Gearing up

Faculty Council charts its course for 1986-87 at annual workshop.

Faculty Council's six standing committees discussed agenda items for the coming year at the group's Sept. 23 workshop. Council members also met with Chancellor Barbara S. Uehling and Provost Lois DeFleur. "It was a very good meeting," Chair John Bauman, professor of chemistry, said of the work session.

On the agenda for the academic and faculty affairs committee this year are the leave policy, faculty development guidelines, the 1988-89 academic calendar, Elizabeth F. Cooper Faculty of Excellence Award and faculty review of academic administrators. This committee also will examine cooperative programs at the doctoral level, in which a student might do some doctoral research on another campus. Chair of the academic affairs committee is Christopher Lucas, professor of higher and adult education and foundations.

Geology Professor Tom Freeman leads the fiscal affairs committee. This group will look at the appropriations request for 1987-88, faculty salaries, development of the 1988-89 budget and changes in the long-range plan as they affect faculty planning. The Board of Curators is expected to consider amendments to the plan late this semester. Of special interest to this committee is a budget hearing for faculty and staff to be held from 10 a.m. to noon Nov. 3 in N214-215 Memorial Union. The long-range plan and budgetary strategies will be discussed at the hearing.

The communications committee will focus on student recruitment, a faculty survey, parking, revision of the faculty handbook and improving communications. Committee chair is Gordon Kimber, professor of agronomy.

The academic freedom and grievance committee will discuss tenure regulations, the campus promotion and tenure advisory committee, classified research and article 11 of the faculty bylaws, which deals with faculty irresponsibility. William Noteboom, associate professor of biochemistry, is committee chair.

A University of Missouri-Columbia University Club facility is one agenda item for the special projects committee, led by Allen Hahn, professor of veterinary medicine and surgery. Other agenda items are academic computing, Weldon Spring guidelines and an update of Faculty Council's rules of order.

The student affairs committee will examine transfer of credit, and work with task forces on training of teaching assistants, the freshman year experience, basic competencies and extraclassroom learning resources. Committee chair is anthropology Professor Peter Gardner.

Navigating Mizzou academics

New provost opens her door to faculty, staff and students who wish to talk over campus issues.

Sociologist Lois DeFleur observes a bond among her fellow pilots of Comanche aircraft. The group takes special pride in the planes, which are as much collector's items as they are transportation. DeFleur, in fact, was one of the last people to buy a Piper Comanche 260 before a flood wiped out the factory.

"They're very efficient and yet a very fast aircraft," DeFleur says of Comanches, which cruise at 185 mph.

Efficiency and speed also are trademarks of DeFleur, who became Mizzou provost July 21. In proposing to reorganize her office, DeFleur asked deans and Faculty Council to respond with their comments within a week. She was reviewing the feedback last week. The restructuring would include two associate or vice provosts, one for instruction and one for budget and academic personnel.

The campus' chief academic officer says she will continue to seek input from deans and faculty. "With the funding difficulties we face and in trying to achieve our goals, we need to have cooperation, trust and a sense that we can work together. Of course, there are many diverse opinions in academic life. My role is to thread my way through those and pull them together, think about it, discuss it and chart a course."

She sees administrators as being facilitators. "They are innovators also, but you need to mobilize support to be an innovator." One of DeFleur's innovations may foster such support. Every Wednesday from 3 to 5 p.m., her office door in 114 Jesse Hall is open to faculty, staff and students who wish to drop in. "When I first arrived, people kept mentioning that they felt communication and openness were issues that should receive my attention. It's very discouraging to someone, in a non-emergency, who can't get an appointment for two to three weeks."

For her part, DeFleur intends to visit campus colleagues as much as possible. "I want people to get to know me, and to learn from them what's on their mind." Money is a prime topic at Mizzou, just as it is at Washington State University where DeFleur was dean of humanities and social sciences.

Two months after she became dean in 1981, the governor ordered WSU to cut its budget. Part of DeFleur's strategy was to initiate and obtain funding from foundations for new programs. "It's a basic principle. When you lose state funding, you find alternate sources of funds." On this campus, the provost hopes to institute grants for developing instructional programs and centers.

"People have been receptive to my notions about bringing more attention to teaching and curriculum. They are concerned about that and are willing to cooperate as we examine the instructional program and ask questions about how we can improve teaching." The provost has been meeting with chairs of four campus task forces on undergraduate education established before she arrived on campus. The task forces are focusing on basic competencies, teaching assistants, extraclassroom resources and the freshman year experience.

Research and extension are other areas to which she is committed, DeFleur says. Providing a better research environment for faculty ranks high on her priority list, as does affirmative action.

At Washington State University, more than half of the faculty hired by humanities and social sciences during DeFleur's administration were women and/or minorities. "I've made it clear to deans that I expect them to work hard to recruit women and minorities on this campus," she says. "It takes hard work—competition is keen for superb people." After hiring these faculty, DeFleur says, the next issues are retention and advancement.

As a 49-year-old woman in academia, DeFleur says she was "the first woman in everything." Indeed, she was the first woman faculty member in the sociology department at Washington State, the first woman to serve on all major committees at that university, WSU's first female dean of humanities and social sciences, the first woman to teach at the Air Force Academy, and now the first female provost at Mizzou. "It's my generational heritage," she laughs, "but I'm tired of being first!"

But it's hard to be last when traveling at 185 mph.

MODEST GROWTH IN INCOME PREDICTED

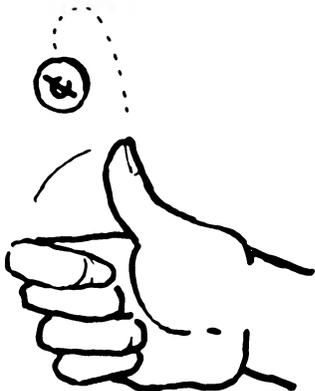

Columbia area residents can look forward to a modest increase in personal income for the remainder of 1986, according to the Research Center of the College of Business and Public Administration.

The research center projects that personal income for Columbia and Boone County will increase 5.9 percent for all of 1986, compared with 5.6 percent for the entire state. The expected national increase is 5.9 percent.

The center also projects a 4 percent unemployment rate in Columbia for the remainder of the year.

All the projections are part of a report, Missouri Economic Indicators, produced quarterly by the non-profit center.

LEARN TECHNIQUES TO MANAGE STRESS

Counseling Services' stress management lab offers two programs to faculty, staff and students.

One program assists those seeking healthy alternatives for managing stress in their daily lives. Evening and lunch meetings are available.

A program for faculty and staff with hypertension meets on Tuesday evenings. Both programs include relaxation training and use special equipment for physiological monitoring and feedback. Participants learn to alter their reactions to stress.

For information on program fees or for an appointment, call Rita Tadych at 882-6601.

NURSING SCHOOL TO SPONSOR RESEARCH DAY

Fall Research Day at the School of Nursing will be held Oct. 10. The event is co-sponsored by the University lectures committee and the Division of Nursing Services.

After a welcome by Provost Lois DeFleur, Dean Phyllis Drennan and Associate Dean Ann Rosenow, small-group sessions will focus on research design, instrumentation, protection of human subjects and data analysis.

In the afternoon, Jean Johnson, professor and clinical chief for oncology nursing at the University of Rochester, will discuss preparing patients for stressful experiences.

For more information, call 882-6403.

Q&A

Q. Is the construction of the new parking garages on schedule?

A. John Coats, construction project manager with Facilities Management, says the parking garages are slightly behind schedule. He estimates that the garages will be completed by late April, a month behind schedule.

Q. Why does the parking lot behind the General Services Building flood when it rains?

A. Larry Edwards, Campus Facilities associate director, says a sewer line beneath the coal storage pile has collapsed and is hindering water drainage. Campus Facilities will install a new sewer line.

Q. When will we get the new campus phone book?

A. "We hope Campus Mail Service can begin distributing the directories the week of Oct. 27," says Steve Shinn, director of Publications and Alumni Communication. Shinn said the schedule is as follows: University Printing Services is to provide the Columbia Missourian with the camera-ready pages on Oct. 10. The Missourian is to print the week of Oct. 13, and the binding is to be completed the week of Oct. 20.

This year's directory also will include a special section of faculty, staff and student phone numbers that become effective around Jan. 1, when the new campus phone system becomes operational.

Send your questions about campus matters to Mizzou Weekly, 1100 University Place. You must include your name and phone number so we can reach you, if necessary.

New committee appointed for engineering dean search

Provost Lois DeFleur has appointed a new nine-member committee to conduct the nationwide search for a College of Engineering dean. The search will be an extension of committee efforts last spring to identify candidates for the position.

"I am pleased with the makeup of the committee and with the timing of our search. Beginning a search in the fall coincides with the prime recruiting time for the academic community," DeFleur says.

Candidates from the earlier search will be notified of the extension. No date has been set for conclusion of the search. "We will go as long as is necessary to get the best candidate for the job," DeFleur says.

Members on the new search committee were appointed by the provost following discussion with engineering faculty, alumni and members of the earlier search committee.

Included on the committee are four representatives from the earlier committee: Eric Sandgren, chair, associate professor of mechanical and aerospace engineering; Don Smith of UMKC; Ingrid St. Omer, an engineering student; and Dale Whitman, dean of the Law School.

Other committee members are: Elaine Charlson, assistant professor of electrical engineering; Jay Kunze, professor of nuclear engineering; Neal Meador, professor of agricultural engineering; Michael Leonard, professor of industrial engineering; and B.D. Simon, BS CE '38, a member of the Engineering Advisory Committee.

Cyrus Harbourt, director of continuing engineering education, is serving as interim dean. William Kimel retired from the position July 31.

TV SHOW TO AIR
OCT. 5 ON KOMU

Peter Magrath's television show, "Leaders of Distinction: Conversations with the President," will premiere at 10:30 a.m. Oct. 5 on KOMU-TV, Channel 8.

Magrath will interview Gov. John Ashcroft during the 30-minute program.

"Leaders in our world are very special people," Magrath says. "Since they are the people who set the standard for us, an examination of their lives, how they developed their leadership style, how they work, their hopes and fears is interesting and educational."

The second show, to be broadcast in November, will feature retiring U.S. Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton.

TELL US ABOUT YOUR UNITED WAY EXPERIENCES

Remember meeting Gary Cunningham? He's a library assistant I in Ellis Library and a United Way volunteer who teaches sign-language classes. Cunningham, who also happens to be deaf, was introduced in a Mizzou Weekly story during last fall's United Way campaign.

Perhaps you know other Mizzou faculty and staff like Gary Cunningham, or are a United Way volunteer yourself. Mizzou Weekly is looking for volunteers to feature this fall as part of the 1986 campaign.

To suggest someone, call 882-7357 or drop a note in campus mail to 1100 University Place.

TIME MANAGEMENT
SEMINAR OFFERED

A seminar on time management will be offered from 1 to 5 p.m. Oct. 7 in the Education and Development Center in the Heinkel Building.

Don Webb, professor of marketing, will cover organization, delegation and effective use of time.

For more information about the free seminar, call 882-4859.

FALL COLOR TO PEAK A WEEK EARLIER

Because of a cool August, fall color will hit its peak a week to 10 days earlier than usual.

"We should hit peak color in early- to mid-October in mid-Missouri and hold it for awhile," says Steve Pallardy, researcher in the School of Forestry, Fisheries and Wildlife. "The maples will turn first, then the oaks."

It will be a good year for color, he says. "All we need are some cool nights to go with sunny, warm days. We've already had enough moisture to make this a good year for fall color."

FORUM

grant proposals
being accepted

By Walter C. Daniel

Editor's note: The Missouri Committee for the Humanities is seeking grant proposals for its current funding period. The committee is headed this year by Walter C. Daniel, director of the College of General Studies and professor of English.

Faculty members at the University of Missouri-Columbia have been actively engaged in Missouri Committee for the Humanities' work almost from the committee's beginning. Of the 177 grants awarded by MCH within the past 18 months, Mizzou scholars have participated in 48.

Four notable projects that recently have been partially funded by the committee include the popular History Day project directed by Laura Bullion of the Manuscripts' Division of Ellis Library; a symposium on the anniversary of the publication of Mark Twain's "Huckleberry Finn," directed by Robert Sattlemeyer and Donald Crowley of the English Department; "Oral History: Genealogy and the Black Family" by Carolyn Dorsey; and Victor Estaves' project on "Women in Greek Myths" that contained a workshop at both Mizzou and at Rock Bridge High School.

Forty-three Mizzou faculty and staff members served as Humanities Scholars in the Outreach Program, intended to bring the humanities to communities not normally served by the University faculty. Principal among these are Carl Chapman, Adolf Schroeder and John Foley.

The Columbia community has been involved in a wide variety of projects, including "The Role of the Black Baptist Preacher in Afro-American Culture" that was held at the Second Baptist Church in Columbia with the assistance of faculty members at Mizzou; the Columbia Public Library series on "Let's Talk About It" that fosters discussion groups concentrating on American fiction; a history of St. Paul A.M.E. Church in Columbia; "Boys' Town in Missouri"; the annual celebration of the birthday anniversary of Martin Luther King Jr., sponsored locally by a memorial committee; "The History of Bethel Community" in Boone County; and "Interpreting Experience through Photography," a project among high-school students directed by members of the Columbia Art League.

Central themes provide focus for each year's program. For the grant period commencing Nov. 1, 1986, proposals will be considered along three grant lines: Understanding the United States: Our Nation, Our State and Our Communities; Understanding the World Outside the United States; and Improving the Teaching of Humanities. Within the first grant line, MCH encourages applicants to concentrate upon "Rush Toward Technology: Quality of Life," and "Order and Freedom in Society." Grant proposals must be entered by Nov. 1.

Beginning with its first grant Feb. 15, 1971, the Missouri Committee for the Humanities has operated as the state-based arm of the National Endowment for the Humanities. Its principal function has been receiving proposals for regrant funds for the promotion of the humanities and discussion of policy among the citizens of the state.

Its program is administered by a staff of three housed in offices in St. Louis. Its board of directors consists of 20 Missourians who represent the academic and the professional populations of the state. They are either elected by the existing membership or appointed by the governor. Although the majority of the present board members come from both public and private academic institutions of higher learning in Missouri, others represent museums, public policy bodies, and religious and governmental organizations.

Detailed information on the process for proposing projects for funding from the regrant resources of MCH may be secured from the office of the Missouri Committee for the Humanities Inc., Suite 204, Loberg Building, 11425 Dorsett Road, Maryland Heights, Mo. 63043. The office telephone number is (314) 739-7368. To discuss the committee and its work, call or write to Walter C. Daniel, 420 General Classroom Building, 882-6060.

The Campus Parking & Transportation Committee Meeting will meet in S204 Memorial Union on October 14, 1986 at 3:00 p.m.

Anyone who wishes to have an item put on the agenda should contact the Parking & Transportation Office at 882-4568 or the committee chairman — Richard Linhardt at 882-7451.

EVERETT ARONSON, associate professor of veterinary medicine, presented "The Effects of Anaesthesia on the Radiographic Appearance of the Coxofemoral Joints" at the annual meeting of the American College of Veterinary Radiology Aug. 10-13 in Lake Tahoe, Nev.

J. ROBERT BARTH, professor of English, lectured on "The Role of Love in Coleridge's 'Rime of the Ancient Mariner'" at the 15th annual Wordworth Conference held Aug. 1-15 in Grasmere, England.

JO BEHYMER, BOB BIRKENHOLZ, LONNIE ECHTERNACHT and JOHN ELIAS, professors of practical arts and vocational-technical education; JUDY HUGHEY and SANDRA MAXAM, research associates; and LYNDA WEST, associate professor of special education, presented the annual Missouri Vocational Association Conference in July at the University. More than 3,000 state vocational educators and practical arts instructors participated in the conference.

BARBARA BENNEY, senior secretary in information processing, was named Campus Facilities' July Employee of the Month.

WILLIAM BERRY, professor of art, will have a still-life drawing in colored pencil featured in the sixth annual Faber Birren Color Award Exhibition in Stanford, Conn. The exhibit runs Oct. 19 through Nov. 15.

A paper by HAROLD BIELLIER, professor of animal sciences, LEONARD R. FORTE, professor of pharmacology, and Mahmoud Elaroussi, a doctoral candidate, was selected for the President's Plenary Poster Session at the annual meeting of the Endocrine Society in June in Anaheim, Calif. The paper was called "Survival of Vitamin D-Deficient Embryos: Time and Choice of Vitamin D or its Metabolites for Treatment In ovo."

ALAN BLUEDORN, associate professor of management, presented "Primary Rhythms, Information Processing and Planning: Directions for a New Temporal Technology" at the sixth meeting of the International Society for the Study of Time July 4-11 at Dartington Hall College of Arts in Devon, England. At the same location, Bluedorn attended the meeting of the Association of Social Studies of Time July 11-13. Bluedorn organized and served as chair for the symposium "Time and Organizations: The Mysterious Frontier" at the annual meeting of the Academy of Management Aug. 13-16 in Chicago. At the meeting, he presented "The International Society for the Study of Time: A Resource for the Study of Time in Organizations and Management." Bluedorn and RONALD J. EBERT, professor of management, were named to the editorial review board of the Journal of Management.

GORDON BROWN, professor and director of health services management, was elected chair of the board of directors of the Association of University Professors in Health Administration for 1986-87. The association includes faculty from 150 international universities.

Ten supervisors from Campus Facilities attended a training session called "How to be a Successful Supervisor" held July 31-Aug. 1 in Kansas City and St. Louis. They are PAUL BROWN, LISA CANCHOLA, LARRY CARTER, LYNN CHANDLER, PAM ENOCHS, A.W. JACKS, BOB JOHNS, RICHARD LEWIS, RICK MILLER and STEVE SCIORTINO.

DONALD F. BURNETT, mechanical trades specialist/pipefitter, was named Campus Facilities' August Employee of the Month.

THOMAS D. COOKE, professor of English, read a paper, "Middle Class Values and Deeds in 15th Century Comic English Verse," May 10 at the International Congress on Medieval Studies in Kalamazoo, Mich.

E.A. CORLEY, professor of veterinary medicine, presented "Hip Dysplasia and the Orthopedic Foundation for Animals" Sept. 11-12 at the Welsh Corgi national meeting in Dallas.

L.A. CORWIN, professor of veterinary medicine, presented "Radiotherapy of Bone Tumors using a Biochemically Targeted Radioisotope" at the annual meeting of the American College of Veterinary Radiology meeting Aug. 11-13 in Lake Tahoe, Nev. Corwin also attended "Therapies in Nuclear Medicine" Sept. 12-14 in Kansas City.

DUNCAN COUCH, professor of music and director of choral activities, was elected president of the southwest division of the American Choral Directors Association. The division has 3,500 members and includes seven states. Couch also will serve as a member of the National Executive Board of the American Choral Directors Association.

LEZLIE LAWS COUCH, instructor in English, was elected to a three-year term as college representative on the executive board of the Missouri Association of Teachers of English.

WALTER C. DANIEL, professor of English, had "Langston Hughes versus the Black Preachers in Pittsburgh Courier in the 1930s" published in Critical Essays on Langston Hughes. He also had "James E. McGirt" published in Dictionary of Literary Biography.

ROBERT B. DENHARDT, research professor of public administration, addressed the Arkansas chapter of the American Society for Public Administration. He is national president-elect of ASPA. Denhardt also made invited presentations at the University of Georgia and Georgia State University.

CAROLYN A. DORSEY, associate professor of education, had "Despite Poor Health: Olivia Davidson Washington's Story" published in Sage: A Scholarly Journal on Black Women.

IRVING EPSTEIN, assistant professor of higher and adult education, wrote "Children's Rights and Juvenile Correctional Institutions in the People's Republic of China" for the August issue of the Comparative Education Review. Epstein was the guest editor for the summer 1986 issue of Chinese Education. Its theme is "Juvenile Delinquency in the People's Republic of China." He also wrote two chapters in the recently released World Education Encyclopedia, considered the most comprehensive source book on the education field at the present time.

JOHN MILES FOLEY, professor of English, was awarded a National Endowment for the Humanities Summer Seminar for College and University Teachers grant. The topic of his summer 1987 seminar is "The Oral Tradition in Literature."

LEONARD R. FORTE, professor of pharmacology, co-wrote five papers for the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology national meeting in April in St. Louis. With WILLIAM J. KRAUSE, professor of anatomy, and HAROLD BIELLIER, professor of animal sciences, he wrote "Hypertrophy of the Kidney during Reproduction." They and Mahmoud Elaroussi, animal sciences doctoral candidate, presented "Morphology of the Chorioallantoic Membrane: Effects of Vitamin D-Deficiency." Forte, Elaroussi, Biellier and T.J. MURPHY, a pharmacology graduate research assistant, wrote "D3 Receptors in Chorioallantoic Membranes of Normal and D3-deficient Embryos." Forte, Biellier and Elaroussi presented "Indices of Vitamin D Deficiency in Japanese Quail Embryos." Forte and Cole wrote "Autotransplantation of Avian Parathyroid Glands." At the American Society of Bone and Mineral Metabolism in June in Anaheim, Calif., Forte and JUDY COLE, pharmacology research associate, presented "Effects of Parathyroid Hormone on Camp Formation and Phosphate Transport in Opposum Kidney Cells Grown in the Presence and Absence of Serum." With Elaroussi and Biellier, Forte presented "Reproduction in Quail: Biological Activity of Vitamin D3 and its Metabolites." At the Advances in Mineral Metabolism Symposium in April in Snowmass, Colo., Forte lectured on "Parathyroid Hormone Receptors in Avian Kidney: Are PTH Receptor Changes Physiologically Significant?"

LOUANNA FURBEE, professor of anthropology, was one of six people selected nationally to serve a term as a visiting associate of the Smithsonian Institution. Furbie is acting as a resource contact in this area for the grant, internship and fellowship programs of the Smithsonian that are available to students and faculty. The program emphasizes recruitment of minority applicants.

MICHAEL W. GALBRAITH, assistant professor of higher and adult education, co-wrote "An Interpretive Review of the 1984 National Adult Education Conference" for publication by the American Association for Adult and Continuing Education. His book review of "The Aging Network: Programs and Services" by D.E. Gelfand appeared in the Journal of Gerontological Nursing. Galbraith co-wrote "A Problem Solving Guide for Quality Circle Participants" in Q.C. Trends: A Quarterly Journal. Galbraith also co-wrote a research article, "Factors Which Influence Students to Enter Occupational Education Programs," that appeared in Occupational Education Forum. He also had his book review of "Elder Neglect and Abuse: An Annotated Bibliography" by T. Johnson, J. O'Brien and M. Hudson published in the Journal of Gerontological Nursing.

HAROLD GARNER, professor of veterinary medicine, spoke Sept. 3-4 at the Atlanta Equestrian Society meeting and the University of Georgia.

CHARLES GEHRKE, professor of biochemistry, was named the outstanding chemist in the ten-state Midwest region for 1986 by the American Chemical Society. Gherke earned the award in part for his studies that proved chemical evolution of life molecules had not occurred on the moon's surface. The society also praised the methods he developed to accurately analyze components of nucleic acids. He will receive the award Nov. 6 in Kansas City.

STEVEN W. GRAHAM, assistant professor of higher and adult education, and coordinator of off-campus programs, was honored as the 1986 Business Associate of the Year by the High Noon Chapter of the American Business Women's Association. Graham also presented "Using Computers to Enhance Leadership and Decision Making in Continuing Education" at the annual conference of the National University Continuing Education Association meeting in Portland, Ore.

Spirit and competition were intense in the campus office decoration contest Sept. 25-26. The competition, intended to become an annual event, preceded Mizzou's Sept. 27 football game against Indiana.

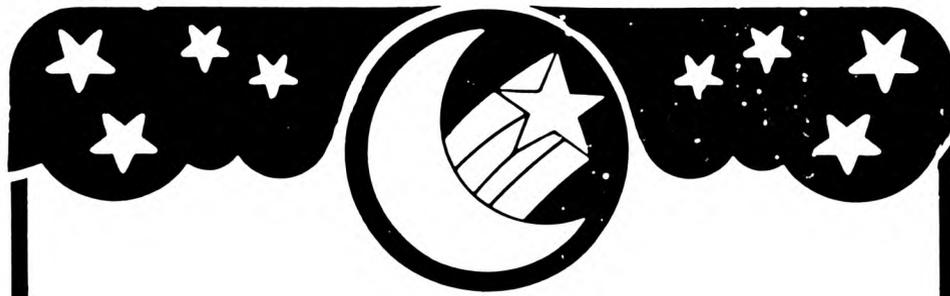

The office of Institutional Research and Planning, 319 Jesse Hall, earned first prize with its reproduction of Faurot Field. The display also included a locker room, scoreboard and models of Marching Mizzou's bass drum and the University Hospital and Clinics' helicopter, which hung from the ceiling.

Alumni Development/Records, G-1 Alumni Center, finished second among the 11 entries. Business Services, 311 Jesse Hall, and News Services, 329 Jesse Hall, tied for third.

Entries were judged on spirit, originality and best use of space. Members of the winning office each received a ticket for the Oct. 11 Homecoming football game against Colorado, a pompon and a gift from the Missouri Bookstore.

Alumnus remembers peace demonstrations

Editor:

I was surprised and disappointed to read in the Sept. 12 Mizzou Weekly that "there was no full-scale peace movement at Mizzou." As one who was on campus during those years, I recall numerous peace marches, non-violent sit-ins and demonstrations, including some that drew as many as 4,000 participants: a speech by Dick Gregory which drew at least 3,000; a speech by Angela Davis that was relocated to Hearnes in anticipation of a similar crowd; several student peace organizations that attracted a great deal of time and energy from the University administration; and, following the Cambodian and Kent State incidents, a student boycott that ended classes three weeks early, and, thanks to curator overreaction, led to several years of AAUP probation for Mizzou.

The only thing missing here was violence—but surely those who are rewriting history at Mizzou Weekly don't equate the peace movement with violence, do they?

Staff Council reviews low morale on campus

"I feel used and abused." That's a phrase too often heard on campus, according to George Hough, ticket manager in Intercollegiate Athletics and member of Staff Advisory Council. The group discussed campus morale at its Sept. 25 meeting.

Hough said that some faculty and staff members seemed indifferent about their jobs. He and other council members blamed apathy on low salary increases and an increased work load in some departments due to attrition.

But council members stressed that there was no excuse for rude employees, and that apathy may not be a problem in every department.

"We didn't get a raise for two years, yet we were still committed to being pleasant to our customers," said Mary Miller, food service worker III in Rollins Cafeteria. "You should do the job you're expected to do."

Council members have no immediate plans to deal with apathy among staff members. They feel the solution must come from the administration.

In other business, progress was reported on a cooperative effort among UM staff groups to seek changes in employee benefits. These include extending the University's educational benefits to employees' dependent children, removing the four-day annual limit on sick leave used for family illness, and extending insurance benefits to include an eyesight plan. Barbara Olson Smith, senior secretary in special education, presented a letter from the UMKC Administrative Assembly indicating its interest in the collaborative effort. Smith is co-chair of the council's staff benefits and development committee.

The UMKC group will send representatives to a Mizzou Staff Council meeting to discuss the proposals. The UMSL Staff Association Council indicated its support earlier. Smith also will contact the UMR staff group.

The council agreed not to act as a body to pursue staff members' complaints about the hangtag parking permits. It urges staff members with complaints or concerns to attend the parking and transportation committee meeting scheduled from 3 to 5 p.m. Oct. 14 in S204 Memorial Union. Anyone who would like to speak at the meeting should call committee Chair Richard Linhardt at 882-7451 to be included on the agenda.

Retired professor publishes English Department history

A recently published book takes a look at the historical roots of the English Department. "An Historical Sketch of the Department of English, University of Missouri-Columbia" was written by Professor Emeritus Leon T. Dickenson.

"Acquainting later generations with persons and places associated with the department shows the continuity of the school's efforts," Dickenson says. The sketch is one of several being compiled for a complete history of the College of Arts and Science by Armon F. Yanders, former dean.

Copies of the 162-page English Department history may be purchased for $5 in 231 Arts and Science Building.

Classes on phone system to be offered

The University's new telephone system is scheduled to issue its first dial tone at 12:01 a.m. Dec. 26. Beverly Blackwell, manager of Telecommunications, says scheduling will begin in November for instructional courses in using the new system.

"We're sending schedules of the classes to departments. We need to accommodate all workers so we're also sending a questionnaire asking for convenient times, as well as a sign-up sheet for classes," Blackwell says. GTE, the company installing the new system, will provide class instructors. Arrangements have been made to train 8,500 employees—virtually all employees on campus who have a phone.

"The test mode will be up during the classes so employees who enroll will have actual hands-on training with the new system," Blackwell says.

Most features of the new system are standard. The training sessions will teach employees to use the various features of the system, such as call forwarding and conference calling.

The revamped phone system offers an answering machine service called voice mail, and speed dial. There is an additional charge for these services.

Blackwell says the new system has the capacity for 4,100 voice mail lines. At this time there is an initial sign-up of 1,500 lines. "I envision that voice mail will be a very popular service," she says.

Telecommunications is asking all departments to review the 1986 City of Columbia Telephone Directory to determine if any additions, deletions or changes are needed in a directory listing. The changes will be made in the 1987 directory. The city directory will be published after the University converts to its new telecommunications system.

Homecoming anniversary approaches

Mizzou will celebrate its 75th homecoming anniversary Oct. 11 with the theme "Buffaloes Are Tigers' Game." A week of events are planned leading up to the game against Colorado at 12:05 p.m. Oct. 11 at Faurot Field.

A kick-off rally featuring the football captains, cheerleaders and king and queen candidates will begin at 5:30 p.m. Oct. 6 on the south side of Jesse Hall. A student talent show will be held the evening of Oct. 7 in Jesse Hall.

Student groups will square off in the homecoming games at 3 p.m. Oct. 8 on Virginia Field. The rules are secret until game time, but the names of the events are known—Jeopardy, Press Your Luck and Family Feud.

The names of the games are in keeping with the selection of this year's homecoming parade grand marshal, alumnus Tom Kennedy, host of "Nighttime Price is Right." The parade will begin at 8 a.m. Oct. 11, winding through downtown Columbia and campus.

House decorations will be on display in Greektown beginning at 7 p.m. Oct. 10.
