ELECTRICITY
Does So Much . . .
COSTS SO LITTLE

What is today's biggest bargain in better living? Your electric service, of course: Today in your home electricity will cook and sew, clean, wash and iron, preserve food and entertain the family. And in the factory, the store and on the farm, electricity is doing hundreds of jobs at low cost to help make life healthier, happier and easier all around. Yes, electricity does so much . . . costs so little.

As this is being written, and if you happen to be here on the campus, you are lucky if your best friend speaks to you. If that friend happens to be a student, you might pass within two feet of him and hear strange mutterings or a guttural sound that strangely resembles some foreign tongue; or if that friend happens to be a professor, he might be so loaded down with briefcase and stacks of paper that you wonder where he could be storing such voluminous material.

You've guessed it! FINALS. Once again student heads are bowed with silent prayers or secret hope, and eyelids resemble window shades with a much-too-heavy invisible weight trying to force them closed. No doubt all of you remember what that midnight oil does to one's personal appearance. It will only be a couple of weeks, however, and everything will be normal again.

Those of you who are members of the classes, 1902, 1912, 1922, 1932, 1942, 1926 and 1927—don't forget your class reunion this spring. The temporary date is June 4. Details should reach you around the first of March. Of course, if you don't hear from us by then it is possible that we do not have your present address, so please get the information to us as soon as possible.

Radio Station WHO in Des Moines is a real proving ground for Missouri graduates. All four members of the news staff on the day shift are Missourians, and two of the four members of the night shift are Missouri alumni. I spent a pleasant day with Gene Godt and all these people last week. I also saw Mr. and Mrs. Jim Darr and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Stewart. Des Moines may soon turn pro-Missourian.

Those of you who have never seen a Big Seven Indoor Track Meet have really missed a great show. Even if you think you don't like track, here is a sports spectacle unequaled in competitive appeal. The Big Seven Meet this year will be held in Kansas City on February 29 and March 1. Why not plan to attend?

AG LABORATORIES TO HOLD OPEN HOUSE

Open House will be held at the new Agricultural Laboratory Building on the East Campus of the University of Missouri on February 22, from 3:00 to 5:00 and 7:00 to 9:00 P.M. Exhibits will be arranged in all departments, and the public is invited to use this opportunity to visit the laboratories for use of the departments of Soils, Forestry, Horticulture, Entomology, Meat Processing, Vegetable and Fruit Preserving, the Spectographic Laboratory, and the Analytical Laboratory of the Agricultural Experiment Station.

NURSING EDUCATION DEPARTMENT MOVES

The Department of Nursing Education of the University of Missouri School of Medicine was moved February 1 to the nurses' home at 902 University avenue. The department is housed at present in the basement of the Student Health Service.

For the immediate future, enrollments in the practical nursing course are suspended, and the nursing education staff will concentrate on the University's degree courses in nursing. Although new enrollees have not been accepted for the next term, the eleven women now taking the practical nursing course will complete their training.

COUNSELORS FARE ON NO SPEECHES, NO OFFICERS

When the conseling bureau personnel of Big Seven schools hold their seventh annual conference at the University of Missouri March 6 and 7, they are not likely to get bogged down in organization detail.

There is no planned program. There will be no speeches or prepared papers. The group elects no officers.

The counselors have been getting along very well by simply discussing their mutual problems informally and then selecting a member college for their next annual meeting. About 40 are expected to attend.

The University of Missouri has accepted a grant of $5,000 from the Herman Frasch Foundation for a research project in the Department of Agricultural Chemistry.

The U. S. Navy, through its Office of Naval Research, has renewed a contract with the University of Missouri for continuation of a research project on the measurement of teacher effectiveness being conducted within the University's psychology department.

REFRESHER COURSE OFFERED FOR NURSES

A refresher course for nurses will be conducted at the University of Missouri by the Department of Nursing Education, Miss Virginia Harrison director, has announced.

The non-credit course will cover twenty hours of instruction to be given over a period of several weeks, probably in evening classes held twice weekly. February 25 is the starting date. It will consist of a review of the principles of nursing, with emphasis on the modern treatments, tests, drugs, and nursing techniques employed in the various clinical areas. A fee of $5 will be charged for the course.

ANNUAL MILITARY BALL

Stan Kenton and his orchestra will be on campus April 19 for the annual Military Ball to be held in Rothwell Gymnasium. His "Innovations in Modern Music" has made him a student favorite throughout the country.

The Ball is sponsored by Scabbard and Blade, National military honorary of Army, Naval, and Air Force ROTC cadets.

ALUMNAE SUCCESSFUL IN FUNDS PROJECT

Alumnae of Delta Gamma social sorority living in the St. Louis area were successful in raising $5,400 at Christmas time in an initial project to raise funds for their Pre-School Visually Handicapped Foundation program. This foundation has a two-fold purpose—Parents' Guidance Program for parents of visually handicapped pre-school children which will open this fall, and a nursery school which will follow for pre-school visually handicapped children. Plans are already being made to make the sale of Shining Light trees an annual event, and to "give a blind child the light of training and knowledge."

Miss Gene Thompson of DeSoto, Missouri, a Missouri University graduate of 1950, addressed and mailed out over 3,000 form letters to residents of the area.

Other alumnae of the University of Missouri who are active in the Delta Gamma Alumnae Club are Mrs. Carter Anderson, formerly Helen Bradford, who is shown on the right in the accompanying picture; Mrs. William I. Schmidt, formerly Jane Bramley, who is chairman of magazine subscriptions, another fund-raising project of the group; Mrs. John E. Keith, formerly June Heger, recording secretary; Mrs. D. H. Doane, formerly Eureth Grant, hospitality chairman for the visiting alumnae who will meet in St. Louis in July to board the special train to the convention at White Sulphur Springs, West Virginia; Mrs. E. B. Shannon, formerly Martha Hodgden, corresponding secretary of the Foundation; Mrs. Donald A. Andrews, formerly Bernice Gunther, and Mrs. Carl W. Lange, Jr., the former Marion Gunther.

SCHOOL SPIRIT?

Last week we heard a student remark, "School spirit? There isn't any such thing now. Just complete apathy. . . ."

Take a look at this quotation from M.S.U. Independent of February, 1897:

"The two universities of Missouri and Arkansas will meet in joint debate again this year. . . . The University Debating Club is working hard to build up a system of intercollegiate debates and certainly they will succeed ultimately. . . ."

"College spirit was never at a lower ebb here than now. But surely this undertaking will be supported by all, faculty and students. Other colleges have them and why not here? . . ."

'Twas ever thus!

A man had a slight difference of opinion with his wife. But he acknowledged his error generously by saying: "You are right and I am wrong, as you generally are." Then he hurried off to catch his train.

"So nice of him to put it like that," his wife said to herself—and then she began to think about it.

IN ST. LOUIS

The Women's Group of the St. Louis Association of the University of Missouri alumni are having a "HELLO DESSERT" social on Wednesday, March 19, 7:30 to 10:00 P.M., at the College Club of St. Louis, 5428 Delmar Avenue, St. Louis 12, Missouri.

Alumnae in the St. Louis area may thus get acquainted and may renew many campus friendships. All women graduates and former students are invited and may call in their reservations to Helen Penn, Ne0404. The cost is only $1.00 per person.

IN CHICAGO

Word from Chicago indicates the formation of a reorganized club. Plans have been made and will be presented to the members for acceptance on April 16, the next regular meeting.

Dr. Thomas Brady, vice-president of the University, will meet with the club as guest speaker and it promises to be a great meeting. All of you in the Chicago area who have not been contacted, please get in touch with Bob Lewis, 8322 Ingleside, Chicago 19, Illinois.

DONOHEW IS PROMOTED

Col Jack N. Donohew, SC CE '33, currently stationed with the U. S. Air Force in the Philippines, is the new commander of Clark Air Force Base and 6200th Air Base Wing.

Colonel Donohew, who received his new assignment during a recent change of command, was formerly Deputy for Comptroller, Thirteenth Air Force on Clark AFB.

A native of Slater, where his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Donohew live, Colonel Donohew graduated from West Point in 1937 and spent the following year in pilot training at Randolph Air Force Base, Texas. Branching into multi-engines he was assigned to the 30th Bomber Squadron, 19th Bomber Group at March Field, California.

Leaving March Field in June 1940, Colonel Donohew was sent to McChord Field, Washington, where he took command of the 73rd Bomber Squadron in January 1941. In March of that year, the 73rd was sent to Elmendorf Field, Anchorage, Alaska. Colonel Donohew's service in Alaska and the Aleutians terminated in May 1943.

In July 1943, Colonel Donohew returned to the United States to attend the Naval War College. The following year, he attended the Army Command

The MISSOURI ALUMNUS is indebted this month to Dr. Elmer Ellis, Dean of the College of Arts and Science and professor of History at the University of Missouri, for the accompanying article.

Dr. Ellis, awarded a Fulbright Fellowship last fall, is a visiting professor of American history at the University of Amsterdam this year.

A native of North Dakota, where he received much of his education and began his teaching career, Dr. Ellis has achieved an enviable record as a scholar, teacher, editor, author, soldier and administrator. From the University of North Dakota he has received an A.B. degree in 1924, an A.M. degree in 1925 and an honorary LL.D. in 1946.

Dr. Ellis was awarded a Ph.D. de-

Who's Who Lists 309 Graduates of Missouri

Alumni and other friends of Missouri University will be interested to know that Missouri has an unusually high number of its graduates who are the subjects of biographies in Who's Who in America. An analysis of the 1950-51 volume by B. W. Kunkel and D. B. Prentice, published in School and Society for Oct. 20, 1951, shows that Missouri has 309 of its graduates with bachelors' degrees included in this record of American achievement. Missouri is thus nineteenth among the universities and colleges of the United States and Canada in this respect. Graduate degrees were not included in the study.

For a university or college to have a large number of its graduates listed in Who's Who in America indicates several things about that institution. It unquestionably shows that the university has had, over a long period of time, a superior program of undergraduate education. It likewise shows that the university attracts to it a reasonable proportion of students of superior ability. Among some of the private eastern colleges and universities, it may indicate the attraction of a high percentage of students from very wealthy families, where business and professional connections make it more certain that a graduate will gain the position in life that results in inclusion in Who's Who. This may explain, in part, why Harvard and Yale are first and second in the number of graduates included, and why such a college as Dartmouth has more graduates included than most universities. But among the universities and colleges of the Middle West and South this last factor is probably not very significant, nor are the special factors that at this time make West Point and Annapolis sixth and ninth respectively in the number included.

One of our larger mid-western state universities, Michigan, is third from the top with 754 graduates included in the record, and another, Wisconsin, has 585. California's two universities at Berkeley and Los Angeles together have a total of 485 graduates included. These numbers, of course, are totals and are not relative to the size of the student body or to the total numbers of living graduates. The larger the university, the more graduates one would expect to find in Who's Who. Missouri should expect to have fewer graduates included than these larger institutions, and more than the smaller ones. Other rankings from the Kunkel and Prentice study which are interesting to Missouri alumni are the following:

University graduates in Who's Who

Illinois, 402; Minnesota, 388; Stanford, 336; Ohio State, 327; Missouri, 309; Nebraska, 277; Indiana, 254; Texas, 252; Iowa, 244; Kansas, 231; Northwestern, 222; Johns Hopkins, 214; Virginia, 211; North Carolina, 207; Vanderbilt, 144; Iowa State College, 136; Purdue, 125; Colorado, 119; Oklahoma, 101; Kentucky, 87; Tennessee, 70; Arkansas, 63.

The trends indicated by these inclusions as compared with earlier studies are also interesting. Comparing the lists in the 1928-29 volume with those of 1950-51, a strong trend is indicated toward more inclusions from the Mississippi and Missouri Valley universities. The institutions from this region increased their share of the total number of biographies from 28.9 to 36.8 per cent in the the last twenty-two years. A comparison of relative positions by universities is also provided between the volume for 1938-39 and the most recent one. Virtually every western university showed at least some gain in this period. It is especially interesting to Missourians that no university or college shows a gain in relative position over the University of Missouri during the last twelve years. But during that time the number of University of Missouri graduates included in Who's Who increased sufficiently to out-distance seven other colleges and universities which had had a larger number of graduates included in the earlier volume. Among these are Nebraska, Indiana, Johns Hopkins, and Brown.

While the inclusion of graduates in Who's Who in America is only one basis for judging the quality of a university's undergraduate work, it is reassuring to all friends of M. U. to know that its graduates are occupying leading positions in the world far beyond their proportionate numbers to graduates generally.

Other Missouri colleges and universities which are listed as having fifteen or more graduates who have achieved inclusion in Who's Who in America are: Washington (91), St. Louis (78), William Jewell (56), Park (36), Central (20), Westminster (18), and the Northeast State Teachers College (15).

DEAN ELMER ELLIS

gree at the State University of Iowa in 1930.

As a teacher of history, Dr. Ellis has served on the faculties of the University of Iowa, North Dakota State Teachers College, the University of North Dakota, and Ohio State University.

As an editor he made studies of the writings of Finley Peter Dunne. His writings include "Mr. Dooley at His Best," "Education Against Propaganda," "Henry Moore Teller, Defender of the West," and "Mr. Dooley's America, A Life of Finley Peter Dunne."

During the recent World War Dr. Ellis attained the rank of major with the U. S. Army. He attended the Army's Provost Marshall General's School, was assigned to Military Intelligence as a historian, and served in the Pacific theater.

Dr. Ellis is a member of numerous honorary and professional societies and associations. His efforts are largely responsible for the grant to the University of $50,000 from the Carnegie Foundation for a five-year-program of study for the advancement of teaching throughout Missouri.

Dr. and Mrs. Ellis, who is the former Ruth Clapper, live in Columbia at 211 South Glenwood.

The Atomic Energy Commission has extended for another year a research project in the Department of Dairy Husbandry at the University of Missouri.

Its valuable contribution has been a half century of devotion to research, teaching and service.

MISSOURI'S EXPANDING PSYCHOLOGY DEPARTMENT

By ROBERT VAN DE CASTLE, A.M. '53, and JERRY SMITH, B.J. '52.

Back in the year 1901, Dr. Max Meyer, who had just started a psychology department at Missouri, was engaged in exploring the more remote parts of the University campus. On one of these exploring expeditions, he discovered an uninhabited and uncharted region on the fourth floor of Jesse Hall. With true patriotic zeal, he staked a claim there in the name of psychology, and by virtue of "squatter's rights" established the location of the psychology department, and fixed its position so that it would always be highest and uppermost among all the Missouri sciences.

Since that time students and instructors have followed the 105 footsteps of Dr. Meyer leading to the fourth floor-Jesse, for the "psych lab" is still located there in its lofty perch, although modern crowded conditions have forced a sharing of the roost with the art department.

The psychology department, who recently celebrated its 50th anniversary, has spread its wings a great deal from those early fledgling days. In comparison with the original staff of one, there are now some forty persons associated with the department's work, including a staff of twelve teachers holding the rank of instructor or higher. Besides the fourth floor office, lab, and classrooms, the department now includes an annex and two research laboratories which are all located on Hitt Street.

A Personality Clinic, operating as part of the student health service, has also been established by Dr. Fred McKinney, the Chairman of the department. Another branch of the department is represented by the Child Behavior Clinic begun and operated by Dr. Kenneth Brown and Mrs. Ruth Allee. Another staff member, Dr. Robert Callis, is in charge of the University Counseling Bureau which helps students in the selection of a suitable major or vocation, in addition to helping solve their personal problems. There is also a Reading Clinic under the supervision of Miss Kathleen Ranson, an instructor in psychology, which serves to help students in improving their reading and study skills.

One of the chief reasons for the steady and continual growth of the psychology department has been the outstanding calibre of its chairmen. These men have been well-known and important leaders in the history of psychology and their contributions to the field have gained national recognition.

The first chairman was Dr. Max Meyer who founded the department at Missouri. He became known not only for his contributions to psychology at Missouri, but he also achieved great fame as a prominent pioneer of psychological progress in America. He left in 1929 and was replaced by Dr. John McGeech, another well-known psychologist, who remained for four years. Dr. Arthur Melton was the chairman until 1941 when he accepted the rank of Major in the United States Army. He was recently awarded the Air Force "Award for Meritorious Service" for the establishment and development of the Human Resources Research Center. During the war years of 1941-45, Dr. Fred Courts served as acting chairman until the appointment of Dr. Fred McKinney, the present chairman.

Dr. McKinney joined the faculty in 1931 after receiving his Bachelor and Master's degrees from Tulane and a Ph.D. from the University of Chicago. His sartorial elegance in the shape of a plaid vest; his warm humor in the form of an Arthur Godfrey smile, and his open friendliness in the motion of an eager "Hi!" have made him extremely popular with the students. They have honored him with membership in the Knights of St. Patrick, Omicron Delta Kappa, and Q.E.B.H., where he is faculty advisor.

The Personality Clinic was established by Dr. McKinney in 1935 as part of the student health service and it has now become the Personal Adjustment Unit of the University's Mental Hygiene Clinic. Here in an informal setting he interviews, counsels, and advises students on a wide range of personal problems. Dr. McKinney is well known for his speaking ability and his lively lectures are in great demand. He has written several books about the field of personal adjustment and originated the McKinney "stress test" which is used as an aid in diagnosing certain aspects of personality.

In the early years of the psychology department the primary experimental work was in the fields of hearing and the psychology of music. Most of the early equipment and apparatus has been saved for reasons of historical interest, and a comparison of some of these crude instruments with the highly complex testing devices now used by the department offer an example of the growth of psychology in scientific stature. Later there developed a great deal of work in the field of human memory, but in recent years an increasing amount of experimental study has been done on the subject of animal learning and behavior.

Dr. Melvin Marx established the animal laboratory about five years ago in the old power house building, which has since been torn down. The animal lab is now located in one of the three buildings on Hitt Street used by the department. The early experimentation in animal learning was conducted by Dr. Marx and Dr. Bradley Reynolds. The latter is now doing psychological research with the U. S. Air Force but Dr. Marx is still in charge of the animal laboratory and is carrying out research on basic learning problems with rats. One of the more interesting problems which he is investigating involves the study of food-hoarding by rats as a learned rather than an inherited behavior pattern.

At the present time Dr. Marx's primary job is the supervision of a research program on human motor learning which is being conducted for the Air Force. The purpose of this research is to determine the conditions under which certain kinds of persistent errors in performance are made and strengthened during the learning of complex skills such as are involved in the handling of modern aircraft.

Another military project being conducted within the psychology department involves the continuation of some earlier research directed toward the measurement of teacher effectiveness. This is being sponsored by the Office of Naval Research, which is interested in being able to select better teachers from among its enlisted and officer personnel for use in staffing its technical schools. This contract, which has just been renewed, is being directed by Dr. Robert Callis, with the assistance of Dr. Kenneth Brown and Thomas Burgess as well as a number of graduate assistants. They hope that they can develop a series of tests by which an individual can be judged in terms of certain teaching aptitudes, as well as how effective he might be when placed in charge of a group of students.

In the Jesse Hall laboratory Dr. Robert Daniel and Dr. William Lichte are engaged in investigating the perception and interpretation of radar oscilloscope patterns and the learning process involved in these skills. This is contract research for the Air Force, and is a continuation of research on radar operator efficiency and training previously carried out at an Air Force Base.

Research is also being done in bio-electrics, the study of electrical discharges in the body. One of the projects involves a study of the kappa waves from the brain in an attempt to discover if they are related to thinking and what the relationship is between brain wave patterns and tiny eye movements. Another study dealt with muscle tension patterns and how they are related to learning factors.

The basic instrument used in these studies is the electroencephalograph, which is sometimes called a "brain wave" machine, or referred to by the even more convenient nickname of E.E.G.

Of course, there is the additional research and experimentation carried out by each graduate student, who must complete some original contribution to the field of psychology for his thesis. Such thesis topics may vary from the study of the psychopathic personality to the detailed study of learning in the rat. There is also one graduate student who has been awarded a private research grant in parapsychology, which has as one of its objectives, the investigation of telepathy or "mind reading."

There are also a great many other projects which are non-mechanical or non-experimental in nature. One of these is a statistical analysis of the inter-relationship of psychology with the other sciences. This is being done by conducting a study of the psychological and other scientific journals in order to see the type and extent of written material that psychology has borrowed from other fields. The frequency of reference use would then be an indication of the dependence of psychology upon these other related fields. Of course, these are only a few of the projects that have been undertaken, but they serve to give some idea of the extensive research range that the department covers.

Some of the department's "outside" services to the University and the students have already been mentioned, such as the Personality Clinic, the Counseling Bureau, the Child Behavior Clinic, and the Reading Clinic. These are staffed mainly by the psychologists and there are also psychologists teaching in other departments such as Education. Some psychologists also serve as administrators, a notable example being Dean Earl English of the Journalism School.

Another important work of the department is class instruction. This semester 29 courses, including the non-credit Remedial Reading, were offered to students. According to attendance figures, the most popular courses are General Psychology, General Experimental Psychology (which fulfills the science requirement for many students), Educational and Social Efficiency, and the Psychology of Personal Adjustment.

A psychology major is required to choose an area of concentration either in the Social Science of Biological Science group. In addition to the basic Arts and Science requirements, the psych major is required to take a beginning survey course, a course in statistical technique (a necessary basic course), several advanced lab courses, a course in psychological history and theory, and additional courses to total from 24 to 40 hours, giving the student a firm foothold in the field of psychology.

While such a program does not prepare the student for any job as a psychologist, it does give him vital and useful information which can be applied in such fields as sales, advertising, merchandising, supervision, administration, personnel, education, social service, medicine, religion, law, and many others where a better understanding of human behavior is essential.

The department staff has worked out special curricula for those students who will be seeking employment

A research study in bio-electrics in the Psychology Department of the University of Missouri involves the study of kappa waves from the brain in an attempt to discover if they are related to thinking. A graduate student records the simultaneous brain wave activity and eye movements of the subject at the right.

Considerable work is being done on audiogenic seizures at the University Psychology Department. The rat learns to keep the wheel turning, thereby reducing the shock from the electrically-charged wires on which he stands. The stimulus used is a high-pitched whistle.

in certain fields. They are psychology-personnel management, psychology-child-guidance, psychology-advertising, and psychology-preprofessional. In order to enter the field of psychology professionally, the student must do graduate work and the department provides two programs at that level, clinical psychology and experimental psychology.

Students are required to have at least an "S" average in psychology in undergraduate work in order to enter graduate study. For a Master's degree the student must complete 32 hours of academic credit, pass a written comprehensive as well as an oral examination, in addition to presenting a thesis. The graduate student during his first semester is given a battery of tests under the direction of Dr. Callis to aid in advising the student and help in selecting his courses. Graduate students meet once a week with the staff in a required seminar where credit may be earned by presenting a report with the aid of a faculty advisor.

A great many of the graduate students have gone on to gain unusual recognition for their distinguished careers in psychology. They have become professors, government and military researchers, V. A. psychologists, textbook authors, and chairmen of other psychology departments. The employment outlook in psychology at the present time is excellent. The median annual salary in this field in 1948 was about $5400 for Ph.D.'s and about $3900 for A.M.'s. Undoubtedly this picture has changed in the past four years.

University of Missouri has progressed a considerable distance since Dr. Max Meyer first wandered onto the fourth floor of Jesse. And as it has advanced, it has contributed its part to the expanding and increasingly important field of the knowledge of human behavior. The department is small in comparison to some units of the University, but in activity and service, it is second to few.

BARNES IS OUTSTANDING CITIZEN OF COLUMBIA

Joe M. Barnes, principal of Ridgeway elementary school in Columbia, Missouri, and now in his 18th year as an educator in the Columbia schools, received the local Cosmopolitan Club award as Columbia's leading citizen of 1951.

A secret committee of 11 Columbians, none of whom is a member of the Cosmopolitan Club, make the award from nominations made by letters sent in by Columbians. Bases for determining the recipient of the honor are the extent to which the individual deserves the honor, years of residence in the city, standing and respect in his own field, family life, membership in general in local organizations, civic activities, conscientious service and philanthropic acts.

Nearly all of Mr. Barnes' life has been spent in Boone County. Born at Sturgeon, he has lived in Columbia since 1934.

He received a B.S. degree at Kirksville State College in 1926, and an A.M. from the University in 1927. His work toward a doctor's degree is almost complete—"all but the thesis."

Before coming to Columbia Mr. Barnes taught in the rural schools of Audrain and Boone counties, and was superintendent of schools in Clark, Auxvasse, Marionville and Carl Junction. He has served as principal of Ridgeway and Lee schools in Columbia, and in 1946 was named elementary supervising principal.

With Mrs. Barnes and their 10-year-old daughter, Marie, he lives at 104 McBaine Avenue in Columbia. One son, Maurice, B.J. '47, is with the advertising department of Cook Paint and Varnish Company in Kansas City. Another son, Robert, B.A. '50, 811 Broadhead Street, is commercial representative of the Missouri Telephone Company in Columbia. A third son, Joe, Jr., was killed in an explosion January 31, 1951, while he was stationed with the marines at Quantico, Virginia.

ASSISTS IN POINT 4 PROGRAM

Stanley Andrews, Director of the Office of Foreign Agricultural Relations, U. S. Department of Agriculture, has been appointed Special Consultant to the Secretary of State to assist in the development and execution of the Point 4 program of technical cooperation in underdeveloped areas. Mr. Andrews has taken temporary leave from the Department of Agriculture to accept this assignment and has gone to Iran to complete the mission on which Dr. Henry G. Bennett, Technical Cooperation Administrator, was engaged at the time of his death. Dr. Bennett was killed in an airplane crash near Tehran.

Mr. Andrews is a native of High Point, Missouri, and is widely known as an agricultural authority and editor. He received a bachelor's degree from the School of Journalism at the University of Missouri in 1921. He has been editor of the Sedalia Capital, the Eldorado News and Times (Mo.), of the Arkansas Farmer from 1928 through 1934, and of the American Cotton Grower from 1934 to 1940. He is a former owner and manager of radio station KARK in Arkansas. In June, 1940 he was made assistant to the President of the Commodity Credit Corporation, and for two years prior to entering on active military duty in June, 1943, he served as General Agent for the Farm Credit Administration at New Orleans, Louisiana.

During the war Mr. Andrews rose to the rank of Colonel and served extensively on agricultural rehabilitation problems. In 1947 he became consultant to the Secretary of Agriculture on International Food Supply Problems. In 1947 he was recalled to Europe as a civilian to head up the combined Food, Agricultural and Forestry Staffs for Western Germany, in addition to serving as Advisor to General Clay on food problems. On July 1, 1949, he came back to the Department of Agriculture as Director of the Office of Foreign Agricultural Relations.

RALPH A. McCANSE

TEACHER, WRITER, MISSOURIAN

Ralph A. McCanse, associate professor of English at the University of Wisconsin, is the author of the recently-published book, "Waters Over Linn Creek Town." With Mr. McCanse are Elizabeth, Mrs. McCanse and Ross.

Mount Vernon, Missouri, is the typical county-seat—in its earlier days somewhat isolated, self-contained, and lovely in its hill country setting. The people, warmly neighborly, established indelible impressions of the best in the American Way, and the sons and daughters of this native stock are scattered to every corner of our land.

Of this heritage is Professor Ralph Alan McCanse, of the Extension Division of the Department of English, University of Wisconsin. His special field is the correspondence courses in which he teaches shut-ins, Wisconsin rural writers, college credit students, and Armed Forces personnel. These latter enroll and work from rehabilitation area, ship board, camp, and actual fox-hole. He has students in Korea, Germany and the South Pacific who write with revealing integrity and strength of mind, and give profound pride in the American man and woman in the Services today.

Grandfather, William A. McCanse, followed the goodly pioneering pattern: merchant, banker, idealist, community builder. His general store, built of native walnut logs on a corner of the Square, was the center of many town traditions, now only memories.

Young Ralph McCanse resorted throughout boyhood to the creeks, mint springs, limestone caves and hills of Lawrence County. After the death of his father his mother brought the family to Columbia because of educational opportunities, and the youth continued to find inspiration along the winding Hinkson valley and the gentle weathered bluffs just out of Columbia—where the Ozarks seem to have jumped the Big River and Boone County countryside resembles that of the more southern Missouri country. Mr. McCanse received an A.B. degree in 1923 and an A.M. in 1925 from the University of Missouri. Advanced studies were done at Columbia University in New York and at the University of Wisconsin, where his teaching career was begun and is continuing.

An epic background of early Missouri settlement is portrayed in the writings of Mr. McCanse. His book, "The Road to Hollister," is a pastoral narrative of the Lake Taneycomo country. It carries the first account in literature of a primitive foot-washing ceremony, antedating that in "Stars Fell Over Alabama" by some two years.

His latest publication, "Waters Over Linn Creek Town," takes basis in actual history. His historical researches in the Lake of the Ozarks region have revealed a fine human sense of attachment to home and locale. It attempts to memorialize the places of human habitation and, as well, the idyllic valleys now lost under the swollen reaches of "a commercial reservoir." However, the magnificent human achievement of the great dam and lake deservedly come in also for tribute and praise.

The University Committee of Deans take action to curb cheating among the students, and campus and faculty leaders discuss the problem at a Towne Meeting panel.

Sigma Delta Chi, honorary professional journalism fraternity, votes to publish a literary magazine if the initial $500 necessary to start the publication can be secured.

The University Junior Livestock judging team, competing with 15 other teams, won second place in car-lot judging at the Denver Collegiate judging Show recently.

The second floor rooms of temporary dormitories 3 and 4 will be vacated during the winter semester.

Faculty Firesides, sponsored by YMWCA, is a new opportunity for University faculty members and students to have informal get-togethers.

Carl Brendt is elected headmaster of Delta Sigma Pi, honorary fraternity for Business and Public Administration students.

The 1952 Savitar publication committee is facing financial difficulties, and many more copies must be sold before the book can be printed.

Forty-four girls are initiated into the Woman's Athletic Association.

President Frederick A. Middlebush attended meetings January 25 and 26 of the organization members of the American Council on Education representing the Association of American Universities. Dr. Middlebush is president of the AAU.

A student-operated book pool, under the supervision of SGA, operates during the first three days of the winter semester.

Four fraternities and three sororities were chosen to appear in the 1952 Savitar Frolics. They are Lambda Chi Alpha, Alpha Epsilon Pi, Pi Kappa Alpha, Phi Gamma Delta, Delta Gamma, Delta Delta Delta and Kappa Kappa Gamma.

David Thomas of Bates County was elected president of the Ag. Club for the coming year.

Melvin Steninger of Nevada, Missouri, has been appointed editor of the Missouri Student for the second semester of the current school year.

In March 1944, Colonel Donohew reported for duty with the Joint Chiefs of Staff at the Pentagon, Washington, D. C. In January 1946, he was assigned to the Air University at Maxwell AFB as an instructor with the Air Command and Staff School. In June 1949, he was a student at the Air War College, also at Maxwell AFB.

His assignment with the Far East Air Forces started in July 1950, when he was placed as Director of Air Targets under the Deputy for Intelligence, Far East Air Forces. He arrived in Robert C. Maddock, assistant football coach at the University of Missouri since 1949, has accepted a similar position at the University of Indiana. At Indiana Mr. Maddock will be working under his old Notre Dame teammate, Bernie Crimmins, recently named head grid coach at the Hoosier institution.

SMITH WILL RETURN TO COACH TIGERS

Harry Smith, freshman coach at Southern California in 1949 and 1950, and 1951 coach of the Saskatchewan Rough Riders, is returning to Missouri as line coach of the Tiger football squad.

Mr. Smith formerly held this position in 1941-'42 and from 1946-'49.

ROUND-BALL ROUNDUP

Tigers Win 76-47

Over Ft. Leonard Wood

For the first half the Hilltoppers from Ft. Leonard Wood looked like rough going, but something snapped in the second half and the sharp-toothed Tigers hammered up a new team scoring mark, topping the previous high of 74 over Iowa State in 1950.

At the end of the half in a wild-and-wooly brawl, the Tigers led by a slim 33-32. In the third quarter the Bengals dropped 12 points before the Hilltoppers could score and from there on it was a walkaway. At one time the Tigers led by 30 points. Bill Stauffer and Don Dippold led the spree with 13 points each and Coach Stalcup used 14 players.

Lose To Iowa State

The Cyclones of Iowa State avenged a lacing at the hands of Missouri in the Big 7 Tournament by tripping the Tigers by two points. The Tigers didn't get hot until the fourth quarter when they outscored Iowa 12-5, but fell short.

Fouls were the Tigers greatest enemy. Stauffer was pulled late in the second quarter and saw little action until the fourth period. Dippold was the Tiger's high man with 15 and Stauffer was next with 14. Coach Stalcup used 11 players in all. Score 57-55.

K. U. Wins 60-59

With some 40 seconds left in the game, the Missouri Tigers had a stunning upset at their fingertips—then walked, losing the ball and the game. The nation's number 1 team came to town with the number 1 scorer on their side and for almost three quarters it was no contest. Lovellette was held to 23 points which is below his season's average but the Jayhawks pushed ahead as much as 18 points.

But in the final quarter a Tiger named Art Helms was an "All-American" as he led the Tigers to an almost unbelievable 59-58 lead with 2:55 left. Kansas raced downfield—Lovellette shot and missed, and Bill Stauffer made a tremendous rebound and the Tigers began the freeze that lasted until the walking violation. With 20 seconds to go the Jayhawks Dean

Kelly pushed one from an impossible 30 feet away and that was the game.

Tigers Defeat Drake

Bouncing back after two straight defeats, the Tigers downed visiting Drake, by a tight margin. Med. Park,

HAMILTON CHOSEN OLYMPIC COACH

Brutus Hamilton, director of athletics at the University of California, has been named head coach of the 1952 United States Olympic men's track and field team. A 1922 Missouri graduate, "Ham" was called America's greatest all-around track and field athlete in 1920. That year he won the AAU decathlon and pentathlon, and went on to place second in the Olympic decathlon event, losing the Olympic championships by only four points. He was also an Olympic entry in 1924.

His coaching achievements are verified throughout the world record statistics for track and field. Disciples of Hamilton have run away with records in practically every event, pointing to his versatility as a coach in all phases of sport.

Brutus Hamilton was called America's greatest all-around track and field athlete when this picture was made back in 1920.

a surprise starter was the big gun in the victory, pushing through 17 points.

The Tigers experienced their usual slow start and at the half the score was knotted 26-26. Drake pulled ahead early in the third quarter, but the Tigers soon surged ahead and finished up with a fairly easy victory, 59-50.

Tigers Top Colorado

Missouri pulled out of the Big 7 cellar in slow motion by topping Colorado 44-41. Both teams hit a weak 23 per cent from the field and the lead changed times 15 times during the course of the game. The Tigers didn't score until 3½ minutes had elapsed. At the quarter Missouri trailed 10-8, but led at the half 25-20.

Bill Stauffer, who pulled down 14 rebounds during the game, was high man with 11 points. The Buffs fouled away a large piece of the game, and Missouri picked up 13 points on free throws in the first half.

Tigers Win Two

On a recent two-day road trip to Des Moines and Lincoln, the Tigers displayed an entirely new offense, combined with the same brand of hard-driving ball for which they have become noted.

By defeating Drake, 63-62, and the University of Nebraska, 60-55, the Tigers gave promise of things to come. The new offense apparently paved the way for more shot attempts, and, with perfection in timing, the team will undoubtedly display a more aggressive offense in the future.

In the Drake game it was the performance of freshman Bob Reiter, replacing Bill Stauffer at the post position, who gave evidence of his value to the club. At Lincoln, Missouri's candidate for All-American, Bill Stauffer, set a new scoring record by piling up 31 points.

Sooners Squeeze Through

On a road trip into Sooner land the Tigers again displayed their brand of hard, exciting, basketball. Stauffer was once again the bulwark of defense and scoring. Although recent losses may seem to indicate a Tiger weakness, you must realize that in four conference games the Tigers have been outscored by only 5 points. Thus if the Tigers could have scored only one more basket in each game, they could be on top instead of at the bottom of the conference standing.

Don't give up on these boys; they'll deal some misery before the year is over. A tribute to a real team is the ability to consistently pull out of seemingly hopeless situations and stage a "comeback." This is the true spirit in athletics. This the Tigers have.

Score by quarters pretty well tells the story.

A name familiar to old-time Missouri track followers appeared on the Tigers' travel squad to Lincoln recently for a dual meet with the Huskers.

Included on the list was Bob Massengale—son of George Massengale, who was one of three Mizzou trackmen participating in the 1920 Olympics at Antwerp. Young Massengale, a chunky 19-year-old from Webster Groves, was the only freshman on the Tigers' 21-man squad.

A sprinter like his dad, Bob placed third in the 60-yard dash, and ran the opening leg in the mile relay.

The elder Massengale now has an administrative job with Union Electric in St. Louis. His M.U. teammates on the U.S. Olympic team were Brutus Hamilton and Jackson V. Scholz.

It is interesting to note that J. F. Barham, University photographer for more than forty years, took the original picture, as well as the two pictures used herewith.

ARIZONA'S FATHER to BRIDES AND GROOMS

By OREN ARNOLD

"So you say you despise my desert,
That it's ugly barren and cruel . . .
. . . mister, I love its wild spaces,
The scent of the low grease-wood tree,
The grace of yon lone palo verde
Is music and poetry to me. . . ."

If you should find yourself in Phoenix, Arizona, and if your interests happen to be two-bedroom brick bungalows, citrus acres, guest ranches, desert land, Boy Scouts, or the Student Loan Fund of the Alumni association of Arizona State College, John R. Sandige, of Sandige Realty Company, 2920 North 40th Street, can give you most of the answers. He may reminisce about his boyhood in Marion County, near Hannibal, Missouri, or the years 1914-17 when he attended the University of Missouri.

Mr. Sandige graduated in 1914 from the Arizona State College—it was then a Normal School and would have received his B.S. degree in Agriculture at Missouri in 1918, had not the closing of the College of Agriculture because of World War I interfered. The additional hours were completed by mail, and he came back in 1926 to receive the degree.

Going to Arizona in 1917, Mr. Sandige was Agricultural Expert for copper companies in Arizona, having the largest War Gardens in the U. S. at that time. He was a county agricultural agent for three years, and taught vocational agriculture three years.

Mr. Sandige received the 1950 Award for the Outstanding Alumnus of Arizona State College. He has served as a member of the Board of Education of A.S.C., and is past president of the Alumni Association.

While a student at M.U. he waited tables to earn his meals, and borrowed from the Student Loan Fund. From such experience stems his interest in helping establish a Student Loan Fund at Arizona State. He has been Trust Officer of this fund for the past 15 years.

Active in a great number of civic organizations of Phoenix and of the State of Arizona, Mr. Sandige is President of the School Board of Creighton, the largest rural district in Arizona with 4000 pupils and over 160 teachers. He worked with the Boy Scouts for 25 years.

He is a member of the Advisory Board of the Board of Regents of the University of Arizona and of two State Colleges.

Mrs. Sandige was formerly Florence Dunbar, B.S. in Ed. '17. Their daughter, Helen S. Hinkle, attended the University of Missouri, '43. John Dunbar Sandige, their son, was a student here in 1938 to 1940.

Irwin Dunbar, '14, is a brother of Mrs. Sandige. A sister, Helen Dunbar, who is now Mrs. Paul Price, received her degree in 1910, and a brother, Allen, attended in 1912.

For the 16th straight year, last June was a big month in the life of John R. Sandige. In his home town of Phoenix, Arizona, he was guest at several delightful "house-raising," made paternal calls in a hundred other newly completed homes, hugged babies named after him, gently counseled their parents, and tactfully answered endless questions.

It was all part of a job that has made him one of the happiest men alive. John, a youngish, gray-haired grandfather whose business is real estate, is adopted "father" of 1,500 young couples for whom he has developed a unique plan—called one of the most important ideas in home building in 50 years.

June is John Sandige's month because most new families are started then. For example, he arrived by invitation at the young newlywed O'Days. It was 5 p.m. on a Saturday and 20 guests were already there, dressed in old shirts and jeans. They had brought carpentry and electrical tools, paint brushes and jolly spirits, and now were at work amidst terrific clatter.

At 7 o'clock, pretty Mrs. Judy O'Day served dinner in the yard while her Pat proudly beamed. By 10 p.m. their new home was complete and an hour of square dancing wound up the festival.

Pat and Judy had bought the home—still unfinished—from John Sandige for $3,985, paying $190 down and signing to pay $29 a month the first year, then $35. It was "barny" at that stage; some interior walls not up, painting incomplete, some cabinets unmade, many details unfinished. But the 20 friends at the house-raising whizzed through to completion in that one day, Pat having laid out $400 worth of materials for them. This way he and Judy saved about $2,415, since their finished home, at the market sale value, was worth at least $6,800.

That is Sandige's system—selling unfinished homes to newlyweds who complete the work themselves. . . .

"Every young man fancies himself a carpenter," says John, "and every bride knows she is an interior decorator. With just a little guidance they end up with nicer homes than any builder could offer them at prices they can afford."

Not all the homes are finished in group house-raising. Many couples prefer to do the work themselves, slowly. One family moved into their house, faced a series of illnesses, camped for a year while recouping their fortunes, then finished it. No mortgage was foreclosed, no pressure applied. . . .

Average price paid for the unfinished houses is $4,200; average saving, from $1,000 to $3,500. During the 16 years of the plan's operation, not one seller has lost money on his investment!

Sandige's plan is now being copied, with his hearty sanction, in several communities; the buyer can make a deal with almost any reputable builder for an unfinished home. . . .

More than 60 per cent of the buyers pay off their homes in five years. Not once has John lost money due to any character fault of his "children"; none has skipped out, or tried to gyp him. On the contrary, many look to him for guidance in almost everything. . . .

How to plan a family is an important part of Sandige's counseling. Surprisingly many youngsters get married while woefully ignorant of life's problems.

In one day John had to show a bride how to mix house paint, teach a young man to saw in a circle, show a newlywed how to tenderize tough meat. Then, at midnight, a mother called to ask what to do about whooping cough.

One spirited bride threw dishwater on her husband, ordered him out of their home, then an hour later called John. "Please help me find him, Mr. Sandige," she sobbed. "And tell him I love him and never want him to leave again."

John found him, and took both youngsters to dinner that night. Small wonder their baby is named after John Sandige now, and that John is its godfather.

It is a bit irregular to classify W. I. OLIVER, member of a pioneer Boone County family, in the class of 1916, but his story is the story of many educators of former days. Mr. and Mrs. Oliver, the former Roy Conley of Columbia, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary on December 25, 1951. This half-century milestone recalled many interesting experiences in his career as a teacher and administrator.

Before his marriage in 1901, Mr. Oliver attended the University of Missouri one year and taught three years in the rural schools of Boone County. He spent 17 summers in summer school, completing work toward a B.S. degree in education in 1916, an A.M. in 1926, and enough additional credit that he lacks only a dissertation of having a Ph.D. degree. During these years Mr. Oliver taught at Ashland, Arrow Rock, Sweet Springs, Salem and California in Missouri, and in Tulsa, Oklahoma. In 1920 he became superintendent of schools in Columbia, Missouri, a post he held until 1932. He then joined the W. M. Welch Manufacturing Company of Chicago as its Missouri representative and continued with that firm until forced to retire because of his health in 1950.

Mrs. Oliver attended Christian College and Columbia Normal Academy and also taught in the schools of Boone County.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver are the parents of six children, five of whom are living and all of whom are graduates or former students of the University. They are J. V. Oliver, '25, and W. I. Oliver, '36, both of Leavenworth, Kansas; Mrs. C. A. (Mildred) Smith, '28, of Jefferson City, Mo.; Mrs. J. A. (Marjorie) Francis, '28, of Albuquerque, N. Mex., and Mrs. Frank (Roy Conley) Burr, '46, of La Mesa, California.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver live at 1400 Anthony Street, Columbia, Missouri.

ALBERT GLENN DUBLE is an engineer with the Quartermaster Corps, U. S. Army. Mrs. Duble, the former FLORENCE McGAVOCK, is a graduate of Christian College and attended the University of Missouri in 1917 and '18. Mr. and Mrs. Duble live at 10548 S. Maplewood Avenue, Chicago, Illinois. Their daughter, Dorothy Lee, is Mrs. O. W. Reehard of Las Alamos, New Mexico. She is a graduate of Christian College in Columbia, Mo., and of the University of Wyoming and the University of Wisconsin.
