University of Missouri-Columbia

OFFICIAL HOLIDAYS RING WITH CHEER

Because Christmas and New Year's Day fall on Sundays this year, Monday, Dec. 26, and Monday, Jan. 2, will be official University holidays.

No one will be required to take personal days or vacation days on the official holidays. However, the option of using personal days or vacation is available to those individual offices that may wish to be closed on other days during the holiday season.

With questions about the holiday schedule, contact the appropriate administrative office in your area.

Admitted but not enrolled

Black freshmen who failed to enroll at UMC after being accepted cite financial reasons.

"The responses revolved around one thing — the dollar sign," says Gary Smith, registrar and admissions director, of the admissions survey.

The survey was sent to all 115 black freshmen who were admitted to UMC but didn't enroll this fall. A total of 39, or 34 percent, responded.

Twenty-eight of these students or their parents added written comments. A sample: "I enrolled at a smaller college to receive financial aid and a scholarship. I may enroll at a later date if financial aid allows." "The cost of Northeast Missouri State was more in line with what my parents could afford." "My parents and I felt that as a black student your school had encouraged us to attend and consider the University of Missouri, but at the end we were just dropped, no financial aid, no scholarship money, nothing." "Financial reasons made attending St. Louis University more feasible for me at this time."

In response to survey questions, about 51 percent said the dollar amount of their financial aid was inadequate. Slightly more than 15 percent said the amount was sufficient. A third gave no answer.

Only two students indicated they had been offered scholarships; twenty-nine, or 74 percent, said they would have enrolled if they had received scholarships. Two said a scholarship would not have caused them to enroll; seven didn't respond.

One-third said the recent increase in fees influenced their enrollment decision; almost 54 percent said it was not a factor. About half of the respondents indicated they had received information concerning fees early enough.

Information about the financial aid application procedure was adequate, 77 percent said. Some 69 percent were aware of the application deadline. About 38 percent indicated they were notified of their financial aid award in time; nearly 36 percent said they weren't. A fourth gave no answer.

Some 87 percent said they had planned to live on campus, but only a third indicated they had guaranteed housing. Housing costs influenced the enrollment decision of 28 percent.

About 85 percent said they received adequate admissions information, that the admissions procedure was explained thoroughly and that they had received timely notification of their acceptance.

"We're recruiting minority students and getting applications, but we're not getting them enrolled," Smith says. The admissions director notes that 45 percent of black freshmen who apply and are offered admission don't enroll, compared to 32 percent of non-minority freshmen.

"We need to look at what we do after we offer admission and before school starts in terms of financial concerns and additional contacts with students to continue to reinforce the interest level," Smith says.

The survey has been made available to other campus departments, including student financial aids. Director George Brooks notes that UMC is among the top in the Big Eight in terms of numbers of students served and total amount of dollars dispersed in financial aid. Approximately half of Mizzou's students receive financial aid, which totals from $25 million to $30 million annually, he says. "It doesn't meet the entire need but still is a large amount," he adds.

Brooks says his department continually conducts its own surveys of students' financial needs and is in the process of planning another.

Medicine: a business or profession?

The growth of for-profit health care corporations threatens the quality of health care and the future of the medical profession, warns Arnold S. Relman, MD, editor of the New England Journal of Medicine, speaking at the School of Medicine's fourth annual Dr. John H. Walters lecture Nov. 29 in Memorial Union.

The lecture series is sponsored by the health care and human values program at the School of Medicine.

In the last 15 years, "The medical industrial complex has grown from nothing to a point where giant corporations take in more than 15 percent of all money spent for medical health care," says Relman, professor of medicine at Harvard Medical School.

"The new medical care corporations provide services that formerly were offered only by private practitioners or federal and voluntary agencies," he says.

The commercialization of medicine increases health care costs because "businesses must sell as much as the market will bear. You cannot expect corporations to put a lid on selling services they are in the business to sell."

And they're not. He cites a study of several hundred hospitals showing charges were 11 percent higher at "chain hospitals."

While for-profit institutions are concentrating on the bottom line, Relman says, they are not providing for indigent care, research and development.

Relman predicts that if the present trend continues and corporations own 20 to 30 percent of all health care institutions by the end of the decade, "It will probably mean a return to the two-class system and reduced access of poor people to the health care system."

This is in direct contradiction to what most people believe: that health care is a basic right. "It should not be bought and sold in a market like an item of commerce, no more than education or religious services should be sold. All citizens should have access to health care regardless of their ability to pay."

In addition to being concerned about the quality of patient care, Relman told the audience of about 180 people that he is worried about the future health of his own profession.

"Medicine has traditionally been regarded as a learned profession, not a business," he says, pointing out that society enters into a contract with physicians and gives them the autonomy, prestige, affluence and power of decision few other professionals enjoy.

"All this is given in trust that we will serve patients' interest to the best of our ability and will abide by the unwritten contract to act as trusted agents in making diagnostic decisions, avoiding tests which are unnecessary or too risky."

Profit from fees has always been a built-in conflict in this arrangement, Relman says. But until now physicians have been perceived to be holding up their end of the contract.

"However, that contract is now open for renegotiation," he says. "If physicians are to be trusted, they cannot be seen as entrepreneurs and medical businessmen."

"The American medical profession has to face this simple question: Are we a profession or are we a business? If a profession, then our primary obligation is to the patient. If a business, then our primary obligation is to investors, stockholders and the bottom line."

"I would like to see physicians declare that they should not earn any income from medical care except fees paid for their own services," Relman says. "Any other position will erode the profession. We will lose our independence and become merely highly skilled technicians." —Nancy P. O'Brien

MBA EVENING COURSES OFFERED

The School of Business and Public Administration will continue to offer evening MBA classes during the winter semester.

Courses will include Accountancy 310, Statistics 207, Management 437 and Marketing 470.

The MBA program is open to students with bachelor's degrees. Admission is based on undergraduate grade point average and performance on the Graduate Management Admissions Test.

Registration for winter courses is Jan. 19 and 20. For applications to enroll, call 882-6311. With questions about the MBA program, GMAT deadlines and fees, call 882-2750.

WEEKLY ANNOUNCES HOLIDAY SCHEDULE

Because of winter semester break, the next issue of Mizzou Weekly will be published Jan. 13. Send items for this issue through campus mail to 1100 Tiger Towers by Jan. 6 or call 875-7132.

During the break, the Mizzou Weekly staff is assembling a 1984 UMC winter semester calendar. Now is the time to send information about events to Winter Semester Calendar, 1100 Tiger Towers. In addition to date, time and place, include speaker or performer's name and title, the event's sponsor, cost, and your name and telephone number. The deadline is noon Jan. 27. With questions, call the Mizzou Weekly office at 875-7132.

UMC CHEMISTS CELEBRATE ANNIVERSARY

The UMC section of the American Chemical Society is marking its 75th anniversary with a Jan. 21 symposium.

The event will begin with a workshop on chemical education called "Let's Do Chemistry" conducted by Henry A. Bent, professor of chemistry at North Carolina State University. Bent is the son of Henry E. Bent, dean emeritus of the Graduate School and professor emeritus of chemistry at UMC. The workshop will be from 10 a.m.-noon in 103 Schlundt Hall.

Also at 10 a.m. will be a visit to the nuclear research reactor led by Director Robert M. Brugger.

An afternoon symposium, "Frontiers in Chemistry," will be from 1-5 in Memorial Union auditorium. Speakers will be Bent; Fred Basolo, professor of chemistry at Northwestern University; and Robert E. Sparks, professor of chemistry at Washington University.

A social hour and dinner will follow from 5:30-9 p.m. at the Alumni Center. Basolo, who is national president of the American Chemical Society, will speak. Cost of the dinner is $9 per person.

For more information, call 882-8795.

JUMPING MULES! IT'S EQUINE HEALTH DAY

Mule jumping and driving demonstrations plus information on horse feeding, breeding and genetics fill the program for Equine Health Day, to be held Dec. 18 at the UMC Livestock Center.

Registration begins at 7:30 a.m.; the program starts at 8:30 a.m. Before Dec. 14, the registration fee is $20. At the door, it will be $25.

For details, contact Marsha Murray at 882-7854 or 882-7848.

Projected layoffs announced

Forty-two employees in the construction and maintenance departments of Campus Facilities are expected to be laid off, effective Jan. 13, says Duane Stucky, vice chancellor for administrative services. In addition, one supervisor and two support staff members are expected to receive layoff notices.

Employees to be laid off will receive official notice by letter the week of Dec. 26.

State appropriations have not provided the level of funding to complete the small renovation projects usually handled by Campus Facilities. State monies fund 80 percent of such construction projects.

If the current special session of the legislature does pass the bond issue, Stucky says, "There is a chance we may have projects for a few workers in the spring."

In accordance with a Public Service Employees Union, Local 45, agreement, seniority listings were posted Monday in each satellite facility and in shop areas on campus. Layoffs will occur by seniority.

In the building trades section, the 23 expected layoffs include nine carpenters, six painters, seven mason tuckpointers and one mason.

In the mechanical trades section, the 19 expected layoffs include one machinist, eight pipefitters, two refrigeration specialists, two sheetmetal workers, four electricians and two electronics specialists.

"The workers in construction and maintenance are extremely skilled and talented," Stucky says. "The University will be losing exceptional employees."

Sanders to head Engineering Communications

Annette Sanders has been appointed director of Engineering Communications and instructor in extension education. She succeeds Margaret Kraeuchi who left this summer to become an agent/broker for Safeco Insurance in St. Louis.

Since May 1982, Sanders has been a senior information specialist in Engineering Communications. At UMC since 1972, Sanders has been a medical script writer and media instructor at the School of Medicine, director of media design in the School of Nursing and state information specialist for extension 4-H/youth programs with the agricultural editor's office.

She holds a BS in biological sciences from McNeese State College, an MS in botany from the University of Massachusetts, an MEd in science education from UMC and is a dissertation short of a PhD in instructional media and educational psychology from UMC.

Step by step

"I'd heard the term 'teaching hospital' a few times before, but was never really aware of what it meant . . . until the accident. After my head injury it was slow going for a while, but everyone was so helpful, so pleasant—it made the hours go by quickly and made the strain of re-learning everyday tasks just that much easier to take.

The right people coupled with state of the art technology is part of what makes the teaching hospital a reality . . . but its that extra touch, the human touch, that makes it special."

TRAVEL AGENTS AGAIN MEET WITH OFFICIALS

Getting the guaranteed lowest possible airfares was identified as UMC's top travel need during a recent meeting of UMC administrators and local travel agents.

The meeting was one in a series to discuss travel services. Representatives of eight agencies attended.

Mizzou spends more than $2 million annually on travel expenses, with more than half that amount allotted to air travel, says Duane Stucky, vice chancellor for administrative services.

For discussion, the group examined a proposal and contract for travel services at Iowa State University.

Among the services presented were guaranteed lowest possible fares, special group fares, campus ticket delivery and 24-hour, national toll-free telephone service. ISU also monitors employees' travel expenses, quality of travel services and availability of discount coupons for flights. Prompt payment, which can be achieved through use of corporate credit cards, is awarded with a 3 percent incentive.

Stucky notes that while ISU contracts with only one agency, "I really don't see us going with one exclusive agency. The consortium of local agencies discussed last time looks attractive."

HOLIDAY TREAT FOR YOUNG PET OWNERS

The College of Veterinary Medicine is sponsoring a kid's pet care day from 8:45-11:45 a.m. Dec. 31 at the college. The free seminar is for kids who own all sorts of critters, from frogs and turtles to dogs, cats or birds.

The pet care day would be especially beneficial to children who received pets as holiday gifts, says Mar Doering, information specialist and extension veterinarian. Doering notes other gifts may occupy the child's attention, causing the pet to be ignored.

"You may decide that with the excitement of the holiday season upon you that a gift certificate for a pet is a better present. In this way the family can have the enjoyment of choosing the perfect pet together and the fun of the holidays will continue into the new year."

For more information about the pet care day, call Doering at 882-3254.

J-SCHOOL ALUMNI TO OPERATE MEDIA

Alumni of the School of Journalism, which is celebrating its 75th anniversary, are invited to return as reporters and anchors for the school's media during 1984 Journalism Week.

An alumni homecoming weekend April 13-16 kicks off the week's activities, which continue through April 20.

Alumni who wish to participate should contact Jay Anthony, chair, Journalism Week committee, P.O. Box 838, Columbia, Mo. 65205.

STUDENT TELEFUND EXCEEDS GOAL

The Student Foundation Telefund this fall surpassed all expectations. In its 10th and best year, the person-to-person appeal rang up $115,869.50 in alumni pledges, exceeding the $83,000 goal. The record amount pledged is almost double that of last year.

The College of Education obtained the largest amount of pledges, $23,123. Second highest was Arts and Science with $16,496, followed by Journalism with $16,078. Other participants and their totals are:

Agriculture, $7,629; Business and Public Administration, $12,070; Engineering, $12,902; Forestry, Fisheries and Wildlife, $215; Friends of Rusk, $1,990; Home Economics,

$1,785; Library and Informational Science, $2,232; Medicine, $5,169; Nursing, $3,122; Parks and Recreation, $586; Student Foundation, $5,830; and Veterinary Medicine, $5,535.

Some 657 student volunteers supervised by senior Jody Debs or junior Tracey Allendorf called 12,106 alumni during the five-week Telefund.

Next year's Telefund goal is $200,000, say Debs and Allendorf, who plan to return as student managers.

A PERFECT GIFT FOR FACULTY AND STAFF

Membership in the Mizzou Alumni Association is a stocking stuffer with yearlong value, entitling the member to special prices on travel tours, discounts on books from the University Press, priority information for Tiger athletic events and bowl activities, plus a subscription to the Missouri Alumnus magazine.

Any Mizzou faculty or staff member may join for half price. Annual single memberships are $7.50. Annual memberships for married couples are $8.75.

Send a check, payable to UMC Alumni Association, to 132 Alumni Center, Columbia, Mo. 65211.

KUDOS TO CAMPUS UNITED WAY PARTICIPANTS

Many deserving faculty and staff members were recognized Wednesday for their efforts in this year's campus United Way campaign.

With the help of temporary, part-time or student workers, the following departmental leaders were honored for more than 100 percent participation: Mary Ann Canton, Student Financial Aids, 194 percent; Marshall Mosek, Recreation and Park Administration, 127 percent; Diane Brukart, Student Health Services, 109 percent; Tom Freeman, Geology, 107 percent; and Mark Langford, Facilities Management, 104 percent.

For the second year, the Academic II region raised the largest amount of money, $43,822.83. John Bauman accepted the award. Dick Dowdy accepted an award for Academic I for the largest per capita gift of $85.71. Overall, the University's per capita gift was $51.81.

The campus contributed $151,350.38 to United Way. That's 102 percent of its $148,000 goal. Associate Provost Gerald Brouder was the chair and Chancellor Barbara S. Uehling the honorary chair.

Q. My wife and I are considering an overseas vacation next year. We would like to know which departments sponsor educational, overseas tour groups.

A. There are opportunities to study in Mexico, France, England and Japan. For more information, call Studies Abroad coordinator Ann Holleran, 106 Gentry Hall, at 882-6367, for an appointment.

Q. Did the staff raises reported in the Dec. 2 Mizzou Weekly include hospital raises?

A. The story did not include the hospital because it will consider giving mid-year raises, says Duane Stucky, vice chancellor for administrative services. "The hospital will be using as a target the amount of salary increases achieved for the rest of the UMC campus," he adds.

Q. Are there any plans for renovation and use of the old Conley House? At one time, we heard that it might become a guest house for visiting dignitaries or a faculty club.

A. Basic repairs have been completed already, reports Duane Stucky, vice chancellor for administrative services. Future improvements will depend on private fund-raising activities.

"The renovation is considered to be a long-range project that may take several years," he says. "We now intend to provide a green area between the Conley House and Jesse, but completion of the entire project will take more time and money—much like the Lowry Mall, which is not yet complete."

Plans for the house include several options: VIP apartments, conference rooms and offices. "It's probably not large enough to function as a faculty club," Stucky says. "Right now, we're looking at various proposals and working on the funding."

Q. Is there any plan to replace or repair the sidewalk on the west side of Maryland beside the visitor's parking lot? It creates a bad first impression for visitors and someone could trip easily on the broken paving.

A. There is no improvement plan because there are no repair dollars at this time, reports Bill Ruppert, campus facilities landscape architect.

"We have sidewalk problems throughout the campus," he notes. "We realize that area is a problem, but we must give priority to areas that hinder the handicapped and sidewalks in high-use areas until the funding improves."
