, and P. A. Kohler.

FRESHMAN-PRINCIPAL CONFERENCE HELD

The Fourth Annual Freshman-Principal Conference was held at the University on March 12-14 with twelve officials of the Missouri High Schools in attendance as visiting consultants. The theme of the conference was the question, "How can the University better serve Missouri high school graduates?" Meetings were held with administrative officers of the University and with freshman students. Topics of consideration regarding the University are the administration, special services, classroom instruction, dormitories, cafeterias, the academic advisement program, and the various courses of study. A questionnaire study of the results of the meetings is being prepared as a basis for better understanding as the student makes the transition from high school to the University.

The high school principals meet in conferences with individual students from their schools, and this year more classroom visiting was done than in former meetings. The principals attending the Conference last month were Paul E. Brattstrom of Owensville High School; Bransford R. Collier, Eldon; Willis J. Ezard, Stoutland; Roy B. Gerhardt, Lexington; Ed Geyer, Trenton; John Harp, Carthage; Sam Lawson, Montgomery City; George W. McConnell, Aurora; Eugene Lamm, M.M.A. at Mexico; Herbert B. Miles, Fulton, Glen Simpson, Brookfield, and Joe R. Verby, Webster Groves, all of which are Missouri schools.

The annual Stephens Oratorical Contest at the University of Missouri was held on March 18 in the South Lounge of Read Hall. The Stephens Medal, established in 1868 by James L. Stephens of Columbia, will be awarded the winner of the contest at the annual June Commencement exercises. Barbara Lee Brown, of West Hartford, Connecticut, was the winner of this year's award.

"THE SCHOOLMASTER OF THE PEOPLE"

By MINERVA SPALDING '52

... An apt summation of the obligations of the journalistic professions is the inscription on the arch that connects the two buildings of the School of Journalism of the University of Missouri.

Every afternoon at 3:15 when The Columbia Missourian presses roll and the paper "hits the street," Columbians see the proof of Walter Williams' belief that Journalism can and should be learned by experience.

The Columbia Missourian is published by the Missouri University Journalism students, under direct faculty supervision, for the city of Columbia and for Boone County. In addition they prepare 13 sponsored radio news broadcasts a day, a three-edition daily radio facsimile newspaper, "Great Pictures of the Year," a monthly magazine for the 2000 rural correspondents, syndicated book reviews to 200 newspapers, a monthly digest of weekly newspaper editorials, and engage in many other publishing activities.

Established in 1908 by a special appropriation of the State Legislature, the School was the first regularly organized School of Journalism in the world. Its first dean was Walter Williams, who had been a member of the University Board of Curators and who became President of the University in 1930. On his retirement from the Deanship, he was succeeded by Frank Lee Martin, a professor in the school since 1909. Dean Martin died in 1941 and Dr. Frank Luther Mott became dean in 1942. He was made Dean Emeritus in 1951 and continues on the faculty as Professor of

from the press . . .

Journalism. Dr Earl Franklin English was appointed to the Deanship in 1951.

The Columbia Missourian was founded with the School in 1908 and in 1914 became a charter member of the Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Now the School has the largest journalism training program in the country. It includes two buildings, a 9,000-volume library, 25 faculty members, a famed Journalism Week, 25 graduate assistants, 275 upperclass students, 96 graduate students, and 70 courses in seven accredited sequences. The present enrollment of graduate students makes it the largest journalism graduate school in the world.

A recent organization of the School is the Junior Production Board. Each sequence elects two representatives to a board which meets with the faculty production staff each Friday to plan the Missourian policies and to coordinate the many activities in connection with publishing the paper. One member of the junior board sits in on the daily Missourian faculty meetings. Thus the students are given experience in the administrative procedures which will be a part of their future work.

The seven accredited sequences are news-editorial, advertising and production, special writing, weekly and small daily, photo-journalism, agricultural journalism and radio-journalism. Newspaper management has recently been added to the School's offerings under the direction of Frank W. Rucker, a graduate of the school and former manager of the Independence (Mo.) Examiner.

NEWSPAPER MANAGEMENT

circulation of The Columbia Missourian is now set up in an office separate from the regular business office of The Missourian. There students may observe and have practical work in all phases of circulation-building. This change became effective on April 1, 1952. Professor Rucker teaches the class in newspaper circulation.

The Missourian has a staff of twenty newsboys who deliver the papers locally.

RADIO-JOURNALISM

The School has extended its instruction to many fields of journalism. One of its cooperative projects is with KFRU, a commercial radio station controlled by The Columbia Tribune. A fully-staffed news department is provided by the students in return for use of the station's facilities as a laboratory.

This working arrangement, combined with sound classroom training is credited with sending many graduates into successful radio careers. When the radio sequence first started in the mid-thirties the news was supplied to KFRU by the School, but an expansion and reorganization of the Journalism School's radio sequence took place in 1947. Since that time, 114 graduates have been placed in radio and television, some of them holding responsible executive positions.

In 1947, Professor Edward C. Lambert and Mahlon Aldridge, manager of KFRU, worked out a plan whereby Professor Lambert would act as news director and the station newscasts would be turned over to the Journalism School, the newsmen being auditioned by the station's program director.

Now the KFRU staff cooperates with The Columbia Daily Tribune rather than with The Missourian. All facilities of the Tribune are at the disposal of the students news staff.

PROGRESS IN EQUIPMENT

The very latest equipment adds to greater interest and efficiency in the practical training of producing The Missourian. One of the most recent additions is the United Press Telephoto Service. This enables The Missourian to receive up-to-the-minute news pictures directly by wire and to send from Columbia, pictures of news interest to the outside world. The wire is on a 24-hour daily basis and as many as 55 pictures are received each day. Recently The Missourian published pictures of the funeral of King George on the day he was buried.

Another important addition is the Fairchild Engraver, which produces plastic plates of 85-line screen at great speed and minimum expense, making possible the use of more local pictures.

PHOTO-JOURNALISM

A new book, "Picture Editing," by Stanley E. Kalish, of the Wisconsin State Department, and Professor Clifton C. Edom, of the University of Missouri School of Journalism, is evidence that Professor Edom is equipped with practical information and ability to train students in the Photo-Journalism sequence.

The late Herbert Warren Smith, B.J. '11, installed and operated the School's first photo-engraving plant in 1914. At that time there were no high-speed cameras, no flash bulbs, no pictures by wire or radio. As rapidly as technological developments would permit, however, the engraving department has kept pace with the ever-expanding Journalism School and today is one of four whose photo-sequence is accredited by the American Council on Education for Journalism.

SPECIAL WRITING

The special writing sequence trains students to write and sell articles to newspapers, magazines, and syndicates. There are courses in bookreviewing and special courses in writing for industrial and business periodicals. Since 1949, when J. Linwood Cutler came to the University, students in the special writing sequence have earned from $7,000 to $8,000 from free lance writing.

ADVERTISING

Like all newspapers, The Missourian is produced by the revenue from circulation and advertising. Advertisements are sold for the paper by students in the advertising sequence. Regular downtown retail store accounts are planned and solicited. Classified and national advertising, public relations and newspaper promotion are given under the supervision of faculty members, in the School of Journalism where the essential basic emphasis for all students and all sequences is placed on the common denominator of Writing for Print.

NEWS-WRITING

In a national magazine article a few years ago, Columbia was called the city with no secrets. Columbia, Missouri, is probably the best-covered city in the world. Beginning newswriting students, some 120 of them, are assigned four or five block sections of the city as news beats. The student reporter rings bells, talks to householders, hunts for any item which will make a story.

Dean English says, "We're trying to get our beginning students to develop the ability of meeting people and cultivating news sources of a non-routine nature."

"This project got added incentive recently," Dean English continues, "when a fellow told me, 'You don't have reporters around here like you used to. There use to be a nice fellow come out here to see me every couple of weeks on his own and ask me if I had any news. I used to give him little items and he'd make news out of them. He gave me his card. It's been 20 years, I guess but I'm still carrying it. . .'"

Says Dean English, "He pulled out the card and handed it to me. The name on it was . . . Hal Boyle."

Missouri Honor Award Medals have been presented each year since 1930 to journalists and publications throughout the world who are honored by the University of Missouri through the School of Journalism.

JOURNALISM WEEK MAY 4-10, 1952

The forty-third Annual Journalism Week will be held this year with addresses by distinguished men and women of the state and nation. Honor Awards for Distinguished Service in Journalism will be given. Climaxing the Week's activities will be the Journalism Banquet on Friday, May 9.

Special alumni interest this year will be placed on activities for the classes of 1912, 1922, 1932 and 1942. Certain members of the classes will endeavor to contact other classmates, and recognition of the groups is being planned as a part of the program. H. H. Kinyon, '12, is general chairman in charge of the arrangements.

Alumni of the School numbered 6563 in June, 1951.

DOROTHY KAUCHER WRITES OF SKY WAYS

"Squire" Kaucher, pointing out the stars to a wide-eyed granddaughter several years ago, said, "You see up there, on your left, is the Milky Way." And, with memories of the Pony Express of our old St. "Jo," Missouri, he told her some day she would fly to an ocean, and beyond. (In his lifetime he never saw an airplane).

"The trail led west" for the family of Kauchers, from the time of great-great-grandfather Richard Rue, who fought under George Rogers Clark at Kaskaskia and at Vincennes in 1779, down to the granddaughter, Dorothy Kaucher, whose latest book, On Your Left, The Milky Way, has been released by The Christopher Publishing House in Boston.

The book is a vivid portrayal of the writer's experiences and stories. She continues the American pioneering theme, recreating ancestors like Richard Rue, a great-grandmother who rode by wagon from Pennsylvania to the Ohio River, grandparents who faced westward from the Ohio to Missouri before the Civil War and her own childhood home where she was born in the hill country of St. Joseph overlooking the Missouri River and the Kansas plains where the Pony Express riders once dashed with mail for the Pacific Coast.

DOROTHY KAUCHER

Miss Kaucher takes to the sky in the 1920's, and continues the story of her experiences through more than thirty years of sky travel, where today she hears a familiar: "On your right, ladies and gentlemen, the world, and on your left, the Milky Way." She is fulfilling the prophecy of her grandfather, William Kaucher, and is not flying just for herself, but for those forebears who followed pioneering trails.

Dr. Kaucher received A.B. and A.M. degrees in English, and a Bachelor of Journalism at the University of Missouri. She received a Ph.D. in English and Speech at Cornell University and has also studied at Stanford, Yale, and at the University of Grenoble, France. She has taught at the University of Missouri, Wells College and the University of California. At present she is a professor of Speech at State College, San Jose, California.

(Dr. Kaucher's mother, who made her home in California and to whom "On Your Left, The Milky Way" was dedicated, passed away on March 3, 1952, before the book was off the press.)

JOHN D. SHELLEY

The Des Moines, Iowa, 50,000-watt station WHO was awarded one of the broadcasting industry's most coveted prizes — the 1951 Distinguished Achievement Award for Radio News, sponsored by the National Association of Radio News Directors. The presentation was made on November 17 at the NARND's Annual Convention in Chicago.

The WHO News Bureau has an impressive physical plant: seven leased-wire machines; a portable battery operated tape recorder; a telephone recorder; three short-wave monitors for state and city police as well as fire department broadcasts; a number of subscription services; and a library which includes several specialized news encyclopedias.

The WHO News Bureau has a staff of reporters, rewriters and broadcasters, all of whom are heard on the air, and of which the University of Missouri and the School of Journalism may be proud. The bureau is headed by Jack Shelley, B.J. '35, recipient of the School of Journalism Honor Award in 1948 and former president of the National Association of Radio News Directors. Of the five-man staff of the daytime broadcasts, four, including Mr. Shelley, are graduates of the University of Missouri. They are Leonard J. Howe, '38, Gene Godt, '40, and Robert E. Ball, '49.

Mr. Shelley is a native of Boone, Iowa. Mr. and Mrs. Shelley and sons, John and Stephen, live at 3400 Franklin Avenue in Des Moines.

Len Howe comes from Havre, Montana, and Mrs. Howe is a graduate of Drake University. Their children are Sydney Ruth and Tracey Jean. The Howe home address is 4036 Ovid, Des Moines.

WHO is Who

"... we are happy to announce that radio station WHO, Des Moines, Iowa, was selected as the outstanding radio news operation in the United States for 1951. . . . Special recognition should be given to News Director Jack Shelley and his very fine and veteran news staff."

Gene Godt is a native of Fort Smith, Arkansas, as is Mrs. Godt. They have two sons, Robert, eight years, and John, eight months, and daughter, Nancy, four years old. Their home address in Des Moines is 207 38-Street Place.

Bob Ball is a native Missourian — of Richards in Vernon County. Mrs. Ball is the former Mary Lee Pierce, who received her B.S. degree in Education from the University of Missouri in 1949.

The personnel of the entire WHO News Bureau includes nine men and a secretary. These ten people represent a total of 85 years' experience with the station, and justify the above statement of the chairman of the NARND judges' committee at the presentation.

St. Pat Reigns Again

of Chicago, who was noted for achievement in electrical engineering even before he became chairman of the executive committee of the Inland Steel Company; and to the National Bureau of Standards of the U. S. Department of Commerce in Washington. The award to the Bureau of Standards was accepted by Dr. Allen V. Astin, Acting Director of the Bureau.

St. Pat's Week at the College of Engineering began this year on Sunday, March 16, when students of the College attended Burrall Class in the Stephens College Auditorium. Activities increased throughout the week, with the Hamburg Show, a barbeque at Rollins Springs, a beard-growing contest, a campus stunt, and laboratory exhibits. On Friday afternoon St. Pat arrived, accompanied in the parade by eight floats, two bands, two ROTC marching units, several "hot rods" for guards, and a disagreeable bit of weather.

Honorary Knights of St. Patrick, summa cum laude, were named following the parade on Friday. They were: Professor G. V. Lago, assistant professor of electrical engineering; Dr. Lloyd B. Thomas, professor of chemistry; and C. G. Roush, head of the Kansas City division of Westinghouse. Two Ladies of St. Patrick named were Mrs. James H. Barnes, whose husband is a Knight, and Mrs. Neal McCoy, receptionist in the engineering dean's office.

Two alumni, James L. Kidd and F. C. Huntsman, were dubbed Knights of St. Pat. Mr. Kidd, an electrical engineer of 1906, is an income tax consultant in St. Louis. He was born in Lexington, Kentucky, and was married to Joanna Lucille Kidd, a graduate of Central College in Lexington. Their son, James L. Kidd, lives in Fulton, and a daughter, Kathleen Kidd Wilson, in University City, Missouri. Mr. and Mrs. Kidd live at 8218 Buchanan in St. Louis.

Frank C. Huntsman, B.S. in C.E., '05, is office engineer for the Wabash Railroad Company in St. Louis. Born in Macon County, Missouri, he was a member of Tau Beta Pi at the University. Mr. Huntsman lives at 7421 Bruno Ave. in St. Louis.

Three noted American engineers and a governmental agency famous throughout the world for its excellence were presented with Missouri Honor Awards for Distinguished Service in Engineering at a special convocation on Saturday morning.

Bronze medals of recognition for outstanding achievement were awarded to Dr. Charles A. Thomas, president of the Monsanto Chemical Company of St. Louis; General Leif J. Sverdrup, who won fame as an engineer-soldier in the recent war and who heads his own firm of consulting engineers in St. Louis; Dr. Wilfred Sykes

FRANK C. HUNTSMAN, '05 was one of the founders of St. Patrick's Day rituals at the University.

"CAPTAIN" KIDD, who calls himself a collector of "infernal" revenue in St. Louis, accepts a cup of "green" tea from Mrs. W. S. Williams. The late W. S. Williams was a professor of civil engineering at the University.

Dr. Frank Luther Mott, Dean Emeritus of the Missouri School of Journalism, delivered the convocation address.

At 3:00 P.M. Saturday the annual Green Tea was held in the Engineering Library, and at 6:30 the annual St. Pat's Banquet. Mr. C. G. Roush, dubbed an honorary Knight of St. Patrick summa cum laude earlier in the Week, was the banquet speaker.

St. Pat's Queen of Love and Beauty was crowned at the St. Pat's Ball on Saturday evening in Rothwell Gymnasium. Miss Patricia Murphy, daughter of Professor and Mrs. Lindon J. Murphy of Columbia, was crowned Queen. Her attendants were Betty Ruth Brown of Fairfield, Ill.; Charlotte Shields of Kennett, Mo.; Jane Smith of Licking, Mo., and Janet Beiderlinden of Fort McPherson, Ga.

ROBERT B. DIEMER HEADS WATER DISTRICT

When Bob Diemer came to enter the University of Missouri in 1907 from a small country school near Palmyra, Missouri, it was with difficulty that he met the requirements of the School of Engineering. By December 1, depressed about his grades and his progress in mechanical drawing, he went to Dean Spalding and explained his difficulties. The dean, a very friendly and interested person, encouraged young Diemer to do the best he could, saying, "Don't give up engineering, even though you may be a poor draftsman—look at my work, I got by."

Dean Spalding was not one of the world's best printers, and young Bob, after a survey of the writing, went back to work, and in 1911 received a degree in civil engineering from the University. He was a member of Tau Beta Pi and was an "M" man in baseball while at the University. Since that time he has had a very extensive engineering career, and has always been grateful for the bit of advice that meant so much to him.

From 1911 to 1926 he was with the United States Reclamation Service, working on irrigation systems on the North Platte and Riverton projects in Nebraska and Wyoming.

For the next three years Mr. Diemer worked with the J. G. White Engineering Corporation, agents for the National Irrigation Commission in Mexico.

In 1929 he was employed by the Metropolitan Water District of Southern California. From his start with preliminary surveys and estimates Mr. Diemer became a District Engineer, then Distribution Engineer, and in 1941 Chief Operation and Maintenance Engineer. In 1950 he became Assistant General Manager and Chief Engineer of the Water District.

When Mr. Julian Hinds, General Manager and Chief Engineer of the District, retired on December 31, 1951, Robert B. Diemer was the unanimous choice of the Board of Directors for that position.

The Metropolitan Water District of Southern California is the most widely distributed, and among the largest, of the domestic water supply systems in the world. There are now 44 incorporated cities and a large number of unincorporated communities and areas within the Metropolitan Water District. The total population of the District is almost 4,000,000.

Mr. and Mrs. Diemer live in Pasadena at 2227 Lambert Drive. They have two daughters and one son.

MEMORIAL GIFT HONORS DR. CALVERT

A set of books on organic chemistry will be placed in the Library of the University of Missouri as a memorial to the late Dr. Sidney Calvert, professor of chemistry at the University for many years before his retirement and recent death.

The books are soon to be published in England, and will be purchased with a memorial fund contributed by faculty associates of the late Dr. Calvert's son, John F. Calvert, at the Technological Institute of Northwestern University.

The books will be placed in the library of the Old Chemistry Building on the University campus. They will be suitably inscribed as a memorial.

BIRMINGHAM FACULTY HAS M. U. "QUARTET"

The Phillips High School of Birmingham, Alabama, has four University of Missouri representatives among their staff members. Miss Belle B. Andrews received her A.B. and B.S. in Education from the University in 1914. Miss Florence Feaster received her A.B. degree here in 1918. In 1919 Miss Mayme Y. Hawkins received a B.S. degree in Education and an A.M. in 1926. Completing the quartet is Miss Isla H. Parrett, B.S. in Ed., '23, who lives at 2242 Arlington Avenue, Birmingham 5, Ala.

DR. W. W. CHARTERS, FORMER DEAN, DIES

Dr. W. W. Charters, former dean of education at the University of Missouri, died on March 8 at the home of his daughter in Livingston, Alabama. Dr. Charters was director of research at Stephens College from 1920 until his retirement in 1948.

Dr. Charters joined the faculty of the University of Missouri in 1904 and served as professor of education for three years. In 1910 he returned to become Dean of Education, where he remained until 1917.

Judy Russey was elected president of next year's Y.W.C.A. She will replace Joslyn Sparling.

Jeanne Carpenter, 1952 Showme Queen, was elected last week by campus voters from a group of five contestants. The Queen was presented a number of gifts, including a trip to St. Louis and a guest appearance on television.

Ruf Nex, agriculture honorary, initiated 17 men March 29th.

IN LOS ANGELES . . .

The University of Missouri Alumni Association of Southern California met at the Shangri La Chinese Restaurant on March 14 for a dinner meeting and to elect officers for 1952. Outgoing president Porter Magruder, '11, presided and plans were made for the next meeting on April 19. This will be a canasta and bridge party at the home of Dr. Alta Hall, A.B., '12, A.M. '13, at 2883 Orchard Street in Los Angeles.

Officers chosen for the organization were: Miss Alma Kinkade, '23, president; Mr. Dean Kirk, '16, vice-president, and Mrs. Lillian Landis, '22, secretary-treasurer. All graduates and former students of the University of Missouri in the Los Angeles area are invited to attend the meetings. Miss Kinkade, whose address is 431 South Kingsley Drive, Los Angeles 5, would be glad to receive names and addresses of Missouri alumni.

IN KANSAS CITY . . .

Officers and members of the Board of Directors of the Kansas City Alumni Association held their annual dinner on March 1, honoring President and Mrs. Frederick A. Middlebush of the University. Members of the University administrative staff who accompanied President and Mrs. Middlebush were Vice-president Leslie Cowan and Dean and Mrs. Earl F. English. Mr. and Mrs. Don Faurot and Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Simpson also attended the meeting. Approximately fifty-three persons were present at this annual event, which is held on a date corresponding to the Big Seven Indoor Track Meet.

IN ST. LOUIS . . .

Dean Huber O. Croft of the College of Engineering of the University of Missouri and Professor C. M. Wallis, chairman of the department of electrical engineering, attended a dinner meeting of the St. Louis Engineering Alumni at the Congress Hotel in St. Louis on March 20. Dean Croft addressed the alumni group on "The Education of An Engineer," and Professor Wallis gave a short, informal talk.

IN COLUMBIA, MO. . . .

The 28th Annual Meeting of The Engineering Alumni Association was held Saturday, March 22, 1952 at the Daniel Boone Hotel. Mr. Stanley Stokes '12, was the after-luncheon speaker. Mr. Stokes, who is Vice-president of Union Electric of St. Louis, discussed problems of supply of engineers versus demand for engineers, matters of educational policy and professional recognition. Dean Huber O. Croft presented a brief discussion of the Engineering Foundation which sponsors the Missouri Honor Awards for Distinguished Service in Engineering.

Officers elected for the next year are: President, Arnot M. Finley, '16, St. Louis; First Vice-president, Ira C. Hicks, '31, St. Louis; Second Vice-president, S. H. Pollock, '28, Kansas City; Representative, to General Alumni Association, L. W. Helmreich, '11, Jefferson City; Secretary-Treasury, G. K. Gillan, '42, '49, Columbia. Other members of the Board of Directors elected at this meeting are: E. E. Ebbe, '38, Trenton; H. E. Gove, '29, St. Louis; H. A. Satterlee, '37, Joplin; C. P. Carson, '39, Springfield, and M. S. Gwinn '21, Sikeston.

NAYLOR IS DIRECTOR OF ST. LOUIS BANK

John C. Naylor, executive vice-president and secretary-treasurer of Pet Milk Company, was elected a member of the board of directors of First National Bank in St. Louis on March 11.

Naylor is vice-president and a director of the General Milk Co., Los Angeles, Calif.; and a director of the Sego Milk Products Co., Salt Lake City, Utah, and of the Pet Dairy Products Co., Johnson City, Tenn. He is former president of the Controllers Institute of America and a trustee of the Nutrition Foundation, New York, N. Y.

A native of Centralia, Mo., Naylor graduated from the University of Missouri in 1916, and received his bachelor of science in commerce from St. Louis University. He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, the Missouri Athletic Club, past president and director of Algonquin Golf Club and a member of the Rotary.

Naylor lives at 340 South Elm, Webster Groves, Mo., and is a director of the Webster Groves Chapter of the American Red Cross, a past director of the Webster Groves YMCA, and a director of the St. Louis County Chamber of Commerce.

FORESTRY CLUB HOLDS FIRST BANQUET

The First Annual Forestry Club Banquet held on March 25 was attended by 86 members of the Club, Forestry Alumni and guests. Arrangements for the banquet were made by a committee consisting of Richard Taylor, Chairman, of St. Louis, Paul Beck of Elvins, Bill Carnell of Pineville, and David Click of South Fork. Ronald Balham, Assistant Biologist, Wildlife Branch, Department of Internal Affairs of New Zealand gave an illustrated talk on the conservation problems in New Zealand.

Four achievement awards were presented by Dr. R. H. Westveld. The Senior award went to A. Claude Ferguson of Willow Springs, the Junior award to Edward Oechsle of St. Louis, the Sophomore Award to George Oonk of St. Louis and the Freshman award to Robert G. Garner of Green Bay, Wis.

FOOTBALL CLINIC HELD IN COLUMBIA

Increasing interest in football's newest vogue—the spread formation—was apparent during the University of Missouri's two-day grid clinic in Columbia on March 28 and 29.

Staged in cooperation with the Missouri high school athletic association, the "refresher course" in football tactics covered both the Split T and spread formations. Coach Don Faurot and his corps of assistants, Chauncey Simpson, Huston Betty, Clay Cooper and Harry Smith handled the program.

More than 100 high school coaches listened in on lectures, watched game movies, and observed Mizzou's spring-time squad which was used for demonstration purposes. With the coaches looking on, Faurot sent four teams through an informal scrimmage Saturday afternoon to climax the clinic.

Laying the groundwork for next season, many coaches took extensive notes on the mechanics of the spread formation, Faurot noted. Mizzou's outmaneuvered Tigers adopted the spread midway through the 1951 campaign, using it chiefly to implement their passing offense. Over the season, Missouri gained 1762 aerial yards—highest total in Faurot's stay in Missouri—and the second-best passing offense in the nation.

Among the coaches on hand for the clinic were several ex-Tigers. Included in this group were: Loyd Brinkman of Mexico; Bill Hamann of Lexington; John Ghrist of Chillicothe; Denny Studer of Higginsville; and Dave Ashley of Liberty.

TIGER TRACKS in the TWENTIES

A member of the Class of 1922, H. F. Misselwitz of San Carlos, California, isn't sure that he will be able to attend Reunions to be held on June 4, but has responded with the accompanying article. Mr. Misselwitz is Editor-in-Chief of the San Carlos Enquirer and of the Belmont Courier-Journal.

Possibly the title above this rambling reminiscence of long ago should read "Track and Some Old Tigers," but this will be up to the editor of The Missouri Alumnus who asked for it in the first place.

And getting this pleasant letter from Mrs. Lottie Smith, managing editor of this worthwhile publication keeping us all in touch with each other and Old Mizzou through the years, was an odd coincidence. For I had just had dinner with Brutus Hamilton down in San Francisco a day or so before, and it was our second meeting in the thirty years—I still simply can't believe it!—since we left the University of Missouri in the graduating class of 1922. In the spring it was, too, in April, for in those days not too long after World War I we still had the quarters system in effect rather than two semesters and summer school. Remember, anyone?

Brutus, now director of athletics over across San Francisco Bay at the University of California in Berkeley, was guest speaker at the San Francisco Press & Union League Club weekly "Gang Dinner" that Friday evening, and that I had to hear. He had just been chosen track coach for the 1952 Olympic Games this summer, and was asked to tell of plans to win.

I went to hear Brutus, and to see and talk with him once more after too many years since we had last met. It was the second time since 1922, I repeat; for just last summer my wife and I were motoring down to Mexico in August for a holiday south of the border, and ran into Brutus in the elevator coming down in the morning in a hotel in San Luis Obispo, California.

We looked at each other in the ride down to the main floor that morning, neither quite sure and saying nothing until as the elevator doors opened to the lobby I said as we walked out: "Isn't your name Hamilton," Brutus then grinned in that by now world famed boyish grin of his, and said: "I thought so, but wasn't certain. How are you, Francis?"

He was speaking that day at a Rotary luncheon, so we had but a moment. But I recalled then how we first had met, as freshmen in 1918 at Columbia, the day before registration. We had both arrived early, being freshmen! And we met by accident in the lobby of the Y.M.C.A. After self introductions, he finally blurted bashfully: "Did you ever hear of a guy named Brutus?" I said, "Sure, one of the lads who stabbed Caesar."

"Yes, but I mean anyone in this modern day named Brutus." I said I never had heard of such a thing, which I thought was a sort of silly name for parents to hang on a child. He replied, "My name is Brutus—Brutus Hamilton." It was the start of a beautiful friendship, believe it or not; at least, while we both were in college. And despite the fact neither of us has seen the other in these three decades since our graduation from around the Columns of Old Missouri, I think we both remain firm friends.

The editor reminded me in her letter that "In the 1922 Savitar" I had printed "a review of the track season," and so I had; except that this goes to show how fleeting is fame, or whatnot. The Savitar I edited was the "Centennial Savitar," got out in my junior year, as was customary then and I think still is, isn't it? So it came out in 1921, and I still have a fine letter from Floyd C. Shoemaker, able and loveable secretary of the State Historical Society of Missouri, complimenting me and the Savitar staff on "the excellence of the centennial edition of the Savitar." That is a direct quote from Floyd's letter to me as Editor, dated June 20, 1921 and remains in my files to this day; or in the front of my copy of that edition of the yearbook, so that all who read may see. In fact, his letter is short and a bit of history by now, so by your leave I think I'll give it here. It said, and says:

Dear Mr. Misselwitz:

Permit me to congratulate you on the excellence of the centennial edition of the Savitar. Your original idea of honoring the state founders has been well carried out. Such state work is unusual in leaving an influence broader than the immediate field to be covered. The 1921 Savitar is of state interest; it has not neglected, however, to fulfill the requirements of satisfying the university needs.

Assuring you of my appreciation for your public spirited appreciation of the history of Missouri and Missourians, I am

This is getting somewhat off the track, and no pun intended; but I thought this might be of passing interest to some other old grads along another salient on the dear old college days front.

Track stars studded the Tigers field at Columbia in 1920-21-22, and it seems to me we had faster and better men than we do now. Not to join Ty Cobb and other gray beards who are dreaming of the "good old days" in baseball and other sports, but in the case of track and the Tigers, that's just the way it looks to me as an old sports writer then for my hometown paper, The Kansas City Star.

We had three track stars from M. U. on the 1920 Olympics team that went to Antwerp, for one thing. They of course included Brutus Hamilton, along with George P. Massengale, of 220-yard dash fame, and Jackson V. Scholz, one of the greatest sprints runners of all time, in any country.

The last time I saw Jack Scholz was long ago, too, in the mid-twenties in Tokyo, Japan, when he was touring the world after the 1924 Olympics, and ran some dazzling races in Meiji Stadium for the edification of Japanese athletes. He held or had tied the world's records in all the dash events, from the 50-yard dash to the 100-meter dash.

George Massengale I knew perhaps better than the others while in college; for George was business manager of the 1921 Savitar and did a great job in that field, too. He was a fast man with a buck, as the saying goes, and could stretch it to pay all bills better than anyone I ever knew.

He was a fast man on the track, too, from the 75-yard dash up, with the 220 being his specialty. But he injured his leg, or back, in the Olympic games in Antwerp that summer of 1920, and never ran again. I've seen George a few times in later years, and his lovely wife Emily, at their home in Webster Groves, outside St. Louis. He is with the Union Electric Co. in St. Louis as personnel director, I believe it is, in this top flight post.

Incidentally, George Massengale was an ATO in college, but I heard the other day that he has a son at Columbia there now and the son has joined the Phi Kappa Psi fraternity. Which is another reason why George and I should be closer than most old grads, for I am a Phi Psi, too. So we still have a lot in common.

Aside from these Big Three track stars, there were many others almost as good back there when I was a steady patron at The Palms, among other places of interest on or near the campus.

One was Bahlman Parker, one of the best quarter milers who ever won his M at our school; and he wasn't too bad at the half, for that matter, and a good man to have in the relays.

Then there was George ("Shorty") Williams, a towering man who jumped higher than his own head, which itself was well over 6 feet. George won first in 1920 at the Missouri Valley Conference track meet, for example; and his next best event was in the high hurdles, where he always shone.

These men, Eddie Hart in the dashes, Elmer Kershaw in the 440, Al Lincoln in the discus, Johnny Knight (now a top physician in Kansas City) in the javelin and hurdles, W. E. Lewis in the pole vault, Eugene Brasfield in the distance runs, made up the bulk of the big guns for the Tigers in track in those days, and their records will never be entirely forgotten.

Of course, none of them could have developed into the champions they were in college without excellent coaching in the hands of dear old Henry F. ("Indian") Schulte, in my initial years at Missouri. And then, as I became an upperclassman and entered the School of Journalism under the late Dean Walter Williams—"The Dean," like our "dear old Alma Mater," was and still is "loved by all of us the best"—we lost Coach Schulte, but gained one of his brightest stars of all, Coach

Robert I. Simpson. They made "Bob" Simpson for a hurdler, and then broke the mold. Few of us oldtimers will forget Bob as he streaked over the sticks to new records and everlasting glory for himself and for Old Missouri. And as a coach, he led Tiger teams to many victories when his own competing days were ended—including the Olympics trio that I've devoted so much space to earlier.

In other sports, too, the Tigers of my day were tops, including football and basketball, to mention the other two major collegiate sports then and now. Remember Charles L. ("Chuck") Lewis, captain of the 1920 football team and one of the greatest players of all time, in any college?

And Herb Bunker (who, ye editor confides, really is the one back of this request that I ramble along like this for you), as a 4-letter man, starring most in basketball as an impressive guard who could score as well; and an immovable man as our center on the football team. He, like another Herb named Blumer, captain of the football team in 1921, also was a Phi Beta Kappa the while!

For that sort of college record, we should restore Herb Bunker's proper name as "Herbert Goodheart"—Bunker, I am told, coming from the Norman French originally, "bon coeur," then "Bonkeur," then "Bunker" as English developed into a language, no?

In any case, he and these other Tigers of yesteryear all were men not only of good hearts, but stout. There may be men as good in sports there now, but I doubt it. If so, I'll have to be shown. I may live in California at this hamlet of San Carlos, on the San Francisco peninsula. But believe me, I'm still from Missouri and "Show Me!" is my motto down to now.

DRIVER SHORT COURSE FOR SUMMER SESSION

The College of Education and the Adult Education and Extension Service will make available to interested teachers of Missouri an approved course in Driver Education and Training.

Offered in connection with the Summer Session, the course will be given June 9 through July 4. Scheduled from 3:00 P.M. to 5:00 P.M. daily (except Saturday) it will provide a total of forty clock hours of instruction.

To enroll in this short course one must be a licensed driver and certified to teach in the secondary schools of Missouri. Upon satisfactory completion of the course the University will issue a Certificate which the State Department of Education has agreed to accept as evidence that the requirements as a teacher of Driver Education and Training have been met.

James W. Kennedy and family, Detroit

I couldn't have made a better choice!

After I left Marquette University in 1941, I knew what I wanted out of a career. I wanted to be my own boss. But most of all, I wanted to feel that I was helping people—that I was performing a service that they really needed.

I finally decided that the one field that offered me these big objectives was life insurance. Life insurance protects businesses as well as families . . . it often means the difference between financial security, and financial tragedy.

So, after deciding on a career in life insurance, I started making a survey of the various companies. I was much impressed with the New England Mutual men I met, and with their sincere enthusiasm for their company. I learned that New England was the first mutual life insurance company to be chartered in America, and that it offered liberal features that made its policy contracts most attractive to the buyer. I also learned that New England Mutual was one of the fastest growing companies in its field, and that it offered new men comprehensive training in all phases of the business.

I discovered that the company's continuing training program helps me to perform a real service to my clients. At the same time I'm getting a lot of fun and satisfaction out of my work and am providing a good living for my family. In fact, I'm happy to say that I couldn't have made a better choice!

James W. Kennedy

If you would like more information about a career in which your individual ability and industry—and nothing else—determine your income, write Mr. H. C. Chaney, Director of Agencies, 501 Boylston St., Boston 17, Mass.

One reason New England Mutual agents do so well is that they have a truly fine product to sell. The New England Mutual life insurance policy is a liberal and flexible contract that can give you just the kind of financial help you require.

And you will be pleasantly surprised to find that the rates for many New England Mutual policies are lower today than they were 20 years ago!

If you are interested in having your life insurance program custom-tailored to fit your personal or business needs, get in touch with one of your own alumni listed below, or one of the other 700 college-trained men who represent New England Mutual from Maine to Hawaii.

These University of Missouri men are New England Mutual representatives:

Frank M. See, CLU, '11, Gen. Agt., St. Louis
 John T. Ready, '14, Kansas City
 Robert L. Casebolt, '23, Kansas City
 Paul J. Harris, '23, Jefferson City
 Theodore F. Kittredge, '40, Little Rock
 Gordon E. Crosby, Jr., '41, Gen. Agt., Seattle
 Ernest A. Hill, '48, Kansas City

New England Mutual would like to add several qualified University of Missouri men to its sales organization which is located in the principal cities from coast to coast. If you are interested, write to Mr. Chaney as directed above.
