

MIZZOU WEEKLY

University of Missouri-Columbia July 11, 1986

Faculty and staff members are invited to the naming ceremony and dedication of the Fred V. Heinkel Building at 4 p.m. Wednesday in Peace Park. A reception and tours of the building at Seventh and Elm streets will follow.

Heinkel, president of Missouri Farmers Association for almost 40 years, was a member of the Board of Curators from 1953-59. He helped locate the medical school and hospital on the Columbia campus.

The University purchased the building in 1985 for $1.15 million. The facility houses the UMC departments of Personnel Services and Employee Relations, Stenographic Services, and Visitor and Guest Relations. UM offices include Human Resource Development and Employee Benefits. Soon, Campus Computing will move into the building.

Training scheduled for TAs

Aug. 22 seminar for all new teaching assistants focuses on strengthening education.

An all-day training-and-orientation program for new teaching assistants is scheduled for Aug. 22, says Diana Helsel, assistant dean of agriculture and chair of the task force on the training of teaching assistants. The location of the training session will be announced.

The required program is part of a campuswide effort to strengthen undergraduate teaching. To assist the task force in planning, deans and department chairs should send the names of all new TAs to Helsel at 2-64 Agriculture Building by July 15. Include the TA's office address, office phone number, course assigned to for fall semester 1986, country of origin, department in which degree is sought and degree being sought. Also indicate if the TA previously attended a U.S. university.

According to a University policy established last winter, graduate students for whom English is a second language may not serve as TAs during their first semester, except with special permission from the chancellor. The policy also requires non-domestic students to take an oral test of English and participate in a cultural orientation if they are new to the United States. There were 19 new international TAs in fall 1985; the exact number for fall 1986 is not yet known.

The Aug. 22 session will include cultural information for non-domestic students, Helsel says, but is designed to benefit all new TAs. "The elements that make an effective teaching assistant apply to domestic students as well as foreign students," Helsel says. "And presumably, the domestic students are the ones who are going to be professors five years from now."

The program is hoped to make teacher training more visible at UMC, she says. "We have a grass-roots movement. Several departments—such as mathematics, economics, chemistry and English—have well-established TA training programs. I hope the campuswide orientation and training proves so beneficial to both TAs and the students whom they teach that departments or divisions ultimately decide it will be in their best interest to formulate their own training program."

Topics to be discussed at the campuswide session include a profile of the UMC student, classroom administration, presentation skills, communication skills and tips of the trade. Most of the presenters are members of the task force on the training of teaching assistants.

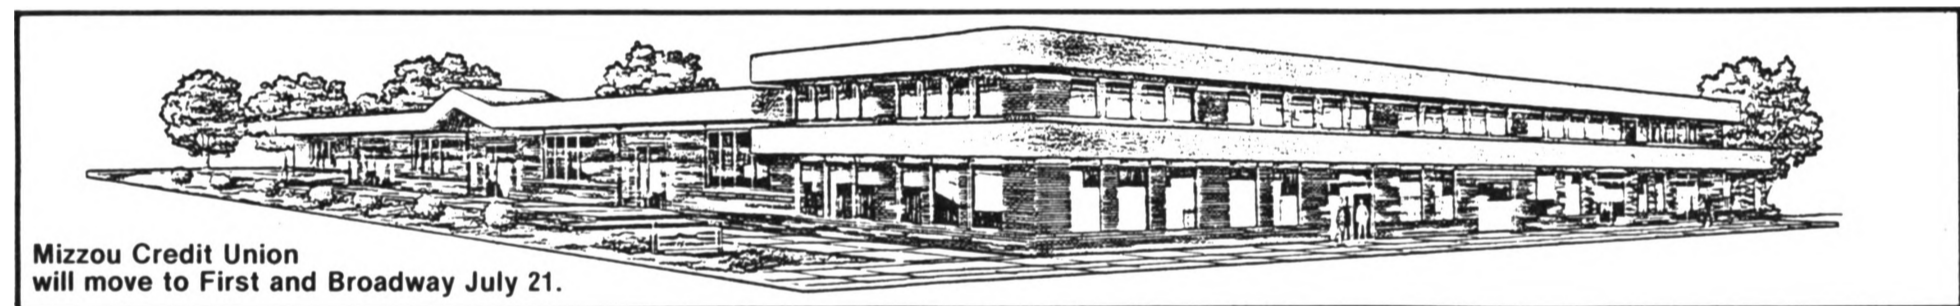

Education Dean W.R. Miller will focus on the impor-

ance of teaching. He likens teaching to a three-legged stool supported by knowledge of subject matter, awareness of how people learn, and communication and interpersonal skills. "If any of the elements are missing, effective instruction will not have an adequate foundation."

Task force member Lynda West, associate professor of special education, notes that some TAs have no teaching experience. "My hope for the day is that TAs will be better prepared for the first day in the classroom, and have a much clearer understanding of what teaching is about."

The training and orientation session also will allow TAs to start the year with a support network, says Ted Tarkow, associate dean of arts and science and task force member.

The task force recommends that the initial training-and-orientation session be followed by a series of programs throughout the fall semester, Helsel says. Topics might include cultural-orientation programs and a panel discussion featuring award-winning TAs. The recommendations are included in a report sent to Chancellor Barbara S. Uehling for her consideration. The task force also suggests training for TAs who are new to a department but previously taught elsewhere, Helsel says. Another recommendation calls for uniform enforcement of a 500 or above score on the test of English as a foreign language for graduate student admission.

Mizzou Credit Union will move to First and Broadway July 21.

Moves offer more space and parking

The Mizzou Credit Union and the Campus Mail Service both will move to new locations within the next two weeks.

The credit union will move to First and Broadway in the building formerly occupied by the Sears store, and Campus Mail will move to 304 S. Ninth St. in the building formerly occupied by the International House of Pancakes.

For the credit union—which will begin operating at its new location on July 21—the move will triple the amount of office space available and increase parking fourfold, says Sandra Branson, vice president of marketing. "The credit union has grown to the point where this location no longer serves our membership. It's too small," Branson says. "We've gotten bigger and we expect to continue to grow."

The new building will provide more space for tellers and for customer service. It will also include a waiting area where members can sit down and relax, Branson says.

"Parking has been one of the biggest problems with our present location," she says. "We will have 55 parking spaces at the new location." The parking lot is located behind the building, off Walnut Street.

CUE automatic teller machines will remain at the credit union's present location at 721 Locust St., and at the University Hospital and Clinics. Another CUE machine will be installed at the Broadway location.

Branson adds that members soon will have access to the BankMate and Cirrus banking networks, which will allow them access to thousands of automatic teller machines all across the country. Members now have access to 53 machines, all of which are located in Missouri. The link-up with BankMate and Cirrus should be completed by late 1986 or early 1987.

The credit union also has changed its name, Branson notes. "We became the Mizzou Credit Union (as opposed to the Mizzou Employees Credit Union) as of July 1."

Campus Mail Service will begin operating from its new location beginning July 14. The move, which should not disrupt service, will make the office much more convenient and accessible to the campus community, says Manager Jim Southern.

The mail service unit will continue to work closely with Printing Services. "And the courier drop and exchange point will continue to be room 12 of the Printing Services Building," Southern says.

The move to 304 S. Ninth St. will provide more space for the mail service office and allow Printing Services room to expand. Campus Mail will occupy the former restaurant for about 12 months, Southern says. Then the unit is scheduled to move into permanent quarters in the Telecommunications Building, formerly the GTE Building, at 920 College Ave. The Office of Telecommunications and the campus switchboard moved their offices to the building in March.

Board to vote on Fine Arts

The Board of Curators will vote on a proposal to establish a UMC School of Fine Arts at its July 14-15 meeting in Kansas City.

The proposed school was recommended by a UMC program review in accordance with the board's long-range plan. The school would consolidate existing arts programs and have three departments: art, music and theater. Currently, art and music are departments of the College of Arts and Science. Theater is now one of three degree programs offered by the Department of Speech and Dramatic Art.

TOWARD EXCELLENCE

A Department of Communications, to be housed in the College of Arts and Science, would combine existing programs in radio-television-film and speech communication now offered by the Department of Speech and Dramatic Art. Bachelor's, master's and doctoral degrees currently offered by the Department of Speech and Dramatic Art in the fields of communication, theater and radio-television-film would be replaced by degrees in communication and theater.

The proposed School of Fine Arts would be administered as a unit of the College of Arts and Science, with a director reporting to the dean of the college. Plans call for the director to be chair of one of the school's departments. A Fine Arts Council, consisting of the chairs of the current art and music departments and theater program, would provide additional direction and address the common issues facing the three disciplines.

No new administrative costs are anticipated for the school, and no new degree programs currently are proposed.

KEEP THOSE CALLS COMING

Departments have been sent preliminary listings for the faculty-staff section of the campus directory. The listings were prepared by the Payroll office using information in the data base as of May 16. Make corrections directly on the listing and return it to the campus Payroll office, 16 Jesse Hall, by Aug. 1. If a personnel action form or change of address form was processed after May 16, the payroll office will automatically make corrections.

Before making additions, make sure the employee isn't paid by another department. If someone is your office is paid with University funds by another department, check with that department to verify their information.

Some employees are paid primarily from non-University funds, so they aren't in the payroll data base. These include USDA, military, medical or other federal employees and professors emeriti.

To list such employees in the directory, send information to the Publications office, 1100 University Place, by Aug. 1. Include the employee's name, Social Security number, campus affiliation, title, department, campus address and telephone, and home address and telephone if the employee wants it listed.

University Hospital and UM will send updates to their respective offices later.

APPLAUSE, APPLAUSE FOR PHILHARMONIC

The University Philharmonic is "full of joy and inspiration," opera star Montserrat Caballe wrote in a letter of appreciation to the musicians.

The orchestra, primarily composed of students, accompanied Caballe and Marilyn Horne during a Concert Series event in Jesse Auditorium last semester.

Caballe's handwritten note praised the orchestra as "perfect masters of the instrument."

TRY LAMBBURGERS FOR A CHANGE

For a meal home-grown in the Midwest, try lamb. The meat is high in flavor, protein and iron, says Karla Hughes, UMC extension nutritionist.

Lamb is available from many grocers, and in some cases, directly from a lamb producer. For the names of local producers, contact the county extension center.

Hughes suggests making lambburgers from the ground meat. Mix the lamb with garlic salt and pepper to taste and let it sit overnight in the refrigerator. If the mixture seems too crumbly, try adding an egg.

Grill or broil patties and serve on onion buns with mayonnaise and dijon mustard.

BLOOD DRIVE SCHEDULED

Faculty and staff are encouraged to participate in MSA's blood drive July 23 at Memorial Union.

The Mid-Missouri Blood Center projects a 600-pint shortage this month in mid-Missouri. The estimate is based on anticipated blood usage by area hospital patients. The goal for the campus blood drive is 300 pints.

"Our participation will help ensure that the community has a reliable blood supply," says Chancellor Barbara S. Uehling.

WANTED: MINORITY MANAGERS

Two of three daily newspapers in the United States have no minority executives. But the Journalism School's Multicultural Management Program is prepared to improve that statistic.

The program for professional journalists will run Sept. 4 through Oct. 3. Scheduled speakers include syndicated columnist William Raspberry and educator Alvin Poussaint.

Participants will study management techniques and explore problems caused by diverse cultural backgrounds.

EAST TEAMS WITH WEST

The College of Business and Public Administration and Nanjing University in the People's Republic of China have teamed to form an MBA exchange program.

In fall 1987, B&PA will send some of its professors to Nanjing University to teach 35 Chinese students selected for the two-year program. The top students from that group will then be brought to UMC to pursue their PhDs.

The program will develop faculty members' international skills and provide China with trained business leaders to meet the needs of its economy, says Stanley J. Hille, B&PA dean.

BOOTHS AVAILABLE FOR SHOW-ME STATE GAMES

Any group or individual interested in having a booth at the Show-Me State Games, a sports festival for amateur athletes, needs to fill out an application form by July 25.

Pool increases slightly for faculty raises

Campus budget review committee discusses salary outlook for UMC faculty and staff.

UMC faculty raises are expected to average 4.5 percent instead of 4 percent as estimated earlier, Chancellor Barbara S. Uehling told members of the campus budget review committee June 26. The committee is an advisory group representing faculty, deans, students and staff. Uehling proposes an average increase of about 4 percent for other employee categories in fiscal 1987.

She said a pool of money will be available for the average salary increases. Raises will not be across the board, but instead will be based on merit, market circumstances or other considerations. Increases will be effective Sept. 1.

"We are hopeful that the average faculty salary increase will exceed 4.5 percent, because in the past the average faculty salary has increased by as much as 1 percent above the campus pool made available," Uehling said. "This is because deans and departments have used their flexibility to achieve higher raises."

The chancellor proposed a higher increase in the faculty salary base after Gov. John Ashcroft approved a state appropriation that was .5 percent larger than anticipated. The governor approved about $230.3 million for the University system for general operating purposes. The appropriation is 97.5 percent of the amount recommended by the General Assembly.

Curators will consider the proposed budget for fiscal 1987, which began July 1, at their July 14-15 meeting in Kansas City.

"I'm pleased that we are in a position to do a little better for our faculty," Uehling said, but added that the proposed increase still was not ideal. Larger raises are not possible, she said. Some of the state funds are earmarked for specific items. In addition, she said, declining student enrollment means less income from student fees. Enrollment is expected to drop by about 700 this fall, the largest single-year decline ever, said Duane Stucky, vice chancellor for Administrative Services. Enrollment in fall 1985 was 22,889. The predicted enrollment decline reflects a decreasing pool of 18-year-olds, Stucky said.

"This year and next year we are projecting a big drop," Uehling said. She predicts that the trend will reverse in 1994, when the population of 18-year-olds will be larger.

The committee also discussed a decrease in federal budget appropriations to the University. Federal funds for the Agricultural Experiment Station and Cooperative Extension Service are expected to drop about 5 percent. "They will have some substantial reductions in their budgets to try to meet our salary-and-wage goals because of the decline in federal appropriations," Stucky said.

"How SameDay Surgery helped me see the light."

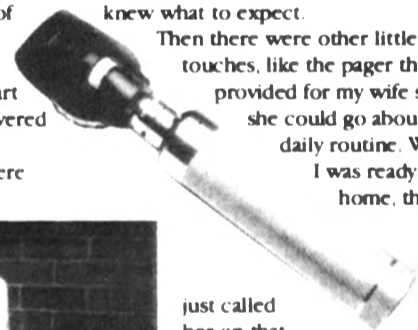

I've never been sick a day in my life and never set foot in a hospital, so I was pretty upset when I found out I needed eye surgery. My doctor said removing cataracts is routine, which made me feel better. But I wasn't crazy about spending two or three days recuperating in a hospital. He said I wouldn't have to.

He told me about the SameDay Surgery Center at University of Missouri-Columbia Hospital and Clinics. In that morning, out that afternoon—the doctor uses a special scope during knee surgery.

I already knew The Staff for Life were some of the best-trained in the business, always keeping up with the latest techniques, so I knew they could take good care of me. What made it for me though, was how much those people cared about me.

They took me on a tour ahead of time and answered all my questions, so I knew what to expect.

Then there were other little touches, like the pager they provided for my wife so she could go about her daily routine. When I was ready to go home, they just called her on that pager and she picked me up—right at the door where I was waiting with the nurse. They called me the next day to see how I was doing. I couldn't have been treated better. They were the nicest bunch of folks you'd ever want to have work on you.

If I were you, I'd sure ask your doctor about SameDay Surgery if you're ever faced with minor surgery.
