Transferable parking tags

Hang-tag permits should lessen the crunch of available parking spaces.

To ease the loss of 650 parking spaces to campus construction projects, UMC will move to a transferable tag parking permit system this fall, says Jim Joy, manager of Parking and Transportation Services.

Using similar systems at other universities as a guide, Joy says the new system could open 10 percent to 15 percent of UMC's 10,000 parking spaces. That's important, he says, because the construction of two parking garages and the School of Law building, all beginning this spring, will put a premium on available parking spaces.

The transferable system allows only one permit to be issued under each registration number. That permit can be transferred to any car the permit holder drives to campus.

Under the current system, permit holders may receive multiple parking stickers with the same registration number after paying for that number.

The problem with the current system, Joy says, is that two or more cars under the same registration number may be parked on campus lots at the same time. That creates a space crunch. This often happens with employees who have registered under and paid for one sticker number, but have a spouse or child who regularly parks on campus, using the additional stickers issued. With the transferable tags, he says, that problem will be eliminated.

The campus parking and transportation policy committee has recommended to Norman Moore, vice chancellor for Student, Personnel and Auxiliary Services, that a change to a transferable tag be made when current permits expire in August. The committee will recommend one of two types, Joy says.

One tag already being used by permit holders at the Hearnes Building is the plastic hang tag. The tag, which hooks on the rear view mirror, can be seen easily by officers on foot patrol looking for parking violators and can be switched from one car to another, Joy says. A disadvantage of the hang tag is that it is easy to steal. However, universities that have switched to the hang tag system have recorded a reduction in thefts because permit holders lock their cars.

The other choice under consideration is a plastic see-through envelope that is affixed to the rear car window. The permit holder slips the permit into the envelope. Though having similar advantages as the hang tag, the envelope's disadvantages are rear window defrosters might cause it to come loose, and drivers will have to climb in and out of the back seat to place and remove the permit. "I'm not in favor of them at all," he says.

Permit holders not wanting to place stickers on painted or vinyl bumpers and a reduction in paper work for Parking and Transportation Services are other advantages for making the switch to the transferable permit, he says.

Task force seeks input

An open forum will be held Feb. 14 to solicit input from faculty, staff, students, alumni and the public about the role of Intercollegiate Athletics and its future funding.

The forum, sponsored by the Intercollegiate Athletics task force, is not a time to rehash old subjects, says Neil Meador, task force chair and professor of agricultural engineering. "I plan to limit discussion of the ticket policy," he says.

"There are some fiscal alternatives that we are going to have to consider, and we want people's input into those alternatives," Meador says. Topics to be discussed include:

- Self sufficiency vs. interdependency.
- Cooperation within the University concerning development, use of facilities, alumni relations and academic programs.
- Funding possibilities such as general operating dollars, direct funding from the legislature or student supplemental fees.
- Waiver of out-of-state tuition for students on athletic scholarships or any student on academic scholarships.
- Ticket sales and prices, gifts and endowments.

Forums will be held from 1 to 4 p.m. and from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Alumni Center.

Searches begin

Search committees have been appointed by Chancellor Barbara S. Uehling to seek new deans for the colleges of Engineering and Education.

The education dean search committee is headed by Ben Nelms, professor and chair of curriculum and instruction. Members are: Veralee Hardin, professor of special education; Robert Reys, professor of curriculum and instruction-math; Norman Gysbers, professor of educational and counseling psychology; Tom Good, research associate at the Center for Research in Social Behavior; Mary Carolyn Westfield, AB '62, MEd '77, Hickman High School English teacher; Robert Strom, associate professor of economics education; James Ogelsby, director of facilities utilization; Barbara Olson Smith, administrative secretary in special education; Milton Glick, dean of arts and science; and a graduate student to be named.

Engineering dean search committee chair is Richard Hoft, professor of electrical and computer engineering. Members are: Sudarshan Loyalka, professor of nuclear engineering; James Baldwin, professor of civil engineering; Michael Leonard, professor and chair of industrial engineering; Don Smith, Director of the UMC-UMKC cooperative engineering program; Eric Sandgren, assistant professor of mechanical and aerospace engineering; Bob Hunter, chief engineer for the Missouri Highway and Transportation Department; Richard Lesh, graduate student; Ingrid St. Omer, engineering student; Suzanne Schoonover, administrative assistant in agricultural engineering; Henry White, professor and chair of physics and astronomy; and Dale Whitman, dean of law.

OFFICES MOVE TO ELM STREET

Movers have been busy at the Elm Street Building, 201 S. Seventh St. The following units are scheduled to move from Lewis and Clark halls by Feb. 10. Names of supervisors and office phone numbers are given for each department.

UM Human Resource Development, Blake Danuser, 882-4859; UM Wage and Salary Administration, Charles Touzeau, 882-3006; UM Personnel Payroll Information Systems, Dennis Tolan, 882-3320; UM Employee Benefits, Mike Paden, 882-2146; and UMC Training and Development, Susan Bliss, 882-2552.

All offices will be located on the first floor, south side of the building. Park and enter on the west side of the Elm Street Building. The Employee Benefits office will be open during the noon hour, says Manager Mary Ann Tipton, when the move is complete.

MIDDLEBUSH PROFESSORS NAMED

Three arts and science faculty have been named Middlebush Professors. The three-year appointments include a stipend made possible by a bequest from former University President Frederick A. Middlebush.

New Middlebush Professors are Tim Materer, English; Richard Petty, psychology; and Allen Thiher, Romance languages. Also selected was History Professor Fordyce Mitchell, who died Jan. 15.

A reception in honor of the professors and in commemoration of Mitchell will be held from 5 to 7 p.m. Feb. 20 at the Alumni Center.

DISCOVERY LEADS TO ROYALTIES

UM President C. Peter Magrath has accepted the first royalty check for a radiopharmaceutical discovered by UMC scientists in 1983.

The initial check for about $2,500 covers the first 45 days' sale of Certec, a radiotracer used in cerebral blood-flow studies. Certec is now sold in three European countries.

The University patented the compound, technetium 99m propylene amine oxime, but sold it to Amersham International, a British radiopharmaceutical manufacturer.

The radiopharmaceutical discovered by Richard A. Holmes, professor and chief of nuclear medicine; David E. Troutner, professor of chemistry; and Wynn A. Volkert, professor of radiology, facilitates diagnosis of cerebral blood-flow studies. It led to discovery by Amersham researchers of Certec, which allows an X-ray of blood flow inside the brain.

Cerebral blood-flow studies are useful in the diagnosis and treatment of stroke, head injuries and other problems involving the brain. UMC is the only institution in the United States approved by the FDA for human testing of HM-PAO. Holmes predicts it will be sold in this country in two years.

FOR THE RECORD

FOR SALE: 128k MacIntosh, excellent condition. Call Jill at 882-5579.

CLINIC: The UMC Speech and Hearing Clinic, 125 Parker Hall, will provide free speech, language and hearing screenings this semester to faculty, staff and students.

Therapy, full diagnostic and hearing-aid services also are available. Call 882-3873 for an appointment.

CREDIT: The drawing of the University campus in 1875 that appeared in the Jan. 31 master plan supplement should have been credited "Reproduced by permission of University of Missouri Archives."

MEAL ALLOWANCES: Effective Jan. 1, the daily meal maximums for employees traveling on University business increased from $34 to $35.50 for three meals. When less than three meals are to be reimbursed, maximums are breakfast, $8; lunch, $8.50; and dinner, $19. Rates include allowances for tips.

TRAVEL REIMBURSEMENT: Effective

Jan. 1, mileage reimbursement for employees who use personal cars when traveling on business increased from 20 cents to 21 cents a mile.

SWIMMING CLASSES: The University "Y" is offering swimming classes beginning Feb. 15 at Stephens pool. Classes run for eight weeks; each session is 30 minutes.

Beginning classes are $6 for children and $15 for adults. To register, stop by the "Y" offices, AO22 Brady Commons. For more information call 882-1550.

MINORITY AWARDS PROGRAM: Proposals for the Minority Research Development Awards Program are due by 4 p.m. Feb. 12 in the assistant provost's office, 116 Jesse Hall. Minority faculty in the rank of instructor or assistant professor, untenured on tenure track appointment and 100 percent FTE as of Jan. 1, 1986, are eligible.

SCHOLARSHIPS: Loreen Mohler Dorsey, BS Ed '30, has established a permanently endowed scholarship fund in her name. Annual awards will be made to one or more female students in the College of Education who plan to teach first grade.

A bequest of nearly $95,000 from Audrey Viola Bell, in memory of Audrey Marie Bell, will be used to establish a scholarship fund for support of the Chancellor's Leadership Class. One or more annual awards will be made to students selected for the class, a group of freshmen awarded scholarships on the basis of strong high-school leadership and academic records.

The Columbia Kiwanis Club has established a scholarship in honor of Raymond W. Lansford, professor emeritus of finance, and his wife. Lansford was 1984-85 president of Kiwanis International. One or more annual awards will be made to business and public administration students.

ADULT LEARNING: It's not too late to enroll in free adult learning classes that began Jan. 20.

Employees can learn to read better, to do math or to write. They also can study for the GED high-school equivalency tests. Other subjects include budgeting, good diet, legal papers and good job behavior.

Classes meet from 4:30 to 7 p.m. each Monday and Wednesday during the winter semester in 2 Johnston Hall.

No registration is required. Bring paper and pencil. For more information call UMC Training and Development at 882-2552 or 882-6831.

HOURS: Western Historical Manuscript Collection, 23 Ellis Library, will be open until 9 p.m. on Tuesdays during winter semester.

HOUSE SITTERS: Responsible couple seek house sitting opportunity beginning in late February. Call Laura at 882-7448 or 445-7774.

HOUSING SOUGHT: A Purdue University professor and his family seek sabbatical housing from July 1, 1986, through June 30, 1987. Call Debbie Duffen at 882-4211.

Q. The recent price list provided by Campus Computing for personal computers and accessories was quite a shock. Anybody can get a lower price on almost all the equipment by direct ordering to any number of companies in a personal computing magazine or through a retail outlet. Will faculty and staff see any price reductions in the future?

A. Prices listed by Campus Computing are the low prices the University pays its supplier for the equipment, says Bill Mitchell, director of Campus Computing. Prices will fluctuate according to rate changes made by suppliers. The only prices Mitchell has seen that are comparable to the University's are through mail order. Advertised prices by retailers in mid-Missouri, Kansas City and St. Louis have been significantly higher, he says. Mitchell urges anyone who knows of a retail outlet with lower prices on comparable equipment to call him at 882-2112.

Goodrich chosen director

After a nationwide search, James W. Goodrich has been chosen director of the State Historical Society of Missouri.

More than 20 applicants from across the country expressed interest in the position that was filled Dec. 7 by Goodrich, associate director since 1978.

Goodrich, MA '64, PhD '74, was assistant director from 1975 to 1978 and associate editor for the Missouri Historical Review from 1967 to 1975.

He replaces Richard S. Brownlee, AB '39, BJ '40, MA '50, PhD '55, who retired in September after 25 years with the society. Virginia Young, Journ, Arts '38, DHL '82, the society's third vice president, served as acting director.

FINANCIAL AID DEADLINE NEARS

The application deadline for student financial aid is earlier this year, reports George Brooks, UMC director of student financial aids.

Current and prospective students must complete either the ACT Family Financial Statement or the CSS Financial Aid Form by Feb. 25. Students who want UMC to give their application priority must mail a completed form to the appropriate assessment service by that date.

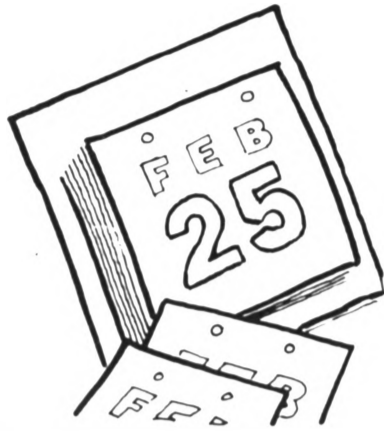

Forms processed after that date will be considered according to when they are received and amount of funds available.

In another change from last year, students applying for a Guaranteed Student Loan must first complete the ACT or CSS financial aid form.

Students who submitted completed financial aid applications will be notified of their aid status in April.

Financial aid applications are available in 11 Jesse Hall or from high-school guidance counselors.

CENTER OPENS FOR WHIZ KIDS

An Evaluation Center for Gifted and Academically Talented Children has opened in N109 UMC Hospital and Clinics.

The center's staff will evaluate children ages 3 to 12 identified by parents or teachers as exceptionally intelligent. Evaluations include a questionnaire for parents and assessments of the child's psychosocial and cognitive abilities.

Evaluation results will include recommendations regarding the child's educational, social and emotional development.

For appointments or fee information, call 882-8006.

Butch Tolson says he benefited from Staff Council position.

lieve in then we should just keep pushing for it."

Staff members should express their thoughts, complaints and ideas to council members on a regular basis, he adds.

In recent months, the council has pushed for an increase in the amount of sick leave available in the event of family illnesses and for a bigger and better selection of late afternoon and evening classes than is currently offered by the University.

"Improving staff benefits is something the council is constantly working on and probably always will," says Tolson, whose three-year council term expired Jan. 9.

Jo Pflieger, administrative assistant in veterinary microbiology, succeeds Tolson as council chair. "Butch's manner of delegating duties to other members of the council's executive committee helped me a lot. Even though I was a newcomer, he gave me plenty of responsibility, which helped to build my confidence," Pflieger says.

A graduate of Central Methodist College in Fayette, Mo., Tolson joined the University in 1967 as an emergency medical technician. He later taught EMT classes to residents of rural areas. Married and the father of three sons, the burly 40-year-old has been at his current position for six years.

One of the most rewarding aspects of serving on the council, he says, was the opportunity to "learn things that go on in all the other areas of campus. You learn a lot from the other council members.

"As it always goes, there were times I felt it would be nice to be free of the responsibility of being on the council, but to tell you the truth I already miss it."

"How SameDay Surgery helped me see the light."

Skillful

Leading Staff Advisory Council provides Tolson with opportunity for personal growth.

When Wilfred "Butch" Tolson was elected chair of Staff Council in January 1985, he knew his life was going to be a juggling act. Now that his one-year term has ended, he realizes it was an excellent test of his time-management skills.

"Last year my department was in the process of being moved into new offices. We were also making some staff reductions and other changes, so I was hesitant about accepting the nomination," says Tolson, manager of patient admissions at University Hospital and Clinics. "As it turned out, I was able to accomplish everything I set out to do, both at the hospital and with the council."

Looking back, Tolson says the success of Staff Recognition Week was the highlight of his year as the council's head person. "We had a good turnout. People got involved, enjoyed themselves and benefited from the programs," he says. "The council worked hard to make it a success."

Tolson, a University employee for nearly 20 years, says the creation of Staff Council in 1978 and events such as Staff Recognition Week have significantly improved the morale of UMC employees.

"Prior to Staff Council, staff members had little opportunity to voice their opposition to anything. I think they feel they have some leverage now. The chancellor has a chance to get some regular feedback from a council that can go out and find out how the staff feels about the issues and about changes she wants to make."

Of the various recommendations the council has offered to Chancellor Barbara S. Uehling, educational assistance for dependents and the incremental use of personal days are the two that Tolson would most like to see implemented.

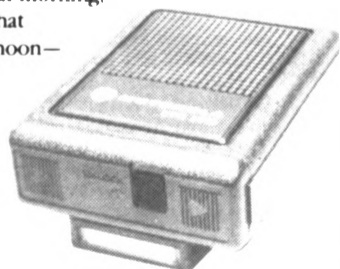

Persistence is the key, he says. "If we make a recommendation that gets turned down, that doesn't mean we should walk away from it. If it's a change we really be-

I've never been sick a day in my life and never set foot in a hospital, so I was pretty upset when I found out I needed eye surgery. My doctor said removing cataracts is routine, which made me feel better. But I wasn't crazy about spending two or three days recuperating in a hospital. He said I wouldn't have to.

He told me about the SameDay Surgery Center at University of Missouri-Columbia Hospital and Clinics. In that morning, out that afternoon—

and home for recuperation. That sounded pretty good.

He said they do hundreds of operations that way—biopsies, hernias, varicose veins. He also told me about the state-of-the-art technology, including high-powered microscopes for microscopic surgery and TV monitoring where the doctor uses a special scope during knee surgery.

I already knew The Staff for Life were some of the best-trained in the business, always keeping up with the latest techniques, so I knew they could take good care of me. What made it for me though, was how much those people cared about me.

They took me on a tour ahead of time and answered all my questions, so I knew what to expect.

Then there were other little touches, like the pager they provided for my wife so she could go about her daily routine. When I was ready to go home, they just called her on that pager and she picked me up—right at the door where I was waiting with the nurse. They called me the next day to see how I was doing. I couldn't have been treated better. They were the nicest bunch of folks you'd ever want to have work on you.

If I were you, I'd sure ask your doctor about SameDay Surgery if you're ever faced with minor surgery.
