Campus unites for charity

University organizers set $190,000 goal for 1988 United Way campaign.

A small computer is the only thing that links Tammy Jennings to the rest of the world. Without it, she would not be able to communicate with those around her.

Jennings has cerebral palsy, a dreadful disease that has robbed her of the ability to move in a normal way or to communicate through speech. But, lessons at the Jacobs Center in Columbia have taught her to use a computer to speak. Now a whole new world has been opened for her.

She could not have done it without support from the local United Way. The organization funds her transportation costs to and from the center. There, she learns new skills for a more productive life.

The United Way will begin its annual fund-raising campaign Sept. 20, and University organizers are making plans to do their part in the effort to help Jennings and hundreds of other local people with special needs. The University drive will begin Sept. 28.

University donations in the past have made up 20 percent of the local contributions, and this year organizers have set a campus goal to raise $190,000 during the six-week campaign. Last year the University raised $186,000, surpassing its $174,000 goal. Campaign organizers are hoping their luck holds during the 1988 campaign. Mizzou is the leading fund-raising university among Big Eight schools.

Robert Bailey, assistant dean and director of development at the School of Law, leads this year's University campaign. Chris Koukola, assistant vice chancellor of University Relations, is associate chairwoman, and Chancellor Haskell Monroe is an honorary chairman.

The University campaign is divided into six regions: academic I, academic II, administrative, University Hospital and Clinics, University system and retirees. Each region is divided into districts and units.

Ruth Brent, associate professor of housing and interior design, directs academic region I. That region has a goal of $50,350 and includes the School of Medicine, College of Engineering, School of Law, College of Home Economics, School of Journalism, College of Business and Public Administration, School of Library and Informational Science, College of Education, Graduate School and research centers.

Diana Helsel, associate dean of the College of Agriculture, will lead academic region II. That area, with a goal of $49,400, includes the College of Agriculture, College of Arts and Science, University Extension, College of Veterinary Medicine and the School of Nursing.

Laura Toy, assistant director of the Show-Me State Games, manages the administrative region that includes Student, Personnel and Auxiliary Services, Alumni Relations and Development, Institutional Research and Planning, the Chancellor's and Provost's offices, Intercollegiate Athletics, Administrative Services, Business Services, Computing Services, Campus Facilities, University Relations and Libraries. Her regional goal is $32,110.

Dick White, assistant director of administrative services at University Hospital, and Matt Waterman, clinic manager in medicine, are co-chairmen of the University Hospital and Clinics region that has set a goal of $20,520. The region includes administrative and financial divisions, Nursing Operations and Planning, Professional Services, Medical Practice Income Plan and University Physicians.

Rich Turner, assistant to the president and executive director of development, leads the University of Missouri region that includes Business and Financial Services, Personnel and Staff Relations, Academic Affairs, Computing and Informational Systems, State Historical Society, President's Office, Board of Curators, General Counsel, Treasurer's Office and Auditing. Their goal is $18,620.

The retirees region, made up of all Mizzou and UM retirees living in Boone County, is steered by Robert Daniel, professor emeritus of psychology. Their goal is $19,000.

For more information, call the University campaign office at 882-7254 or the United Way office at 443-4523.

20 to receive awards

Alumni Association honors distinguished faculty and alumni.

The MU Alumni Association will present its Distinguished Service Award, Distinguished Faculty Award and Faculty-Alumni Awards 6 p.m. Sept. 16 during a banquet at the Ramada Inn, 1100 Vandiver Drive.

The Distinguished Service Award will be given to lecturer and author Virginia G. Young, who attended the University from 1936 to 1938 on a Curators Scholarship. The award, the association's highest honor for an alumnus or alumna, recognizes outstanding service by an individual whose sustained efforts and support have added to the excellence of Mizzou. A leader in the field of library science, Young wrote the Library Trustee: A Practical Handbook, which is considered a classic guide on running libraries. In 1960, she was one of the founders of the Friends of the University of Missouri Libraries and the State Historical Society of Missouri Library.

Receiving the Distinguished Faculty Award is Margaret Alberi Flynn, professor emerita of family and community medicine. The award recognizes a faculty member whose sustained efforts in teaching, research and service have added to the excellence of Mizzou. The award also places special emphasis on the faculty member's relationship with students.

Flynn has brought in more than $278,000 in research grants to the University. Her research includes an 18-year study on aging with 500 University volunteers. She received the Excellence in Teaching Award from the College of Home Economics in 1983 and is the author or co-author of three books and more than 30 articles.

Faculty-Alumni Awards honor faculty for their work as teachers, researchers and administrators. Alumni are recognized for their potential and actual professional accomplishments and service to their alma mater. Recipients are pictured at left.

TRAINING DATE FOR TAs CHANGED

Teaching assistants who had marked Sept. 16 on their calendars as a training workshop date need to make a change.

The first workshop in the TA training and development program will be at 1 p.m. Sept. 30 in the Academic Support Center classroom. This is rescheduled from Sept. 16. The second workshop will be at 1 p.m. Oct. 7.

For reservations call 882-6260.

QUICK! HOW DO I WORK THIS THING?

Environmental Health and Safety, in cooperation with the Missouri Fire and Rescue Training Institute, will present a free fire extinguisher training session from 1 to 3 p.m. Sept. 22 in 12 Research Park Development Building.

Participants will watch a film and practice using various kinds of extinguishers. To register call Ray Morrison, campus safety representative, at 882-7018.

AREA SPORTS BIG IMPROVEMENTS

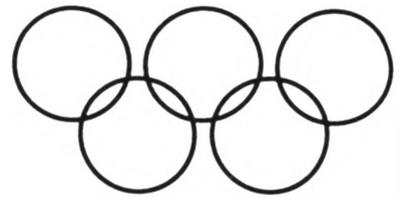

The Stankowski Recreation Area will hold grand-opening ceremonies at 1:30 p.m. Sept. 16. The sports field is south of Rollins Street, behind the Math Sciences Building.

Improvements totaling $237,000 include an all-weather track, lighting and new intramural fields. Student activity fees paid for the improvements.

A mini-Olympics, with events such as a 1,500-meter run, will highlight the grand opening. Ralph Stewart, professor of health and physical education, will give an historical overview, and John Heyl, director of the Center for International Studies and Programs, will speak. Refreshments will be served.

The area is named for the late Anton J. Stankowski, Mizzou's intramurals director from 1926 to 1965. Members of Stankowski's family will be at the event.

Faculty to discuss pay

Faculty members are being asked to approve a resolution that calls on the UM system to apply at least 75 percent of new state and other monies toward salaries for faculty and staff in the 1989-90 fiscal year.

The four-point resolution was approved by the Faculty Council's executive committee and will be presented at a general faculty meeting at 3:40 p.m. Sept. 13 in N201-202 Memorial Union.

"We're tired of hearing University Hall say that salaries are the most important thing, then the money is allocated for something else," says Gordon Kimber, professor of agronomy and Faculty Council chairman. "We want the salaries to come first — before the money goes to other uses."

Under the first point of the resolution, at least 75 percent of new funds would go toward faculty and staff salaries at all four campuses. Kimber says new funds totaled $8 million this fiscal year, and about $2 million of that went for salaries. Had the resolution been followed this year, Kimber says, salaries would have been boosted by at least $6 million.

The second point would prohibit salary increases from being funded through reallocation. "We want new funds, not reallocations," Kimber says.

Under the third point, no new programs or any items from the Agenda for Action — the UM system's new five-year plan for program improvements — would be funded until the mean salaries of faculty and staff equal the mean of the Big Eight and Big Ten. In a report to the Board of Curators in July, UM President C. Peter Magrath said UM system salaries average 20 percent lower than those at other Big Eight and Big Ten schools.

The fourth point calls on Magrath to report to the faculty within 30 days his plans for implementing the resolution.

The resolution says such a move is necessary because "salary offered to the faculty and staff is woefully inadequate and this is the cause of many people leaving...and this is causing a decline in morale and in the quality of education provided for the people of the state."

Burglar reveals tricks of his unlawful trade

You might think sticking your purse in a desk drawer or stowing it beneath your desk guarantees its safety, but a professional thief knows what you're thinking and where to look for your valuables.

In August, Sgt. Frank Brown and University Police officer Joe Curry went on a tour of campus buildings with a repeat offender, who in several years has made big hauls from campus offices. What they learned from the pro can help employees keep their billfolds safe and, perhaps, help University Police catch a thief.

The burglar told Brown and Curry that he generally walks down hallways in office buildings, looking left and right for unoccupied offices. Once he finds an empty office, he ducks inside and looks in typical places for purses. Common spots include deep desk drawers, file cabinets or, in colder weather, under a coat on a rack. If there is time, he will grab the money and quickly leave. Otherwise, he'll nab the billfold and go to a restroom to empty the cash from it.

The thief says he prefers to leave the purse and billfold because employees may not notice until later that their cash is gone, making it harder to pin down when and where the crime occurred. Generally, it takes him 15 seconds to walk in and grab what he wants. If he is rushed and has to steal an entire purse, however, he can walk away unobserved by tucking it down the front or back of his pants.

ved by tucking it down the front or back of his pants.

If an office worker interrupts his hunt, he may say he is looking for someone and exit quickly after being told that person doesn't work there. If someone in a hallway spots him leaving an office, he may turn back to the unoccupied office and say, "Thanks for your help," making it appear he didn't walk out of an empty room.

Pay days are favorite hunting times because some employees carry large amounts of money with them after cashing their checks.

"This doesn't happen in just secluded offices," says Brown, University Police investigative supervisor. He says billfold and purse thefts always have been a problem during his 24 years on campus. "The University is a favorite target because people can blend in easily," adds crime prevention officer Stephen Briscoe. "Elsewhere people may not be able to walk in and out of buildings. On campus there are a diversity of people walking through buildings."

Brown has set up a Campus Alert Network in buildings near Francis Quadrangle, favorite targets of thieves. If there is a series of thefts occurring on campus, he'll notify building alert monitors in each building and ask them to warn employees.

He urges employees who spot a suspicious person to call University Police. "They should call immediately. Time is critical, so don't delay by checking with a supervisor," Brown says. Employees also may call Crimestoppers at 875-TIPS (8477), if they want to remain anonymous.

To keep purses and billfolds safe, Briscoe suggests that employees lock their office or desk when they leave the area, and put their purse in an area that can be secured.

Nursing dean will retire

Phyllis Drennan, dean of the School of Nursing, will retire in September 1989, Provost Lois DeFleur has announced.

"We're sorry to lose someone of Phyllis' stature," DeFleur says. "She has been instrumental in the recent success of the school, and she will be missed."

"We are grateful that she has given us notice this far ahead of time, and we plan to name a search committee for her successor soon. We hope to have a person on board by September 1989."

DeFleur credits Drennan with improving the quality and quantity of nursing research; attracting a stronger nursing faculty; strengthening alumni support; and raising the college's profile within Missouri and in the Midwest.

Drennan came to Mizzou in November 1981 from the University of Northern Colorado School of Nursing, where she was dean from 1974 to 1981. Before that she was an assistant professor of nursing at the University of Iowa and held a variety of nursing positions in Illinois and Colorado.

Drennan has a doctorate in education from the University of Iowa and a master's in nursing from the University of Colorado. She also has a bachelor of science degree from the University of Denver.

DeFleur noted that four dean positions have been filled in the past year. Lester R. Bryant has been named dean of the School of Medicine and will begin his duties in January. Timothy J. Heinsz was named earlier this year as the new dean of the School of Law. Other recent appointees are Judson Sheridan, Graduate School and Office of Research, and Anthony J. Hines, College of Engineering.

DeFleur says searches are at a crucial stage for deans in the College of Arts and Science, the School of Journalism and the College of Business and Public Administration. "We're conducting pro-active searches and have an impressive pool of candidates," she says. The deadline for applications and nominations for the arts and science dean is Oct 1; for the journalism dean, Oct. 15; and for the business and public administration dean, Nov. 1.

Larry Clark, professor and chairman of the Theater Department, is serving as interim dean of the College of Arts and Science, and Robert V. Penfield, associate dean of the College of Business and Public Administration, is interim dean of that college. James Atwater, dean of journalism, will not retire until the end of the academic year.

DeFleur also said she is completing a reorganization of her office. A search committee has been named to find a new vice provost for budget and operations, the job formerly held by Gerald Brouder, now deputy to the chancellor. The four other vice provost slots are filled: Jeff Chinn, instruction; Judson Sheridan, research; Donald Swoboda, extension; and K.C. Morrison, minority affairs and faculty development. The last post is a new one, and Morrison will begin June 1.

Council waits for decision

Staff Advisory Council wants the parking and transportation advisory committee to have a chance to do its job before a final decision is made regarding a parking fee increase.

At its Sept. 8 meeting, the council agreed not to set up an ad hoc group to explore the increase issue. "It would be an injustice to that committee," said Chairman Larry Windmoeller, assistant manager of the University Hospital Pharmacy. "Once they make a decision, we'll assess the committee information."

The parking advisory group last spring did not act on the increase proposal, saying it needed more cost information and time to fill student positions. The group is expected to take some action this fall. In August, Norman Moore, vice chancellor for Student, Personnel and Auxiliary Services, recommended a 50-cent fee increase this fall and a $1 hike in each of the next four years. The future of that proposal rests with Chancellor Haskell Monroe.

At its Aug. 11 meeting, the council approved a letter asking that no increase be enacted until the need for a fee hike is fully explained and the parking committee makes a recommendation. That letter was sent to Moore, Faculty Council, the chancellor, the parking committee, the Missouri Students Association and the Graduate Professional Council.

Another increase issue prompted the council to plan an open forum. Mike Paden, director of UM Employee Benefits, will explain the possible medical premium increase at 1:30 p.m. Sept. 21 in Jesse Auditorium. The Board of Curators will decide the future of that increase at its Sept. 15 and 16 meeting in Columbia. The Staff Council meeting "will give people an opportunity to ask questions and to help them understand the increase, if it's approved," says council member Pauledetta King, supervisor of accounting data control in Accounting Services.

The council also is planning an educational program with state Sen. Roger Wilson, D-Columbia; Rep. Chris Kelly, D-Columbia; and Rep. Ken Jacob, D-Columbia. The council will invite them to discuss legislative activities and to explain the appropriations process. Jacob spoke at the group's Aug. 11 meeting. Kelly and Wilson could not attend that session.

In other business, election committee chairman Harold Lynch, senior audio/television production technician with the educational resources group in the School of Medicine, announced that the committee will meet to plan fall elections. A candidate nomination form will run in September issues of Mizzou Weekly.

King, chairwoman of the communications committee, reported that entries in the council's logo contest continue to filter in to her office. She also presented a summary of responses to the council's summer newsletter. Eighty-three staff members listed issues they want the council to advocate. The top three are upgrading of salaries, adding educational assistance for dependents and enhancing retirement benefits.

Barton returns to books and ideas

Jay Barton, UM vice president for Academic Affairs, will retire Dec. 31.

Barton, AB '47, MA '48, PhD '51, says he is retiring to pursue studies. "I've spent much of my career as an administrator, but in my heart, I've always felt of myself as an intellectual," Barton, 66, says. "In my retirement, I shall return to the pursuit of books and ideas and the life of the mind."

Early in his career, he served in several teaching and administrative positions throughout the United States. He was president of the University of Alaska for five years, then returned to Columbia in 1985 as a UM system vice president.

"I've enjoyed my tenure with the University of Missouri," Barton says. "I feel we have made strides, especially toward long-range goals, since I've been here."

UM President C. Peter Magrath says a search for Barton's successor will begin soon. "Jay has been a top adviser to me on academic affairs," he says. "He's shown great leadership in the area of long-range planning for the University and was a vital member of the Missouri Opportunity 2000 panel planning the state's economic future."

Hearnes Center custodian Charles Coen and others will be recognized during National Housekeepers Week Sept. 11 through 17.

Keeping it tidy

National recognition week celebrates those who keep floors shiny, windows bright and offices spotless.

Tiger basketball fans may never meet Charles Coen, but he's as much a part of the game as those who scatter confetti — he picks it up.

"We start in section D and work our way down to the floor," says Coen, a Hearnes Center custodian. The occasional compliment makes the hard work worthwhile, he says. And recognition of jobs well done is what Coen and his cohorts will hear during National Housekeepers Week, Sept. 11 through 17.

On campus, custodial building services' 200 employees will be honored at 9:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. receptions Sept. 13 in 330 A and B Hearnes Center. There are two receptions to accommodate morning and evening shift employees. Kee Groshong, interim vice chancellor for Administrative Services, will present a certificate recognizing custodial employees to Alan Warden, director of Campus Facilities.

"I like the week because it's a positive focus on custodial work staff," says Pamela Skeene, assistant supervisor of custodial services. "It reminds everyone that custodians are VIPs." Employees such as Coen are valuable, she says, because they are dependable, personable and knowledgeable about their field. An orientation program and monthly meetings keep custodians informed on policies and educated about the potentially hazardous chemicals they use to keep buildings clean.

5 black faculty hired

Five blacks are among 11 new minority faculty members at the University this fall, Provost Lois DeFleur says.

"Cultural and racial diversity within Mizzou's student body is represented in every department," DeFleur says. "That diversity also should be found in the faculty."

New black faculty members are Richard Barksdale and Geta LeSeur in English, Adrienne Hoard in art, Sundiata Cha Jua in history and Flore Zephir in French.

They join one new Hispanic faculty member, Karen Cone, in biological sciences and five new Asian faculty members: Nakhle Asmar, math; Imelda Bulatao, pathology; Lares Empig, agronomy; Youren Lan, computer science; and Hirotsugu Yasuda, chemical engineering.

Alton Zanders, director of the Office of Equal Opportunity, says the only minority faculty category not showing an increase is American Indian. He called it a small but significant gain for black faculty. "Three black faculty members left, giving us a net gain of two," Zanders says.

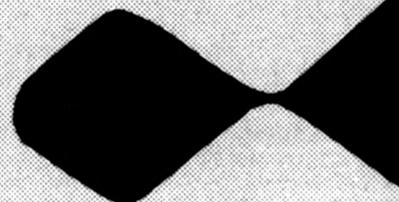

University Club

The University Club of the University of Missouri invites members of the administration, faculty, and staff to attend a reception to meet and welcome new members of the faculty on Thursday, September 15, at the Alumni Center. Wine, punch, cheese, crackers and fruit will be served between 4 and 6 p.m. The charge per person is $4. For reservations, please call Cecil at 882-1226 before noon, Tuesday, September 13.

But their responsibilities don't stop at maintenance. Count building security and general assistance among the duties that custodians shoulder. For Coen, that included calling an ambulance for a pregnant woman going into labor.

On campus for more than five years, Coen likes the physical activity his job offers. He's worked in several buildings and isn't daunted by the extra work the Hearnes Center's special events entail. In the center, custodians work as a team, sharing maintenance duties. "It's a team of pros," Skeene says.

Working from 5 a.m. to 1 p.m., Coen is a "floor man." He keeps the center's 500,000 square feet of floor shiny. And that's not counting the auditorium. "If the floor is messed up it makes the whole building look bad," he says. "I've heard people say the Hearnes Center is the cleanest building they've seen." That's the kind of recognition Coen likes to get.

this construction project, which will be completed in November."

Q. The physical improvements on campus during the past few years are very impressive, including the various landscaping projects. I am curious as to why the area in the center of the circle drive north of the columns has not been landscaped, especially since this is one of the first areas seen by visitors and surely creates a lasting first impression.

A. The area near the circle drive has not been planted with flowers recently because of problems with large trucks making turns in the drive and running over the plants, says Phil Shocklee, assistant director of Campus Facilities. "Campus Facilities has reviewed this area and made plans to post a sign restricting trucks and to mulch and to plant flowers near the circle in the next week or two," Shocklee says.

Send your questions about campus matters to Mizzou Weekly, 1100 University Place. You must include your name and phone number so we can reach you, if necessary. All questions remain anonymous. Mizzou Weekly will not answer unsigned questions.

Q&A

Q. Who is responsible for waiting until August to begin the construction work on Rollins Road between Hitt and College streets? Surely they could have guessed at the traffic problems this would create. Maybe they would like to provide Ellis Library and the State Historical Society with a shuttle bus to Columbia Mall so that our patrons have a place to park?!

A. "After the funding was available for this project, the time required for engineering and design work, permits and ordering material did not allow the start of this project prior to July," says Phil Shocklee, assistant director of Campus Facilities. "The project did start in July. We have left one lane of traffic open around the construction work to try to minimize the inconvenience. We appreciate everyone's understanding during Dick Tamburo, Mizzou's new athletic director, will travel throughout Missouri, encouraging alumni to come back to Ol' Mizzou.

Showcasing Mizzou sports

Mizzou's 1988 Homecoming theme is "Show Me Ol' Mizzou." That's a slogan that Dick Tamburo personally is taking around the state.

"In the last few weeks I've made several trips to St. Louis, Kansas City, Springfield and other parts of Missouri to talk to alumni and other groups," Mizzou's new athletic director says. "I'm going to make several more. We need to get everyone back on board — get them back to Mizzou."

Tamburo was named athletic director Sept. 7, succeeding Jack Lengyl, who left Aug. 1 to take a similar post at the U.S. Naval Academy. Tamburo served the past two years as associate athletic director under Lengyl.

"I want everyone in the state to know who Dick Tamburo is," he says. "That's my first priority, and that's the reason for all the traveling."

"I also want to improve the graduation rate of our student-athletes — and I stress the word 'student.' I don't want them to be mere athletes."

"We're one of the few major universities in the country that has never had an NCAA investigation. I think that is a tribute to our integrity, and I plan to continue that tradition."

Tamburo, 58, served as athletic director from 1978 to 1980 at Texas Tech University, and from 1980 to 1985 at Arizona State University. In making the announcement, Chancellor Haskell Monroe cited Tamburo's experience.

"Dick Tamburo has demonstrated his integrity, competence and a commitment to Mizzou," Monroe says. "His record as athletic director at two major universities and his record at this University qualify him beyond a doubt. He is highly regarded by athletic directors throughout the country, and, during the past two years, he has earned the overwhelming support of the coaching staff at Mizzou."
