IF you are like most couples, the years after forty-five can be as rewarding as any in your lives. You've raised the children, seen them settled. Now you can look forward to enjoying many things you deferred while the family was growing up—to pleasant years made secure and independent by a lifetime of saving. How wise to protect that independence by investing part of your savings conservatively in safe, sure U.S. Savings Bonds! The return is good— $3\frac{1}{4}\%$  at the bonds' maturity. And you can increase your security so easily by buying more Series E Bonds regularly where you bank or automatically through the Payroll Savings Plan at work. Or, if you'd rather have your interest as current income, order Series H Bonds through your banker. The time to do it? Now. When financial independence counts, count on U.S. Savings Bonds!

commencement

1958

Commencement at twilight was an impressive Memorial Stadium production. The timing—6:30 p.m., June 6—was ideal for the University of Missouri's 116th graduation exercises. The lowering sun had spent its force for the day and was partly hidden by clouds. There was no threat of rain. The graduates—1,738 of them, almost a record—and the audience were comfortable.

The graduates gathered behind the east stands and by a circuitous route proceeded across the south end of the field to the center sections of the west stands. The audience around them was estimated to number 8,000. Pressure for seats caused President Ellis to decree that the program be held in the Stadium. It was only the second Commencement to be held there; the first was ended by a downpour eight years ago.

The Commencement address was given by Dr. Frederick C. Robbins, a 1938 Missouri graduate and now professor of pediatrics at Western Reserve University. He spoke on "The Role of Science in a Liberal Education." The University conferred honorary degrees upon Dr. Robbins; L. Mitchell White, Mexico, Mo. publisher; and Dr. Philip J. Hickey, superintendent of instruction in the St. Louis public schools. James A. Finch, Jr., president, Board of Curators, announced that gifts and grants to the University at Columbia in the year ending May 15 totaled $1,463,099.42. He expressed the Curators' appreciation to all donors for the interest and faith they have shown in the University.

The University Concert Band, conducted by Charles L. Emmons, played for the Academic Procession. Singing of the National Anthem was led by Prof. Herbert Gould. The invocation was by the Rev. Monk Bryan, pastor, Missouri Methodist Church.

at Missouri

Plans for class reunions need not be elaborate. This has been proved anew. The essential ingredients of a successful get-together, after all, are the reunioners themselves. Just provide the appropriate occasion and let them renew acquaintances, recall old times, and check on events wrought by the intervening years. No amount of programming can outdo the pleasures of reminiscing at an unhurried pace. And best evidence of an eagerness to get in a heap of visiting is when little clusters of returnees arrive early or stay late.

As was the policy last year, the June reunions were for the Silver Anniversary and Golden Anniversary classes; but this time old grads of more than fifty years ago were invited too. This innovation had happy results: twelve classes preceding 1908 were represented.

The schedule of arranged events was held to a minimum: Registration, coffee hour, banquet, luncheon, campus tours, and special seating at Commencement. The Alumni Office, the East Lounge of Read Hall, and the Student Union provided the settings.

At the banquet on the night of June 5, the speeches were informal and brief. President Ellis touched on some of the University's expansion, but stressed that a quality faculty had priority over new buildings. James D. the reunion, made a few remarks before starting home that night for his daughter's wedding. Claude B. (Si) Hutchison, Berkeley, Calif., was engaging in his talk as spokesman for the 1908 class. Bradford Brett of Mexico, Mo., representing the 1933 class, recalled some amusing incidents of his college days. Following the banquet the '33 members were invited to the home of Rosemary Lucas Ginn.

On both days tours of the campus proved a popular diversion and an enlightening one to many who had not seen the physical development of the University. Some of the visitors elected to take it easy, however, remaining at Read Hall to continue conversations with old classmates.

There were no speeches at the luncheon on Friday, but numerous introductions were made by Jean Madden, assistant alumni director. Several faculty members, past and present, were guests. They included Dr. F. A. Middlebush, Jesse Wrench, Miss Lura Lewis, Miss Caroline Hartwig, H. A. LaRue, A. G. Hogan, A. J. Stankowski, H. H. Krusekopf, J. N. Fellows, Albert K. Heckel, and Albert J. Dyer.

A number of the reunioners remained over and attended Commencement exercises at the Stadium.

On these pages numerous reunion scenes are recalled in photographs, but by no means are all the visitors represented in them. A complete list of registrants begins on page 28.

story of a diploma

Remembering the expression "receive his sheepskin" and recalling diplomas with elaborate hand lettering, the graduate may be surprised at the appearance of his diploma from the University of Missouri. It is printed on a heavy linen paper, instead of on some hapless sheep's hide, and his name and degree are in Old English script type, without flourishes and curls. However, he is so happy to end the long grind that he merely glances at the coveted symbol of graduation and rushes to get it framed for his family to admire.

Any graduate can tell of years of preparation, on his part. What he does not realize is that numerous employees of the University worked from February 1 until 10:30 a.m., June 6, to get diplomas ready for presentation. Miss Sallie Grant, assistant director of admissions and "shepherdess" of diplomas for the past twenty years at the University, and Howard Johnson, foreman of the typesetting department of Photo Service, cooperated in the compilation of this behind-the-scenes story of preparation of a diploma.

At the beginning of the second semester, Miss Grant sends letters to the deans of the eleven divisions, asking for the number of graduates anticipated, by men and women. She sends an order immediately to Photo Service to prepare the correct number of background diplomas, specifying how many should say "him" and how many "her."

The number of diplomas printed usually runs approximately 350 to 400 for February, 1400 for June, and 350 to 500 for August. These figures allow for discarding those that have errors, as well as the ones for which candidates do not meet requirements. Diplomas for Rolla School of Mines are not printed in Columbia.

The University issued sheepskin diplomas until 1941, when the price became prohibitive. Parchment proved to be too temperamental to use, since it is affected by changes in the weather. The paper stock selected comes in sheets large enough for four diplomas measuring 14" x 17". The stock is cut to diploma size before printing.

Students employed part-time do most of the printshop work. First, an employee locates the two negatives from which diplomas were printed last time. The last three lines of type are reset, to agree with the date of graduation. These three lines of type, in negative form, are stripped in, to replace the corresponding lines in the master negative. Next, metal plates are made from the corrected negatives. These plates then are sent to the pressroom, where a full-time shop employee prints, by the offset process, the specified number of background diplomas for men and for women. At this stage, the graduate's name and degree are missing, as is the signature of the dean of his division. Other signatures are included in the printed diploma.

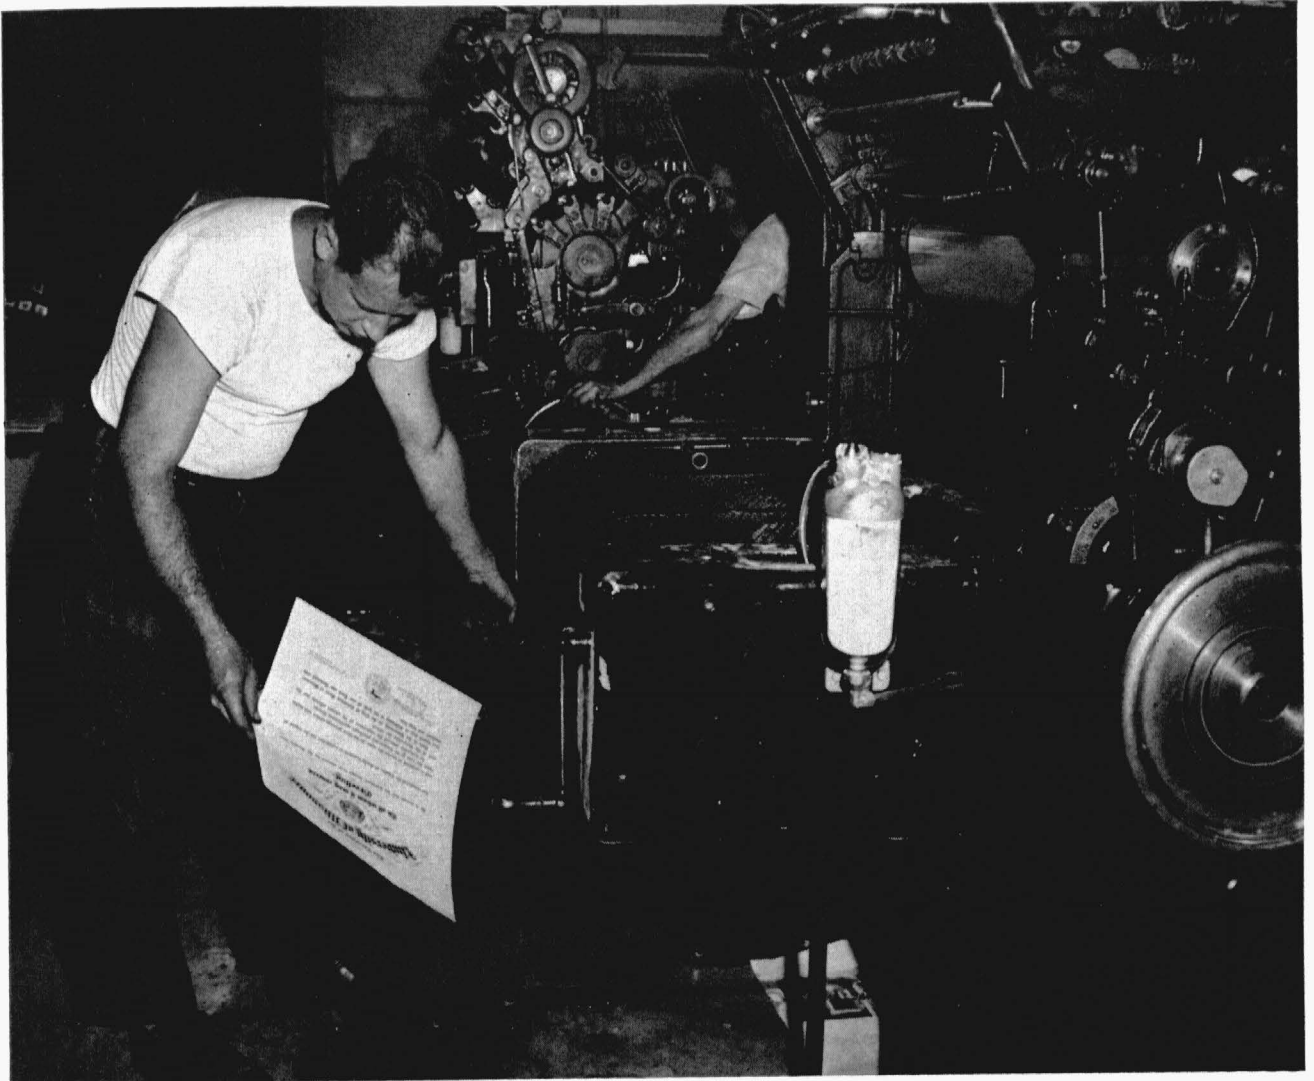

Back in the admissions office, there is more activity. Within two weeks after the first estimate of the number of candidates, the deans submit tentative lists of persons expected to qualify for degrees. Miss Grant mails a double postal card to each candidate. One card lists fees, such as: diploma, $5.00; microfilming and binding master's thesis, $5.00; doctor's hood, $20.00; microfilming and binding doctor's dissertation, $30.00. The other card has space for the candidate to write his name as it is to appear on his diploma and information needed for publicity.

As soon as she receives the students' replies, Miss Grant checks names with the permanent record cards and types lists for the typesetting department of Photo Service to use in preparing the diplomas, indicating men and women by colored pencil check marks.

Every year there are some mistakes, due to confusion of masculine and feminine names. Usually such errors are caught before graduation. If the error is not found, then Tommy Joe complains that she does not want "him" on her diploma, and a new diploma is prepared for her.

The long, tedious task of handsetting names and degrees is performed by students, employed part-time.

Pictures by the author.

Miss Sallie Grant of Admissions Office rolls the doctors' diplomas and ties them with black and gold ribbons.

Each letter of type must be selected from the case and inserted in the type stick. Graduates often wish their full names used, and married women want the full maiden name plus the added surname. Initials of degrees already earned are added after the name. The degree being conferred is spelled in full. All of this handsetting of type is slow work. After the type is used it must be redistributed in the case.

The handset type is locked in a form, and a background diploma is inserted on the proofpress. One careful turn of the proofpress roller prints the candidate's name and degree on his diploma. Handling the diploma cautiously, an employee places it on a counter to dry overnight.

Miss Grant makes daily trips to Photo Service to pick up finished diplomas. She checks the spelling of names with the original requests from the candidates, and passes the diplomas to the cashier's office for further checking, this time to make sure the students have met financial obligations.

A few days before Commencement, the deans receive reports of candidates for degrees. They check the records of candidates to be certain that scholastic requirements have been met. The faculty of each division has a meeting to recommend candidates for degrees, and the dean signs the diplomas for his division. In turn, the Board of Curators gives approval.

The admissions office, the cashier's office, and the registrar's office receive lists of those students who have completed requirements. Finally, Miss Grant checks the diplomas with her approved lists, setting

O. R. Johnson

Albert E. Trombly

M. Pinson Neal

M. G. Mehl

their service totals 157 years

Four veteran professors whose combined service to the University totals 157 years of teaching and research received the title of Professor Emeritus at the annual Commencement exercises in Memorial Stadium on June 6. University President Elmer Ellis presented emeritus diplomas to:

Oliver R. Johnson, professor of agricultural economics; Dr. Maurice G. Mehl, professor of geology; Dr. M. Pinson Neal, professor of pathology; and Albert E. Trombly, professor of French and Italian.

Professor Johnson has served on the staff for 46 years. His first appointment was in 1912, when he received a master's degree here two years after earning his B.S. in Agriculture degree. He was born in Kansas but was brought to Missouri at the age of two, growing up in Holt County and graduating from Maitland High School. In 1913 he became assistant professor of farm management and the following year was named chairman of the department. He became a full professor in 1920. The title was changed to professor of agricultural economics in 1926 when the department was changed to agricultural economics. Professor Johnson is the author of scores of articles and pamphlets. He has long been active in civic affairs and municipal politics in Columbia.

Dr. Mehl, a member of the faculty for 39 years, is also a native of Kansas. He received B.S. and Ph.D. degrees at the University of Chicago. He joined the Missouri staff as instructor in geology after teaching at Wisconsin, Oklahoma, and Denison University. He has served as professor in summer sessions at Chicago and the University of Colorado.

Dr. Mehl received early promotions and in 1946 became a full professor. He is known as an outstanding vertebrate paleontologist. At one time he had the world's largest collection of conodonts (microscopic fish remains).

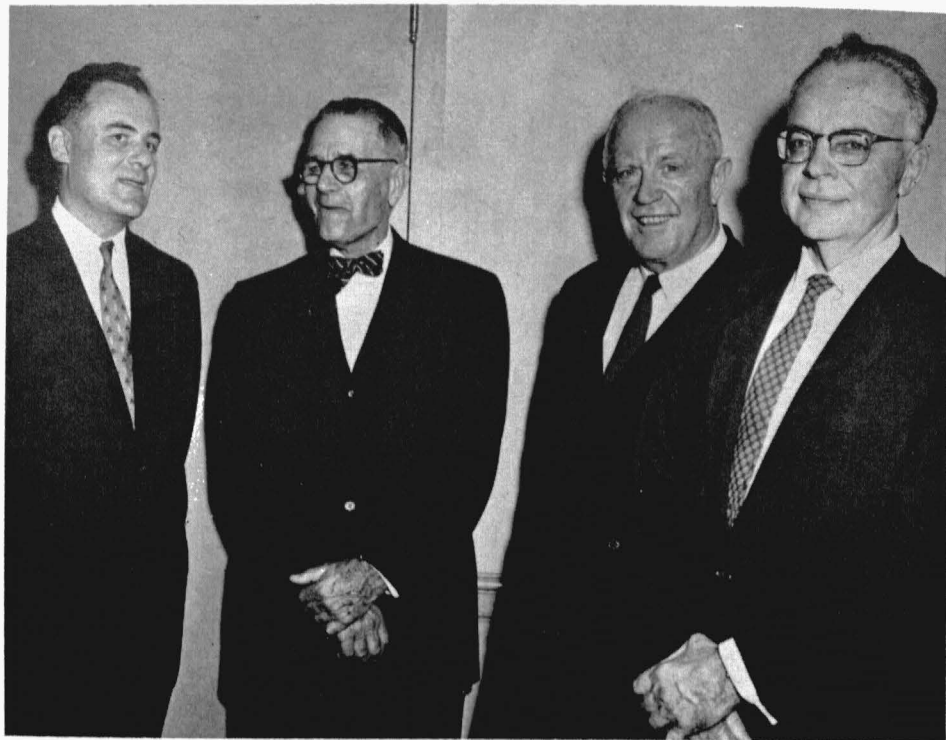

Dr. Neal was appointed professor of pathology in the School of Medicine in 1922 after ten years in varied posts. His service here has included nearly two years as acting dean before the appointment of Dr. Roscoe L. Pullen in 1953. Dr. Neal stipulated that he did not wish to be considered for the deanship. He was born in Heflin, Alabama. After attending the University of Alabama for three years he entered the University College of Medicine in Richmond, Va., where he received his M.D. degree.

Dr. Neal has served as director of the University Hospital Laboratories and as chairman of the department of pathology, bacteriology and preventive medicine. He has been consulting pathologist to Missouri's state eleemosynary institutions since 1922 and consultant to the Ellis Fischel State Cancer Hospital since 1940. He has also served as Boone County's coroner for a number of years.

In May, 1956, the Academy of General Practice of Greater Kansas City presented him a bronze plaque for his outstanding service in medicine. It was the first time that any chapter of the Academy has ever so honored a person who is not one of its members. A second honor came to Dr. Neal in 1956 when the Medical Alumni Association presented the medical school an oil portrait of him. The presentation was by Dr. A. W. McAllister III, of Kansas City, a graduate of the School and the grandson of one of its deans.

Professor Trombly, teacher, author, poet, and the first biographer of Vachel Lindsay, also came to the University in 1922. He is known not only as a veteran teacher of Romance languages but also for his published books of verse and for his biography of Lindsay. His most recent book of poems was "Little Dixie," published as one of the University Studies series in 1956. Professor Trombly is not a native of Little Dixie, however. He was born in New York State and was graduated from Harvard with an A.B. degree, cum laude, in 1913. He received his master's degree from the University of Pennsylvania in 1915. Before coming to the University he taught at Pennsylvania and Texas. His books of verse include: "Masque of American Drama," "North of the Rio Grande," "Santa Fe, Santa Fe," "Acorns and Apples," and "Grain of Sand." His biography of Vachel Lindsay was published in 1929.

University honors three

President Ellis conferred honorary doctorate degrees on three Americans distinguished in their fields at the University's 116th annual Commencement.

Honored were Dr. Frederick C. Robbins of Cleveland, Ohio, alumnus and Nobel Prize winner in medicine; L. Mitchell White of Mexico, Mo., newspaper editor and publisher; and Dr. Philip J. Hickey, superintendent of instruction in St. Louis public schools.

Dr. Robbins, who was the Commencement speaker, received a Doctor of Science degree for his part in discovery and development of tissue culture techniques which made possible the inoculation for polio.

Dr. Robbins is professor of pediatrics at Western Reserve University School of Medicine and director of the department of pediatrics and contagious diseases, City Hospital, Cleveland. He received an A.B. degree in 1936 and a B.S. in Medicine in 1938, both at M.U.

Dr. Robbins, working with Dr. John F. Enders and Dr. Thomas H. Weller, helped make the discovery which brought to the three men the Nobel Prize in Physiology and Medicine in 1954. Dr. Robbins was presented for the honorary degree by Dr. M. Pinson Neal, who had been one of the young scientist's teachers at the University.

Mr. White was awarded a Doctor of Laws degree for his strong editorial leadership working toward a better Missouri. He was presented by Dr. Earl F. English, dean of the School of Journalism, who read the citation which said in part: "His unselfish devotion to his native state has been felt in its better road programs, in the work of the State Historical Society, the School for the Deaf at Fulton, and especially at the University of Missouri. His sincere interest in the University's growth has been evident for the past forty years through his editorial leadership. He has carried on the high principles of newspaper publishing set by his father, and successfully passed these along to his son, to the end that this newspaper, the Mexico Evening Ledger, is known throughout the country as a model in the field of small city daily publishing."

Dr. Hickey received a Doctor of Laws degree for his contributions to progress in elementary and secondary education. He was presented by Dr. Loran G. Townsend, dean of the College of Education. Dr. Hickey was cited as a distinguished educational statesman and humanitarian: "During his administration the St. Louis school system has received national acclaim for audio-visual education; the teaching of reading and the language arts; and the teaching of gifted children. He has contributed immeasurably to the progress made in elementary and secondary education in Missouri in the last twenty-five years in connection with the State Public School Retirement System and the Foundation Program. In national educational circles he has made distinguished contributions by his sound judgment." The citation listed honors Dr. Hickey has received as a distinguished humanitarian.

Missouri's Judge Hyde

By Maude Freeland

Time has rested lightly on Judge Laurance Mastick Hyde. His experiences have left the imprint of serenity of spirit. His judicious mind is tempered with gentleness and a sense of humor.

The quiet dignity of the Chief Justice of the Missouri Supreme court does not quite desert him, even when he recalls some of the escapades of the students of the University's School of Law during the year 1915. He recalls that his roommate who was in engineering was dating the daughter of the Buick agent. On St. Pat's Day, he and his roommate drove two Buick cars in the parade. During the parade, the lawyers turned over the float; in retaliation the engineers stormed the law building. The freshman lawyers turned the fire hose on the engineers just as Dean Eldon James of the Law School came out — to get the full force of the deluge. From the Savitar of that day came the quotation, "we discovered that Dean James was human, for in the thickest of the fight he was heard to shout, 'Turn her off boys, the engineers have got the hose.'"

It was some twenty years later that we had occasion to visit in the family home. It is a pleasant memory. Their two children, Laurance M. Hyde, Jr., and Florence, were delightful, and Mrs. Hyde was a gracious hostess. The conversation at that dinner table drifted naturally from the recent trip they had made around the Mediterranean, on an export tramp steamer.

Judge Hyde, then Commissioner of the Supreme Court, had been out of Law School of the University about twenty years. Through these years he had been paving the way to become one of Missouri's most eminent jurist.

Judge Hyde was selected as a member of the Supreme Court under a constitutional amendment which he helped to formulate. The non-Partisan Court plan, which has taken the selection of the members of the Supreme Court out of politics, is being considered as a pattern for other states to follow.

During the years Judge Hyde has been in the Supreme Court, he has written almost 1,000 decisions, some of which have strengthened our way of life. One of the more important cases was what is known as the Bryan Mullphany Emigrant and Travelers' Relief Fund. Mayor Bryan Mullphany, one-time mayor of St. Louis, was a bachelor. When he died he left his estate to go to the immigrants who were stranded in

on time for classes

By Margaret Foster

To most students at Missouri, walking to class, carrying armloads of books and being asked to recite are as easy as writing their name. But there is a girl in the chemistry department who must use steel and leather braces and rubber-tipped crutches to walk to class. A boy in law school can't carry his books by the armload, for he has no arms. And to the fellow with cerebral palsy in Arts and Science, reciting in class is an exhausting effort.

For these people and the other handicapped girls and boys at Missouri, the campus routine is more complex. Yet, there are no students more likely to be in class when the physically fit can't make it because of the weather or alarm clock failures.

Most of these students would be dependent on their families now or working at jobs below their mental ability if they were not receiving aid from a little-known and much-needed agency called Missouri Section of Vocational Rehabilitation, State Department of Education.

In the fall semester of 1957, some 55 University students were being aided in some way by this agency. Some received full tuition, books and board, others part tuition. All received valuable counseling from one of the 50 professional workers scattered throughout the state.

Since the service began in 1954, approximately 1,500 persons have been trained at the University.

Missouri Vocational Rehabilitation is part of a nation-wide service, for it is a branch of the Health, Education and Welfare Department of the Federal Government.

Training is only one service of the many available through the agency. Transportation, treatment, artificial limbs, hospital care, occupational tools, equipment and licenses are also provided.

A boy with a heart condition, a girl with bad eyesight, someone with an unsightly birthmark—anyone who might have difficulty in finding employment is eligible. For the service is not only available to those who have "wheelchair handicaps," but to persons with speech defects such as stuttering, or deafness, epilepsy or mental illness.

Perhaps they hear of it through their school, welfare agency, employment office or hospital. They contact the headquarters in Jefferson City or one of the five district offices in St. Louis, Kansas City, Cape Girardeau, Springfield or Hannibal.

Whether the aid they receive is confined to counseling or if some of the state and federal funds will be used to rehabilitate them, depends on their need of services and financial ability. Approximately one million dollars will be available next year for the agency's operations. This is not such a high figure when one considers that the cost of one artificial leg alone is $300 and that thousands of dollars must be spent to rehabilitate persons with several disabilities.

Let's see how a handicapped person uses these services. His first step is to get a report from his physician explaining the extent of his handicap and if surgery or treatment can correct it. In addition to this, aptitude tests are conducted to determine the person's abilities. One graduate of the University Linotype School was a farm machinery mechanic before polio weakened his legs. The service trained him in the operation of a linotype, a job which satisfied his desire to work with machinery, and yet is not beyond his physical limitations.

Miss Foster, author of this article, will receive a B.J. degree in August.

A girl who wanted to be a newspaper woman and longed to go to the School of Journalism was disconsolate because her left hand was crippled by polio and she could not fulfill the typing requirement. The agency introduced the magic ease of an electric typewriter to her. By learning a touch system which shifted the major portion of typing to her good right hand, she was able to meet the requirement.

One of the chief benefits of the agency is that it takes the "handicap" out of a person's mind. By helping him to learn skills and become self-sufficient, he becomes less dependent on his family and friends. Coming away to school is one way to introduce this feeling of independence. Unable to hide in his bedroom, he learns to accept the curious stares of unthinking people. He usually loses the "I'm different" feeling so common to the handicapped.

Getting through the revolving doors at Jesse Hall with crutches, braces and a bag of books slung around your neck or trying to square dance in gym class when you have trouble co-ordinating your steps when you walk, becomes a matter-of-fact ordeal.

Last year, $111,954 was spent to train 335 of the 6,284 handicapped persons being assisted by the Department of Vocational Rehabilitation for the state. Of these 335 some 104 were sent to colleges or universities.

Some of the M.U. graduates who owe all or part of their education to rehabilitation have become important figures.

Graduates of the School of Law in 1943 will probably remember William L. Dodd. Mr. Dodd was born without arms, yet he is able to drive a car with his feet. In Ripley County, Mo. he has served as prosecuting attorney, probate judge and magistrate.

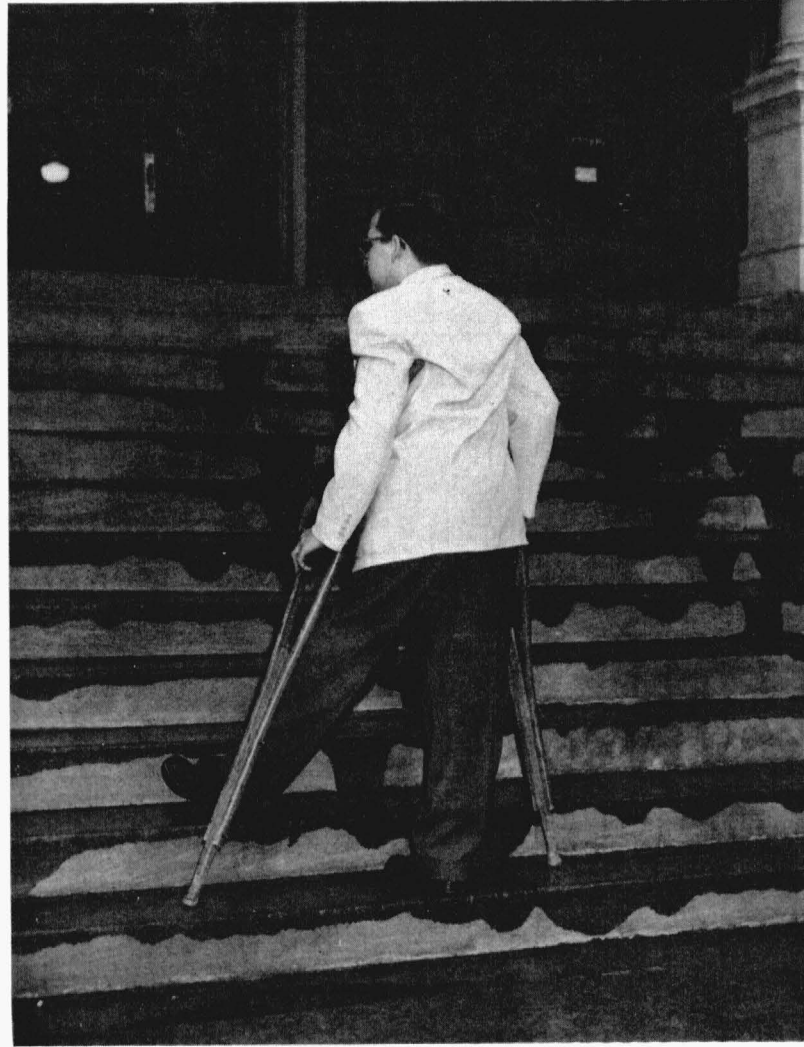

Raymond I. Steffens never really considered the fact his right arm was amputated below the elbow a handicap but rather "a condition that existed." Nevertheless, state assistance made possible a B.S. in Agriculture in 1951 and a M.S. in soils in 1953, thus preparing him for his job as associate county extension agent in Ste. Genevieve County, Mo.

Dick Dahms (June 1956, Bachelor of Laws) was helped by the organization since he was 16 (the minimum age for the service) with a series of operations which enabled him to stand upright although a congenital bone deformity below the hips had made it seem impossible.

Dick is now assistant attorney general in the office of State Attorney General John M. Dalton, and is married to Penny Brannan a former student.

A disabled arm enabled William J. Russell (B.S. in Agriculture, 1952) to receive aid. He is now field editor for the "Weekly Star Farmer," the farm publication of the Kansas City Star Company.

Jerry Evans (B.S. in Business Administration, June 1957) is another graduate of Missouri and Vocational Rehabilitation. He has a rare disease similar to muscular dystrophy although it is not fatal. He is presently working in the accounting department of Eastman Kodak in Kansas City, Mo.

A recent graduate, Dr. William B. Buck (June 1956, School of Veterinary Medicine) began receiving aid as a result of a fractured leg. Later, because of a diabetic condition, he continued to receive the service. He is presently with the U. S. Department of Agriculture as a livestock inspector and is married to the former Reva Whorton who went to M. U. also.

Then there is Clifford Crouch, a representative of Taney County, Mo. in the State General Assembly. One of his endless activities is seeing that the mobile X-ray unit is available to citizens of his county. Tuberculosis, now arrested, led to Mr. Crouch (A.B. 1952, LL.B. 1957) becoming a recipient of the service. His comment sums up the feeling most former clients have toward the agency: "I am forever grateful to the Vocational Rehabilitation for the aid and counsel given me."

the marauders

A sad sequel to Missouri's baseball success story is the continuing raids by major league teams, particularly the St. Louis Cardinals, for talented Tiger athletes. First, star outfielder-halfback Charley James was signed off the Missouri campus this winter. James gave up his Engineering education, his last two baseball seasons and his last year of football competition for a reported $15,000 bonus, and it's reasonable to assume on the strength of his fine showing at Houston in the Class AA Texas League this spring that he might have done much better had he waited. Next, star freshman quarterback Mike Shannon, who figured so prominently in Dan Devine's football plans for the next three years, signed a bonus in excess of $40,000 this spring with the same Cardinal ball club. The thing which made this deal particularly hard to stomach was the fact that the same Cardinal team was willing to pay the same boy only $4,000 last year. It's hard to believe that one year of non-varsity athletics would have made this boy ten times as valuable. Finally, outfielder Bo Toft, who helped lead the Tigers to their second place finish at Omaha, was signed at the end of his junior year by the Boston Red Sox for a reported $35,000.

In light of these developments it's easy to understand Dan Devine's antipathy toward this professional baseball team in his new home state, Hi Simmons' decision to make the major league scouts pay their way into Missouri baseball games (there were nine of them at the District 5 playoff between Missouri and the Iowa State Teachers and forty-five of them at the Collegiate World Series in Omaha), and the anxiety of both Dan Devine and Basketball Coach Sparky Stalcup over the possible loss of football star Hank Kuhlmann and basketball stars Sonny Siebert and Bud Harbin, all of whom played big roles in Missouri's fine baseball season. (As we go to press word comes that Siebert, captain-elect and leading scorer of the Tiger cage team, has been signed by the Cleveland Indians for a reported $48,000 bonus.)

The problem, though, is much bigger than the University of Missouri and the St. Louis Cardinals or the Boston Red Sox. Ohio State, Southern California, Michigan State and others have also been raided this spring. If we can believe the estimate of a baseball official who says over three million dollars will be spent for bonus players before this major league baseball season is over, we can see that the raids have just started.

How does professional baseball justify this collegiate raiding? There are several stock answers. Let's look at them:

We had to sign him — everyone else was after him. Can't baseball, the oldest and most successful of professional sports, control itself as professional basketball and football do? By self-imposed rules these sports do not approach a boy till his class graduates.

The boys are too old to start in organized ball after they finish college. How many major leaguers are under 21, the average age of the graduate? What about the Harvey Kuenns and the Bob Cervs in one league and the Robin Roberts and Wally Moons in the other? For that matter, the Lou Gehrigs and the Frankie Frischs? College baseball didn't seem to have greatly hindered them.

Collegiate baseball experience is not the equivalent of high minor league experience. Then how do Hi Simmons and his collegiate colleagues keep turning out high caliber prospects who have previously escaped the notice of big league scouts?

We're not interrupting his education; he can finish his degree out of season. Playing a full baseball season, a student could attend one uninterrupted quarter a year or he might get partial credit for two semesters. It takes eight full semesters or twelve quarters to qualify for a degree. Look at Tom Poholsky, an ex-major league pitcher and a brilliant engineering student, who struggled for ten years in several different institutions for that degree, but who fortunately got it just as his baseball luck ran out.

It's true that the boys are not shanghaied; they and their parents go into this with their eyes wide open. Most of the time too-wide-open from looking at hundred dollar bills, the normal medium of exchange for the bargaining scout steeped in the philosophy of his trade. Organized baseball alone did not create the problem nor can baseball alone solve it. It's up to the college coaches and their institutions to thoroughly sell kids on the advantages of a college education. It's up to the kids themselves to approach the whole problem ethically, to accept aid from a school with a sense of responsibility if not of loyalty. It's up to the parents to have the wisdom and judgment to see both the practical and esoteric values of education and to have the foresight to see that few of even the highest-priced bonus babies ever make the big leagues. Of the four to date who are reported to have received in excess of $100,000 for signing, only Frank Baumann of the Red Sox has reached the big leagues, and he's been in and out. Pittsburgh's Paul Petit and Cleveland's Billy Joe Davidson never made it and Baltimore's Dave Nicholson is off to a disappointing start.

The real solution, though, is the elimination of the evil, and that's squarely up to baseball. It wears the mailed glove. The colleges or the N.C.A.A. can't fight the battle of the check book. All they can hope for is that baseball will see fit to legislate itself; to reinstitute and stick to the rule (thrown out last December) not to sign up college athletes until their classes graduate; to pour some of the estimated three million dollars that will be spent on bonuses this year into the sinking minor league franchises, to run their own minor leagues instead of expecting the colleges to do it for them; to invest some of this bonus money in legitimate aid to athletic scholarship programs as the Chicago Cubs currently are doing; to clean house and quit acting as a parasite on the American colleges at the same time that government and industry are making unprecedented efforts to help higher education.

they're no. 2 in the nation

Hi's Tigers lost the National Collegiate Baseball Championship in a heartbreaking 8-7 12-inning contest with Southern California in the final game of the Collegiate World Series at Omaha, Nebraska, Thursday June 19.

This overtime loss was a bitter pill for Hi Simmons and his underdogs; but as sportswriter John Archibald said in the Friday June 20 issue of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch: "If only one of the 632 colleges that field baseball teams in the United States can be said to have had a successful season, because it won the national championship, then the University of Missouri must hang its head today. If, however, there can be admiration for a team that battled to the limits of its ability against the cream of the nation's college nines and took the No. 2 award after 12 heroic innings of the final game, then let Missouri's citizens be proud of their fighting Tigers."

Not only the citizens of Missouri, but particularly the alumni of the University of Missouri can well be proud of this Tiger team. It won the conference championship, earned the right to represent the 5th District of the N.C.A.A. by beating the Iowa State Teachers two straight, and won four straight Series' games before they ran afoul of the talented Californians. Missouri and Doug Gulick beat Western Michigan 3-1 in the Series opener, trounced Colorado State 12-2 behind lefty John O'Donoghue, beat Holy Cross 4-1 with big Bud Harbin pitching, then matched their opening win with another 3-1 decision over Western Michigan by Gulick to go into the finals of the double elimination tourney. Southern Cal, which had lost one game to Holy Cross, fought the Tigers for eight scoreless innings on June 18 before the dike broke and the Trojans won 7-0. Then came the fateful twelve-inning clincher.

This double loss in the final two games of the tournament was reminiscent of the same kind of loss to Holy Cross in the finals of the 1952 tournament. These two second-place finishes along with the championship in 1954 put Missouri baseball in the same national class with Oklahoma football and Kansas basketball.

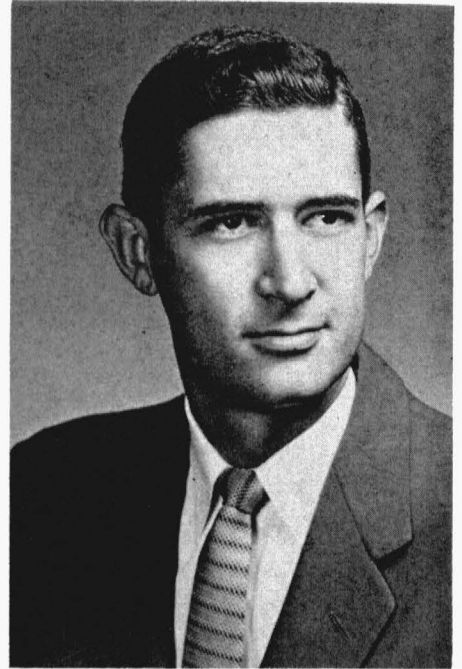

Great individual performances and honors were numerous during the Tigers' gallant bid: Missouri team Captain and .397 leadoff hitter Ray Uriarte was named as first-team All American third baseman by the American Association of Baseball Coaches. Teammates Bo Toft (.395) and Sonny Siebert (.386) were named as 2nd team right fielder and 3rd team first baseman respectively. Both men were also named to the All-Tournament team along with Catcher Hank Kuhlmann (.342) and Pitcher Doug Gulick. To Gulick, Harbin and O'Donoghue, the thin Gold line of pitchers, must go particular credit for this great showing at Omaha. And of course the year's top winner was Ernie Nevers (5-0), whose eligibility expired just before the tournament. The hard work and long hours of assistant coach Lee Wheat, a former major league pitcher himself, yielded a fine harvest.

Morris new president

John A. Morris of Jefferson City, Mo., is the new president of the University of Missouri Alumni Association, and at the age of 30 he is the youngest alumnus elected to hold that office. In the past year Morris has been vice-president of the Association and chairman of its committee on public information.

Other officers elected for 1957-58 are three vice-presidents: John E. (Jack) Keith, '39, St. Louis; William Toler, '48, Kansas City; and Dr. Arch Lowe, '39, Springfield. Hartley Banks of Columbia, secretary since 1931, was re-elected to begin his 28th year. G. H. (Bus) Entsminger continues as secretary.

Morris, '50, is secretary of the Central Missouri Trust Company in Jefferson City where he has served as president of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, general chairman of the Cole County Fair, and director of the Chamber of Commerce. He received the Junior C. of C. "Outstanding Young Man" Award for 1957. He received a B.S. in Finance degree from the University. He also has an M.B.A. degree from Wharton School, University of Pennsylvania. Mrs. Morris is the former Mary Patricia Montgomery of Maryville, Mo. They have three children: Sarah, 6; David, 4; and Robert, nine months. The home address is Old St. Louis Road.

TV course for credit

The University will offer a three-hour English course titled "Epic America" as a live television program in the fall. Students may enroll for credit toward a degree. Dr. John G. Neihardt, Lecturer in English, will give a half-hour lecture each Monday, Wednesday and Thursday at 4:30 p. m. between September 18 and January 22. Dr. Neihardt is author of "A Cycle of the West."

Anyone within range of the University's television station KOMU may listen to the lectures, but to obtain credit a potential student should enroll at the University and be prepared to take trial tests and two examinations. Materials that include printed assignments and course outlines will be sent to anyone interested. Dr. Neihardt will devote full time to the television course. He has been on the University teaching staff since 1949. This will be the first television course for credit offered by M. U.

About $21,113 has been left to the University School of Law from the estate of Robert S. Eastin of Kansas City, a '31 alumnus who died April 22. He left an estate of $147,792. One-seventh, all in personal property, was left to the School of Law.

Dr. Fred McKinney, professor of psychology at the University, has been awarded a Fulbright lectureship in psychology at the University of Ankara, Turkey, where he will lecture for nine months, beginning November 1. Dr. and Mrs. McKinney, their son Kent, and two daughters, Molly and Doyne, will leave Columbia on August 3 for New York, where they will visit their daughter Megan, Mrs. Robert Whitfield.

They plan to sail for Southampton, England, later in the month and tour Europe by auto. Dr. McKinney is currently president of division two of the American Psychological Association. He is the author or co-author of several textbooks. His latest is "Counseling for Personal Adjustment," published in April by Houghton-Mifflin.

aside the ones that are not to be issued. She rolls the Doctor of Philosophy and Doctor of Education diplomas, and ties them with black and gold ribbons. Other diplomas are left flat, grouped by divisions.

At the close of Commencement exercises, doctors' candidates approach the stage to receive hoods and diplomas. Each candidate marches up the ramp, hands a card with his name to a member of the faculty, who then gives the card to the announcer. Dr. Charlotte Wells, professor of speech, announces the name as the candidate goes to the center of the platform, where the doctor's hood is hung by two members of the faculty. As the candidate leaves the stage, he is greeted by the dean of the Graduate Division, who hands him the diploma and congratulates him.

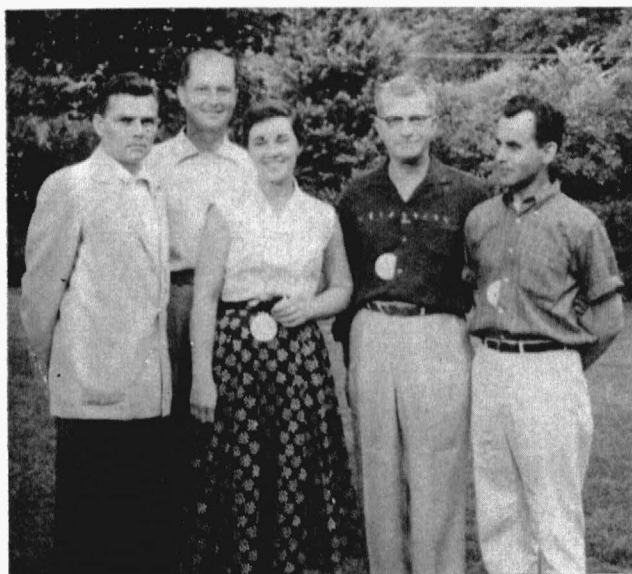

Diplomas for bachelors, masters, doctors of medicine, and doctors of veterinary medicine are handed out at designated distribution spots after the public exercises. Deans of divisions usually are on hand to make a ceremony of these presentations.

At last, the diplomas have found their rightful owners, and the graduates are all smiles. Miss Grant and her co-workers breathe freely for a few days, before starting to prepare diplomas for the next group of M.U. graduates.

The Indianapolis story

When the Central Indiana Alumni Club held its organizational meeting on March 18, 1957, there were 23 active members of the University of Missouri Alumni Association among the 215 total alumni within a fifty mile radius of Indianapolis. This 11 per cent of active members was just about par for the course on the national figures.

On the first anniversary of that kickoff meeting, the natural enthusiasm and interest that a new alumni club creates in an area had boosted this total to 36 members, or 17 per cent of the total alumni in the area. This was great growth in a year, but not enough to satisfy this enthusiastic and energetic group. They leaped at an opportunity to fly a trial balloon on a new membership campaign devised by the Alumni Office in an attempt to put the 25 per cent alumni membership goal within reach of all the Missouri alumni clubs in the United States.

At the membership report picnic two months later, it was announced that Indianapolis was the first alumni organization in America to reach the new goal. Twenty-five more new members had been added for a total of 61 and an over-the-top percentage of 28.

Of course, all of this Hoosier group deserve credit for this excellent record, but particular credit must go to the membership committee: Chairman Hugh Teeters, Mrs. Roy Talbert, Ed Miller, Irv Freeman, Wilkes Dinwiddie and Stan Cebula. It must be added that Gertrude Teeters, a Cornhusker, has caught the Tiger spirit and helps husband Hugh in pushing Missouri affairs in their community.

Bradford Brett

Spokesman of '33 class

Bradford Brett is president of the First National Bank of Mexico, Mo., and in his brief appearance at the reunion banquet on June 5 as spokesman for the '33 class, he dispelled any notions that bankers are a humorless lot. In his remarks he recounted some of the amusing happenings on the campus a quarter century ago. Business kept him away from sessions the next day, and a check shows he failed to appear in any of the reunion pictures, hence the above photo is produced. Mr. Brett is active in alumni affairs and is on the Alumni Achievement Fund Committee.

Nine legislators honored

Of the nine recipients of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat awards to Missouri legislators for meritorious public service, five have University connections—four as graduates and one as a student.

The five and their awards are:

Rep. Basey Van Landingham, Columbia, student in the School of Law, "most effective first-term House member."

Other awards went to:

Sen. Michael Kinney, St. Louis, "most valuable member of the legislature"; Sen. C. R. Hawkins, Brumley, "most effective Senate member in debate"; and Sen. William Baxter Waters, Liberty, "most effective first-term Senate member."

The awards were presented by Richard H. Amberg, publisher of the Globe-Democrat, at a dinner in Jefferson City. Governor James T. Blair participated in the ceremonies, and Senator Stuart Symington was the principal speaker.

Alumni hear Dr. Tong

Noted Missouri graduate addresses Washington group.

Ambassador Hollington K. Tong, one of China's most distinguished men of this generation, addressed the University of Missouri Alumni Association of Washington, D. C., at its spring luncheon.

Dr. Tong, who attended the University in 1911-12, was one of the early students of the School of Journalism, which this year celebrates its Fiftieth Anniversary.

Dr. Tong recalled experiences on the Missouri campus, and associations with the late Walter Williams, at that time Dean of the School of Journalism and later president of the University. He mentioned also the first World Press Congress which he attended in Honolulu in 1921. Dr. Williams was the initiating force for the Congress and its first president.

Donald S. Dawson, president of the Alumni Association in Washington, presided at the luncheon. He introduced guests at the head table including Mr. and Mrs. Claude M. Houchins; Dr. Ollie Reed, '08; Col James L. Tarr; Mrs. Clarence Cannon, wife of the chairman of the House Appropriations Committee; Mrs. Tong; John B. Gordon, '09; and Mrs. Marguerette Marlowe Hedge, secretary. Mr. Gordon introduced the speaker.

The Ambassador, speaking on the problems of the Nationalist Republic of China, drew sharp contrasts between the free world and the Communist world, in trade, government and social concepts.

"Communist China and Russia use trade not for economics, but as a political weapon," he said. He cited the sale of goods—made with slave labor in communist China—in Japan at 15 percent below the price of Japanese goods, made with free labor and constantly rising wages. He said that in 1956 the communists smuggled 76 million dollars' worth of opium into Japan and used the profits to subsidize strikes and promote communism.

The Nationalist Republic moved to Taiwan in 1949, when the communists took control in China. There were then six million people on the island, mostly second and third generation Chinese. Today, there are 10 million people on the island, which is about 250 miles long and 60 miles wide. This is an area less than one-fourth the size of Missouri, supporting a population more than twice that of Missouri.

In 1949, it was necessary to import rice to feed the people. Today, they grow nearly two million tons of rice and are exporting it. Dr. Tong said that the climate and soil make it possible to grow three crops a year in some places. Taiwan also exports sugar, and realizes about 110 million U. S. dollars a year from this crop. In general, the economic situation on the island is good, he said.

The greatest economic problem is the support of 600,000 soldiers. Ten million people support this large army because they feel that communist China may attack at any time. He pointed to the strategic value in this force which makes it necessary for the Red Chinese to keep two and a half million soldiers on the mainland across from the island. Otherwise, these soldiers might be moved to other parts of Asia for conquest, Dr. Tong said.

Educational opportunities have improved on the island, and today one of every five people is a student. A large number are college graduates.

By contrast, Dr. Tong pointed to the inflation which has made life extremely difficult for the Chinese on the mainland. He said that 90 percent of the people in China are farmers, but that they are not allowed to eat what they grow. They must sell their products to the government, and then buy back at very dear prices. Many foods are difficult to obtain. For instance, he reported that each person is permitted 10 ounces of pork a month, in three portions, and six ounces of vegetable oil. Even for these meager allowances they must report to the food agency for their allotments.

Millions of Chinese students are being sent to farms to take over what farmers refuse to do, Dr. Tong said. Some 20 million people have been sent to slave labor camps.

Dr. Tong told of the ties of the islanders to their homeland. He said that today about 60 percent of the people on Taiwan are island-born Chinese. The rest are mainlanders who still have relatives behind the Iron Curtain. They have not heard from their families since 1949. Dr. Tong spoke movingly of their desires to return home and be reunited with their loved ones.

The meeting was held at the Cosmos Club, through the courtesy of Frank Scheetz, a student in 1885, and a former president of the Washington group. He is still an active member.

Missouri Alumnus cited

The Missouri Alumnus has received recognition in the national publications competition of the American Alumni Conference.

The Alumnus was given honorable mention in the Magazine of the Year competition, being one of seven magazines in this listing. Five other publications were given special honor awards in this general excellence contest as runners-up to the Magazine of the Year award, which went to Barnard College. Thus the Alumnus is included among the top thirteen magazines nationally.

In addition, the Alumnus won second place in alumni news coverage, the third straight year it has been cited in this category.

The awards were announced at the Council's annual conference held at Lake Placid, N. Y.

Medal for Mullett book

The American Association for the History of Medicine has announced the award of the William H. Welch Medal to Charles F. Mullett, professor of history in the University. The medal is given "for particular contributions of outstanding scholarly merit in the field of medical history published during the five years preceding the award" and was presented to Professor Mullett for his book, The Bubonic Plague and England: an Essay in the History of Preventive Medicine, published in 1956 by the University of Kentucky Press.

The report recommending the award stated, "In this volume the details of epidemiologic history, laboriously collected, have been used as a paradigm by which the author has been able to trace the evolution of concepts of preventive medicine through the centuries. Thus the work in the opinion of the committee transcends the limits of a monograph on a single disease and takes the rank of a contribution to intellectual history."

During the present academic year Professor Mullett has been visiting professor of history on the Graduate Faculty of Columbia University. He will return in the fall to the University of Missouri, where he has taught for more than twenty-five years. He is the author of several books, including Fundamental Law and the American Revolution and The British Empire, and has contributed many articles to scholarly journals. He is president of the Midwest Conference on British History and a member of the Board of Editors of the Journal of Modern History, and in 1956 was national chairman of the program committee of the American Historical Association.

In the listing of results of the Stephens Oratory Contest through the years, which appeared in the last issue, the winner for the year 1943 was inadvertently omitted. Robert C. Smith, Columbia attorney, won the Stephens Medal at that time. In another more unfortunate error—would that it had been one of omission also—a reference to Latney Barnes of Mexico, Mo. was preceded by the words "the late." The boner is as inexcusable as it is inexplicable. Apologies to Mr. Smith and to the very present Mr. Barnes.

Frederick Donald Orey, instructor in business administration, has been awarded a scholarship by the Norwegian Club of Brooklyn through the American-Scandinavian Foundation. He is attending a seminar on industries of Norway at the University of Oslo.

distinguished service award

Dr. Frank G. Mays of Washington, Mo., received the Distinguished Service Award of the University of Missouri Alumni Association at the 116th Commencement of the University on June 6. The citation honored Dr. Mays for outstanding service to the University and was presented by Flavius B. Freeman, retiring association head.

Dr. Mays was particularly active in the campaign to establish a four-year School of Medicine at the University. He is chairman of the board of trustees of the Medical School Foundation, and is a member of the Medical School Advisory Board. He is in his third term as president of the Medical School Alumni Association.

The 1958 recipient of the Alumni Association's highest honor was graduated from the University in 1924 with an A.B. degree and two years later from Washington University of St. Louis with an M.D. He has been active in the Missouri State Medical Association since his graduation, and is president of the Franklin-Gasconade-Warren County Medical Society.

At Washington he has served at the St. Francis Hospital as chief surgeon and chief of staff and has been city health officer for 29 years. Dr. and Mrs. Mays have four children: Polly Jean, a student at M.U.; Frank G. II, Laurell Leone, and William Gay II.

94 EDWARD T. ALLEN, BP, BL; ML '96, and his sister, MARY S. ALLEN, '11, have moved to a new home, 77 Cliff Drive, in Columbia, Mo., after living 67 years on Allen Place. The Allen home, built by Prof. Edward A. Allen, father of Edward and Mary, is being removed because of the Mall that is being constructed from the University Medical Center to the heart of the Red Campus. The Allens have watched the campus develop from pasture and wheat fields to the present crowded condition and the new home on Cliff Drive is indeed a contrast to the 10-room, 2-story frame built in 1891.

98 THOMAS HOLMAN, BS, stockman and farmer of Licking Route, Salem, Mo., has retired. Mr. Holman's son, who is attending the Missouri School of Mines and Metallurgy at Rolla, was honored this past school year for his scholarship work there.

Our records show four members of the class of '98 residing in Sedalia, Mo. Since we have no recent information from any of these alumni, the Alumni Office would appreciate hearing from HARVEY D. DOW, LLB; FRANK H. WALKUP, LLB; Dr. W. H. REYNOLDS, MD, and IRWIN RAUT, AB.

ROBERT L. KIRK, LLB, lives in Portland, Ore., at 3816 SE 33rd Avenue.

01 JOHN BENNETT HARVEY, LLB, and Mrs. Harvey of Clinton, Okla., attended the Reunions and Commencement activities in June. Mr. Harvey is county attorney of Custer County and their home address is Box 6, Clinton. The Harveys have three daughters: Mrs. Jean Burton lives in Austin, Minn., and the other two are attending Kansas State College.

Mrs. ROSALIE GERIG Edwards, AB '00, AM, a private teacher of modern languages, lives at 1042 W. Redwood St., San Diego 1, Calif.

02 JOHN P. PETERS, LLB, 83, says he is busier than at any time in his 56 years of law practice. His health is generally good, except for some arthritis, and he continues to enjoy the friends in Osage County (and elsewhere) where he lives at Linn, Mo. Mr. Peters' oldest daughter, Ruth, is a registered nurse and is on the nursing staff at the University's Medical Center in Columbia.

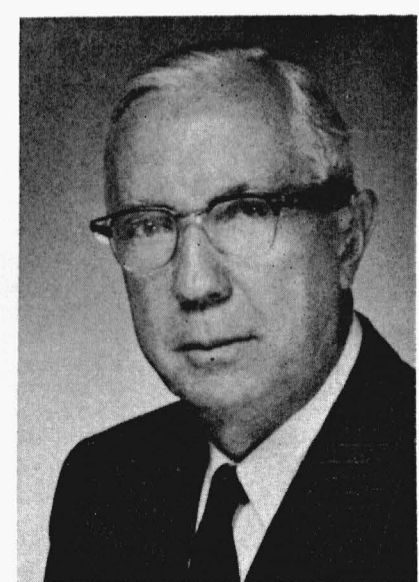

Mrs. Benson Hardesty, who was MAUD MONTGOMERY, AB, AM '03, BS Ed. '06, formerly a college teacher, is living with her daughter, Miss Helen Hardesty, at 4512 Westminster Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

She continues to do substitute teaching in the schools of Clayton. Mrs. Hardesty was connected with the College at Cape Girardeau for many years, and has been closely associated with Columbia since she was seven years old.

JOHN G. WELCH, AB, AM '04, and Mrs. Welch, who was NELL FARLEY, AB '08, were unable to attend Class Reunions as they had planned. Their home is in Peoria, Ill., where Mr. Welch has the Peoria Stone and Marble Works, 333 East Lake Ave.

Mrs. Hugo Muench, AM, formerly ELIDA C. KIRCHNER, lives at 3546 Grim Ave., San Diego 4, Calif.

08 ALLEN L. OLIVER, AB, LLB '09, Cape Girardeau, Mo., made a special effort to be present for part of the reunion of the Golden Anniversary class, stopping off in Columbia after attending the Rotary International Convention in Texas, then heading for West Virginia. During his visit to the campus we learned of a new honor that has come his way which had escaped our knowledge. Mr. Oliver has been elected to and made a Fellow in the American College of Trial Lawyers. Membership is by invitation only and limited to one-half of one per cent of the lawyers in America—certainly a distinct honor. Mr. Oliver informs us that most of the half dozen who have been selected from Missouri are graduates of the University of Missouri—and if we have overlooked them in the past we hope they let us know. Honors are not uncommon to Allen Oliver. He is a former president of the University Alumni Association, and when he was president of the Missouri Bar Association it was the year that it received the award of the American Bar Association for most constructive work of any state bar association. When Mr. Oliver was president of the Missouri State Chamber of Commerce, that organization increased membership 300%. Other honors: district governor and member of the International Board of Directors of Rotary International, and at present national representative from the Southeast Missouri Council to National Council Boy Scouts of America (he received the BSA Silver Beaver Award 22 years ago). Mr. Oliver is a member of the law firm of Oliver & Oliver. His home address is 850 Alta Vista Dr., Cape Girardeau.

FLOYD E. JACOBS, AB, LLB, has practiced law in Kansas City since his graduation. He is general counsel of the American Reciprocal Insurance Association. Mr. Jacobs is a member of the law firm of Howell, Jacobs & Howell, Suite 1115 Commerce Bldg., Kansas City 6, Mo.

09 EMMETT C. O'NEAL, BS Agr., and Mrs. O'Neal, the former ETHEL PENNINGTON, attended the Class Reunions in June, along with their daughter, ERNESTINE O'NEAL Smizer, BS ED '33, of Fremont, Nebr. Mr. O'Neal is retired as a teacher of vocational agriculture. Their home is in Sweet Springs, Mo.

EDWIN W. PATTERSON, AB, LLB '11, LLD '36, is retired from the Law School of Columbia University and is presently on a one-year tenure at the University of Southern California in Los Angeles. Mrs. Patterson is the former DOROTHY THOMSON, AB, BS '12. At the close of this year, their problem will be to choose a place for permanent retirement. The son and his family live in Cincinnati, Ohio. A daughter and her family live in New Jersey, where the Pattersons have lived while with Columbia University. Their California address is 609 E. Regent Street, Inglewood.

21 BURDETT GREEN, BSF, formerly with the Veneer Association of Chicago, is now vice-president of Elmendorf Research, Inc., in Palo Alto, Calif. He also has interest in an oxy-acetylene business in Oakland, and spends some time continuing to promote hardwoods. Mr. and Mrs. Green are living in the Santa Cruz mountain area, not far from Monterey Bay; address 19749 Black Road, Los Gatos, Calif.

LENA MEIERER, BS Ed., had finished more than a half-century of service to the schools of Lexington, Mo., this year when she retired at the close of the school term. Since 1905 she has taught in the Lexington schools, except for two occasions—for one year each time—while she continued her own education. Miss Meierer lives on Route 1 near Lexington.

23 ELIZABETH ESTES Gentry, BJ, in May was chosen a trustee of Christian College in Columbia during their Homecoming activities. Mrs. Gentry, whose husband, WILLIAM R. GENTRY, Jr., LLB, '22, is a practicing attorney in St. Louis, graduated from Christian College and is a former president of the St. Louis Alumnae Club. Their St. Louis home is 6627 Pershing Avenue.

RILEY W. GEARY, BS Ed., AM '31, of 215 W. Belle Avenue, Oildale, Calif., tells us of the death of his oldest son, Dr. Riley Lavender Geary, MD, on May 6, 1958, in Los Angeles. Dr. Geary, who studied at Phoenix Junior College, the University of Michigan, University of Iowa, and interned at Los Angeles County General Hospital, had practiced in Nevada. Here he worked with the Kennicot Copper Company at Ely. His wife and two sons survive.

RALPH A. McCANSE, AB, AM '25, and Mrs. McCanse, formerly JESSIE HILL, AB '17, BS Ed. '19, had cause for parental pride this spring when their daughter, Elizabeth, was chosen the outstanding senior woman on the University of Wisconsin campus, because of being "most outstanding in intellectual attainments and an example of initiative, resourcefulness, and unselfish devotion to high purpose." About the same time their son, A. Ross McCanse, was given the Scabbard and Blade Award for the outstanding sophomore student in all University ROTC units. Elizabeth and Ross are grandchildren of the late A. Ross Hill, former president of the University of Missouri. Mr. McCanse is a professor of English in the Extension Division of the University of Wisconsin, and their home is at 3309 Blackhawk Drive, Madison.

25 JACK C. COFFEY, BJ, heads the company which bears his name at 710 Seventeenth Street in North Chicago, Ill. The company is presenting a square steel container for handling 16mm film, along with their other products. The Coffey residence is 81 W. Laurel, Lake Forest, Ill.

28 C. EARL SCHOOLEY, BS Eng., who recently completed thirty years of service with A. T. & T., where he was director of the customer products planning division of operations and equipment, is now vice-president and general manager of Indiana Bell. In his career with A. T. & T. he began with numerous Long Lines engineering assignments in southwestern states, went to New York in 1940 and later to Washington. In 1951 he joined O. & E. as toll line dialing engineer and the next year became systems planning engineer and also served as chairman of the headquarters long range planning committee. After serving as chief engineer of Southern Bell he returned to A. T. & T. in 1956. Classmates of Earl Sam Bronstein did not attend the University, but he was a great friend of this institution and particularly of the School of Journalism. When he died at the age of 81 in St. Louis on June 23, Mr. Bronstein left a fortune that ultimately will go to the journalism school.

Earlier he had created the Sam Bronstein Prizes in Journalism, which have been offered since 1957. These three prizes—awards of $300, $200 and $100 each—are made from the dividends of stock worth $9,000 given by Mr. Bronstein to the School of Journalism in 1956. During the past three years he had been a frequent visitor to the School.

Under terms of the will, Mr. Bronstein established a trust fund for the benefit of his wife and three relatives. The income passes ultimately to his children and four grandchildren, the trust terminating after the death of the last survivor.

The fund is to be managed by the University Curators and disbursed "with complete freedom" by a committee of three members of the faculty of the journalism school.

Mr. Bronstein began his career selling newspapers on the streets, a penniless immigrant who spoke no English, and learned to read by spelling out words in the newspapers he carried under his arm. Later, as a money lender, he had no office but dropped around to the newspapers regularly to see who needed a loan to tide them over until payday.

Mr. Bronstein invested heavily during the 1930s in securities, then nearly worthless, of the Missouri Pacific Railroad, which was bankrupt at the time. When the railroad emerged from bankruptcy two years ago he had securities with a stated value of $970,000.

The bequest, the will said, was made "in memory of my many close and dear friends who were former newspaper reporters" and "because of my firm conviction that there is nothing more important to the preservation of our democratic form of government than accurate and responsible newspaper reporting."

Missouri's Judge Hyde continued

St. Louis on their way to the west. The will was written in 1840. Time, however, changed this condition. In 1920 the relatives made an attempt to break the will, but lost the contest in court. However, in a later case at bar, in a decision written by Judge Hyde, the court held that the fund could be used for similar purposes. Today it is used for any stranded travelers who may be in St. Louis.

A second case Judge Hyde recalled as having great import upon the public was Barber vs. Time Magazine. This case involved the right of privacy of an individual. Time Magazine had taken a picture of a woman in a hospital and had printed it without her permission. Again the court held, Judge Hyde writing the decision, that people have a right to privacy, that the magazine was in error in publishing the picture without her consent.

A third case which Judge Hyde considers important was heard during the time of the transition between the Pendergast regime to the citizen's organization. On the record of the city, there were double the number of employees on the payroll as there were supposed to be. Half of the employees were being paid by the officials putting a lug on the other half. The court in this instance held that those employees who had been forced to pay the lug could recover full salaries from the city.

These are three of the almost 1,000 opinions which Judge Hyde has written that he considers will have effect on many people. There is one other decision which Judge Hyde wrote that persons interested in public welfare will recall. In this case a county court of Ozark County had refused to print its financial statement. The case was filed directly in the supreme court. The ruling of the court in this case was so pointed and recognized the public welfare requirement for the publishing of such statement so forcefully that there can be no question as to the validity of the law.

In 1951, during the period when Judge Hyde served as Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Missouri, he was also first chairman of the Conference of Chief Justices. The honor of Chief Justice in Missouri is passed among the judges of the court.

In selecting Judge Hyde, the conference chose a man "who has been outstanding in his own state and throughout the nation in the Association's program for improving judicial administration."

It was during his administration that a survey of the judicial systems of all the states was conducted. The ultimate aim of the survey was that of integrating the judicial systems of the various states.

Judge Hyde's interest in the University of Missouri remains. His son and daughter both have degrees from this institution. He recalls that many changes have come to the University since his campus days but he thinks they are for the better. Students are better prepared to enter Law School with their A.B. degree than they were when they could enter the school direct. There is a change in policy—no practicing attorneys are at present full time members of the faculty. Many courses have been added to meet the demands of the time, such as business law and labor law.

As testimony to Judge Hyde's eminence as a jurist and as a humanitarian a plaque hangs on the wall of his office. This plaque was presented to him by the Bar Association of St. Louis on the occasion of its 82nd Annual Dinner in 1956. Engraved on it are the words that describe his character:

"... in recognition of his preeminence as jurist, humanitarian, and leader in the improvement of the administration of justice.

"By his quiet and modest, yet his determined and unswerving devotion to the ideals of liberty and justice under law, and by his persistent effort to achieve these ideals in the actual functioning of the law and the Courts, Laurance M. Hyde symbolizes the American lawyer and jurist at his best. By his insight and vision he had been a leader in adapting the law and its methods to emerging and ever-changing needs. His constant observation of the law in action and his reports of its manner of functioning have resulted in shaping the law into a more perfect instrument for meeting the needs of justice in a complicated society.

"As Chief Justice, Judge and Commissioner of the Supreme Court of Missouri, his judicial career has reflected his sound learning, industry and fidelity. As judge and lawyer he has regarded the legal profession as embodying a paramount obligation for public service, and not merely vocational qualities. His skill and energy as designer and builder of the law as a living instrument and his warm and sympathetic concern with the problems of the profession have marked a majestic imprint in the work of the American Bar Association, the Inter-American Bar Association, the Missouri Bar, the Missouri Judicial Conference, the National Conference of Judicial Councils, the American Judicature Society, the American Law Institute, the National Institute of Judicial Administration and the Bar Association of St. Louis. The profound respect and admiration of distinguished members of those organizations for Judge Hyde has been reflected by his frequent selection for high office and great responsibility in those vital segments of the organized bar.

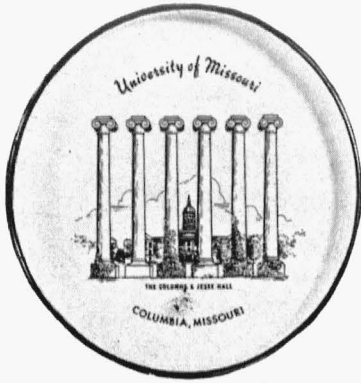

"Through his idealism and dedication to the administration of justice, the career of Judge Hyde is an exemplar for generations yet to come. In the history of growth of the law as the keystone of democratic and free government his name will be written in large letters as a master-architect of the temple of justice."
