Assistant in Medical Bacteriology.

FOREWORD

The alumni list published at this time begins with the first class after the establishment of the Medical Department December 11, 1872. Of the members of the two year classes from 1873 to 1890 only those who received the M. D. degree are listed. The classes from 1887 to 1890 have been difficult. Some began their medical studies and received their degrees in Division I at Columbia, or, began in Columbia and finished their clinical work and received their degrees in Division II at St. Louis. But the majority of the graduates were in Division II only and are so listed. The names of all graduates from 1873 to 1890 are given in the class lists but only living members of known address are included in the alphabetical lists.

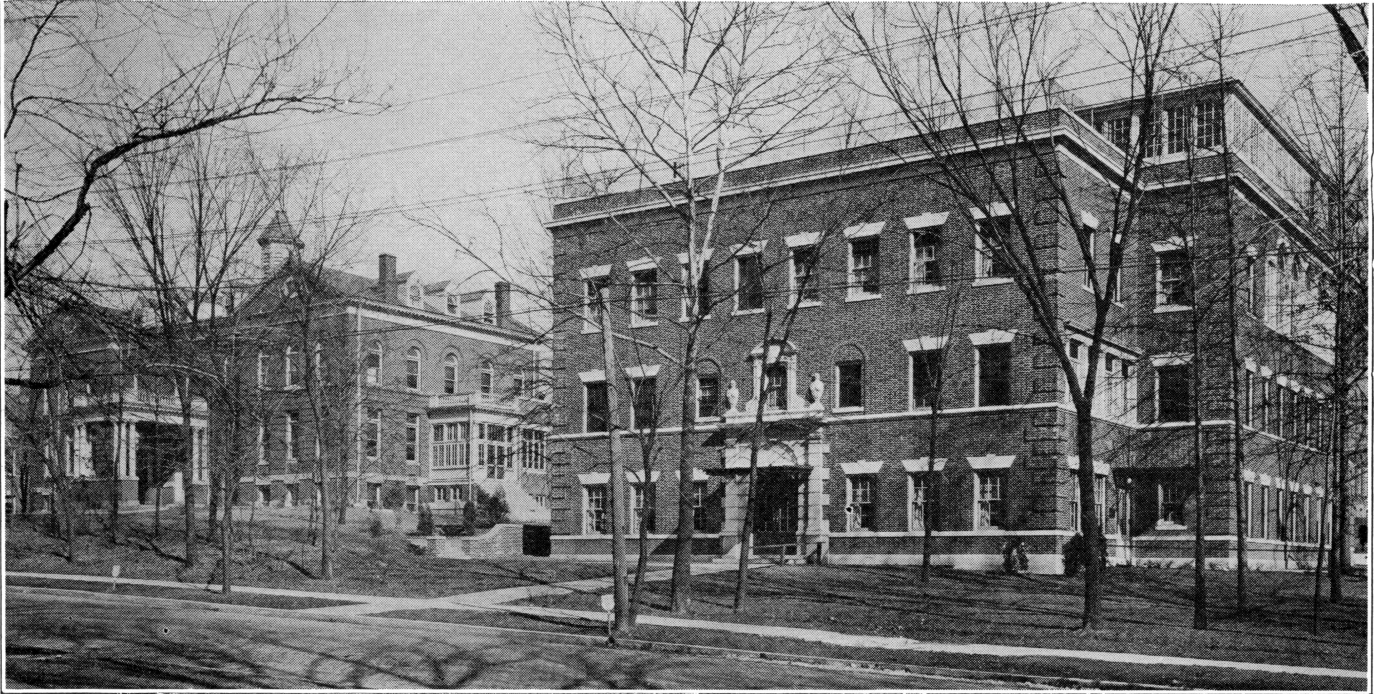

Beginning with 1890 and with the establishment of the three year course, all students are listed with their years of attendance whether they received the degree or not. In 1909 the temporary abolishment of the junior and senior years of the four year course introduced a further irregularity. However, members of these classes are designated by the year they would have graduated had the four year requirement remained in force. Irregular students are classified with their entering classes. Many ex students of the University entered medicine in other schools. It is desired to secure record of all such.

The data has been obtained from available published sources in University records, from the last edition of the Directory of the American Medical Association, from letters mailed to all names, from personal and direct communications, through classmates, and from a great variety of casual sources. The older lists, from 1872 to 1900, have been most difficult to verify, and there are many incomplete addresses. The older published records of the University are meager, often not giving even the local address of the student at the time of registration.¹ In these early groups, where no other information was available the address at the time of studentship is given.

Information as to deaths has been peculiarly difficult to obtain or to verify. This record cannot claim even approximate accuracy in death lists. The editor bespeaks the cooperation of all who read these lists in the correction of errors, the addition of omissions, and in every other way for the establishment of more accurate information for the next edition of the Directory of the School of Medicine. Promptly send all such corrections to the Editor or to the Dean of the School of Medicine. Please also send collateral information of all kinds giving the names, dates, activities, honors, marriages, children, and deaths of alumni, especially of members of these early classes. Medical specialties, honors, and changes of address are all urgently requested in order that the office records of students and alumni may be more complete and up to date.

The record of all contributions by Alumni to Medical literature is being compiled. Send titles, or better, send copies of all contributions.

1). Lists of early University graduates are published in the University Catalogue for 1865 (classes 1843-1866); in the catalogue for 1888-9 (classes 1843-1889, and in the Alumni Directory for 1917.

History of the School of Medicine

At the meeting of December 11th, 1872 the Board of Curators established a Department of Medicine in the University of Missouri. Instruction in the school was formally opened on February 17th, 1873 at a convocation addressed by Dr. John H. Duncan. Two years of instruction constituted the course which led to the degree of Doctor of Medicine.

Very soon after the establishment of the University in 1839 the Curators entered into an agreement with the McDowell Medical College of St. Louis to give instruction in medicine in affiliation with the University of Missouri. This alliance began in 1845 and lasted for six years. It is of interest as signifying the early recognition by the authorities of the University of the need of more rational scientific education in Medicine.

The first graduating class of the School received the M.D. degrees in 1874. There were five graduates in this class. An interesting comparison of the conditions of that early day with the present is found in the fact that the total number of students at the University of Missouri for the year 1873-74 was only 401.¹

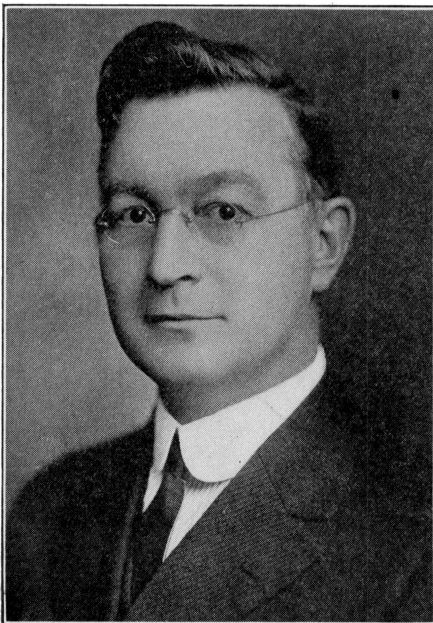

DEAN JOSEPH G. NORWOOD, M.D., LL.D.
Dean 1872-1886.

DEAN ANDREW WALKER McALESTER, A.B., A.M., M.D., LL.D.
Dean 1890-1909.

1.) From the 1883-84 Catalog, page 36.

At the end of the year degrees were granted to 5 in Medicine, 13 in Law, 12 in the Normal Division, and 9 in the Academic Department, a total of 39 as contrasted with a total of 670 who received degrees at the end of 1928.

Doctor Joseph G. Norwood, "Professor of Chemistry, Institutes of Medicine, and Medical Jurisprudence, and Dean of the Faculty" was the first Dean of the School of Medicine, from 1872 to 1886. Dean Norwood was succeeded by Dr. Andrew W. McAlester, Professor of Surgery and Obstetrics from the founding of the Medical Department. Dr. McAlester, the author of the movement to found the School of Medicine in 1872 and always the intimate personal friend and advisor of Dean Norwood, became Dean in 1890 and served in that official capacity until his retirement in 1909. Dr. McAlester had studied in England receiving great inspiration from the clinics of Sir Joseph Lister, inspiration that influenced his attitude toward Medical sciences during an administration of twenty years. Dr. C. M. Jackson was appointed in 1909 and served until 1913. Dr. Guy L. Noyes became Dean in 1913 serving at the present time. By their policy toward scientific laboratory instruction, by their insight into the value of constructive scientific research and by their administrative sympathy and support, the Deans have all contributed to the present strength in medical teaching and in research.

The present University Hospital group has a total capacity of 100 beds. The historical nucleus around which the group developed is the Parker Memorial Hospital and the Busch Clinical Amphitheater, both opened in the fall of 1900. The new University Hospital, given by appropriation of the legislature in 1923, completed the present unit. It is only fair to say that the equipment of this hospital in all its various divisions is modern and thorough in every way, complete to a degree beyond the usual hospital of such modest size. Its major activities are: (1) The Maintenance of the University Health Service in all of its divisions, (2) The development of the recently established Crippled Children Service, and ((3) The provision of introductory clinical teaching material for Medical instruction and for the training of nurses. The legislature of 1927-28 appropriated an initial sum to guarantee hospitalization for the indigent orthopedic cases of the state, under a law providing for state-wide cooperation of the county and State authorities. By this provision any community may call on and receive the benefits of the University Crippled Children Service.

The legislature of 1901-02 appropriated money to the School of Medicine from which was erected the first unit of the present laboratory building, McAlester Hall. In the opening of this building in 1903 the laboratories peculiar to Medicine were for that time quite adequately provided and equipped, an event that stimulated the medical staff to the high grade of scientific teaching and production which has characterized the school in the quarter of a century that has followed.

In making the above historical comparisons one must not forget the substantial progress made in the earlier epochs of medical teaching, chiefly through the courtesy of other University laboratories, i.e. Physics, Chemistry, Zoology, Bacteriology, Botany and Physiology. In the lean years preceding the medical laboratory building the Medical classes enjoyed no mediocre laboratory instruction. Often the quarters were inadequate and obscure but the classes were manned by great teachers—Professors Norwood, McAlester, Duncan, Ayers, Schweitzer, Moss. and Connaway

In 1923 McAlester Hall was enlarged fifty percent by extending the building to the east, the new wing maintaining a very pleasing and symmetrical appearance to the building as a whole. The new space provides a commodious medical library unit, an amphitheater, and adequate administrative offices for the School of Medicine. The additional floor space in laboratory and research rooms has greatly improved the facilities of the basic laboratories of the medical sciences.

The growth of the medical library has kept pace with the development of scientific laboratories and medical research. In 1900 there were only a few partial sets of medical and scientific journals—the Journal of Physiology, the Zeitschrift fur Physiologische Chemie, and the Archive fur Mikroskopische Anatomie. With the opening of McAlester Hall in 1903 a single room for journals and books was devoted to the library. In 1905 and '06 the first concerted purchases looking toward a more adequate working research library provided many complete sets of journals in each of the divisions of the pre-clinical and clinical subjects. Further expansion of the library has strengthened its equipment as a research library. The present library rooms in the new wing of McAlester Hall were opened in 1923. The library contains 137 current medical journals and 8,884 volumes of books and journals. To these must be added at least 7,000 volumes in the general library which contain medical reference literature. The University librarian recently said of the Medical library "In the field of physiology there are twenty-one primary journals and as many more devoted to other fields which have articles on some phase of physiology". The literature is equally satisfactory in the subjects of anatomy, bacteriology, and pathology.

Standards in medical education have developed rapidly throughout the country and the University of Missouri School of Medicine has kept the pace. As related earlier the first medical department was the simple affiliation with McDowell Medical College. But the real problem of Education for Medicine was undertaken when the Medical School was founded with its own faculty and laboratories, as an integral part of the University in 1872. The standard of the times of two years of instruction consisting chiefly of lectures and demonstrations prevailed until 1891 when three years medical instruction was required for the M.D. degree. In 1899 the course was extended to four years of instruction. The change in the character of instruction followed the lines of Medical development of the times by the continuous expansion of opportunity in the preclinical laboratories.

In these early years the facilities in the clinics and in the out-patient service were at times more or less precarious in Columbia. Students formed the habit of attending the first years in the University Medical School then transferring to larger city schools for their final years of clinical teaching. It was this condition that led to the formation June 2, 1886 of an alliance between the University of Missouri School of Medicine and the Missouri Medical College of St. Louis. By this arrangement the scientific work was to be taught in Columbia and the clinical work in St. Louis, the two divisions being known as Division I and Division II of the School of Medicine. During the life of this agreement four classes were graduated, 1887 to 1890. The agreement was rescinded on March 29, 1890 to take effect October 5, of that year. On July 3 a Dean was reappointed at Columbia to the office which had been held vacant through the four years of the alliance.

The difficulty of securing adequate clinical material was not wholly solved at Columbia and finally led to the temporary abandonment of the Junior and Senior clinical years in 1909.

The hope expressed then and which still runs strong in the minds of the faculty and alumni is that adequate financial means may soon be found for the re-establishment of the full course of Medical instruction required for the M.D. degree.

In the meantime the quality of the pre-clinical and pre-medical instruction has been continuously improved. The School of Medicine of the University has always been given rank A classification under the modern scheme of standardization of medical schools. It was this policy that led to the adoption of a two year Arts and Science pre-medical requirement in 1907. The pre-medical requirement was extended to three years of Arts and Science in 1927. In the year 1925 for the first time there was established a degree of Bachelor of Science in Medicine, a degree granted on the basis of pre-medical and pre-clinical instruction.

Finally, a historical statement cannot do justice to the School of Medicine without calling attention to the commendable amount of research produced in the Medical laboratories. McAlester Hall has an enviable reputation in the University community as a center of research. Research became active in the early nineties especially in chemistry under the leadership of Dr. Paul Schweitzer, in biology under Professor Howard Ayers, in physiology under Dr. J. W. Connaway, and in anatomy under Dr. C. M. Jackson, himself a student of Dr. Ayres. These pioneers were followed by able men and women of the faculties and by alumni who became imbued with the spirit of scientific research. At the present time scientific discoveries reported from the various divisions of the School of Medicine form a commendable part of the published medical literature. It is hoped that the future will develop a support for Medical research that will greatly increase the number of investigators and thereby augment the influence on scientific Medicine and on Public Health in the State of Missouri.

ALPHABETICAL LIST

This list contains all those receiving the M.D. degree from 1874 to 1890, and all students and graduates of the School of Medicine from 1890 to 1928.
