Evan Bush, 21

Keller, Texas | Senior, magazine journalism | Storyteller

Evan Bush is executive editor of Project 573, a student-run multimedia website that tells stories of how the Great Recession is disrupting life in mid-Missouri and how people are adapting. Story formats include audio, text, video, still photographs and infographics. A dozen students came together from the J-School's broadcast, convergence, magazine, photojournalism, print and digital news, and strategic communication areas to work together on in-depth stories. "Being able to collaborate with other students has been extremely valuable because they have knowledge that they've gained from their professors and their interest areas," Bush says. "And when we brought everything together it was akin to having all those professors in one room, too." Back to Millennials
