Sending a message

MU's new management plan stresses academic quality, administrative efficiency.

Chancellor Haskell Monroe's new strategic management plan not only is designed to reduce administrative overhead and enhance academics at MU, but also to send a message of commitment to institutional efficiency throughout the state.

"We want to demonstrate that we already work hard and deserve additional support," Monroe says. "At the same time, this plan shows we are willing to improve our administrative efficiency to an even greater degree."

The chancellor unveiled his plan at the regular spring general faculty meeting April 11 in Memorial Union Auditorium. The event drew about 200 faculty members.

"We must manage our limited resources in a way that will strengthen those programs central to our mission as the state's land-grant and only complete research university," Monroe told the group. "Together we can maintain and enhance the environment that makes the highest-quality teaching, research and service possible."

Monroe's strategy is based on four points:

•Reducing administrative overhead — Monroe will give administrators reporting to him specific dollar amounts by which to reduce their divisional expenses over the next three years — totaling $500,000. The administrators involved — vice chancellors, the provost and the chancellor's office itself — must present plans for reductions to Monroe by July 1. Funds generated from the savings will be applied to faculty and staff salaries, as well as library and academic computing needs.

"The faculty had shown some concern last year that administrative costs were growing," Monroe says. "This move demonstrates that administration is leading the way in reducing costs. Let me emphasize that my office is included in this plan, and also let me emphasize that these are recurring funds, not one-time monies."

•Maintenance and repair of existing buildings — The chancellor says MU will request no new funds for new buildings in the next three years, excepting those already partially funded — engineering, veterinary medicine and library expansion — or opportunities resulting from private gifts. Instead, the University will emphasize to the state the need for maintenance and repair of its existing buildings.

"We have asked Gary Smith, director of Admissions and Registrar, to provide us with a list of classrooms and teaching laboratories needing the most attention," Deputy Chancellor Gerald Brouder explains. "Faculty and students deserve better and more modern facilities. We need to protect the significant investment already made in our University."

Janie Ausburn, coordinator in University Events, has scheduled the "Spirit" rig to be available for tours during the Black and Gold Spring Fun-Fest this weekend.

The rites of spring

MU Spirit Week features traditional Black and Gold game along with concerts, festival and tours.

Football, concerts and the nation's best sports mascot are on tap for the Sesquicentennial Birthday Celebration and MU Spirit Week. Special events, scheduled through April 23, include the Black and Gold football game and tours of "The Spirit of Mizzou — Moving On" exhibit.

Bob Stull will make his MU coaching debut at the annual Black and Gold game, which will kick off at 1:30 p.m. April 22 at Faurot Field. Tickets are $3 for adults, and $2 for faculty and staff. There is no charge for students, children and participants of Human Race XI, a 10-kilometer walk-and-run that will begin at 8 a.m. April 22 at Faurot Field. Also, 1988 football season-ticket holders will be admitted free; a ticket stub was included in the 1988 ticket packet.

For the first time, Marching Mizzou will give both pre-game and halftime performances at the Black and Gold game. "There is such enthusiasm this year, and we want to do our part to make the Black and Gold game even more festive," says Dale Lonis, director of Bands.

Appropriately, MU Band Spirit Week began April 17. Marching Mizzou, the Golden Girls and twirlers will perform at noon on Lowry Mall through April 21. "We hope to energize the campus and generate excitement about the football season," Lonis says. Also, the concerts encourage new members to join the band, he says.

Truman the Tiger will display his award-winning spirit at the Black and Gold game. Dan Meers, a senior in journalism who wears Truman's stripes, was selected the nation's top sports mascot April 10 at the National Cheerleaders Association Competition in San Antonio, Texas.

Truman also will be on hand for the fifth annual Black and Gold Spring Fun-Fest, set for 10:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. April 22 on the Dutton Brookfield/Tom Taylor practice field at the corner of Stadium Boulevard and Providence Road. A "Happy Birthday Mizzou" cake, baked by Campus Dining Services staff, will be served to all at 10:30 a.m. The 16-by-4-foot masterpiece will be made with 20 sheet cakes and will serve 2,000, says Kathy Mertzluft, manager of Food Services.

Other attractions will include carnival booths, games, clowns and a hot-air balloon. "The Spirit of Mizzou — Moving On" mobile museum will be open during the Fun-Fest, and also is scheduled for tours during the FFA State Convention on April 20 at the Hearnes Fieldhouse.

In other special events, University Singers alumni will join current members and Gov. John Ashcroft in a concert at 8 p.m. April 22 in Jesse Auditorium. Tickets are $2.

Across campus, the College of Veterinary Medicine will have an open house from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. April 21 and 22. Also scheduled for the weekend is the annual banquet of the Jefferson Club—the University's premier private gift-giving group—and the MU Alumni Association National Board meeting.

"We are planning a week that culminates in a weekend of fun and entertainment for everyone," says Don Haskell, director of University Events. For a complete listing of MU Spirit Week events, see Page 5.

MAKE A SPLASH AT CAMPUS POOL

The swimming pool at Lewis and Clark halls will be available to members and their guests from May 27 to Sept. 4. Hours are noon to 8 p.m. seven days a week.

A Red Cross certified lifeguard will be on duty, and swimming lessons will be available to members at no extra charge. Members also receive 15 free guest passes. The pool has a shallow end for non-swimmers, and a diving board at the deep end.

Family memberships cost $135 for the season. Individual memberships are $70. There is a waiting list to join, so call Anita Blanchar at 445-2540 if interested.

WE ALL SCREAM FOR ICE CREAM

Here's a cold scoop. Buck's Ice Cream Place has opened in Eckles Hall. Hours are 11:45 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 2:30 to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

A single-dip cone costs 65 cents; a double dip is $1. You have your choice of chocolate or vanilla, with four more flavors to be available at a later date.

During an open house from 3 to 6 p.m. April 30, Buck's will offer special prices: 25 cents for a single and 40 cents for a double. The prices match those charged in 1972, the last year that a dairy store was operated in Eckles Hall.

SINGERS GO TO WASHINGTON

The Shelter Insurance Sesquicentennial Singers will take the stage at the Kennedy Center in Washington April 22. The group of eight students will entertain contestants and spectators at the American College Theater Festival awards presentation.

"This is the top festival in the country for college theater," says Don Haskell, director of University Events and coordinator of the singers.

While in Washington, the group also will perform at an MU alumni brunch at Stouffers Concourse Hotel.

Faculty Council OKs new admissions plan

Faculty Council has endorsed new admission requirements for first-time freshmen that Director of Admissions and Registrar Gary Smith characterizes as "moderately higher" than current standards.

At present, the admissions office adds high school class rank percentile and ACT composite score percentile and admits students with a sum of 75 or greater. The standards approved by the council April 13 employ the same sliding-scale combination, but there is no "magic number" such as 75, Smith says.

For example, students ranking only in the 30th percentile of their high school class would need to score a 23 on the ACT to be admitted to MU, or those scoring only a 17 on the ACT would need to rank in the 60th percentile or above in their class. Students in the top one-fourth of their class have no ACT requirement.

The new requirements also provide for admission based on non-standard criteria, such as extensive extracurricular activities involving school, church or community; significant work experience or family responsibilities; or marked improvement in high-school classes over time. Russell Zguta, professor of history and chairman of the Faculty Council committee studying admission requirements, said the non-standard criteria is included to provide a more heterogeneous student body at Mizzou.

"Surveys have shown that, as a group, blacks do not score as high on the ACT as whites," Zguta told the council. "But minorities could be admitted based on the non-standard criteria, which identifies other qualities we are seeking in our students."

Zguta said the plan was a collective effort between his committee; Smith and his staff; and a student advisory group. It now will go to Chancellor Haskell Monroe, and if approved, will be forwarded to the UM System and the Board of Curators.

In another matter, Gordon Kimber, professor of agronomy and chairman of Faculty Council, announced plans for a picnic in honor of Mizzou's 150th birthday. The event will be from 2 to 5 p.m. April 29 on Reactor Field, south of MU's nuclear research reactor on Providence Road.

"This will be an event for all faculty, staff and students," Kimber said. "Bring your own food and your own blankets. We'll have volleyball and maybe some other games, too, and we'll celebrate MU's birthday. It will be a friendly afternoon picnic."

12 faculty to receive awards

Twelve faculty members will be honored at the 1989 Faculty Awards Ceremony at 4 p.m. April 25 in Memorial Union Auditorium.

Ten will receive campus honors such as the Alumnae Faculty Award; the Byler Distinguished Professor Award; two Chancellor's Awards for Outstanding Faculty Research and Creativity; the 1988-89 Maxine Christopher Shutz Award and Lecturer; three Provost Outstanding Junior Faculty Teaching Awards; and two Provost's Awards for Outstanding Achievement.

In addition, two faculty members will be recognized for outstanding achievement in awards given by the UM System.

A reception will follow in N201-202 Memorial Union.

Planning committee to be formed

Faculty members have endorsed a plan calling for a long-range planning committee to study resource allocation and goals for MU.

The faculty approved a motion for the plan, without dissent, at the April 11 general faculty meeting in Memorial Union Auditorium. More than 200 faculty members attended.

Gordon Kimber, professor of agronomy and chairman of Faculty Council, says he hopes to meet soon with Chancellor Haskell Monroe to discuss details of the plan.

Also at the meeting, the faculty approved a resolution opposing the use of mandatory reallocation to increase salaries. A similar resolution was approved recently by the faculty senate at UM-Kansas City. The faculty also approved a resolution calling for a comprehensive educational program "sensitizing all members of the University community to issues of ethnic civility." The resolution says faculty members should be aware of and repudiate remarks that discriminate against a person's age, disability, race, ethnic origin, sex or sexual orientation.

Kimber gave the group a report on Faculty Council's activities this year, and urged faculty to support a statewide grassroots effort to obtain more funding for higher education in Missouri. Additional funds are necessary to ensure the quality of education at Mizzou, he said, adding, "MU is not only the most comprehensive University in the state — it is the best."

Monroe to speak to retiree group

Chancellor Haskell Monroe will speak and the Shelter Insurance Sesquicentennial Singers will perform as the chancellor's advisory committee for retired faculty and staff meets for its annual luncheon April 18 at the Hearnes Center. The social hour begins at 10 a.m., with the luncheon activities beginning at 11:30.

The group, now in its 18th year, was established by Henry Bent, former dean of the Graduate School, and then-President Elmer Ellis. In 1987, the committee moved its annual luncheon to the Hearnes Center from Memorial Union because of the growing membership. About 650 are expected to attend this year's luncheon.

The group is composed of five retired faculty members; five retired staff; and two ex-officio members from the active administrative staff.

"We also act as unofficial ombudsmen in that we evaluate complaints and problems of retirees and advise the chancellor on possible solutions," says Robert S. Daniel, professor emeritus of psychology and chairman of the committee. "We believe this process has been a success and furnishes a valuable service."

BUILDING TEAM SPIRIT

Signs on campus say "B.Y.O.B." April 26. The BYOB stands for "Bring Your Own Boss."

The occasion is the American Management Association video-conference on "The Boss/Secretary as a Team," part of Secretary's Day. The program will emphasize open communication and practical ways to develop a team spirit.

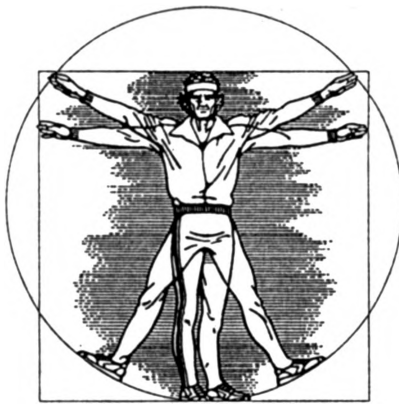

Registration will begin at 1:15 p.m. April 26 in Memorial Union Auditorium. To sign up for the conference, use the blue form mailed to you from Human Resource Development in early April, or call Shirley Calvin at 882-6637 for a copy.

REC CENTER HOURS SET

The Student Recreation Center has announced its schedule for the coming months.

From May 6 through Aug. 4, the center will be open from 6 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Friday, and from noon to 8 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. The center will be closed May 28, May 29 and July 4.

Natatorium schedules are available at the pool or in 106 Rothwell.

CAMPUS ART TO BE UNVEILED

The winning entry in the Chancellor's Purchase Prize in Art will be displayed from April 26 through May 6 in Jesse Hall. Finalists' works also will be exhibited.

Artwork entered in the competition portrays campus scenes. The contest, open to all undergraduates, increases available works of art depicting various campus sites; fosters competition for excellence; and reflects concern for the visual arts.

A reception honoring the winner and the finalists will be held from 3:40 to 4:30 p.m. April 26 in the Jesse Hall lobby.

WHERE'S THE BULL BEEF?

No bull. Beef producers can't tell bull meat when it's on their plate. In a taste test, cattle producers attending the MU Cattle Feeding Seminar couldn't tell the difference between beef from steers or from bulls.

Of 80 taste testers, half incorrectly identified which piece of meat on their dinner plate was bull meat. Many said the bull meat was more tender, but an almost equal number claimed the steer beef was more tender.

"Basically, they couldn't tell the difference," says Angie Siemens, a graduate student who tallied the results.

Journalism School gets a $2 million challenge

The Knight Foundation has awarded a $2 million challenge gift to the School of Journalism in honor of Lee Hills, an MU alumnus and chairman emeritus of Knight-Ridder Inc.

Executives of the foundation announced the gift during a luncheon April 14 in Washington D.C., where they were gathered for a meeting of the American Society of Newspaper Editors. Under the agreement, MU has three years to match the $2 million figure through "the University, its alumni and friends." The funds will be used to construct a building named for Lee Hills at the world's oldest school of journalism, which was founded in 1908.

"This gift is an endorsement of the School of Journalism and the recognition of its influence on the lives of so many of the world's most respected journalists," Chancellor Haskell Monroe says. "On behalf of the school's many friends and alumni, we accept with confidence the challenge to match the gift as a testimonial to Lee Hills and his influence on the journalism profession."

James D. Atwater, dean of the School of Journalism, says the gift will be used to create new quarters for the Columbia Missourian, the daily newspaper published by the school. "We're delighted by the generosity of the Knight Foundation," he says. "We know the new facility will make dynamic and innovative contributions to journalism education and to the profession itself."

Hills earned a bachelor of journalism degree from MU in 1929 and received an honorary degree last year. He won a Pulitzer Prize in 1956 in the general reporting category for a series of stories in the Detroit Free Press. He was named executive editor of Knight Newspapers in 1959; president in 1967; and chairman and chief executive officer of Knight-Ridder Inc. in 1974.

The gift is the second multi-million-dollar contribution to the school this year. In January, the IBM Corp. announced it was providing $2 million in equipment and software. The School of Journalism has received more than $12 million in gifts, pledges and challenges over the past five years.

Some work remains for 'Quad Squad'

If members of the "I Love the Quad Squad" have their way, future generations of students will learn about the history, tradition and significance of Francis Quadrangle as soon as they enroll at MU.

"We're beginning to talk with various departments and offices in Student Services about adding an aspect to student orientation," says Chris Koukola, assistant vice chancellor for University Relations and chairwoman of the "Quad Squad," a group of faculty, staff and students concerned with preserving the grass on Francis Quadrangle. "If they agree, we're hoping that future orientation sessions could include something about Francis Quadrangle and how important it is that new students respect it."

Koukola does not criticize current students for cutting across the Quad, saying that practice has become commonplace in recent years. "The solution may be to educate students from the start on the importance of preserving this beautiful, historical spot," she adds. "We hope the departments and offices in Student Services agree with us."

Koukola says recent efforts by the "Quad Squad," in which volunteers distributed "I Love the Quad" stickers and thanked walkers for staying on the concrete, were successful on two counts. "The response was good from the people walking along the Quad, and also from the students, faculty and staff whom we asked to help distribute stickers."

Chain fences and signs will stay in place through April on either side of the wide path cutting across the south portion of Francis Quadrangle. "We've just reseeded the Quad, and we hope new grass will grow in time for commencement May 6," she says.

A&S dean's office to move to Lowry Hall

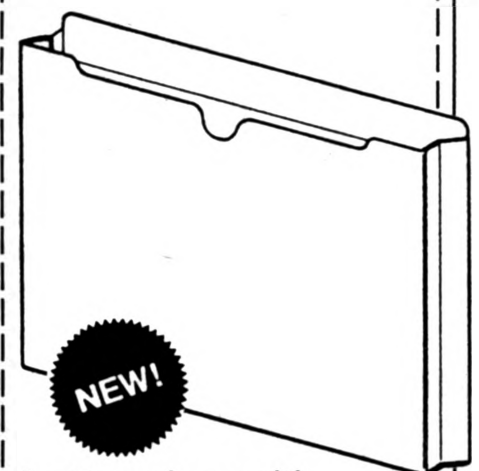

The dean's office for the College of Arts and Science is on the move. Starting April 26 and continuing through the 28th, the office, now in 210 Jesse, will move to 107 Lowry Hall. The Arts and Science Advising Center, also in 210 Jesse, will move to 317 Lowry Hall on May 1.

"We won't be shutting down totally," says Marla Applebaum, executive staff assistant, who expects no real break in service. Since the telephone numbers will remain the same, the offices may not be accessible by telephone while the services are being switched. For emergencies during this time, she suggests leaving a message at the Honors College at 882-0589.

The move, which has been planned for some time, will give the offices more working space. Mail should be sent to the dean's office at the new address starting April 28 and to the advising center starting May 1.

Two seminars to focus on menopause

Dispelling the myths and confusion about menopause will be the focus of two special seminars conducted by Mizzou health experts.

"The philosophy that we are going to promote at the seminars is that menopause is a normal developmental process in women's lives," says Ann Rosenow, associate dean in the School of Nursing. "For a long time, the health-care field has viewed menopause as something negative. Many in the medical community also view it as an estrogen deficiency situation and have treated menopause as a disease."

The two seminars will be 5:30 to 7:30 p.m., April 25 and May 23, at the University Hospital and Clinics' Women's Health Center at 3213 S. Providence Road. Rosenow; Maureen Brown, associate director of the center; and Ann Stapleton, a nurse practitioner at the center, will lead the seminars.

Rosenow says menopause seminars are a relatively new phenomenon, and this series is one of the first being held in cooperation with a comprehensive women's health center.

One common myth she hopes to dispel at the seminars is the notion that women become depressed during menopause. No evidence exists associating depression and menopause, she says. Although women may be depressed while going through menopause, it is most likely an extension of depression that occurred earlier, or it is related to other stressful events in their lives.

Rosenow and Brown also are conducting an extensive study of related factors associated with menopausal distress in women ages 45 to 55. They will examine the effects of lifestyle variables such as smoking and alcohol consumption on menopause.

The bulk of past menopausal research centered on women who experience symptoms, Rosenow says, adding there is a lack of research on the normal menopausal experience.

"What menopause represents is the doorway to the third stage of life for women," she says. "We want to help women have a good transition through menopause to ensure that the last one-third of life is happy, healthy and productive."

MIZZOU PEOPLE

The following staff members received divisional achievement awards at University Hospital and Clinics: HAROLD CALVIN, security officer II, Administrative and Support Services Division; GEORGIA FULKS, computer project manager, Financial and Engineering Services Division; EUNICE WRIGHT, LPN, Nursing Services Division; and NANCY ROPER, supervisor, Professional Services Division.

Two members of the Immunology Division within the Department of Medicine received funding from the Veterans Administration. SARA E. WALKER, professor of medicine and chief of the rheumatology section at Truman Veterans Hospital, received a VA Merit Review of $6,413 yearly through September 1991 for "Regulation of Responses to TD Antigens in Autoimmune PN Mice." ROBERT W. HOFFMAN, assistant professor of medicine, received a VA Career Development Award, totaling $338,961 through 1992, for "Immunogenetics of Mixed Connective Tissue Disease." He also received a VA Merit Review totaling $162,133 over three years for the same project.

YVONNE BALL was selected Employee of the Month for April at Printing and Records Management Services.

KAREN L. BENNETT, assistant professor of microbiology, received four research grants on three projects. A Rockefeller Foundation grant and a March of Dimes Basil O'Conner Starter Grant funds "Molecular Approaches to Germ Line Determination in Ascaris lumbricoides." She is working on "Germ Line-specific Gene Expression in Early Nematode Development" with funding from the Council for Tobacco Research. The MU-Weldon Spring Fund supports her project "Germ Line Determination in Early Nematode Development."

WILLIAM BERRY, professor of art, in March had drawings shown at the 12th annual North Dakota National Juried Exhibition in Minot, N.D., and at the seventh international Maine/Maritime Flatwork Exhibition at the University of Maine at Presque Isle. From April 6-28, one of Berry's drawings will be on display at the Braithwaite Fine Arts Gallery at Southern Utah State College in Cedar City, Utah.

THERESA BOLEY, surgery research associate, in January received the Ethicon Laureate Award for best presentation at the Southeastern Surgical Congress and Nurses Association meeting in Tarpon Springs, Fla. Her presentation was on autologous blood in cardiac surgery.

GORDON D. BROWN, professor and director of the health services management program, received the Public Service Award for 1989 from the American College of Health Care Administrators.

JOHN BULLION, professor of history, attended the annual meeting of the southeastern branch of the American Society for Eighteenth-Century Studies March 1-5 in Charleston, S.C.

SUZANNE BUUCK received the College of Agriculture Staff Recognition Award for March. She is a senior academic adviser in the dean's office.

BROOKE B. CAMERON, associate professor of art, had an etching "Oregon Beach" accepted in the 33rd national Hunterdon Art Center Print Exhibition March 19-April 30 in Clinton, N.J.

JIM CURLEY, photographer for Extension and Agricultural Information, received a National Award of Excellence in the Picture of the Year Competition in early March. Taken the night before the Iowa caucus, his picture, Gary's Iowa Hart to Heart Talk, won in the magazine division's Campaign '88 category. At the time the picture was taken, Curley was free-lancing for Agence France Presse, the French wire service.

PETER N. DAVIS, professor of law, presented a legislative briefing on riparian rights and interstate water allocation before the Missouri House Agriculture Committee Feb. 20 in Jefferson City. On Feb. 8, he discussed "1989 Legislative Proposals for Irrigator Water Rights" at the 22nd annual Irrigation Conference in Columbia.

ANIMESH DHAR, research associate, and SHIVENDRA SHUKLA, assistant professor of pharmacology, presented "Release of Human Surface Glycoprotein(s) by Phosphatidylinositol Specific Phospholipase C" in February during the American Society for Biochemistry and Molecular Biology meeting in San Francisco. Shukla received a grant for five years for $615,000 from the National Institutes of Health to conduct research on platelet activating factor stimulated phosphoinositide turnover in blood platelets.

CARL ESBECK, professor of law, presented a paper on "The Lemon Test: Should It Be Retained, Reformulated or Rejected?" March 30-April 1 at The University of Notre Dame during a conference on the religion clauses of the First Amendment.

MEHDI FARHANGI, associate professor of hematology/oncology, had an article "The Clinical Implications of Monoclonal Immunoglobulins" selected to be part of a continuing education program offered through the University of Connecticut. The article, which appeared in Seminars in Oncology in 1986, will be included as a suggested reading in the course Grand Rounds Immunology Lecture Series: IGIV in CLL and Multiple Myeloma.

THOMAS L. FELDBUSH, professor of microbiology, received a Veterans Administration Merit Review of $319,800 through 1992 for "Late Events in B-Cell Responses: Expression of Alkaline Phosphatase."

MARGARET A. FLYNN, professor emerita of family and community medicine, received a Service in Education Award for 1988 from the Missouri Pork Producers Association. The award is presented annually in recognition of a significant contribution to the consumer awareness of pork through education. Flynn's research on the effect of meats and eggs on blood cholesterol is recognized nationally.

Women can deal better with aging

Women are better able than men to deal with the increasing dependency that accompanies aging, a researcher at the University says.

"Dependency creeps in over a 20-year period," says Richard Hessler, professor of sociology and of family and community medicine in the School of Medicine. Hessler has interviewed independently-living, rural Missouri elderly people as part of a two-decade study, one of the most comprehensive studies of United States senior citizens ever undertaken.

"Women can deal with shades of dependency better than men," Hessler says.

More than 90 percent of the 112 people he interviewed in the third wave of the study were women, Hessler says, and most were in their 90s. The study began in 1966 with 1,700 independently-living, rural elderly in 64 culturally diverse towns in Missouri. The youngest was 65 at the time.

At the time of the second wave of interviews in 1974, 827 were still living, and 568 were interviewed again.

The ability of these women to cope with their advanced age may be attributed to their lifestyle, Hessler says.

"These are family-centered people," he says. "Most did not work outside the home and had quite a base of social networks by retirement age."

Social networks, which Hessler previously has shown to be more important than health as a predictor of mortality, are important to a person's attitudes about aging.

"A decrease in social networks is inevitable as one ages," he says. "There is a shrinking effect and a shift in substance and quality from contact with friends and organizations to more contact with the family."

For men, this shrinking effect hits hard at retirement. The men in the study tended to have work-related social contacts and a few close friends. Retirement brought these men a sudden loss in income and social contacts.

"The people who died (between interviews of the study) were men with no strong social support," Hessler says.

The message, the researcher says, is that "If you start (retirement) with a small handful of social networks, you're going to be one lonely person when you're 75."

What he found most remarkable while interviewing very old people was that none expressed the attitude that they were "too old" or that they wished they were dead.

"Being that old definitely has its drawbacks," he says, such as the loss of a "reference group" — people their own age. But he says there is tremendous ignorance by younger people about the elderly.

"There is no happiness in acquiring possessions," Hessler says. "These people have a whole different way of finding happiness: through human relationships."

Q&A

Q. Please tell us why the faculty and staff co-rec volleyball teams must pay a $25 team fee. Each team paid a $20 forfeit fee, which is understandable. Also, each participant who is a faculty or staff member or spouse paid a $15 user fee. When the intramural/recreation office was asked what the $25 team fee was for, they said it was to pay the referees who officiated the games, plus awards for the winners. The student co-rec teams, however, did not have to pay the $25 team fee. Who then pays for the referees for student games? Now that everyone pays the same amount to use the recreation center, why do faculty and staff teams still have to come up with an extra $25 per team?

A. Jim Irvin, interim vice chancellor for student services, says in addition to the $20-per-semester fee, all students pay a mandatory $3 intramural student activity fee each semester that is used to pay for referees and awards. Thus, although it appears that only faculty and staff teams pay an extra $25 per team, student activity fees generate the needed revenue for student teams.

Q. Has the exterior of the Hearnes Center changed dramatically since it opened? I have a souvenir drinking glass from 1971 that shows the building with what appears to be concrete stairs where there are now trees and shrubbery. Perhaps, since the Hearnes Center did not open until 1972, the souvenir glass depicted a drawing of original plans which were changed?

A. Phil Shocklee, assistant director of Campus Facilities, says there have been no dramatic exterior changes to the Hearnes Center since it opened. "I would like to see the glass, which apparently depicts an original drawing," he says. "The original drawings show stairs at the northeast and northwest corners of the building facing Stadium Boulevard where pedestrian ramps landscaped with trees and shrubs are located."

Q. Why are boards surrounding trees near University Hall and the golf course on Stadium Boulevard?

A. Gary Perkins, landscape architect at Facilities Management Services, says the boards are to protect the trees from damage while a new entrance to University Hall, the A.L. Gustin golf course and the MU Alumni Center is built. The new entrance is a result of the widening of Stadium Boulevard.

Q. I've noticed Mizzou Motors has vacated its location at 400 S. Providence Road. Are there any plans for the University to buy the land and return it to a green area?

A. The University purchased this property in 1983, subject to a long-term lease which expires July 31, says Jackie Jones, director of Business Services. As soon as the lease expires, the University plans to tear down the building and landscape the area.

Q. Once again, officials responsible for operating the snack bar in Clark Hall have inconvenienced more than 200 staff members who work in the Lewis and Clark complex. Unlike students and faculty, these employees, who make up the majority of customers, are required to work during breaks in the school year, and many of them depend on the "Lunch Landing" for coffee and lunches. Although a petition was circulated, the request that the snack bar remain open during spring break was ignored.

It is my understanding that the person who works at the snack bar is laid off during the break periods. Is she not an employee of the University, and does she not have the same rights and protections as the rest of us?

A. Russell F. Meyer, assistant director of Campus Dining Services, says the department closes some of its facilities during school breaks to minimize expenses, but adds, "We always leave one cash operation open to provide food service for the campus community. The decision about which operations to close is based on prior sales for the period in question. If the feeling is that one operation can handle the volume expected during a particular time, then probably only one operation would remain open."

Meyer says he and Steve Spaur, manager of snack bars, are in the process of setting up focus groups concerning the academic snack bars. He and Spaur hope the groups will help them determine operating hours and food service needs. Such a group already exists for the Memorial Union and Brady Commons food service operations.

Meyer also says snack bar attendants were not laid off during the March break. Employees were offered work in other cash operations or they could take vacation time.

Validation of faculty efforts — "There is no harder-working group of public servants in Missouri than the MU faculty," Monroe says. He has asked the Faculty Council to devise a plan to validate workloads; such an effort could provide, for instance, profiles of teaching, research and service responsibilities for each faculty member. "The fact that the public does not understand our workload seriously hampers our efforts to seek additional funds for faculty salaries," Monroe says. "This is a great opportunity for the faculty to be proactive on an important issue: demonstrating the valuable services they perform in teaching, research and public service."

Gordon Kimber, professor of agronomy and chairman of Faculty Council, says the council will establish a task force to decide the best means of providing validation. "There is no timetable yet because we have not discussed the issue," he adds.

Academic streamlining — The chancellor has asked Provost Lois DeFleur, working with the faculty and deans, to review various components of academic offerings. He says MU should delete undergraduate courses that have not been taught in the past two years, or graduate courses that have not been taught in the past three; should provide justification for the continuance of degree programs that have averaged fewer than 10 undergraduate degrees per year in the last five years, or two master's degrees and one doctoral degree annually; and should encourage the restructuring of some programs — that is, removing departmental barriers — when a probable outcome is increased interdisciplinary scholarly activity.

"By the end of the fall semester, I expect we will have made progress in reducing the number of courses, degree offerings and, possibly in some cases, programs," Monroe says. "As a result, I hope to achieve improved quality. In addition, MU should realize increased efficiency and savings, with the financial resources gained going to salaries and wages in those programs deemed most essential to our mission." He emphasized that the goal of the review is not a reduction in the number of faculty members.

An emphasis on quality is at the heart of the plan. "There is only one MU," Monroe says. "Our University will survive and thrive only if we preserve and enhance its reputation for academic quality."
