Faculty meeting focuses on fiscal situation

The fall semester's general faculty meeting theme of "quality programs with limited fiscal resources" became extremely apparent when the possibility of additional state withholding was mentioned by Marie Vorbeck, chairwoman of Faculty Council's Committee on Fiscal Affairs.

Vorbeck explained that the 2 percent withholding earlier this fall became necessary after state revenues failed to keep up with projected income. This year's state budget was based on an 8 percent increase in revenue over last year; during the first four months of this fiscal year, however, revenue had increased by only 3 percent, Vorbeck said.

She also reminded faculty members that if 1 percent were withheld during the last quarter of the fiscal year, it would "translate to 4 percent" of the budget.

The University's year-end reserves "provide a dramatic illustration" of the fiscal situation, Vorbeck said, when one compares the $1 million to $2 million ordinarily left over to "the few hundred thousand" remaining at the end of 1981-1982.

The Fiscal Affairs Committee is studying ways to "maintain quality with limited resources," Vorbeck said. The committee will provide input to Provost Ronald Bunn's plan of rational-base budgeting, she said.

Vorbeck added that faculty need to look at other sources of income; application for grants and contracts decreased "significantly" this past year, at a time when such efforts should be increased, she said.

Also giving reports at last week's meeting were Chancellor Barbara Uehling; Provost Ronald Bunn; William Stringer, chairman of the Faculty Council's Student Affairs Committee; Dean Schmidt, interim director of Libraries; Walter Johnson, member of the Faculty Development Committee; and Michael Chippendale, chairman of Humanities programs ranked low

UMC's below-average rating in a recent survey of doctoral programs in the humanities will "contribute to some very sober reflection on this campus, and that's good," said Don Blount, dean of the Graduate School.

Blount warned against using the survey results to predict the future of the programs, explaining, "Such extrapolation leads to thoughtless stigma, categorization and cliché—all of which are very counterproductive."

"But we should learn from our perceived deficiencies and start making decisions that will make us a great university in the years ahead."

Conducted by a committee named by the Conference Board of Associated Research Councils, the survey rated nine disciplines in the humanities on a percentile basis in the areas of faculty quality, effectiveness, improvement of the program in the last five years and familiarity with the program.

The assessment of 522 doctoral programs was published in the Nov. 10 issue of The Chronicle of Higher Education.

UMC has doctoral programs in six of the nine areas studied: art history, classics, English, French, philosophy and Spanish. Only the areas of program improvement in French and Spanish ranked above the 50th percentile.

Earlier this fall, programs in the physical sciences and mathematics were rated as part of the same study. Additional reports on engineering, the biological sciences and the behavioral and social sciences will be published later this year.

Blount plans to speak to the Graduate Faculty Senate after all the reports have been published, he said. "We are going to look at the results very carefully and share those results on a very broad basis."

It will also lead to some difficult decisions, he said. "How do we choose our area of excellence? We're not going to be able to be the nation's best in all areas—I think that's a self-evident truth."

"We've got to be making decisions now that will impact our future assessments."

To improve programs, Blount said he believed faculty should be willing and able to publish, to attend national and international meetings and to obtain external funding—"that's what reputational things are all about."

Blount did point out that despite the lower ratings given some departments, "fine scholarship" was going on in those units.

He also said that the surveys conducted so far generally showed higher ratings were given to departments with a large number of faculty. "It would be a ridiculous approach," however, "to triple our size" and believe the problem was solved, Blount said.

University reaches 91% of goal

The Hospital and Clinics Region Monday soared to 121 percent of its United Way goal with donations of $14,551.33, while UMC overall reached 91 percent of its $135,000 goal.

The Academic II Region reported gifts totaling $36,737, or 93 percent of its goal. The Retirees Region had pledges of $9,248.75, or 92 percent of its goal.

With gifts of $12,929.30, the UMca Region reached 89 percent of its goal. The Administrative Region reported pledges of $17,016.24, or 88 percent of its goal.

The Academic I Region had donations of $32,795.30 or 83 percent of its goal. Pledge cards should be returned today.

Around the campus

A CAMPUS HEALTH SCREENING for faculty and staff is scheduled from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Nov. 30 in the main lobby of Jesse Hall. The free screening, conducted by the UMC Hospital and Clinics, will consist of a computerized nutrition analysis, a tricep skinfold test, lung function test and a blood pressure screening.

THE TREASURER OF THE UNIVERSITY has been authorized by the executive committee of the Board of Curators to borrow as much as $5 million to meet cash-flow needs of the University.

The action allows officials to seek daily or weekly loans as necessary. The loans would be paid back by June 30, the end of the fiscal year.

"NEW TRENDS FOR HAIR IN 1983" will be discussed at the University Chapter of the Professional Secretaries International meeting at 7 p.m. Nov. 23 in 112 Lewis Hall. Tracy Menessee of Heads Together will be guest speaker.

For more information, call 882-4701.

UMC DEDICATES MEMORIAL UNION ROOMS—Now Walt Disney, Mark Twain and six other illustrious native Missourians have a place at UMC. The Memorial Union will honor notables who were born in Missouri, or who spent a significant part of their careers in the state, by dedicating rooms in the student activity building to their names.

The Walt Disney Room was formerly Room N208. The north-wing ballroom is now the Mark Twain Room. Room N214-15 is the Benton-Bingham Room, named for artists Thomas Hart Benton and George Caleb Bingham. Room N222-23 honors musicians as the Scott Joplin-Blind Boone Room. George Washington Carver Room, formerly Room N229, commemorates the scientist. The auditorium, now the Jesse Wrench Auditorium, is dedicated to the UMC history professor and humanitarian.

The changes mark the first step in designating names for all Union rooms. In addition, the Memorial Union/Brady Commons Advisory Board has proposed decorating the building with art works and memorabilia that commemorate contributions of outstanding Missourians. Persons interested in contributing items associated with Missouri heritage should contact Robert Brock, Memorial Union director, at 882-3418.

THE UNIVERSITY OF MISSOURI PRESS has announced the forthcoming publication of "The Variorum Edition of the Poetry of John Donne," one of the major collaborative efforts of 20th-century scholarship. The first volume is scheduled to be published in 1986; the entire edition should be completed by 1992.

Susan McGregor Kelpel, associate director of the Press, will head the Press editorial group working on the project. According to Kelpel, all relevant manuscripts and printed editions will be used in developing an authoritative text of the works by the 17th-century English metaphysical poet. The critical commentary will represent more than 300 years of Donne scholarship.

General editor of the edition is Gary A. Stringer, University of Southern Mississippi. Members of the Advisory Board are William B. Hunter Jr., University of Houston; Albert C. Labriola, Duquesne University; Paul A. Parrish, Texas A&M University; C.A. Patrides, University of Michigan; Ted-Larry Pebworth, University of Michigan-Dearborn; John R. Roberts, UMC; John T. Shawcross, University of Kentucky; and Ernest W. Sullivan II, Texas Tech University.

Shawcross will be chief editor of the text; Roberts will be chief editor of the commentary.

ART FAIR '82 will feature 32 exhibitors selling all sorts of handcrafted items, just in time for holiday shopping. Batik, pottery, ceramic sculpture, weaving, stained glass, watercolors, leather, shell art, silkscreen, jewelry, wood and photography will be available.

THE JESSE AUDITORIUM SERIES will feature the Biblical narrative "King David" by Arthur Honegger and Leonard Bernstein's "Chichester Psalms" at 8 p.m. Dec. 3 in Jesse Auditorium.

William Warfield, head of the Voice Department at the University of Illinois School of Music, will narrate. Soloists will be Eleanore Bergquist, soprano, the Metropolitan Opera; Kathryn Fowler, mezzo soprano, visiting assistant professor of music; and Jeffrey Stamm, tenor, the Metropolitan Opera.

The Choral Union, the University Singers and the University Philharmonic, under the direction of Duncan Couch, professor of music, will join the guest artists.

Tickets for this Music Scholarship Benefit Performance are $5. They are available through Dec. 3 at the Missouri Book Store and the University Book Store and from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Nov. 29 to Dec. 3 at Jesse Box Office.

CARDS REQUESTING DISABLED EMPLOYEES, DISABLED VETERANS AND VIETNAM-ERA VETERANS to identify themselves have been distributed through the payroll to UMC employees. According to Alton Zanders, director of equal opportunity, federal affirmative action laws require his office to request the information from employees.

Information is voluntary and refusal to provide it will not subject an employee to discharge or disciplinary action.

Information supplied will be kept confidential, except that supervisors and managers may be informed of restrictions on the work or duties of handicapped individuals, first-aid and safety personnel may be informed if the condition might require emergency treatment and government officials investigating compliance with the act shall be informed.

Those to whom the card does not apply should not return it, Zanders said.

Those with questions about the card may call Zanders at 882-7885.

Comprehensive planners present proposals

A campus crisscrossed with pedestrian walkways and bicycle paths...a campus with green space where the aging houses of Kuhlman Court once stood...a campus with an attractive entrance at its northwest corner, where Elm Street has been extended to Providence Road.

These were just some of the ideas presented by the University's comprehensive planners last week at a series of sessions attended by faculty and staff.

Jack Robinson of Sasaki Associates Inc., Watertown, Mass., made the presentation. He, along with representatives from Mackey and Associates of St. Louis and MIRA Inc. of Minneapolis, worked with campus administrators and the Campus Planning and Advisory Committee on a comprehensive plan for the University.

Reactions of faculty and staff to the ideas presented will help "fine-tune" the plan, said Robinson, who stressed the importance of involvement from the University community.

Responses may be sent to members of the Campus Planning and Advisory Committee, chaired by Alan Everson, associate professor of forestry, in 1-22 Agriculture.

Although few new buildings are planned for the campus, Robinson said this is still "a very interesting time to plan." Since any improvements to UMC cannot be dependent on funds from major building programs, other types of changes will be made, such as establishing cross-campus pedestrian walkways and bikeways, developing a system of landscape open spaces, eliminating unnecessary through-campus traffic and unnecessary city streets and creating attractive entrances to the campus from major city streets and highways.

Proposed routes for walkways will connect such areas as Sanborn Field at College Avenue to Lewis and Clark halls via the central campus area.

Such a system of walkways "will become the streets of the pedestrian campus," Robinson said.

Additional "open spaces" have been proposed, including an east-west quadrangle from Arts and Science to agriculture, a north-south mall from Jesse south to Stankowski Field and a quadrangle at the historic Conley House.

Robinson noted that the success of the pedestrian campus might be extended to Hitt Street south of Rollins and Sixth Street between Elm and Stewart. He also suggested the acquisition of Missouri Avenue and Gentry street by the University, so those streets could be closed as the central area of the campus is redeveloped.

One block of Conley Street, between Hitt and Ninth, and one block of Kuhlman Court should be permanently closed for the construction of the Ellis Library addition, Robinson said.

Since the University now owns all of the houses on Kuhlman Court, the occupants of those buildings can be relocated and the area redeveloped for walkways and open space, Robinson said.

The University could construct the new law school building north of the general classroom building without acquiring private property or closing any streets, Robinson said.

An alternative location for the law school, if the property could be purchased, would be the block between Gentry and Maryland, he said.

Passage of the city bond issue funding street improvements will result in the extension of Elm Street to Providence Road, Robinson said, providing a new entrance to the campus at its northwest corner.

Frijters: Additional layoffs in Campus Facilities unlikely

Additional layoffs in Campus Facilities this fiscal year are unlikely, Vice Chancellor for Administrative Affairs Ria Frijters told Staff Council members last week.

Earlier this fall, 27 Campus Facilities employees were laid off due to lack of funding for small renovation projects. Eight of those had been hired in June to complete a backlog of projects while classes were not in session and were not guaranteed long-term employment, Frijters said. The remaining 19 were those with the least seniority. Seventeen were given two weeks' notice effective Nov. 19; two apprentices will be laid off when their training period ends Feb. 4, 1983.

However, Frijters added that 15 positions were open in the maintenance area and urged those who were laid off to apply for the jobs. Also, Frijters said, she has appealed to the University Hospital and Clinics and to Residential Life to hire the laid-off workers when jobs become available in those areas.

In the maintenance area, four building trades specialists/painters jobs are open; the jobs were established through reallocating general operating funds in administrative services, Frijters said.

Because of union regulations, those jobs must be posted, but the painters who were laid off are urged to apply and rehiring will occur on the basis of seniority, Frijters said. Other available jobs are groundskeeper, stores clerk, storeskeeper, driver, mechanical trades specialist/electrician and janitor.

"Although some jobs may be lower paying, laid-off employees could apply so they may retain their University benefits," Frijters said.

If laid-off workers take temporary or lower-classification jobs, they will not lose re-employment rights in their former job classification during the 12 months they have rights in the layoff pool, said Personnel Director Ron Petit. The Personnel Office has offered to assist each laid-off employee, he added.

To alleviate the tight job situation in Campus Facilities, some workers could consider early retirement, Frijters said. "There are very attractive packages for early retirement. We're not trying to push them out of a job, but we'd like them to be aware of the options".

In other matters at the Nov. 11 Staff Council meeting, members discussed:

- creating a Personnel Committee to deal with related issues
- Staff Council election guidelines and
- possible approaches to averting layoffs and to improving campus buildings.

Faculty Council's Special Projects Committee.

The University's "fiscal resources remain a source of concern," Uehling said during her report to the faculty.

"Three successive years of rescissions—that is cause for concern," the chancellor said. She explained that the University was fortunate, however, in that this year's withholding was only 2 percent because "of arrangements with the state to help them in their cash-flow problem."

Federal appropriations also are declining, Uehling said, adding that last year, the University received $1.7 million less in direct grants and contracts.

Financial aid to students also has declined; at one time, UMC could fund 100 percent of any student's need. Now, only those students with the greatest need receive full funding, she said.

One area of support which has increased in private donations, the chancellor said, but "private funds will not be our salvation."

Uehling reiterated the choices when faced with a declining budget:

- Across-the-board cuts, which faculty have said are "intolerable" if quality programs are to exist.

- Elimination of programs, which the Board of Curators prohibited in a resolution approved last summer.

- A better understanding of goals, so that units are funded "in accordance with those goals," Uehling said.

During a question-and-answer session, Uehling was asked about any plans to evaluate the Office of Equal Opportunity.

The office is "probably monitored more" than any other, Uehling said. She does do regular evaluations of her staff, but saw "no special need" at this time to investigate either the office or its director, Alton Zanders.

Zanders was accused of sexual harassment in a grievance filed by a former employee last month.

"I'm concerned that we get on with the business of affirmative action," Uehling said.

When asked about the low ratings received by UMC in a survey of doctoral programs, the chancellor said she was more interested in the factors accounting for the ratings than the ratings themselves.

Responding to a question on indirect costs recovery, Uehling said she would "like very much" to return more of the indirect costs of research grants to the departments. "We had planned to do that this year until fiscal restraints" occurred.

Questions on research and development leaves were answered by Provost Ronald Bunn, who said that the possibility of an additional withholding caused him to hesitate in making a commitment of funds to such leaves at the campus level.

Some limited funds should be available next year, however, to fund one-third of the cost of research leaves, with the department and college funding the remaining two-thirds cost, Bunn said.

In other reports at the meeting:

- William Stringer, chairman of Faculty Council's Student Affairs Committee, said it had been about 10 years since admission requirements had been studied.

The committee is examining the alternatives and their impacts, Stringer said. Options include raising admission scores beyond the present score of 75 and requiring specific courses from high school.

High standards could enhance the University by attracting the best students, Stringer said, yet the accessibility of a tax-supported institution should also be kept in mind.

A hearing on the subject will be held in December, he said.

•Dean Schmidt, interim director of Libraries, reported that the statewide bond issue passed in June has resulted in funds for approximately 50,000 square feet to be added to the southwest side of Ellis Library along with the renovation of 50,000 square feet on the first floor of the library.

He also announced that the eight separate libraries within Ellis will be combined, since those libraries are not staffed adequately due to budget limitations.

"This will open up the library and centralize some of the services," Schmidt reported. The book collection, which has been fragmented in eight areas, will be put into one numerical sequence.

- Walter Johnson, a member of the Faculty Development Committee, announced the permanent status of that committee, previously an ad hoc group.

Johnson said the committee has worked on two major programs: the "new" development leave policy, "now on the books," and revision of the instructions and forms for faculty development proposals. An early December deadline has been established for proposals for the second semester, Johnson said.

- Michael Chippendale, chairman of Faculty Council's Committee on Special Projects, reported on possibilities for early and phased retirement.

Under the present retirement plan, a faculty member may retire at age 55 with 10 years' service or age 60 with five years' service, but benefits are reduced, Chippendale said.

No phased retirement is available, although faculty members may be rehired by the University, he said.

A report on early and phased retirement, approved by the Faculty Council, offered "actuarially sound" options, Chippendale said, but the University's lawyers found violations of Missouri law concerning yearly contracts in the report.

Dale Neuman, academic associate in the office of the vice president for academic affairs, has investigated retirement possibilities available within the current system, Chippendale said.
