Progress and direction

Chancellor Barbara S. Uehling noted UMC's progress and discussed future goals in her annual state of the campus address Sept. 24 at the fall general faculty meeting.

Students, alumni, research and leadership in providing ideas and human resources for the future are visible signs of Mizzou's influence on the state, the chancellor told the audience of some 200. Such successes, she said, must be communicated to Missourians.

"Students are the first purpose of the institution," she said, noting that the quality of students is evident in the classroom. Alumni who have achieved acclaim in the state, nation and abroad also testify to the quality of students, Uehling said.

Unofficial enrollment figures show a decline of 800 to 900 students, she said, adding, "We are not arguing that the quality of the University is measured by its size. I believe the undergraduate program is the best in the state, and that youth in Missouri should have the opportunity to receive an education on this campus."

As indicators of faculty quality, the chancellor cited funding for the Multipurpose Arthritis Center, one of three in the nation; the Food for the 21st Century program; the cooperative site for the National Agricultural Policy Institute; two UMC recipients of Presidential Young Investigator awards; and faculty concern about admission standards.

In addition, "I'm ecstatic this year about research efforts." Outside grants and contracts have increased from $14.5 million to $18 million annually, up 27 percent from last year. A third of the researchers have been at UMC five years or less, she added. "We should be very, very pleased about that."

To foster research, Uehling said, $600,000 will be added this year to the existing $200,000 research incentive. Funds will go directly to departments where generated, she said.

Progress in facilities has been achieved through planning, setting priorities and "self-help," or non-state funds, Uehling said. She cited improvements in computer programs, the Health Sciences Library, Hospital and Clinics lobby and parking structure and various renovations as indicators of progress. Still, she added, additional improvements are necessary, and more state funding will be required for facilities.

In fund raising, Uehling said, additional staff will be hired to assist clusters of colleges in their projects. Some $11.8 million was raised last year; this year's goal is to increase that amount by 10 percent.

Affirmative action gains included hiring six new minority faculty members and increasing minority enrollment in the law school, Uehling said. UMC is above the national average in both areas. She pledged a renewed responsibility to achieve goals for minority freshman enrollment, which this year increased by 4 percent instead of the 6 percent goal.

An overall increase in general operating funds from $130.7 million to $140.8 million is encouraging after some lean years, Uehling said. However, she added, had the state funded only inflationary increases for the last four years, state funding on campus would be $13 million more than it is now.

"We continue to respond to these problems by increasing efficiencies," she said. "In the last two years, more than $1 million was reallocated from Administrative Services to academic priorities."

Looking to the future, Uehling urged a commitment to providing an environment in which students' potential can be realized. "Are we doing well by them?" she asked. "Are we adequately preparing them for a future that will be very different?"

The chancellor also emphasized the need to "take charge of our own fate. We need to re-emphasize that this University has a constitutional mandate to exercise its educational independence. We must continue to be responsive to ideas, suggestions and needs of people of this state. But we must also resist the substitution of externally imposed priorities which may be identified by political or other special interests outside the established decision-making processes."

Finally, Uehling said, it is important to identify still more ways to further personal and professional growth of faculty and staff.

In response to faculty questions, the chancellor said she is hopeful that funds for new equipment will be available this year. She also reported that she is working with Faculty Council on the program review, and urged interested persons to express ideas to the council.

Campus United Way drive begins

An autumn campus tradition was kicked off Wednesday morning.

On an upbeat note, 200 to 250 persons, including the leadership cabinet, district chairmen and unit chairmen, started the campus' United Way campaign at Memorial Union.

The campus campaign plays an important role in the community United Way drive. Last year, almost 3,000 faculty and staff members contributed $153,300, the amount of this year's goal. That's a significant portion of the city's $735,000 goal. "The city depends on us to meet the goal," says campaign chairman Suzanne Holland, assistant to the vice chancellor for Student, Personnel and Auxiliary Services. Gary Smith, director of Admissions and Registrar, is co-chairman and Chancellor Barbara S. Uehling is honorary chairman.

Contributions to United Way fund 26 agencies, providing essential health, rehabilitative counseling and character-building services.

Regional leaders and goals of this year's campaign follow.

Academic 1 Region: The goal of Dick Dowdy, associate professor of human nutrition, foods and food systems management, is $42,000. His region includes Medicine, Engineering, Law, Home Economics, Journalism, Business and Public Administration, Library and Informational Science, Education, Graduate School and Research Centers.

Academic 2 Region: Glenn Gillespie, associate dean of public and community services, leads the drive for $45,000 from Agriculture, Arts and Science, Extension, Veterinary Medicine, Nursing, and Public and Community Services.

Administrative Region: $19,900 is Gary Zwonitzer's goal for Student, Personnel and Auxiliary Services; Development, University and Alumni Relations; Institutional Research and Planning; Chancellor's Office; Provost's Office; Athletics; Administrative Services; and Libraries. Zwonitzer is an associate fiscal operations officer.

University Hospital and Clinics Region: Steve Pearson, assistant director for operations and planning, sets a goal of $17,600 for Administrative, Financial, Nursing, Professional, Support and Outpatient Services and Residents.

UMca Region: Tom Hussey, assistant vice president of Business Services, has a goal of $16,000 for Business and Financial Services, Personnel and Staff Relations, Academic Affairs, Computing and Information Systems, State Historical Society, President's Office, Treasurer's Office and Auditing.

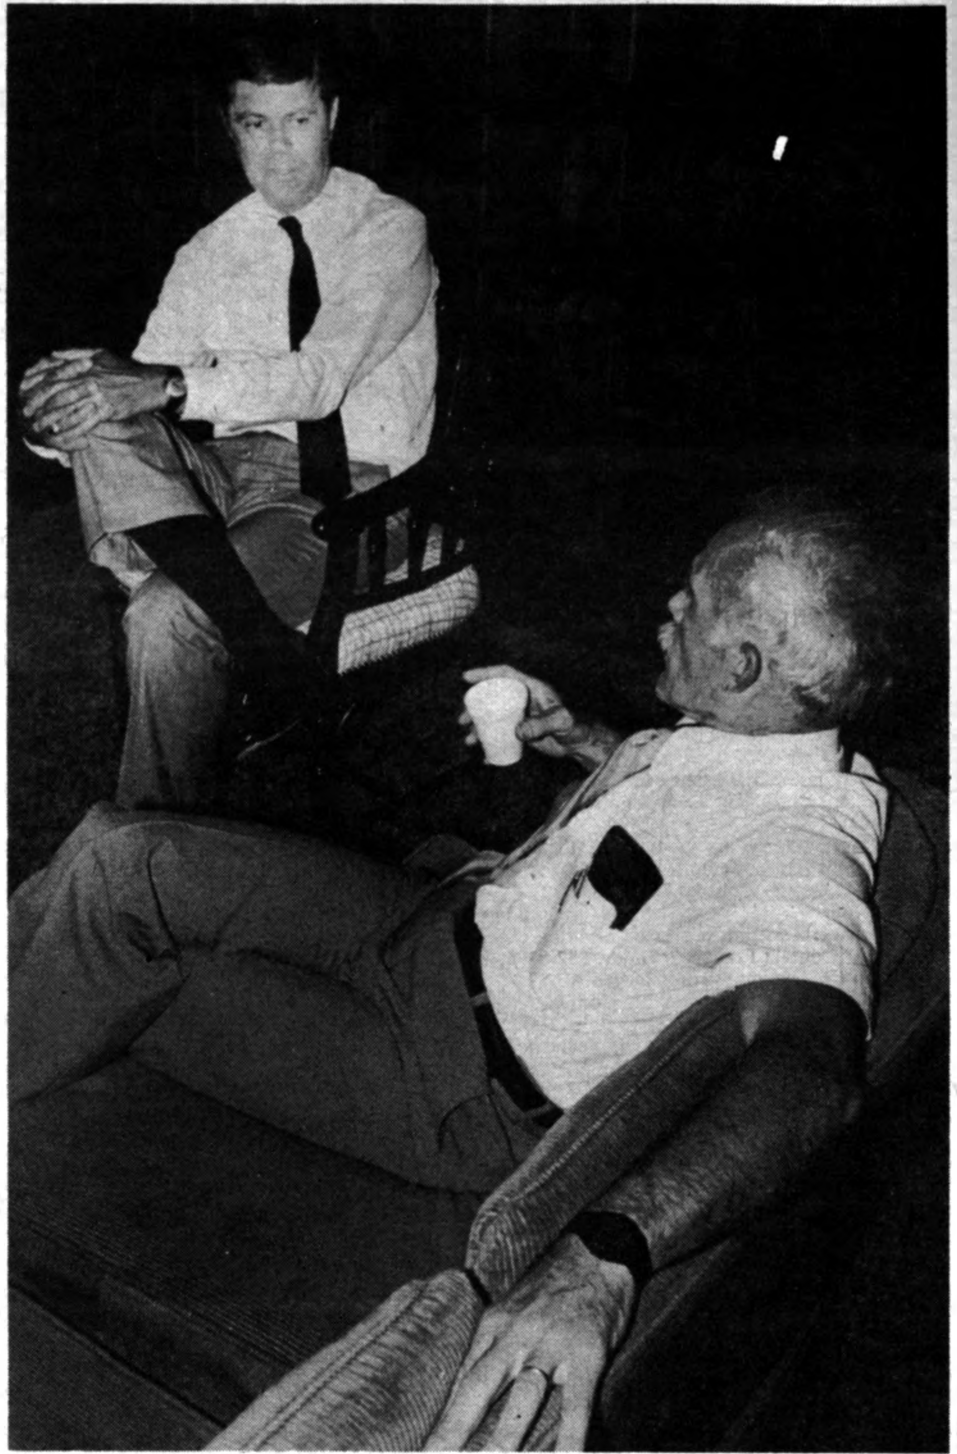

Retirees Region: The goal of Dallas Meyer, professor emeritus of physiology, is $11,800 for all UMC and UMca retirees living in Boone County.

UMC Students: For the second year, two fraternities—Phi Kappa Psi and Tau Kappa Epsilon—are committed to raising $1,000.

Rounding out the leadership cabinet are Leonard Kellogg, institution research analyst in Business Office Operations, and June Wyatt, Alumni Relations and Development. Faculty and staff members will receive packets from unit chairmen. If pledge cards are not available, contact Kellogg.

Bill Lenox, left, president of the UMC Alumni Association, discusses faculty salaries and physical facilities with Truman Storvick, chairman of Faculty Council, during a coffee break Sept. 21 at the Alumni Center. During Lenox's presidency, he plans to have coffee or lunch with a faculty member each time he visits Columbia. "We appreciate what faculty members are doing for the youth of the state," says Lenox, who emphasizes that alumni are interested in more than guzzling beer and attending football games. Faculty members interested in visiting with Lenox may arrange a coffee break or lunch through Tom Schultz in Alumni Relations. Call 882-6611.

Council leader urges faculty to maintain role of responsibility

Chairman Truman Storvick expressed concern about a leadership vacuum at Faculty Council's Sept. 20 meeting.

The vacuum, Storvick said, has resulted from former President James Olson's retirement along with Mel George's leaving the position of vice president for academic affairs.

Storvick said the Board of Curators and faculty know interim President George is leaving and that makes him less effective.

"We are closer to the board now than we ever have been before, and, from my point of view, that is not a good thing," Storvick said. The faculty must be assertive and maintain responsibility for faculty matters, he added.

"Regardless of how smart the board members are, they only spend three, four or five days a month working on the University's problems," Storvick said. "Our problems are bigger than those few hours."

Faculty members were frustrated, Storvick said, by the curators' decision last week to give the University's four chancellors an extra three months to hand in recommendations stemming from campus program reviews, which began last spring.

The curators voted to change the October deadline to January when the University's new president, C. Peter Magrath, will arrive. Magrath will then make his program recommendations to the curators in February.

In other business, the council voted against allowing candidates running for political office to speak to the group. The vote came in response to a request from Ninth District congressional candidate Carrie Francke to speak at a future meeting.

The group decided that while it is interested in hearing the candidates speak, the council's meetings are not the appropriate forum for politicians to campaign.

Some members were reluctant to pass such a broad motion in case the council needed thoughts and ideas on higher education issues in the future. "I think it will come back to haunt us if a specific issue comes up and we want information," education Professor Chris Lucas said.

It should be clear that the council is opposed to candidates' speaking to it only at the time immediately prior to election, said political science Professor David Leuthold. Allowing one candidate to speak, he said, may mean allowing them all.

FOR THE RECORD

LECTURE SERIES: Departments and other campus units may apply for University Lecture Series funds to bring speakers to campus during the current academic year. Interdisciplinary projects that do not rely entirely upon University Lectures Series funding are encouraged.

To aid in its duties, the lecture series committee also requests that departments regularly send information about scheduled lectures.

To request funding or provide information, contact Gerald Barrier, 120 Arts and Science, 882-2068.

NELSON LECTURES: Faculty in arts and science, medicine or agriculture are invited to submit names of biologists as possible speakers in the Nelson Lecture Series. Faculty involved in other campus lecture series may suggest scientists for joint invitation as Nelson lecturers. Contact Fred vom Saal, 220 Lefevre Hall.

TRUMAN SCHOLARSHIP: Deans, department chairs and faculty may nominate students for the 1985 Harry S. Truman Scholarship Program. Scholarships are awarded to outstanding undergraduates who wish to prepare for careers in public service. Eligible students must be enrolled in an accredited institution; plan to be a junior pursuing a bachelor's degree as a full-time student in 1985-86; have a B average and be in the upper fourth of their class; be a U.S. citizen or a U.S. national; and be enrolled in a field of study that will permit admission to a graduate program leading to a career in government. Nominations are due Oct. 12 in 116 Jesse Hall. With questions, call assistant Provost Otis Jackson at 882-2094.

SUBJECTS SOUGHT: Hundreds of men ages 21 to 26 are needed to participate in a yearlong UMC project on the tension-reducing properties of alcohol. Participants should be men who consume alcohol regularly, but do not have drinking problems. Subjects will spend approximately two hours in the laboratory, for one to three sessions. They will be paid $5 for the first session, and if called back, $10 for subsequent sessions. Interested men should call 882-3465 to leave their names and telephone numbers.

SWIMMING: The University Y is offering eight weeks of swimming lessons for children beginning Sept. 29. Classes meet Saturday mornings at Stephens College Pool. Cost of the entire program is $5. Applications are available at the Columbia Public Library or by calling the Y at 449-5768.

FOR SALE: Two IBM Electronic 60 typewriters with 736 characters of memory, one-line memory correction and 10 segments for phrase storage. Includes full set of 96 character elements. Call Stenographic Services at 882-7701 to make an offer.

SCHOLARSHIPS: Applications are being accepted for CASE Undergraduate Scholarships to attend the District VI

Conference Jan. 6-9 in St. Louis. Student participants will learn about alumni administration, fund raising and development, public relations, government relations, publications and information services.

To obtain an application form, write to scholarship selection committee chairman Patricia J. Morocco, vice president for Institutional Advancement, College of Saint Mary, 1901 S. 72nd St., Omaha, Neb., 68124. Applications are due Oct. 10.

CAR RENTAL: Rent For Less car/truck rental agency has moved from 1218 Clinkscales Road to 809 Business Loop 70 W. and has expanded operations to include an office at the Columbia Regional Airport. Telephone numbers are 443-7600 at the Business Loop 70 office and 442-7602 at Columbia Regional Airport.

CORRECTION: In the Sept. 21 issue, Mizzou Weekly reported that Minority Visitation and Inroads were programs implemented by the Office of Equal Opportunity. The programs were initiated by the Admissions office.

REC-AEROBICS: Recreation/Intramurals is sponsoring 16 sessions of Rec-Aerobics for faculty; staff, their spouses, students and alumni beginning Oct. 1. Participants may join Monday-Wednesday or Tuesday-Thursday exercise/aerobic sessions that meet from 4:30-5:15 p.m. or from 6:15-7 p.m. in Rothwell gym mat room. Lockers and showers are available. Cost is $10 for students, $15 for faculty/staff/spouses and $20 for Mizzou Alumni Association members. To enroll, call 882-2066.

VOLUNTEER: Volunteers visit with residents of the Fulton State Hospital in programs sponsored by the University Y. At the maximum-security Biggs Building, which houses 220 men, volunteers meet with residents in a recreation room. The visits are intended to ease the residents' re-entry into society. Volunteers engage in individual or group activities at the hospital's adolescent unit.

For more information, call the Y at 449-5768.

Unused funds retained

For the third straight year, unspent funds are being returned to divisional budgets to encourage wiser spending by campus units.

Under this policy, which Chancellor Barbara S. Uehling implemented in 1981, divisional administrators can accumulate money from one year to the next. "This gives them more opportunity to look for better uses of their funds," says John Yeager, academic budget and resource officer. "From my perspective, it's working quite well."

Duane Stucky agrees. "Prior to 1981, departments were engaging in a frenzy of activity at the end of the year to use up their funds out of fear of losing them," says the vice chancellor for Administrative Services.

A rush on the purchasing office would typically occur the last two weeks in June, Yeager says. After the June 30 deadline, unspent funds were reverted to the University at large and Jesse Hall administrators would decide how best to use the leftovers.

"But at the beginning of the decade, with state and federal funds getting tighter, the judgment was made to return all year-end operating funds to divisional administrators in order to give them more spending flexibility," Yeager says.

Year-end operating funds typically range from $100,000 to $1 million, or less than 1 percent of the University's budget, Yeager says. Most divisions, he says, have from 0 to 2 percent of their funds remaining at the end of the fiscal year.

PROFESSOR TAKES KIWANIS HELM

Raymond W. Lansford, professor of finance, will assume the presidency of Kiwanis International Oct. 1. A community-service organization dedicated to serving handicapped and underprivileged children, Kiwanis has 305,000 members in 79 countries.

In recognition of the honor, the Missouri Senate and Gov. Christopher S. Bond have declared Oct. 1 "Ray and Beuna Lansford Day."

Lansford will take a yearlong leave of absence from UMC to carry out the responsibilities of president, which will require travel throughout the world.

WANTED: TECHNOLOGY

Departments are invited to display technology they are developing or using at a Nov. 9 technology fair, part of the Symposium on the Future of Community in a Technological Society sponsored by the community development department Nov. 8-10.

Equipment that is easily transported will be shown from 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. in Memorial Union. A bus tour will allow participants to view non-portable equipment.

To participate in the technology fair, call Bill Pabst at 882-4240.

OFFICES TO MOVE TO CONLEY HOUSE

The Honors College and the Missouri Cultural Heritage Center will have a new home next fall in historic Conley House, located on the corner of Sanford and Conley streets.

A portion of the University-owned structure, built in 1868, will be restored to preserve its architectural heritage, says Mike Haggans, director of Facilities Planning and Development.

The Honor's College moved to its current location, 121 Gentry Hall, after Kuhlman Court offices were razed this summer. The Missouri Cultural Heritage Center currently occupies space at 400 Hitt Street.

SMALL CONSOLATION

Some of the latest fashion trends pose problems for short women, says Betty Feather, extension clothing specialist.

Two of the popular looks this fall—man-tailored and the inverted triangle—emphasize broad shoulders, she says. "Shoulder emphasis tends to make a woman look shorter. And when you consider that most women are under 5 foot 6 inches, we're talking about a majority of women who really can't wear those looks successfully."

Petite women who wish to wear the latest fashions will find broad-shouldered blouses more becoming than suits or dresses in that style, Feather says.

There is some good news: the longer hemlines now popular flatter short women. Feather suggests choosing lengths just below the knee or a tad longer.

Q. I've heard Dave Hart is opening the VIP Press Box at Memorial Stadium to individuals and groups for luncheons. Is this true? If so, when does it start and how much does it cost?

A. "We do hope to extend the VIP Press Box to the campus community," says Paul Miller, associate director of athletics. "The administrative council of the athletic department is meeting on this issue, but the details have not been worked out." According to Miller, the department's proposals will be passed along to the University's central administration for final approval.

Niemeyer appointed associate dean in veterinary medicine

Kenneth Niemeyer, former assistant dean for student and alumni affairs at the College of Veterinary Medicine, has been appointed associate dean for academic and alumni affairs.

In his new position, he is responsible for admissions, alumni relations and development, and academic programs. Since 1976, he had been responsible for alumni and pre-veterinary program activities and supervised student admissions.

Niemeyer has worked in the college since 1955 when he taught small animal medicine. He directed the Small Animal Clinic from 1963 to 1969. During the next four years, he taught orthopedic surgery and was appointed block leader of small animal surgery. From 1973 to 1976, he was associate chairman of the veterinary medicine and surgery department.
