

The Missouri Alumnus CROSSWORD PUZZLE

Fred Fitzsimmons, who created this puzzle, is not an alumnus of any of the University of Missouri's campuses, but he might as well be. The Sunday editor of the Kansas City Star, Fitzsimmons has a daughter, Anne, who is a sophomore at Mizzou; a son, Peter, who is a freshman at Rolla; and three other daughters, Claire, Sarah, and Laura, who are graduates of UMKC.

Fitzsimmons, as one might suspect, is a crossword puzzle buff who, associates claim, can whip through the New York Times crossword in "about nothing flat." He found a puzzle dealing with a specific theme—in this case, the Columbia Campus—difficult to construct, but the puzzle contains enough references to Mizzou that alumni should find it interesting and fun. Some of the answers are easy; some are a little farfetched; and a few just plain hard. (A Swiss department?) Anyway, the answer key appears on page 6.

OMAR OF MU

Omar, the central character in the Manater's cartoon strip, had a rough semester. In one story line, the Board of Curators took demands for a student curator into its own hands, choosing Omar "entirely at random with no experience whatsoever."

The third-semester freshman was so unnerved by the experience that he refused to attend classes for a while. When Omar finally showed up at a meeting, he was kidnapped by the women's field hockey team. The squad whisked the all-American male away to force recognition of their complaints over being ousted from intercollegiate sports at Mizzou. (Women's field hockey actually has been cancelled.)

Omar is safe, however, having been rescued by his brothers in Alpha Gamma Get-down. By pledging the all-black fraternity, Omar has broken the racial barriers of the Greek system.

Omar transferred to Mizzou from the University of Missouri-St. Louis along with his creator, student Bill Wilson. "Omar of UMSL" was a regular feature in the campus newspaper there.

STUDENT OF NOTE

Keith Kolander thinks he's found the Keys to success—88 of them, and they all have strings attached. The senior in music composition taught himself to play the piano by ear, using old Beatles' tunes. He turned to composing at Mizzou, and even won $500 for first place in a national contest for a trio he wrote. "I improvise a lot at the piano. That's the most natural way for me to compose," says Kolander.

PENCHANT FOR PEDALING

Bicycle racing is more mental than instinctive, says student Jim Schneider, whose life revolves around biking. The engineering junior is one of Missouri's top bicyclists and competed somewhere in the U.S. every weekend last summer. "Even a great athlete with power and stamina may never win a race if his timing is off," says Schneider. He's pedaling toward the Pan Am games in 1979 and the Olympics in '80.

A COUNTRY STORE FOR COLUMBIA

Mizzou graduates Ancel Proctor and Rick Halterman have gutted an aging downtown building and, come March, plan to resurrect it as a unique department store.

Two longtime businesses well known to students moved out to make way for the new store, called Ancel Richards. Foster Key & Bike Shop had occupied half the building for 30 years, and Tony's Pizza Palace had been the other tenant for 14 years.

The owners of the new venture say it will be "a country store for ladies and gentlemen" with nine separate departments like City Sidewalks, East Side West Side, and Decorator to Go.

The theme for the store is tied to the history of the 61-year-old building which was once the home of the McKinney Dance Hall. Jazz greets like Dizzy Gillespie and Billie Holiday performed there, says Proctor. Halterman is co-owner of a men's clothing shop near Campus and Proctor an advertising executive in the Boston area.
