Celebrating black history

University groups present a variety of special events honoring Black History Month.

"Together, blacks and whites can move our country beyond racism and create for the benefit of all of us an open society, one that assures freedom, justice and full equality for all." — Whitney Moore Young Jr., "Beyond Racism: Building an Open Society"

Rep. Walter E. Fauntroy, D-D.C., will kick off the University's celebration of Black History Month. Tonight at 7:30 in Jesse Auditorium, he will present a lecture in keeping with this year's national theme, "The Constitutional Status of Afro-Americans into the 21st Century."

Fauntroy is the first person in 100 years to represent the District of Columbia in the U.S. House of Representatives. He is a member of the House banking, finance and urban affairs committee and is chairman of the House district committee's subcommittee on government affairs and budget. He also heads the Congressional Black Caucus Braintrust on Voter Participation and Network Development.

In the '60s, at the request of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., Fauntroy led the Washington bureau of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference. He was the Washington, D.C., coordinator of the historic March on Washington Jobs and Freedom in 1963. He also coordinated the Selma-to-Montgomery March in 1965.

Other speakers include John E. Jacob, president and chief executive officer of the National Urban League, and the Rev. Cyrus Keller, editor of "Religious Literature" for the African Methodist Episcopal Church.

Several University and community groups also will host presentations. "We encourage the involvement of the entire campus," says Alton Zanders, director of Equal Opportunity and a member of the Black History Month committee. "Black History Month is an opportunity for the entire campus to consider the achievements of black Americans."

Among the activities is the Office of Minority Programs and Special Student Services' sixth annual Job Fair from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Feb. 24 in N201-202 Memorial Union. The Black Theatre Workshop, under the direction of Associate Professor Clyde Ruffin, will present a specially commissioned production of St. Louis poet Shirley LeFlore's work. "A Cup of Black Coffee, Three Lumps of Sugar, with a Spot of Cream" is a tribute to black women that features live music from traditional gospel to blues and jazz. Because the Feb. 6 performance is sold out, the workshop will repeat the show Feb. 7. The dinner theater will begin at 7:30 p.m. in N201-202 Memorial Union. Tickets, at $7 for faculty and staff, and $5 for students, are available at the MSA ticket window in Brady Commons.

Children from the Nora Stewart Memorial Nursery School will present a Black History Month skit at the College of Home Economics' Child Development Laboratory at 9:30 a.m. Feb. 10. And several University black faculty members will present lectures. For a complete listing of events, see the Semester Calendar in the Jan. 26 Mizzou Weekly or stop by the Office of Equal Opportunity, 217

"We hope the programs are educational and that people will learn something new," Zanders says. "But we also hope there will be some sensitizing taking place with regard to the status of black Americans and the need for all of us to work together to improve the status of all Americans, particularly black Americans."

Looking for a challenge, Robert Smith left California in 1979 to direct University Hospital and Clinics.

Director Smith guides hospital to plus column

Healing is nothing new to University of Missouri-Columbia Hospital and Clinics. But the remedies prescribed by Robert Smith to bring the ailing hospital back to health have provided unprecedented results.

"I never imagined that I'd leave California to come to Missouri," says Smith, executive director of the hospital. With goals met as director at the University of California-Davis Hospital, Smith says he was looking for a challenge. "The University of Missouri-Columbia Hospital and Clinics offered an irresistible challenge with enormous potential."

Smith met the challenge when he moved the 440-bed teaching hospital from the minus to the plus column, netting a $2.5 million profit in 1986. When he came in 1979, the hospital showed a loss of nearly $1 million. Smith used strategic planning, marketing research and analysis of demographic health-care trends to turn the hospital around.

Several major construction and renovation projects over the past five years, partially financed by revenue bonds, have helped make the hospital more modern. The biggest project, Access '85, added 240,000 square feet to the building. The three-part plan consolidated Cosmopolitan International Diabetes Center, Mason Institute of Ophthalmology and Howard A. Rusk Rehabilitation under one roof.

A 500-car parking garage for visitors and patients went up during the Access '85 construction. Marketing information had indicated lack of parking was one of the major patient complaints. Outpatient clinic visits went up from 141,000 in 1984, before the garage was completed, to 186,000 in 1986, says Pat Morton, associate hospital director for financial services.

Responding to trends in health-care education, Smith has increased emphasis on the training of primary-care physicians. Since 1985, the hospital has opened two primary-care clinics, the Green Meadows Clinic and the Crossroads West Medical Center. They are staffed by University physicians, residents and students.

Other innovations instituted under Smith's administration include a SameDay Surgery Center, a Short Stay Center and emergency helicopters. Smith says he plans to continue to enhance outpatient services and expand discount health care.

The hospital's success came as no surprise to Smith. "It is the optimum size for a teaching hospital and it is well integrated physically and philosophically with the Medical School. I knew the problems could be dealt with."

OPERA ONE-ACTS TO BE PRESENTED

The University of Missouri-Columbia Opera will perform "Sunday Excursion" and "Comedy on the Bridge" at 3 p.m. Feb. 7 in Jesse Auditorium.

Featured with the one-acts will be excerpts from Mozart's "Cosi fan tutte," performed by the University Chamber Orchestra. Harry Morrison, professor of music, will conduct.

The performance is free.

SCHOLARSHIP NAMED FOR FIRST BLACK GRADUATE

Mizzou has named its $12,000 minority graduate fellowship program after the first black to graduate from the University. It is now the Gus T. Ridgel Fellowship.

Ridgel, the assistant vice president for academic affairs at Southern University in Baton Rouge, La., graduated from Mizzou with a master's degree in economics in 1951.

The first of the 20 graduate scholarships is expected to be awarded by the end of February. The annually renewable scholarships will go to first-time minority graduate students.

MIZZOU HOSTS CAT CLASSIC

Mizzou's gymnastics team will compete with other top gymnasts during The Purina Cat Classic Feb. 5 and 6.

The Tigers will compete against the Penn State Lions, the Arizona Wildcats, the Auburn Tigers and the Pittsburgh Panthers. Team championships will be held at 7 p.m. Feb. 5, and individual championships at 7 p.m. Feb. 6. The Kitten Classic, featuring youngsters, will be held at 1 p.m. Feb. 6.

Two-day passes to the event, held at the Hearnes Center, are $8 for adults and $4 for students. A daily ticket is $5 for adults and $3 for students.

THE NOOK GETS A NEW LOOK

Watch for the open house of the renovated Union Express, formerly called The Nook, Feb. 8 through 14 in Memorial Union. You can stop by to sample the new ware, see the new layout and make suggestions about inventory, says A.K. Rahman, director of Memorial Union.

The convenience store has expanded to carry a variety of popular items such as microwave dinners, videos and panty hose.

The Union Express is designed to fill the gap when other facilities in Memorial Union are closed, Rahman says.

Staff need more say on campus issues, says Staff Council

Staff Council is taking pen in hand. At the group's Jan. 28 meeting, the council voted to send letters asking that staff be considered in campus issues.

One letter will go to Provost Lois DeFleur asking that staff members be added to current and future search committees for academic and administrative posts. The council also will write Hearnes Director Patrick Fitzgerald, asking him to include staff discounts in advertisements for HearnesCenter events.

In a letter to Chancellor Haskell Monroe, Chairman Larry Windmoeller, assistant manager of University Hospital Pharmacy, asked that a staff member be added to the systemwide University Planning Council. Suzanne Holland, assistant vice chancellor of Student Services, is a member of that group, but Staff Council would like to see another staff member added to the roster.

The council received correspondence from Chancellor Monroe responding to issues the executive board had discussed last June with then-interim Chancellor Duane Stucky. Those issues included salaries and the impact of technology on the work of staff. The council will discuss the letter at its next meeting.

In other business, council member Paulletta King, supervisor of accounting data control in Accounting Services, reported that she had heard several comments from staff members concerned about the restrictions of the preferred provider option or

PPO. The council agreed to invite an Employee Benefits representative to a future meeting to discuss the issues.

The group will sign up for committee assignments. The council will reactivate the fiscal affairs committee to work on salary issues; the committee plans to meet with Faculty Council members. It was agreed to expand the staff benefits and development committee to include subcommittees looking into 24-hour child care and extended hours for night courses. In addition, the multicampus ad-hoc benefits committee will continue its work, with an emphasis on early retirement.

Laura Toy, administrative associate I in Intercollegiate Athletics, asked the council to spread the word about the Show-Me State Games, to be held July 29 through 31 on campus and in Columbia. Staff members are encouraged to volunteer or enter the games as a competitor. For information call 882-2102.

COMPUTING MOVES TO HEINKEL

The Computing Services help desk, demonstration room and staff offices are moving from Lefevre Hall to the Heinkel Building. Computing repair services at University Place also will move to Heinkel. The move will consolidate much of Campus Computing into one building by the end of February.

Phone numbers for Computing Services and Facilities Administration will change to 882-2000. Due to the move, the computing lab in 107 Lefevre Hall will be closed much of this week. Call 882-5000 to check whether the lab is open.

CATALOG PRINTS SECOND EDITION

It's here! Volume 2 of the "Best of Missouri's Hands" hit the stands Feb. 1. The full-color catalog brims with products, ranging in price from $2 to $5,000, by 154 artisans.

The crafts catalog, first published in July 1986, is designed to develop innovative income sources for rural Missourians. Sixty-six percent of the items in Volume 1 sold, says Edie Pigg, the catalog's executive editor.

For a copy of the catalog, send $9.95, plus $2 shipping and handling, to 628 Clark Hall, Drawer 11, Columbia, Mo. 65211. Missouri residents add 64 cents sales tax.

GROUP SURVEYS COMPUTING NEEDS

Faculty soon will get the opportunity to voice their opinions about campus computing needs. The task force on computing planning and development, led by Provost Lois DeFleur, is distributing surveys designed to gauge faculty access to current computers and plan for future computing needs. The task force plans to update the 1985 campus computing plan.

Surveys should be returned to Campus Computing, 240 Heinkel Building, by Feb. 5. All faculty are encouraged to respond.

GROWING WEEDS SUIT FARMERS

Soil erosion is a big problem in Missouri and so are some weeds. But Clark Gantzer, agronomy researcher at Mizzou, says farmers may be able to use one problem to help solve the other. Chickweed or downy brome used as cover crops in no-till beans will reduce erosion, Gantzer says, but not without some loss in bean yields.

In trial fields, chickweed reduced bean yields by 8 percent and downy brome by 15 percent. But Gantzer says continued research will help reduce those percentages.

Test measures student learning

A group of 800 Mizzou juniors will be among the first to take a new general education assessment test Feb. 18 and 19. The sample group will take the Academic Profile Test, developed by the Educational Testing Service of Princeton, N.J. Mizzou is one of a number of institutions using this pilot test.

The campus was involved in development of the test through the late William Turnbull, an Educational Testing Service specialist. The provost's steering committee on assessment invited Turnbull to campus Jan. 14, 1987, to consult on general education measures. He concluded that available measures were not appropriate and took the first steps to develop a new measure.

The 60-minute Academic Profile Test has 48 objective questions. It will cover social sciences, natural sciences and humanities, and measure skills in college-level reading, writing, critical thinking and use of mathematical data.

At Mizzou, the test will be given at nine time slots on two dates for the convenience of students. Chancellor Haskell Monroe wrote letters to those in the sample group asking them to take the test as part of Mizzou's assessment effort. Student leaders will urge those who did not respond to the first request to take part.

The test will be administered by the Group Testing Program, which also administers national examinations such as the Graduate Record Examination and professional school admissions tests. The test is designed to assess programs and not individual students. No data on individual students will be reported to ensure confidentiality.

"There's lots of interest in this test across the country," says David Leuthold, professor of political science and coordinator of Mizzou's assessment program. "We don't know whether we'll use it again, or any other similar measure, until we see what value we get out of it."

CREDITS: Dow Chemical Co. gave the science journalism program $7,000 for an electronic bulletin board to help with the interchange of information between reporters and the Science Journalism Center.

BOOKS, TYPEWRITERS NEEDED: Robert Terrell, associate professor of journalism, who spent two weeks lecturing in Suriname, South America, is collecting books and typewriters for students enrolled in that nation's only journalism program. Students at the Akademie in Paramaribo have fewer than 20 books in English and no typewriters. Terrell's goal is to send at least 25 used manual typewriters and as many new and used books as can be collected.

Members of the University and local community may contact Terrell at 882-4821 with donations. U.S. government representatives in Suriname have agreed to pay shipping costs for the typewriters.

OVERNIGHT SHIPPING: A new pricing program for next day air express shipments of letters and packages has been negotiated between Airborne Express and the University. For cost information, call the company's local office at 874-1011.

==> Let's Compute!_

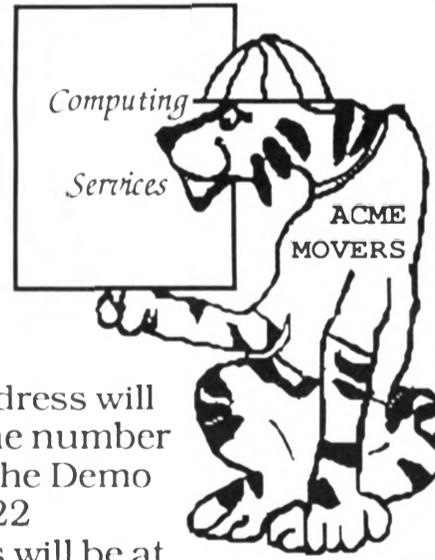

Computing Services began its move to the Heinkel Building on February 1.

The first to make the journey will be the Help Desk and the computing lab in 107 Lefevre Hall. The Demo Room, Repair Services and staff offices will follow during the week.

The Help Desk's new address will be 23 Heinkel. The phone number will remain 882-5000. The Demo Room will be located at 22 Heinkel. Repair Services will be at 13 Heinkel. Their number will remain 882-9400.

The Computing Services staff offices will be located at 200 Heinkel. The office phone number will be changed to 882-2000.

We will try to make the move as quickly and as smoothly as possible. If for any reason you can't reach the Help Desk by phone, please call the desk in 8 Middlebush, 882-3570, for assistance. We apologize for any inconvenience you may experience. Thank you for your patience.

Staff star in new video

A new video premiered this month at employee orientation and recruitment sessions. The 15-minute presentation, which replaces outdated slide shows, focuses on teamwork and pride in working for Mizzou.

"We built the script around certain objectives," says Blake Danuser, manager of Human Resource Development, an organizer of the orientation sessions. Those objectives include informing new employees about the University, showing each employee that he or she is part of a team, building morale and demonstrating some advantages of working for Mizzou.

"We thought testimonials from staff members were the best way to tell the story of the work you can do on campus," Danuser says. Clips of staff members telling why they like working for Mizzou are interspersed with shots of campus events. Blue Sky Communications, a local film company, produced the video. A welcome from University President C. Peter Magrath opens the presentation. The closing sequence features Chancellor Haskell Monroe and a mix of staff members in front of the columns.

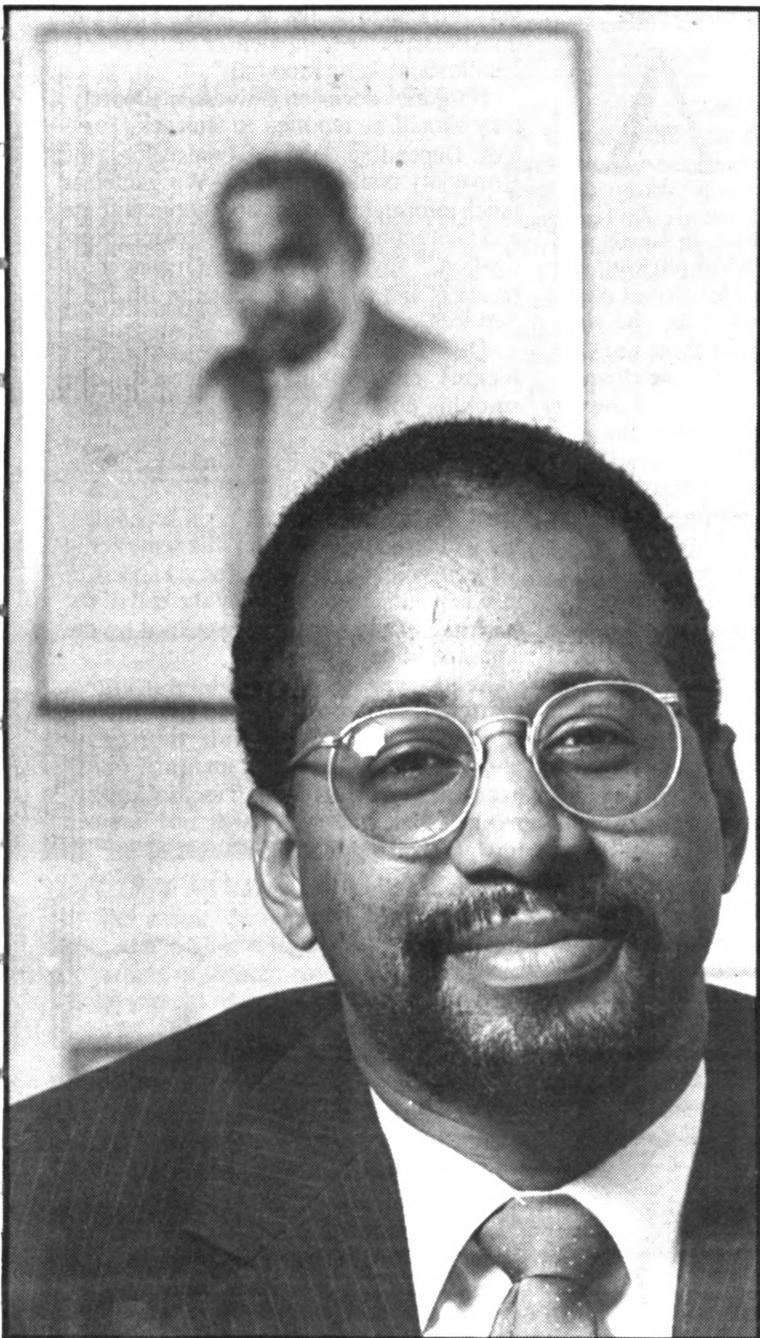

In addition to its run at monthly employee orientation sessions, Personnel Services takes the show on the road as part of recruitment programs at high schools, state colleges and technical schools.

The video emphasizes staff members' work with students and the successes achieved by faculty and staff working together. "We're all important parts of a team that keeps a great state university running," says Connie Wood, assistant director of Personnel Services/Employee Relations. "I think that comes through in the video."

Departments may borrow the video for staff meetings by calling Personnel Services at 882-4256.

Some staff members who appear in the video are featured here.

"The Educational Assistance Program pays 75 percent of my fees, meaning I only have to pay 25 percent. It allows me to work and go to school at the same time."
—Matthew Tyler, executive staff assistant III in the office of the vice chancellor for Student, Personnel and Auxiliary Services

Q&A

Q. Most of us working in Lewis and Clark halls are assigned to parking lots WG5, WG16 or the Conley Street parking garage. When snow falls, the sidewalks leading to and from these parking lots are never scooped, salted or cleaned. To avoid a fall, employees walk in the street, presenting a hazard for the employees and drivers of cars traveling in these streets. Who is responsible for cleaning the sidewalks leading to University parking lots? More than one person has fallen during the past month. If injuries occur is the University responsible?

A. "The majority of the walks in this area are the responsibility of Campus Facilities to clean with a few exceptions of walks on private property," says Phil Shocklee, assistant director of communications in Campus Facilities. "If a walk on University property was never cleaned or treated in any way, this was an oversight and was not brought to our attention. The 13-inch snowfall Dec. 15 was very difficult to handle as Campus Facilities does not have the equipment or manpower to handle such a large snowfall."

If injuries occur on University property, they should be reported to Business Services. Depending on the circumstances, the University could be liable. "We gather as much information as possible about the case and then submit it to our adjusters for investigation," says Pat Higgins, manager of business and fiscal operations in Business Services.

Q. When will the campus hold open forums on smoking? When does the smoking policy task force expect a policy to be approved?

A. Task force Chairwoman Jackie Jones, associate director of Business Services, says open forums have not yet been scheduled, but will be announced later this semester in Mizzou Weekly. The task force expects to turn in a recommendation by the end of the semester. It must then be approved by the administration.

Send your questions about campus matters to Mizzou Weekly, 1100 University Place. You must include your name and phone number so we can reach you, if necessary. All questions remain anonymous. Mizzou Weekly will not answer unsigned questions.

Hearnes changes bring new look, bright future

Midget wrestlers, the Junk Yard Dog, Johnny Cash and Waylon Jennings. It sounds like a line-up at a state fair, but these artists will headline at the Hearnes Center this semester.

It's part of Director Patrick Fitzgerald's attempt to give the local market what it wants. Bringing in more popular entertainers is one of his goals. He is soliciting suggestions from faculty, staff and students. "I'm interested in what people would like to see," he says. "I'm still discovering what the market is like."

Fitzgerald is orchestrating other changes, too. The drab colors of the building have been covered by warmer tones, with splashes of black and gold throughout. "By adding the black and gold, we've made the building a part of campus," Fitzgerald says. "A can of paint can do wonders." Tiger heads adorn the court entrances on the lower level. The green railings have been painted black, and rows in the A and B sections are now designated in gold paint.

Other changes to the center include a new floor for the practice gym. "Now the basketball team can practice in here, freeing up some dates for the arena," Fitzgerald says. "It also improves facilities for free play."

You'll also spot changes in the concession menu, which the staff has upgraded. In addition, vendors are hawkling refreshments in the stands, and concession stands will be more clearly marked. And you can get into the spirit of the event by stopping by the University Bookstore's new satellite shop on the main concourse for some Tiger wear.

Future projects include clearer directional signs throughout the center, often criticized as a difficult building to navigate. In addition, ushers now wear identifying shirts so confused patrons can look for them if they need help finding their seats.

One of Fitzgerald's favorite projects is the recently purchased portable stage, enabling the center to hold concerts in the field-house.

Fitzgerald says responses to the changes have been positive. He's hoping the remodeling and big-name entertainers will draw more people to the center. "The biggest misconception people have about the Hearnes Center is that it's just a place to play basketball," he says. "But we have meeting rooms and an indoor track. We host conventions, lectures, concerts and statewide events. Many faculty and staff don't realize that it's much more."
