Celebrate

Tuba tunes, mimes and a ceramic tile mural will be part of "Celebrate the Arts '86," a student celebration of the new School of Fine Arts. Also on tap are jazz, woodwinds and jugglers. Mizzou students looking for their big break can sign up for a turn at the open mike by calling Ken Stilson at 882-2021 and leaving a message about the act and their phone number. The event will be held from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Oct. 17 on Lowry Mall.

Interim chancellor named

President appoints vice chancellor to serve in interim leadership role.

Duane Stucky, vice chancellor for Administrative Services, will become interim chancellor Jan. 1, University President C. Peter Magrath announced at an Oct. 6 news conference. Barbara S. Uehling has resigned the position effective Dec. 31.

Beginning in January, Uehling will be a senior visiting fellow at the American Council on Education in Washington, D.C. While at ACE she will coordinate the research and help develop national policy on issues such as accreditation, corporate education and international education.

In announcing Stucky's interim appointment, Magrath said, "It's important to have continuity and to keep momentum going. When a chancellor or president leaves a major university, there sometimes is a period when things stand still. But it doesn't have to be that way, and it won't be that way at the University of Missouri-Columbia."

Stucky, who said he is not a candidate for the permanent job, emphasized continuity. "We already on this campus have strong momentum. My job will be to continue that

Provost announces structure

Provost Lois DeFleur announced a reorganization of her office Oct. 3. She had asked deans and faculty representatives for their reactions to the proposed structure last month.

Under the reorganization, there are four vice provosts. Associate Provost Gerald Brouder is now vice provost for budget and academic personnel. Graduate School Dean Don Blount will continue to serve as vice provost for research.

A search is planned for a new vice provost for extension. The post currently is held by John Oren, who also serves as UM associate vice president for academic affairs-extension. Oren requested that a new vice provost be hired to take over the campus-related duties of his job.

The position of vice provost for undergraduate instruction will replace the position of assistant provost currently filled by Otis Jackson. "I announced to Provost De-Fleur upon her arrival my intention to pursue other career options and requested that she move ahead with her plans for restructuring the provost's office with the knowledge that I would be leaving in a short while," Jackson said. His resignation will be effective May 1.

The vice provost for instruction, to be chosen through a national search, will examine and assess general issues concerning undergraduate and professional programs, and will work closely with Faculty Council and academic divisions. The vice provost also will provide faculty with opportunities to review and improve teaching techniques.

momentum. I intend to move forward." Stucky's knowledge of campus planning and priorities was reflected by his participation on the committee to improve the University of Missouri, Magrath said. The five-member committee, headed by Charles F. Knight, made recommendations on the University's organizational structure.

Both Stucky and Magrath emphasized their desire for a smooth transition. "I am working closely with Provost Lois DeFleur, who will continue to provide the academic leadership for the campus," Stucky said. "I am confident that, with her support and assistance, the interim period will be one of continued progress for the University of Missouri-Columbia."

Stucky said that he and DeFleur plan to work closely with the Council of Deans and Faculty Council. "We need strong input from these groups," DeFleur said she was pleased with the working relationships and communication she has established with these groups since her July 21 arrival as provost.

During the next three months, Stucky said he will work with Uehling to prepare for his interim position. "Dr. Uehling has expressed confidence in me and support for me. I'm sure she shares our goal of providing a smooth transition for new leadership," he said.

Magrath anticipates that Stucky's interim position will last for three to six months. During that time, Kee Groshong will assume many of Stucky's duties as vice chancellor. Groshong is director of Business Services, a unit of Administrative Services. Stucky will return to his position as vice chancellor, which he has held since 1983, when the new chancellor is hired. Stucky came to Mizzou from the University of Oklahoma in 1979 as director of Institutional Research and Planning. He holds three degrees in mechanical engineering from Ohio State University, including a doctorate.

A screening committee led by Truman Storvick, professor of chemical engineering, seeks applications and nominations for the chancellor's post. The group will send a list of five to eight prospects to Magrath early next year.

In addition, the new vice provost will have responsibility for the academic programs and support areas that currently report to the provost's office. These include the Academic Assistance Program, the Academic Support Center, International Programs and the Learning Center.

"The attention we give to the quality of undergraduate education cannot be overemphasized," DeFleur said of the new office structure. "We are at a period when the assessment of the undergraduate experience is on the state and national agenda. New focus on undergraduate education comes at a crucial time for the Columbia campus."

Cooperative programs discussed

Master's degrees in Mizzou's nursing, social work and health services management programs may be offered on the University's St. Louis and Kansas City campuses. Graduate School Dean Don Blount told Faculty Council members about the proposed cooperative programs at the group's Oct. 2 meeting.

The proposal was reviewed earlier by Graduate Faculty Senate's executive committee and by a Graduate School advisory committee created by Blount.

Under the proposal, Blount said, University of Missouri-Columbia faculty members would be expected to travel to other UM campuses and deliver graduate degrees that currently exist in their Mizzou department. "These programs can benefit from an urban environment," Blount said of nursing, social work and health services management. "It would facilitate the experience base of students and faculty."

Blount cited the Board of Curator's long-range plan as one catalyst for the proposal. "The administration is committed to cooperative programs." To achieve excellence, he added, "It's very apparent that nobody is going to be able to go it alone. It is a global concept of critical mass that the central administration seems to have deemed vital for the future."

As an illustration, Blount said that a multidisciplinary approach often is required to solve complex problems facing society. At the same time, Blount said he is committed to maintaining disciplinary strength and identity.

Concerning the proposed cooperative programs, Blount said, "The degree to which they can exist is a function of many things, such as funding, strengths the campus can offer, and rules already in place that govern activities of students on campus. There are great sensitivities associated with those rules and regulations."

Campus residency is a key concept, Blount said. Traditionally, students are present on the campus from which they earn their degree. "If we define residency as a geographic locus, why? And if there is a concept of mobility, what does one do with regard to the concept of accountability? These are issues to be dealt with." Funding the proposed program is another unresolved issue, Blount said.

Council member Peter Gardner, professor of anthropology, questioned the financial wisdom of the proposal. "We have a campus here that can't teach basic courses adequately because of a lack of funds.

When we are facing reallocation, how can we possibly talk about extended degree programs in the state?"

In response, Blount again cited the long-range plan's emphasis on cooperation among the campuses. William Noteboom, associate professor of biochemistry, echoed Gardner's concern: "Without dollars to back this, it will never go."

Blount said it was incumbent upon the campuses to share in an intellectual exchange. He noted that the University already has an intercampus doctoral program, which allows students who have satisfied their campus' residency requirement to engage in further study or conduct research on another campus. Eight students have participated in the program since 1975.

Council Chair John Bauman, professor of chemistry, plans to ask one of the council's standing committees to review the cooperative program proposals, which he received from Provost Lois DeFleur last week.

SUPERVISORY NETWORK MEETS

An organizational meeting of the supervisory network will be held at 11 a.m. Oct. 15 in Memorial Union Aud.

Support staff with supervisory interest are welcome to attend. The meeting will begin with a presentation by Dixie Van Hove, manager of Stenographic Services, on "Positive Ways to Give and Receive Criticism."

Membership information will be available during a refreshment break following the presentation. With questions, call Beth Page at 882-2552.

REACTOR MARKS 20TH ANNIVERSARY

The University's research reactor, the most powerful university nuclear facility in the nation, will observe its 20th year of operation this month.

To celebrate the anniversary, an open house is planned from 9 to 11:30 a.m. Oct. 11 at the facility, located in Research Park on the Mizzou campus.

Videotapes will be shown, and reactor staff will be available to answer questions and provide information on the reactor's current activities.

The reactor began official operation Oct. 13, 1966.

CAMPUS OBSERVES WORLD FOOD DAY

"Hunger Amidst Plenty" will be the focus of World Food Day activities Oct. 16.

Exhibits will be displayed from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Lowry Mall. A national teleconference on hunger will be broadcast live via satellite from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Lowry Mall. A panel discussion is planned from noon to 1 p.m. on the mall.

For more information call Jude Bursten at 882-6448.

PROGRAM COVERS HUMAN RELATIONS

Human relations is the topic of an employee development seminar to be offered from 10 a.m. to noon Oct. 14, 16, 20, 22 and 24. The program will be held in the Heinkel Building's Education and Development Center.

Taught by K. Blake Danuser, manager of Human Resource Development, the course will focus on personal interaction. Subjects include knowing yourself, communication and conflict, leadership style and positive interaction.

To register for the free program call 882-4859.

Workers tested for TB

All employees of Rollins Dining Hall were tested for pulmonary tuberculosis earlier this week after a former employee was diagnosed with the disease Oct. 3. The former employee's last day of work was Sept. 19.

Employees took the skin test as a precautionary measure, says Jim Korner, associate director of Residential Life Food Services. "The city health department advises us that given the circumstances surrounding the situation, it is unlikely that an employee or student would be infected," Korner says. "Still, we required testing of all employees."

In addition, Student Health Services is providing free testing for any student who eats in Rollins Dining Hall and is concerned.

The Columbia Health Department performed testing on the 10 employees working closest to the infected employee. "Our rule of thumb is that unless an employee is in closed quarters, eight hours a day, five days a week, testing is unnecessary," said Linda Hancik, an administrator in the city health department.

Hancik says required TB testing of food service workers in Missouri was abandoned about five years ago because the disease was so rare. In Boone county there have been about six cases in the past year, she says.

While tuberculosis was considered a highly contagious disease 20 years ago, new medications have almost eliminated the disease. Isolation or lengthy hospitalization of patients are no longer necessary.

A positive test does not indicate a person has tuberculosis but indicates a person has been exposed to the disease.

Q&A

Q. How many people have visited the president's home since the Magraths moved in? How many of these were University employees?

A. Susan Dichiro, household assistant at Providence Point, the president's home, says that 3,500 to 4,000 people have visited the home since the Magraths arrived in January 1985. There are no records on how many of those were University employees.

Q. Why does the natatorium close on home football Saturdays? Its brochure indicates that it is open from 1 to 4 p.m. on Saturday.

A. "Our staff is totally behind the Mizzou football Tigers, which makes it virtually impossible to safely staff the pool during home football games," says Bill Busch, natatorium coordinator. "We are looking forward to serving our University faculty, staff and students the other 46 Saturdays of the year."

Q. Why is the Trowbridge shuttle bus repeatedly late? It supposedly runs every nine minutes, but it has been running every 15 or 20 minutes.

A. Carol McAllister, assistant manager of Parking and Transportation Services, says heavy campus traffic during class changes has caused some delays in the bus schedule. There are two buses running continuously from 6:30 a.m. to 5:40 p.m. The route is designed to take 15 minutes to run, which would give a 7½-minute span between buses at Trowbridge.

In September approximately 45,000 people rode the Trowbridge shuttle. The Hearnes shuttle had 53,000 riders.

Q. Is there an identifying mark on the new University ID cards that will tell someone I am a staff member and not a student?

A. The computer coded strip on the back of the ID card identifies you as a staff member. For a more obvious identifying mark, all staff members' ID photos have a green background. Student ID photos have a gold background.

Send your questions about campus matters to Mizzou Weekly, 1100 University Place. You must include your name and phone number so we can reach you, if necessary.

IN THE BASEMENT LIES FORGOTTEN TREASURE.

Return with us to those thrilling tastes of yesteryear. When dining was a pleasure not a necessity.

Where service was quick and courteous and your table was set in linen, china and silver.

In the heart of campus, nestled in the basement of the Memorial Union you can find the Hawthorn Room.

It isn't easy to find but it is more than worth the effort. Because at Marriott we've gone back to the basics that once made the Hawthorn Room so popular: reasonably priced entrees, sinfully seductive desserts and pride in our service.

Come, treat yourself to hidden treasure in the heart campus. The Hawthorn Room is proud to announce the return of good food, good service - good times.
