Spanish conductor Rafael Fruhbeck de Burgos and American pianist Garrick Ohlsson will join the Saint Louis Symphony March 14 in Jesse Auditorium. See Calendar Highlights on Page 4.

Lot assignments to be reviewed

Parking office requests advice from faculty and staff about assignments.

In an effort to address employee needs and desires, Parking Operations is seeking recommendations from faculty and staff concerning parking assignments for the 1985-86 academic year.

All lot assignments, except Hospital and Clinics parking, will be reviewed before permits are reissued in August, says Parking Operations Assistant Manager Carol McAllister. The former method of consulting deans, directors and department chairmen in determining priority for lot assignments has resulted in complaints from many employees, she says.

"People always gripe about where they're assigned. Some feel they should be given more desirable assignments because they make over $25,000 a year or because they have a new car. If they have a voice in deciding how assignments are made, maybe they won't be as upset."

This spring Parking Operations will survey campus employees on the topic. Priority in lot assignments might include such factors as seniority, job title, salary and job duties.

Staff Council will ask for staff comments in an April newsletter and it also is considering running a coupon in Mizzou Weekly asking for suggestions. McAllister says she hopes to meet with Faculty Council in the near future concerning the survey.

"Campus parking is a major emotional issue," says Parking Operations Manager Jim Joy. "A lot of anger has been directed our way in the past."

Joy notes that he received "horrible" mail last fall when the monthly parking fee was raised from $4 to $7.

"What people don't seem to realize is that our office is a full-costed auxiliary operation," he says. "We don't receive University funding."

Instead, the office derives its income from parking fees, violation payments, meters and contracts. The extra $3 collected from individual users is expected to generate $197,000, all of which has been committed to lot maintenance and improvement. The increase so far has paid for 11 resurfacing projects and more are scheduled for spring, Joy says.

He emphasizes that the initial proposal of raising the fee to $10—to help finance a three-level parking structure—was not vetoed by Chancellor Barbara S. Uehling. The decision on the proposal was merely delayed pending further discussion.

The 787-space parking structure was proposed last year for lot WC7 at University Avenue and Matthews Street to compensate for the loss of parking space east of Brady Commons, south of Ellis Library and south of the law school.

Joy says he's not sure whether parking fees will increase this year, but says that a plan must be decided upon to compensate for the loss of parking space due to campus renovation.

One alternative would be to construct additional lots on the periphery of campus with shuttle bus transportation to the core. That's not a popular option, Joy says, and would be more expensive than parking structures.

If travel is your bag

Get a handle on new plan

The University's new travel management plan, which began two months ago, offers numerous fringe benefits for UMC employees, such as 24-hour toll-free telephone service for travel assistance, last-seat availability on heavily booked flights and late-room availability in hotels and motels.

More than anything else, the plan saves money, says Gary Zwonitzer, associate director of Business Services. "University travelers are guaranteed the lowest available airfares," he says. "The four travel agencies providing services to Mizzou will refund the difference if the lowest airfare is not provided."

The four agencies, Canterbury Travel, Cooper Travel, Tiger Travel and IVI/Global Travel, also issue travelers checks with no handling fee.

The new benefits are part of a three-year agreement between UMC and the four agencies. In addition, a Diners Club charge card program is part of the new plan. Authorized employees are issued personalized Diners Club cards to be used for business-related expenses.

"The key to making the travel management plan work is participation by most or all faculty and staff when traveling," says Zwonitzer. "The larger volume of travel business the University can document, the more leverage it will have when negotiating for lower airfares, hotel rates and rental car rates." The University's travel volume can be determined from reports prepared by the travel agencies and Diners Club.

Furthermore, the Diners Club charge card program reduces paperwork and allows the University to defer travel payments for as long as 60 days. During that period, UM system funds continue drawing interest, probably saving as much as $25,000 or more a year.

Other advantages of the plan include:

- A single point for making travel arrangements (airline reservations, ticketing and seat assignments; lodging reservations, including guaranteed rooms; and car rental reservations);
- Electronic billing and reconciliation of charge card billing;
- Detailed management reports to enable administrators to better plan annual travel budgets;
- Free ticket delivery.

Employees using the University's Diners Club account are discouraged from using the charge card for personal expenses. But many of the other benefits and discounts are available for personal as well as business travel. Faculty and staff who have questions about the new plan should call Zwonitzer at 882-7629.

MORE FUN DURING RECOGNITION WEEK

Is Better Homes and Gardens threatening to cancel your subscription? Redeem yourself by learning to nurture indoor and outdoor plants. Green-thumb expert Ray Rothenberger, professor of horticulture, will share his secrets.

Good company and good taste equal good times. Enjoy special non-alcoholic beverages served to encourage responsible drinking. Ask for recipes of your favorites.

Prevent injuries and maintain fitness with a proper exercise program. Ben Londeree, associate professor of health and physical education, will tell how.

Put a tap in your toe with tunes by Just Singers. The 30-member student group will perform contemporary selections.

These and other special noon-hour programs are free to staff during Recognition Week '85, April 1-5. Watch Mizzou Weekly for details on all the events.

FOOTBALL SEASON TICKETS ON SALE

Mizzou football season tickets go on sale April 1. Cost for faculty and staff is $62.50, a discount of 26 percent compared with the general public price of $84.50.

For seats in designated priority areas, faculty and staff season tickets cost $62.50 for the east side and $84.50 for the west side. In addition, to be eligible to buy two priority tickets, faculty and staff must donate $50, half the contribution required of the public.

To order tickets, write Athletic Ticket Office, P.O. Box 675, Columbia, Mo. 65205.

FOR THE RECORD

CORRECTION: A 1970 graduate of Penn State now on the UMC faculty points out that, contrary to a story in the Feb. 22 Mizzou Weekly, the Tigers went to the 1970, not 1969, Orange Bowl. He supplies the accurate final score, too: Penn State 10, Mizzou 3.

FOR SALE: Budget Development and Planning Services has two typewriters for sale to any University department. The Silver Reed model was purchased Aug. 26, 1980; the IBM Selectric typewriter was purchased Nov. 11, 1974. For more information, call Susan L. Brown, 104 University Hall, 882-4713.

AMOCO AWARDS: Nominations for Amoco Foundation Undergraduate Teaching Awards are due March 15. Students or faculty may nominate senior faculty; two $1,500 awards will be presented. Each division may nominate one to four candidates depending on faculty numbers. For details, contact Assistant Provost Otis Jackson, 882-2094.

SEMINAR: Applications are being accepted for the fifth Taft Seminar for Teachers to be held June 17-28 at Memorial Union. The intensive seminar on the American political system offers three hours of undergraduate or graduate credit. The $90 registration fee includes room, board, tuition and materials.

For applications, contact Carl Poehlman, director of Extension Teaching, 105 Whitten Hall, 882-7460.

STEPFAMILIES: Stepfamilies are needed to participate in a study being conducted by Marilyn Coleman, associate professor of child and family development, and Larry Ganong, assistant professor of nursing.

Eligible are remarried couples with at least one child from a previous marriage living with the family most of the time. Participating families will be paid $25.

For details, contact Coleman at 882-4360 or 882-4035, or Ganong at 882-6403. In the evening, call 445-4116.

Financial aid limits would hurt students

By Mark Ehlert, Mary Beth Mann, Steve Johnson and Steve Stites, members of Graduate-Professional Council

Less than a year ago, graduate and professional students were heartened by a financial aids proposal from the U.S. Department of Education which would have raised the borrowing limits on federally guaranteed student loans from $5,000 to $8,000 a year and the maximum total amount which could be borrowed from $25,000 to $37,500. We believed that the "powers that be" had finally recognized the rising costs of pursuing an advanced degree and that federal financial aids would be increased to keep pace.

Now, we're confronted with a totally incongruent proposal from the President's staff that leaves us confused and apprehensive. The new proposal seeks to restrict access to the Guaranteed Student Loan program (the major financial aids program for post-baccalaureate students) to members of families earning less than $32,500 (before taxes and regardless of the number of dependents attending college) and to limit total federal financial aids to $4,000 per student per year.

Current federal programs are insufficient to meet the financial needs of many independent graduate and professional students. The existing limits on guaranteed loan programs place many students below the poverty level before subtracting the costs of tuition, fees and books. Medical and veterinary medicine students cannot borrow even enough to pay the total tuition, fees and book expenses from federal programs. How can a reduced program of federal support be acceptable?

There would be immediate negative impacts on graduate and professional students under Reagan's plan. Some students simply would not be able to finish advanced degree programs if the amount of financial aids available to them were to be cut. The funds borrowed by graduate and professional students are used to pay the necessary expenses of attending college: tuition, books, room and board, transportation, etc. Which of these basic needs would President Reagan suggest we do without so that we could pursue an advanced college degree?

Another alternative for some students would be to devote more time and energy to employment, although many professional students cannot work because of college schedules and many graduate programs discourage students from accepting outside jobs. Such an option would extend the length of time required to complete a degree program, reduce the time available to study and learn, or both. Where is the efficiency or savings in these outcomes?

There also are long-term negative effects. Only members of the "upper class" could afford the cost of graduate and professional education, leading to elitism and a possible decline in quality. The income ceiling on eligibility would effectively screen out many non-traditional students, especially older, married students wishing to return to school from the home or work force. Graduate programs also would suffer through the inability to recruit qualified students because of a lack of institutional financial support. Finally, making it financially more difficult to pursue advanced degrees would reduce the number of highly trained professionals and researchers in our society, an extremely important national resource.

When we contemplate the probable effects of implementing the administration's financial aids proposal, we cannot help but be angry. Have the Washington decision-makers forgotten or ever experienced the hidden costs of continuing a college education? Do they remember the long hours, the low pay, the salaries forgone, the pressures of trying to succeed in an increasingly demanding environment? Apparently not, because the suggested cuts would only add to the hardship of being a graduate or professional student.

Finally, we also feel confused. Are our efforts to improve ourselves and the world we live in worth less of a public investment today than yesterday? Is it time to reconsider our own decisions and even discourage our children from trying to be the best they can be? We hope not. We can only believe that the proposal to reduce financial aids availability and levels is a misguided short-term solution to a budget problem made in a setting of ignorance.

Appointment announced

President C. Peter Magrath has appointed Associate Provost Richard L. Wallace acting associate vice president for academic affairs.

Wallace will serve in the position until the end of the fiscal year, at which time the administration will decide whether to continue the position. Jay Barton, the newly appointed vice president for academic affairs, will arrive in mid-March.

Phone system proposed

UMC is considering a $10.2 million state-of-the-art electronic telecommunications system to replace Centrex, Kee Groshong, director of Business Services, told Staff Council Feb. 28.

Centrex, an electro-mechanical switching system that routes campus phone calls, is "slowly sinking into the sunset," he said. Of prime concern is the system's limited ability to transmit computer signals via modem hookups. Other technical limitations hamper feature interaction, call coverage and long-distance calling, Groshong said.

An electronic system, he said, would allow integrated voice and data capabilities. It also would offer call coverage, integrated diagnostics, management information and an ability to adapt to changing needs.

A feasibility study performed for UMC by Telecommunications Management Corp. of Massachusetts estimates that during its projected life of 10 years, an electronic system would cost $2 million more than the current system, which was installed in 1971. Annual operating costs of Centrex are $3.1 million.

Groshong expects bids to be issued this spring and returned in the fall. If approved, the electronic system could be operational in 1987. UMC would borrow to pay for the new system and bill the cost back to departments.

In other business, the council announced 1985 committee assignments. Jo Pflieger, administrative assistant in veterinary microbiology, and Jack Watring, associate director of University Police, are co-chairmen of the committee on committees.

Co-chairman of the communications committee is Police Officer Joan Wilcox. Jim Bonuchi, mechanical trades specialist/electrician, and Pflieger are co-chairmen of the election committee.

Carol McAllister, assistant manager of Parking Operations, is co-chairman of the fiscal affairs committee. The staff benefits and development committee is led by co-chairmen Kathleen Edwards, library assistant I; Gary Fields, mechanical trades specialist/refrigeration; and Barbara Olson Smith, senior secretary in special education.

Rosemary Crane, administrative secretary in physics, and Donna Turner, computer programmer I in Missouri Evaluation and Testing Service, are co-chairmen of the staff recognition committee.

CONSIDER HIRING TAX PREPARER

If 1984 was financially active, it would be wise to shop for a tax preparer, advises Mel Zelenak, associate professor of family economics and management. The cost of their services are tax deductible.

He recommends choosing a liberal preparer. "With so many gray areas in the tax code, you need to be liberal while making every effort to be honest. A conservative outlook can be costly."

Steer clear of preparers who suggest falsifying information, who won't sign the return or provide you with a copy, or who guarantee a refund, he says.

Don't hesitate to ask questions, either. Determine the preparer's availability, specialization areas and fee.

An Internal Revenue Service survey found that returns prepared by certified public accountants had slightly fewer errors than those prepared by national or local tax services. Local preparers had slightly more errors.

"The error rate included major and minor mistakes, so it can't be your only guide in choosing a preparer," Zelenak says.

DEAVER AWARD NOMINATIONS DUE

Nominations for the Mick Deaver Memorial Award, to be presented during Staff Recognition ceremonies April 5, are due March 13.

Deaver was associate director of University Police at the time of his death in an automobile accident in 1980. The non-monetary award honors a staff member who exemplifies Deaver's gift for fostering better communication and understanding between students and staff.

Send letters of nomination to Donna Turner, Missouri Testing and Evaluation Service, 403 S. Sixth St.

REACCREDITATION MEETINGS PLANNED

UMC's reaccreditation site visit March 11 to 13 will include open meetings for faculty, staff and students with the evaluation team appointed by the North Central Association of Colleges and Schools.

Team members will hear comments from 4 to 5 p.m. March 12. Faculty will meet in Allen Auditorium in the Arts and Science Building, staff in Ellis Auditorium and students in Waters Auditorium.

The team visit is part of a routine 10-year accreditation procedure for all NCA member institutions. UMC was last reviewed in 1975.

Symposium to focus on rights

Rights to health care is the topic of a March 14 to 16 symposium at the School of Medicine organized by William B. Bondeson, professor of philosophy and medicine and co-director of the health care and human values program.

"We will explore whether there are such things as health-care rights. If so, are there any limitations on rights? Do all people have the right to a heart transplant? And who pays—society, government, private insurance, or are you on your own?" Bondeson asks. "This is one of the major social policy issues of the 20th century."

The 11 speakers are from institutions such as Baylor College of Medicine in Houston, Yale University in New Haven, Conn., and the Kennedy Institute of Ethics at Georgetown University in Washington. The proceedings will be published.

Freedom from paperwork

The UMC Hospital and Clinics Care Card program frees you from filling out staff benefits claim forms. If you are pre-registered with our Care Card program, insurance claims are automatically filed each time you receive treatment, even if you have insurance other than that offered by the University. Of course, your 10% discount as a UM employee applies.

Q. Is life insurance provided by Diners Club, under the University's travel management plan?

A. "Yes," says Associate Director of Business Services Gary Zwonitzer. "If your airline ticket is charged either to the University's corporate travel account at any of the four travel agencies or if you charge your airline ticket to your personal Diners Club card, Diners Club will provide you with $150,000 in life insurance." For more information, call Zwonitzer at 882-7629.

Q. Training sessions were held in December 1984 for interested faculty/staff on the University's new travel management plan. Are future sessions scheduled?

A. Training sessions are planned for the near future but dates have not been set, says Associate Director of Business Services Gary Zwonitzer. An announcement will be made to all faculty/staff as to when the next training sessions are to be held.

Q. Why is the University's WATS line so often tied up?

A. "Usage of the WATS line been increasing since last fall, causing the system to be busier," says Kee Groshong, director of Business Services. "We're in the process of adding several new lines, which hopefully will be operating by the end of the month."
