Another year has ended. Our university has now seen one hundred and two of these years. What stories could be told if the Columns could speak! Stories of progress, of ever-changing personalities who have had a hand in that progress; and yet, in one respect, there has been no change. For the university today is the same in purpose as the university of 100 years ago—to educate the young people of our state so that they may take their places in the ever-changing world. The rapidly changing world of today poses a real challenge to a University. Our Alma Mater is meeting this challenge and stands proudly as one of the finest institutions of learning in the country.

What has happened in 1951? To meet the needs of our young people and to better serve the state, here are some of the University's accomplishments in 1951—not all, by any means, but a few.

Completion and occupation of the new A. Ross Hill building for the College of Education.

Occupation of the new Agriculture building.

Establishment of a B.S. degree in Statistics.

Establishment of a B.S. degree in nursing.

Laying the cornerstone of the new Student Union building.

Naming of the five new resident halls.

Establishment of a two year curriculum leading to a masters degree in Social work.

Granting of Fulbright awards to five M. U. Professors.

Gifts and Grants totaling $203,598.40 from 229 individuals and organizations.

Meetings of thirty-one different alumni clubs.

Re-election of President F. A. Middlebush as President of the Association of American Universities.

University of Missouri first member of the Big-Seven Conference to comply with regulations and publish athletic scholarships.

And so we enter '52

A challenge to be met anew.

Your part and mine is not to rest,

Until M. U.'s the very best.

THE COVER—The first snow-fall in Columbia this year came on October 31. According to the old-timers, this means 31 snows. This may not always hold true, but Missouri is getting an unusual amount of ice, sleet and snow, and the dome of Jesse Hall looks out on a January world of icy boughs and winter beauty.

ENROLLMENT STATISTICS UNIVERSITY OF MISSOURI

The University of Missouri ranks among the first twenty-five of the Nation's 818 four-year colleges and universities this fall in the total number of fulltime enrollments, according to statistics compiled by Dr. Raymond Walters, president of the University of Cincinnati.

Dr. Walters' statistics do not include 433 students in the University of Missouri who are carrying less than twelve hours of college work for the semester. He lists the University enrollment as 8,231 students, ranking twenty-fifth among the country's colleges, while the University's official figures show 8,664 students regularly enrolled in all divisions.

The statistics reveal that the University of Missouri is far ahead of the national enrollment trend in two categories, an increasing number of freshmen and increased enrollments in the field of education. Dr. Walters reports a general decline in these two categories in the national picture, while the University of Missouri shows an increase.

Freshman enrollment at the University of Missouri has increased about 16 percent over what it was a year ago, according to the University's official figures released after three weeks of classwork. This is the first time since the war that freshman enrollment shows an increase here.

Dr. Walters states in his report, "Most alarming of all, in view of the need for teachers—is the calamitous decline in young men and women entering education courses. There are 21.6 per cent fewer freshman men and 10.3 per cent fewer freshman women, or an average of 15.3 per cent less, in teachers colleges this fall."

Commenting on the nation-wide decrease in freshmen enrollments, Dr. Walters agrees with other authorities that severe economic conditions during the great depression of the early thirties is responsible for the serious decline in the birthrate during that period. (Today's college freshman was born in 1933.)

"It is the aspiring, middle income families that normally send their children to college," Dr. Walters says, "and it seems probable that their number of children during the 1930's is now affecting college attendance and will continue to affect it for some years."

When Grandma was a girl she didn't do the things the girls do today. But then the Grandmas didn't do the things the Grandmas do today.

STUDY OF RURAL CHURCH RECEIVES $51,245 GRANT

The University of Missouri has received a grant of $51,245 from the Rockefeller Foundation to finance a four-year scientific study of the rural church as a social institution in Missouri.

President Frederick A. Middlebush said the study is to be made under the supervision of Dr. C. E. Lively, chairman of the department of rural sociology and director of the University's Institute for Research in the Social Sciences. Dr. Lively, who will be chairman of a technical committee to conduct the work on the project, said that basic preliminary work has already begun.

The Bible College of Missouri is cooperating with the University on the project, with Dean Seth W. Slaughter of the College serving as chairman of an advisory committee composed of church officials and interested laymen. Although the Bible College is not actually a part of the University, the two institutions cooperate closely in their educational activities, and accept interchange of credits toward degrees.

Dr. Lawrence M. Hepple, associate professor of rural sociology at the University, will be the active leader of operations of the technical committee. Other members are Cecil L. Gregory, University Instructor in rural sociology, and Vladimir E. Hartman, head of the department of the rural church at the Bible College.

Dr. Lively said the entire project will be administered through the Agricultural Experiment Station in the University's Division of Agricultural Sciences under the dean and director, Dr. J. H. Longwell.

There has not been an important scientific study made anywhere in the United States within the past twenty years of the rural church as a social institution, according to Dr. Lively. He said that these two decades have brought tremendous changes in the economic and social conditions of the rural population, particularly in the middle west, and that the study will attempt to evaluate the effect of these changes in relation to the place of the church and its effect upon community life.

JOURNALISM COURSES OFFERED IN ST. LOUIS

The University of Missouri will offer three journalism courses in St. Louis during the coming Winter Semester through cooperation of its school of Journalism and Adult Education and Extension Service.

Arrangements have been completed to present classes in typography, feature and special article writing, and industrial and business periodical editing for the sixteen weeks beginning January 28. Students may enroll for any of the three courses in journalism at a registration meeting to be held in the office of the Western Newspaper Union, 1027 North Grand Boulevard, at 8 p.m. Monday, January 28. There will be a registration fee of $12 for each of the courses.

Following that initial meeting, the classes in feature and special articles will meet on Monday evenings in the Post-Dispatch Building; classes in industrial and business periodicals will meet on Tuesday evenings in the Globe-Democrat Building; and the classes in typography will meet Thursday evenings in the office and shops of the Western Newspaper Union. Classes will last two hours.

Two hours of University credit may be earned for successful completion of either of the sixteen-week courses if the student is otherwise eligible for such credit. However, anyone who feels he can profit by one of the courses may enroll on a non-credit basis even though he would not be qualified to enroll in a university.

The course in editing of industrial and business periodicals is a new one for the University's extension center in St. Louis, and is being presented in answer to numerous requests from residents of the greater St. Louis metropolitan area who are interested in the trade and technical or house organ journalism field.

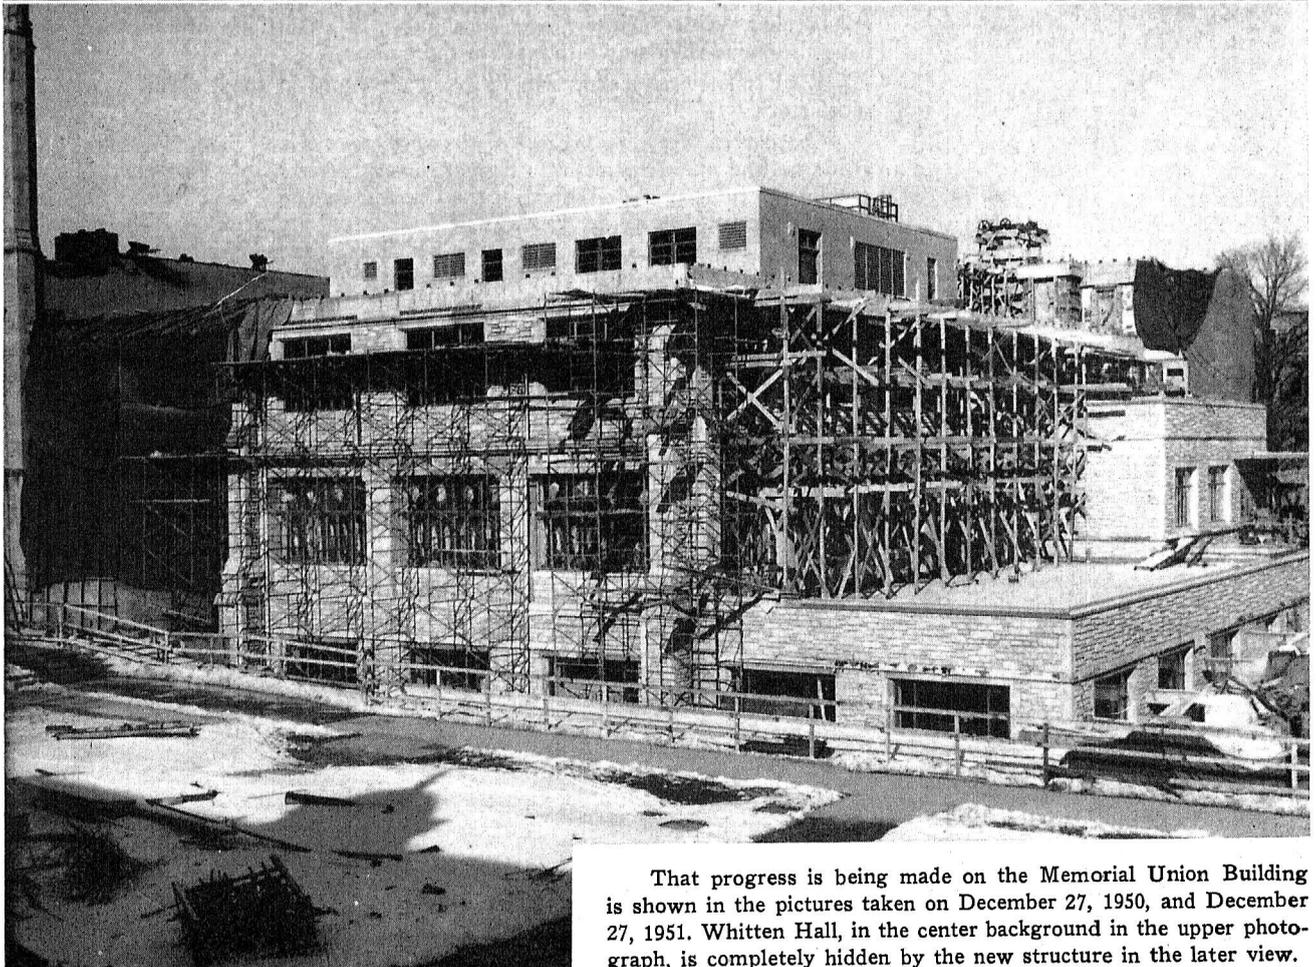

The courses in typography and in feature and special article writing have been offered in the St. Louis extension center in the past and have remained much in demand.

The industrial and business editing course will be taught by Miss Mina Sennott, a graduate of the University School of Journalism, '38, and now editor of the Bemis Bag Company house publications in St. Louis and member of the general personnel and industrial relations department of the company.

The St. Louis class in typography will be taught by John Schaab, member of the staff of Hadley Technical School in St. Louis, and Dr. Paul Fischer, instructor in journalism and Director of the Linotype School at the University. The course in feature and special article writing will again be taught by Clarissa Start Davidson, star reporter and feature writer for the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Miss Sennott, Mrs. Davidson and Mr. Schaab will hold Board of Curator appointments as extension instructors (part-time) at the University, and their courses will be under direct supervision of the School of Journalism and the Adult Education and Extension Service.

"An 'aye' for an I," muttered the candidate, as he voted for himself.

That progress is being made on the Memorial Union Building is shown in the pictures taken on December 27, 1950, and December 27, 1951. Whitten Hall, in the center background in the upper photograph, is completely hidden by the new structure in the later view.

IN NEW YORK CITY . . .

When the Missouri Engineering Alumni held their Reunion in New York City on November 29, nearly forty members gathered at the Engineers' Club in the main floor lobby for exchange of greetings and welcome. By seven o'clock they were assembled in the banquet room on the tenth floor. Mr. Lee Schneitter, '20, introduced Dean Huber O. Croft of the College of Engineering as principal speaker of the evening. Interesting recollections of life at 'Old Mizzou' were given by such men as Philip Savage, '15; C. M. Laffoon, '14, and Phillip Gussow, '27. The arrangements committee, consisting of Mr. Schneitter, Mr. Fred Powell, '39, and Mr. Robert H. Smith, '49, was re-elected for another year.

IN CHICAGO . . .

Approximately forty alumni of the University of Missouri gathered at the second meeting of the year for the Chicago group at the Builders Club on December 6, 1951. Paul Christman spoke to the group on "College Football Today." Films of the Cardinal-Ram pro game and of the University of Missouri were shown.

Elected to a directing committee, with a more permanent Board of Directors to be elected later, were: Dr. Richard Crouch '26, Dan Kelly '48, Bob Lewis '50, Mark Cox '38, Paul Christman '41, Harry Barger '40, Art Indermark '27, Harris Wells '09, Mrs. Pat Perrone '49 and Miss Mel Britt '51. Of particular interest to the Board at present is the revision of an address list for graduates and former students in Chicago and the surrounding area.

IN ST. LOUIS . . .

On December 10, 1951, President Frederick A. Middlebush of the University of Missouri congratulated the St. Louis Alumni Association on its fifty years of constructive service to the University's educational ideals, and told its members that their wise leadership has set a sound pattern for alumni cooperation and support. The fiftieth anniversary dinner was in salute to the University's School of Law.

Dr. Middlebush told his listeners that an alumni association such as theirs has a very definite place in the University's over-all program, and that they themselves were living evidence of the useful, vital service the University is rendering our State and Nation.

"The integrity and autonomy of the institution must be maintained if it is to continue to render such service," he said. "You as alumni have a special

Gentlemen:

Will you please mail THE MISSOURI ALUMNUS to me at the address shown below, together with any back issues you have been able to hold for me in accordance with my request of sometime in June or July.

My trip from Yokohama, Japan to England was really delightful. I was on a Swedish freighter from Yokohama to Basrah, Iraq, with stopovers of 3 to 6 days in the various ports during the eight weeks' trip. From Basrah to Baghdad, I traveled by the Iraqi Railway, and from Baghdad to Damascus I was on what they call the longest air-conditioned bus in the World. I went to Beirut by taxi, then flew to Rome, and on into Germany and England by train.

It was quite a surprise in Basrah to find thousands of American men's coats being sold in shops and at street auctions to the Arabs. They are worn over the native robe and under the robe that is used as a form of coat.

The cities of Hongkong, Singapore, Colombo, Ceylon, were quite modern, and also quite interesting because of the many nationalities represented there.

Madras, Bombay, and Karachi were very depressing because of the thousands of refugees.

We passed within a few yards of Abadan, and the hundreds of dead smokestacks make one feel that he is looking at a graveyard.

Baghdad is very disappointing as there is only one small cabaret and three motion picture theaters, and no other form of evening amusement.

Damascus is a very surprising place because of the beautiful wide boulevards and ultra-modern apartment houses, business buildings, and homes which constitute the greater part of the city. While in Damascus I visited with Mr. and Mrs. Adnan Hayany (Miss Ethel Hedrick), and also saw Riad Abou-Seoud and Satar-Abdul Atassi, who are MU graduates.

The most interesting feature of a trip of this kind is to see the extent to which American products have travelled around the World. Coca-Cola and/or Pepsi-Cola signs were observed in every city except Damascus. I saw offices of Singer Sewing Machine and even in little narrow streets in Basrah and Baghdad, I saw tailors' shops with ancient Singer machines. Toilet articles and canned foods have also found their way into most of the cities.

Food is terrifically expensive in every city, and in some cities is very unsatisfactory.

Germany is surprising because of the vast quantities of food, clothing, leather goods, and all other commodities that are available. Actually, it seems that one can eat much better and cheaper on the German economy than on the American military messes. By contrast, England has practically nothing. Their weekly ration of meat depends on the type for which they spend their 10-penny allowance. Incidentally, tests have been conducted in the stock records posting sections at this depot, both with the knowledge and without the knowledge of the employees, and it has been found that 75% of the workload must be accomplished before 12:00 noon. Apparently they do not have the stamina to maintain their production level throughout the day.

I am now a Supply Procedures Analyst in the 59th Supply Group Depot, Burtonwood Air Force Base. This is in northern England and the climate is terrible with fog and rain most of the time. Living conditions are very unsatisfactory, but those for our people in France and Africa are far worse, and there is a terrific job to be done at all of our overseas installations.

I am looking forward to the spring and summer in the hope of getting some nice trips into the continent and Scandinavian countries.

With kindest regards.

When Larry Wolters, TV critic for the Chicago Tribune selected his favorites for 1951 he called Zooparade the show that has "everything a television show should have—universal appeal" and "television at its best." One of the star human performers of this fascinating and educational Sunday afternoon program is Marlin Perkins, 46-year old director of Chicago's Lincoln Park Zoo.

One of those extremely fortunate men who have realized their life-long ambition, Perkins achieved national stature in his chosen field when he beamed at the world from the cover of the July 7, 1947 issue of Time magazine with that same penetrating smile that now greets millions of TV viewers weekly from coast to coast.

Born in Carthage, Mo., Mr. Perkins spent his childhood in Pittsburg, Kansas, known to the neighbors as "that awful Perkins boy" who collected all sorts of available animals—with snakes as his favorite. Perkins' obsession for animals has never died. At 14 he entered the Wentworth Military Academy and hid snakes in his closet until he was caught one day exercising them in a field. He completed high school at Carthage.

After working for a year Perkins entered the University of Missouri to study zoology. His continued affection for snakes entered with him. Once while talking to his girl he produced a king snake from his pocket fully believing that she would like it as well as he did. But she "took one look and had hysterics." That ended the romance. Perkins is still unable to fully explain his preference for snakes. He points out that they are the world's best rodent hunters and helplessly says, "Some people would rather have rats than snakes around the house."

Perkins left the University after two years and turned up in St. Louis where Zoo Director George Vierheller gave him a job—sweeping sidewalks. After two weeks he was put in charge of the reptiles—a motley collection of five small snakes and a feeble ten foot python. Perkins began building the collection by hunting snakes himself and soon St. Louis had one of the finest collections in the country. In 1928 Perkins very nearly handled his last snake. While handling a gaboon viper the reptile slipped free and sank one fang into his finger. In twenty minutes Perkins' arm was twice its size and turning black. By all rights he should have died—but three weeks later he was back at his job. Needless to say, the experience had no effect on his love of snakes.

In 1938 Perkins went to the Buffalo Zoo as director. Here he found opportunities for improving conditions. In a few years the animal population was doubled and a new reptile house was built that set new standards for U. S. Zoos. He resigned in 1944 and went to Chicago. Here he added informative signs, painted the cages, set up a Zoo-answer shop (information place) and added a Zoorookery (a cageless exhibit of scores of pinioned birds.) And of course, he enlarged the reptile exhibit.

The distinction of being Chicago's biggest, most modern zoo belongs to Brookfield. But it is Perkins's Lincoln Park Zoo that continually draws the crowds—partly because it is easily accessible, and partly because it is small and compact, set off by lagoon and gently rolling lawns. The Zoo's prize specimens have included the famous gorilla Bushman (now deceased) and Heinie, the chimp who would stomp to gain attention and then spit in the face of the nearest spectator. TV stars of the zoo are Heinie II, Sinbad the gorilla, Chief Beaded-Bag the gila monster, and the unnamed timber-rattlesnake which bit Perkins during a show last April.

Perkins has done many odd chores during his day. He has cleaned out elephant skulls and put them on exhibition, and removed the scent glands from skunks. In 1946, with two Chicago newsmen, he hunted eels by flashlight in the open sewers of a southern Louisiana town.

Someday Perkins hopes to have a new reptile house for Lincoln Park with the best snake collection in the world. Then he would like to use the old house to present a complete natural history of animals—showing the relation between animals step-by-step—sort-of evolution on display. Says Perkins, "Just think—you start out with microscopic life, go on with sea worms, and pretty soon you have the whole blooming animal kingdom in front of you."

R. MARLIN PERKINS
Director, Lincoln Park Zoo, Chicago Park District.

PROFESSOR EMERITUS, DR. CALVERT, DIES

Dr. Sidney Calvert, professor emeritus of organic chemistry at the University of Missouri, died on December 27 at Libertyville, Illinois, where he has lived for the past four years.

Dr. Calvert, born September 18, 1868, in Rochedale, England, received a B.S. degree from McGill University in 1890 and an M.A. degree from Harvard in 1892. He joined the staff of the University of Missouri in 1894 and taught organic chemistry here for 48 years. At the time of his retirement in 1939 he was director of the chemical laboratory.

Survivors include four children, all graduates of the University of Missouri. They are Dr. John F. Calvert, '22, A.M. '24; Catherine J. Calvert '24, A.B. '26, A.M. '33; Sidney H. Calvert, '32, A.M. '34, and Staunton K. Calvert, '33, A.M. '34.

BRONZE STAR MEDAL TO CAPTAIN WASHBURN

Capt. Melburn N. Washburn of Mountain Grove, Mo., was recently awarded the Bronze Star Medal for meritorious service with the 3rd Division in Korea.

Captain Washburn, who has been rotated to the United States, was assistant staff judge advocate with the 3rd. He was cited for his service during the period of Feb. 9 to Dec. 21, 1951.

Washburn is a graduate of Mountain Grove High school and the University of Missouri. During World War II he served in the Coast Guard. He entered the Army in November 1949 and arrived in Korea on Jan. 31, 1951.

His wife and three children live in Mountain Grove.

A. A. JEFFREY NAMED OUTSTANDING CITIZEN, '51

A. A. Jeffry, associate agricultural editor at the University of Missouri, was presented the Optimist Club's 1951 Outstanding Citizen Award at the annual club banquet in November. This award was made for outstanding achievements in agricultural press writing, for work in civic affairs, and for being a good citizen and parent.

When he was a Senior he figured it all out just how he would say it: "Sir, I am a graduate of the University of Missouri. I made the debating squad, and never failed to make less than 'B' in my school work. I was a student leader. Now if you have a place open as first assistant business manager I will consider it."

A UNIVERSITY within a university

To take the University to the State—a practical education within the reach of every citizen—this is the wish of the Adult Education and Extension Service of the University of Missouri.

By JERRY SMITH, '52

In recent years when the enrollment at the University reached into the 15,000 area, the figure was considered astronomical. In fact the present student population of some 8,000 is considered a healthy size. But last year, quite unnoticed by the general public, ONE division of the University had 11,000 students in one section of its program, 2600 in another and served SIX MILLION persons in still a third.

This remarkable part of the University—little known locally—is situated in the west wing, ground floor of Jesse Hall and is identified by an unpretentious sign above its entrance as the Adult Education and Extension Service. Combining a wide range of educational activities with an active prosecution of its services, the department has grown rapidly in the scope until it gained, last year, the commendable distinction of having the largest enrollment in its Correspondence Department of any American University.

Created in 1946 as an extra-divisional department, it combined the new Adult Education Service with the old Extension Division. Placed in charge of the new creation was Amos J. Snider, who came to the University after his discharge from the army following the last war and served on the Veterans Service Committee until his appointment to his present position. A product of Carroll County, Missouri, he received his A.B. at Warrensburg and his M.A. and Ed.D. at the University of Missouri.

Serving under Dr. Snider as heads of various divisions of the department are C. W. Ballew, Assistant Director, Visual Education; Richard S. Brownlee, Assistant Director, Extension Activities; R. L. Davidson, Jr., Assistant Director, Editorial Activities; and Walter L. Smith, Assistant Director, Institutional on-the-Farm Training.

The purpose of the department in its twin activities of teaching and service is to make available to any Missourian the educational services of the University which are appropriate to being offered off campus. Naturally there are certain courses, such as laboratory courses which must be taken in residence. But generally it is within the scope of any Missourian to gain a good education without ever setting foot inside a school—after grade school—by using the department's facilities.

There are two major divisions within the Adult Education and Extension department, as the name itself implies. The Extension Service offers actual credit, while the Adult Education side is non-credit. That is the chief distinction. Courses from divisions of the University are offered for credit when the Dean of that particular division approves—if there are enough persons interested in the course to warrant its establishment.

Largest of the extension services is the Home Study, or Correspondence, which last year had the largest enrollment of any American University, in excess of 11,000. Approximately 5000 of these were from Missouri with 1,000 from Illinois. In order to carry on this service the department employs some 135 University instructors to grade papers.

Courses offered range from Accounting and Statistics to Zoology. Students can earn up to one year's credit toward a college degree, approved credit on State Certificates, as well as credit toward State requirements for teachers. Also a complete high school curriculum is available to persons who have completed the eighth grade. Cost of the courses is $4.00 per credit hour—this as compared with an estimated $25.00 an hour for regular students.

(NOTE: Further information on any activities or services of the Adult Education and Extension Department can be obtained by writing the department at 23 Jesse Hall, Columbia, Mo.)

Also a part of the Extension service is the Extension Course Offering, which, as contrasted to the Home Study course, is confined to the state of Missouri (because State funds are used for traveling). Course centers are set up throughout the State at which courses are offered by regular instructors from the University. Last year 93 courses (an all-time high) were offered in 47 different towns in Missouri and 2600 students received college credit.

The third section of the Extension service is the Visual Education Film Library (a non-credit section, of course) which has in excess of 3000 films, almost 98% of them educational. Last year the library had nearly 20,000 bookings and served some six million persons in Missouri and surrounding states. It is the only large educational film library in Missouri operating on a non-profit basis outside St. Louis and Kansas City. In connection with this service the department holds free visual education training units for teachers where they are able to learn how to use the films effectively.

Rental prices range from .50 to $2.00. Income from the films is used to buy new films—and in this manner the library is rapidly increasing in size. Film listings may be had for the asking and the films are available to any educational project. However, because of the demand, films are seldom sent far outside Missouri's borders. Subjects covered are Health, Safety Education, Youth and Parent Problems, Travel, Art, Handicraft, Athletics, Plants, Animals, The Sciences, and many, many more. The department requires renters to assert that admission will not be charged when its films are shown.

The second division of the department is Adult Education, the non-credit half. Instead of the individual level employed in the Extension services, the Adult Education services are based on a state-wide level and programs, rather than courses, are used. Here training programs which cannot be offered by local educational facilities are conducted by the University service. In this classification are:

1. Training of adult educational leaders (who in turn carry on the adult education work).
2. Farm training for veterans (this program at one time had 74 full time instructors and more than 2000 enrolled).
3. Law enforcement training (towns request training in certain aspects of law enforcement and instructors are supplied them).
4. Itinerant fire prevention and training (over 600 Missouri firemen have been trained in this program).
5. Rural Journalism (teaching newspaper techniques to rural newspaper correspondents.)

In addition annual state meetings are held for each of the divisions of the Adult Education program. Area meetings are held for those who cannot attend the state meetings. Special programs are also set up from time to time in order to fulfill a specific need of the time. For example, last year six polio clinics were set up in the state in co-operation with the Crippled Children's service in Columbia. Specialists were employed to provide the local doctors with information on detection and treatment of polio. The Adult Education service helps finance such activities and sets up the machinery that makes them an actuality.

In this same general pattern is the Speech and Hearing Clinic which travels to various Missouri communities, upon request, and conducts speech and hearing tests. The idea for services such as these usually originates in the University departments (such as the speech department in this case) and the Adult Education service acts as the vehicle for putting the plans in operation, as well as providing some of the finances.

These, then, are the chief activities of the department. Another of its services is the University Speakers program. Bulletins are issued regularly containing a list of University faculty members available as lecturers, and the subjects of their interest. Schools and other organizations in Missouri may obtain a speaker usually for a fee which covers only expense of travel. Sample topics in the current listing are Accounting, American Education, Education in Tacloban, Leyte, or Insects and Their Control.

The scope of this small (107 employees) department is almost unbelievable, and yet it is still a baby in age—though rapidly becoming something of a prodigy. Continuation and expansion of its work is sure to make it one of, if not THE, best in the country. To be of service to the people of Missouri, extending the educational opportunities to the borders of the state, is the aim of the Adult Education and Extension Service of the University of Missouri.

such extravagances as tobacco, spirits or snuff might, by his squandering, bring the total to $250.

Everything was at least a little bit

A few years earlier a woman traveler did not believe Columbia was "brought into ready and easy connection" with anything, as a school circular had claimed. She wrote the editor of the Statesman that "the people of your town enjoy at least one advantage and that is, in the event of foreign war, they are safe, for there is no danger of the approach of an enemy to Columbia, however resolute that foe may be."

There was little to do in Columbia different then. For example, this sparkler:

"Columbia, the seat of the University, and the seat of the justice in Boone County, is situated near the center of the state, twelve miles north of the Missouri River. The town contains about 1000 inhabitants. It is confidently believed that no location in the interior combines more advantages for the site of a literary institution of the highest grade. It is not surpassed in healthfulness; in economy of living; and in those social, moral and religious influences which are conservative of the character of young men, and promotive of good order, sound discipline and industrious habits of study."

Along this line, in 1862 the Missouri Statesman explained how University students could reach Columbia. "The Missouri River will bring students to Providence, only ten miles off, whence there is a plank road: The North Missouri will bring students to Centralia or Sturgeon, distance about 20 miles: The Pacific Railroad will bring students to Jefferson City, distance about 30 miles. From all which points there are regular stages to Columbia."

in those days and a quick trip to St. Louis or Kansas City was improbable, if not impossible. It was suggested that students carry several weeks change of clothing with them on short trips—service was slightly irregular on the overland stage.

There was no competitive feeling between various departments of the University in 1847—in fact there were no various departments. A student in those days was destined to be educated in arts and science or not at all—unless a drop of mathematics mixed with courses in "navigation, surveying, and leveling" might be considered an exception.

Freshmen were fascinated (it is assumed) with Bailey's Algebra, Anthon's Sallust, Xenophon's Anabasis, Classical Chronology, and Latin Syntax. These were the required "electives" of the day. The second semester brought Algebra reviewed, Sallust continued, Anthon's Horace (Odes), Geometry, Graeca Majora, Classical Chronology, and Latin Prosody. But just to make sure that the frosh didn't idle away his time he was also required to do "written translations from classical authors, composition and declamation, at stated periods throughout the year."

DR. SABINE RECEIVES NEW HONOR AT CORNELL

Dr. George H. Sabine, former professor of philosophy at the University of Missouri, has been elected president of the Cornell Library Associates, an organization which helps build the book collection of the Cornell University Library. Dr. Sabine received an honorary Doctor of Laws degree from Missouri in 1943. He is a professor emeritus of philosophy at Cornell, retiring in 1948 after seventeen years on the Cornell faculty.

The sophomore was more fortunate. He devoted his time to logarithms, trig, mensuration, Horace, Graeca Majora, Latin composition and mythology, conic sections and calculus, surveying and leveling, navigation and projections, Cicero (De Oratore), Roman and Grecian Antiquities and Greek composition. It may be asking too much of the imagination to guess what the upper-classmen were required to study, but we'll leave it there.

Another sparkler from the catalog was this:

"The University Edifice, a spacious, tasteful and commodious building, was erected at an expense of about $85,000 by the liberality of the citizens of the county of Boone, in which the institution is located." The Edifice, of course, was Old Academic Hall, which later departed this world. No one mentioned what beautiful traditions the columns would make if the surrounding building were to burn down. And no one has since seen fit to comment that the columns, considering today's prices, must be worth some $300,000 dollars.

The University had a great deal of consideration for the individual's feelings then (according to the catalog). A low standing in class resulted in a private admonition, plus parent notification. Unexcused absence from examination or continued delinquency, subjected the offender to "separation from the institution."

That might be considered the acme of diplomacy except that the following tops it: "If, however, students manifest such moral obliquities as render them unworthy members of the body collegiate, they are returned to their friends."

STUDENT SELECTED FROM ROTC UNITS

William R. Pierce, Jr., a senior in the University of Missouri from Gideon, Mo., is one of seventeen distinguished military students selected from ROTC units of the 13-state Fifth Army Area for appointment by President Truman as second lieutenants in the Regular Army.

Pierce is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Pierce, Sr., of Gideon, and expects to complete requirements for a degree in education from the University at the end of the present semester.

SPORTS

Big Seven Rules Changes

In an early December meeting the Big Seven Conference voted to ban post-season games in intercollegiate sports for all conference members. Also Spring football practice was cut from six weeks to 20 sessions as a limit; Spring basketball practice was limited to 12 sessions instead of three weeks and games were reduced from 24 to 21. The ruling adopted last year allowing freshmen to compete in varsity sports was dropped and athletes must complete their three years of eligibility in four years of school attendance.

Drastic limitations were put on the recruiting of athletes by alumni and coaches and the conference code on financial aid to athletes was amended. Travel expenses of athletes to the campus cannot be paid now by the school, staff members or alumni. The $15 for incidentals which previously was an outright grant to athletes now must be earned.

Tigers Top Iowa 49-42 Down Oklahoma 61-49

Big Bill Stauffer was the key man in the twin wins that put Missouri into the Big Seven Tournament finals. In the first game, with Iowa, Bill sank 18 points and was important in blocking the shots of Jim Strange, 6-foot-7 Cyclone center, as well as controlling rebounds. It was all Tigers in the first quarter as Iowa scored only one field goal. Their second one came after 3 minutes of the second quarter had elapsed. The Tigers led 28-4 at the quarter. Iowa picked up in the second half to come within three points of the Tigers at one time, but Missouri went on to win.

In the second contest Missouri, still the underdog, had to overcome a 29-27 halftime deficit, but racked up an easy 61-49 victory over Oklahoma's Sooners. It was a close contest in the first half, but the second was all Tigers as Bill Stauffer collected 26 points, for his season high, and Art Helms picked up 12 points while doing a brilliant job of controlling the backboards.

K. U. Wins Trophy, Tigers Win Respect

The Kansas Jayhawks finally won a Big Seven Tournament crown—but to M. U. fans and many others the crowning glory went to the fighting Tigers who lost—but weren't supposed to be there in the first place. Underdogs throughout the Tournament, the Tigers fought back time and time again to pull within two or three points of the Kansas five, but the Jayhawks—rated one of the top teams in the country finally topped the team that didn't even have a national rating, 75-65.

After the opening basket, Kansas led all the way. They would pull away by 10 or 11 points only to have the Tigers consistently sweep back to within two or three points. But if the Tigers were great, the Jayhawks were sensational in shot percentage and, in the final quarter, were unbeatable.

The game was marred in the last quarter when All-American Clyde Lovellette stepped on Tiger Win Wilfong after knocking him down. Lovellette was ejected from the game for the act and thereafter the spectators hounded Lovellette and the Jayhawks. What appeared to be a near "mob-reaction" resulted. Although Reaves Peters, Big Seven Commissioner, and Bruce Drake, O. U. coach, tried to restore order over the Public Address system, in order that the winning trophy could be presented to Kansas, it was not until the members of the Tiger squad, led by "Sparky" Stalcup, approached Lovellette and offered their hands in a display of real sportsmanship, that the presentation could be made. This was no easy effort on the part of a losing team, but it proves again that the athletes and their coaches here in "Tigerland," although not winning all of the time, exemplify the type of competitive spirit that makes us proud to be represented by them.

Junior Tiger Trackmen Whip Their Seniors

The freshmen and sophomore Tiger trackmen defeated the juniors and seniors 66½ to 58½ in an intersquad track meet as Coach Tom Botts unveiled his 1952 team last month. However, three varsity hurdlers, Bill Fessler, Levin Grey and Byron Clark were unable to compete. The frosh also had no competition in the pole vault. High jumper Bob Gorden is team Captain.

Stauffer Stars In Tiger Loss

Big Bill Stauffer went on a scoring spree at Tulsa, but it wasn't enough to overcome the Golden Hurricanes who won 60-53. The game was close most of the way, with Tulsa leading by two points at the first quarter, five points at the half and six points at the third quarter. With four minutes left, Stauffer dropped in three quick field goals, bringing his total points for the night to 21, but Tulsa gained possession and successfully froze the ball.

BILL STAUFFER

Most observers agreed the Maryville center was the best all-around athlete in the Big Seven Tournament. Stauffer is also an outstanding student and campus leader.

Football Final: Wren Tops

Junior Wren, who missed the Tiger's last two games, still managed to lead the team in three departments in the final statistics. Wren was tops in rushing with a 451 yard net in 103 tries; in pass receiving with 25 completions for 363 yards; and in punting with a 35.6 yard average for 50 tries. Wren was second in kickoff returns (Bill Fessler was first), and scoring (Jim Hook was first), and third in passing (lead by Scardino and Hook). The only department where Wren didn't at least show was in punt returns—and he only returned one.

Wren was the only Missouri player to receive mention in an All-American rating—he was chosen for the All-Players All-American team for an honorable mention.

Tigers Win Two In Home Twin-Bill

In their 1951-52 cage debut the Tiger cagers topped a stubborn Central College 48-35, and then trounced a weaker Missouri Valley, 62-48.

Bill Stauffer, all Big-Seven center, starred in the first game netting 19 points to lead the Tigers. Freshman Win Wilfong and 6-foot-8 Bob Reiter, playing in their first game as Tigers netted six and two points respectively. The Eagles kept it close all the way and the Tigers led 27-18 at the half. Central, led by 6-foot-8 Ed Christian, pulled within seven points of the Bengals with five minutes remaining in the game, but the Tigers froze the ball, and held the Eagles scoreless during that period.

Coach Stalcup used freshmen and sophomores entirely in the second game, against Missouri Valley, and the outcome never was in doubt. Freshman Art Helms led the Tiger scoring with 15 points, and Med Park followed with 10.

Razorbacks Top Tigers, 49-43

Lead by seven-foot Billy "Toar" Hester and his 22 points, the University of Arkansas Razorbacks dropped the traveling Tigers 49-43 at Fayetteville. The Tigers fast break was slowed to a veritable walk as the Razorbacks played at ball control. Arkansas took an early lead and led at the half by 8 points. Gene Landolt and Don Dipold led the Tigers with six points each.

Tigers Defeat New Mexico 43-38

Led by senior forward, Don Dipold, the Missouri Tigers defeated New Mexico A. & M.—a team which had narrowly missed beating Oklahoma A. & M. a few nights before. The Tigers jumped to an opening 7-0 lead and held it all the way with Dipold pacing the squad with 19 points.

Middlebush Proposes Out-of-State Barring

Speaking to Missouri Alumni at the Missouri Athletic Club in St. Louis early last month, President Middlebush revealed that he had recommended to fellow Big Seven School Heads that the conference take larger strides towards athletic de-emphasis by barring out-of-state students from intercollegiate competition. He said that the recommendation had been regarded as too revolutionary. Dr. Middlebush said that he had made the same proposal five years ago.

A creditor is a man who has a better memory than a debtor.

IN SPRINGFIELD, ILL. . . .

Alumni of the University of Missouri living in the Springfield, Illinois, area met on December 11 for a dinner party at the St. Nicholas Hotel in Springfield. A local chapter of the Missouri Alumni Association was formed, with Leroy Pieplow chosen as president for the year. A constitution was adopted, and plans were made for additional meetings to be held. Bus Entsminger, general alumni director of the University in a brief address, explained the alumni program. He also showed moving pictures of one of the Tigers' 1952 football games.

SAM BROUS PROMOTED BY GENERAL ELECTRIC

Sam L. Brous has been named general manager of the Chemical Materials Department of General Electric Company's Chemical Division in Pittsfield, Massachusetts.

Mr. Brous went to General Electric in 1949 from the B. F. Goodrich Chemical Company, where he was manager of the chemical sales department. Prior to his recent appointment of general manager of the Chemical Materials Department, he was marketing manager for the Chemical Division.

He received his B.S. degree in chemical engineering from the University of Missouri in 1928 and a masters degree in organic chemistry from M.U. the following year. He holds a number of patents in the plastics and chemical fields, and is a member of the American Chemical Society, the Chemists Club of New York, and the Commercial Chemical Development Association.

Positions are open as Civil Service Investigators, with salaries ranging from $4205 to $5060 annually, for college graduates who are willing to travel. Inquiries may be made of the Civil Service Secretary at the local post office.

Training Cut A Threat To Non Conference Play

Commenting on the new Big Seven ruling which limits spring football practice, Coach Don Faurot said that the cut might injure Missouri's chances when it plays non-conference opponents next season. However, since the ruling affects all conference teams it should make no difference there. Maryland and California are two of Missouri's non-conference openers next year.
