That name sounds familiar...

The Tigers take on the South Carolina Gamecocks for Mizzou's first road trip as a member of the Southeastern Conference at 2:30 p.m. central time Sept. 22, 2012.

Williams-Brice Stadium, formerly Carolina Stadium, was built in 1934 and has a capacity of 80,250.

Like our own favorite college town of the same name, Columbia, S.C., is an energetic and eclectic city brimming with art, culture and great food.

If you're planning on joining the team down south, you'll be looking for some tasty and touristy destinations. Here are a few recommendations and links courtesy of the Midlands Authority for Conventions, Sports & Tourism in South Carolina.

(Staying home? Catch the Tigers nationally on CBS for the first time since the 2006 Sun Bowl.)

With locations throughout South Carolina, Liberty Tap Room & Grill features handcrafted beer and a laid-back atmosphere.
