MU unites for charity

University organizers set $190,000 goal for 1989 United Way campaign.

For Robert Bailey, chairman of MU's portion of the annual United Way campaign, the UW slogan "Thanks to You, It Works," says it all.

"We plan to provide the faculty, staff and students with a good understanding of the type of agencies served by the United Way, and how they affect our community," says Bailey, assistant dean and director of development at the School of Law.

With a goal of $190,000, the University campaign will kick off with a breakfast at 7:30 a.m. Sept. 25 in N201-202 Memorial Union.

Mizzou leads giving among universities in the Big Eight, says Patsy Higgins, who manages the campaign office and is manager of business and fiscal operations in Business Services.

Working with Bailey in leading the University campaign is associate chairwoman Chris Koukola, assistant vice chancellor for University Relations, and Chancellor Haskell Monroe as honorary chairman.

Ruth Brent, associate professor of housing and interior design, manages academic region I. Her region has a goal of $53,060, which is made up of the School of Medicine, the College of Engineering, the School of Law, the College of Home Economics, the School of Journalism, the College of Business and Public Administration, the School of Library and Informational Science, the College of Education, the Graduate School and research centers.

For academic region II, led by Robert E. Thomas, director of Extension and Agricultural Information, the goal is $49,400. His region includes the College of Agriculture, the College of Arts and Science, University Extension, the College of Veterinary Medicine and the School of Nursing.

Jackie Jones, director of Business Services, leads the administrative region. With a goal of $32,110, her region comprises Student Services, Alumni Relations and Development, Institutional Research and Planning, the Chancellor's and Provost's offices, Intercollegiate Athletics, Administrative Services, Business Services, Computing Services, Campus Facilities, University Relations and Libraries.

The University Hospital and Clinics region has co-chairmen: Tom Carter, assistant director of administrative support services at the hospital, and John Williams, manager of obstetrics and gynecology at Green Meadows Clinic. Their region's goal is $20,520. It consists of administrative and financial divisions, Nursing Operations and Planning, Professional Services, Medical Practice Income Plan and University Physicians.

Arvarh Strickland, associate vice president for Academic Affairs for the UM System, directs the UM System region. With a goal of $15,720, his region includes Business and Financial Services, Personnel and Staff Relations, Academic Affairs, Computing and Informational Systems, State Historical Society, President's Office, Board of Curators, General Counsel, Treasurer's Office and Auditing.

Under the direction of Robert Daniel, chairman of the retirees advisory committee, the retirees region will pursue a goal of $19,190. All Mizzou and UM System retirees living in Boone County comprise his region.

20 to receive awards

Alumni Association honors distinguished faculty and alumni.

The MU Alumni Association will present its Distinguished Service Award, Distinguished Faculty Award and 18 Faculty-Alumni Awards at 7 p.m. Sept. 22 at a banquet at the Ramada Inn, 1100 Vandiver Drive.

The Distinguished Service Award will be given to Don Walsworth, president of the Walsworth Publishing Co. Inc. in Marceline, Mo. The award, the association's highest honor for an alumnus or alumna, recognizes outstanding service by an individual whose sustained efforts and support have added to the excellence of Mizzou.

Walsworth's company sponsors several sporting events at MU, and he is active in the Medical School Outreach Program and the Business School Management Advisory Board. He received a Faculty-Alumni Award in 1980.

Receiving the Distinguished Faculty Award is Hugh E. Stephenson Jr., the John A. Growdon Distinguished Professor of Surgery and chief of staff at University Hospital and Clinics. The award recognizes a faculty member whose sustained efforts in teaching, research and service have added to the excellence of Mizzou. The award also places special emphasis on the faculty member's relationship with students.

Stephenson was influential in establishing MU's four-year Medical School and the J. Otto Lottes Health Sciences Library. He has served the Medical School as a researcher and interim dean. He received a Faculty-Alumni Award in 1974.

Faculty-Alumni Awards honor faculty for their work as teachers, researchers and administrators. Alumni are recognized for their potential and actual professional accomplishments and service to their alma mater. Recipients are pictured at left.

SPECIAL MEETING FOR COUNCIL

Faculty Council will discuss assessment at a special meeting at 3 p.m. Sept. 20 in S110 Memorial Union.

Addressing the council will be Deputy Chancellor Gerald Brouder; Peter Raven, a Board of Curators member from St. Louis; and Richard Wallace, vice president of Academic Affairs for the UM System. The meeting is open.

WATCH THAT NITROGEN!

Autumn is the best time to fertilize a lawn. But don't put on too much nitrogen at once, says Dave Minner, MU extension turf specialist.

"If you don't soil test, I'd go with a fertilizer that has a 3-1-2 ratio of nitrogen to phosphorous to potash — something like 18-6-12," Minner says. "Then I'd make two applications: one in mid-to-late September and one between Oct. 15 and Thanksgiving.

"Remember, you don't want to apply more than one pound of actual nitrogen per 1,000 square feet at any one time." With questions, call Minner at 882-7511.

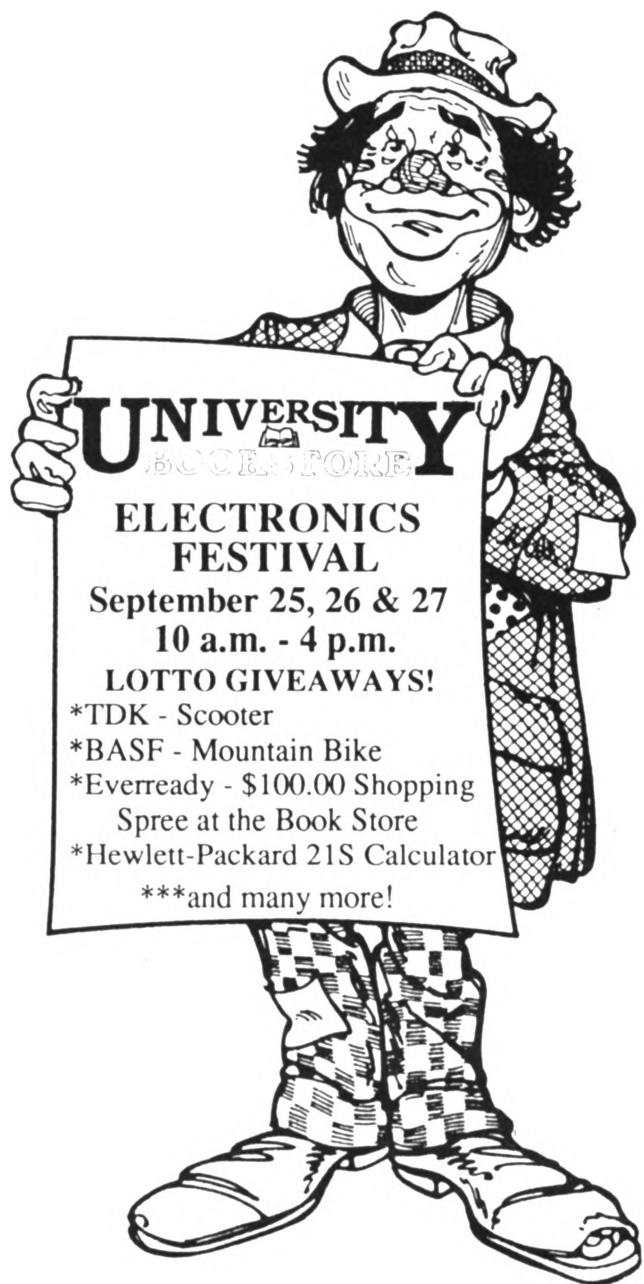

RENEW YOUR BOOKS BY MAIL

Faculty and staff now may use the mail to renew books from Ellis Library.

"Upon receipt of an overdue notice, the employee can write 'Please renew' on the notice and mail it back to Circulation, 102 Ellis," says Dean Schmidt, interim director of Libraries. Library staff will extend the loan period and notify the employee of the new due dates.

Books may be renewed only twice by mail. With questions, call 882-7315.

King day discussed

Staff Advisory Council discussed a proposal Sept. 14 that would make the birthday of Martin Luther King Jr. a University holiday.

The Board of Curators is expected to act on the proposal later this year. The curators are considering adding King's birthday as a paid holiday in lieu of one of four personal days University employees receive each year.

The council agreed to have Chairwoman Suzanne Schoonover, administrative assistant in Agricultural Engineering, write a letter to Chancellor Haskell Monroe explaining the group's position. Schoonover said a consensus supports the concept of a holiday honoring King, but not at the expense of a personal day.

"A lot of people have commented to me that they are not in favor of having a personal day or a vacation day taken away from them," Schoonover said.

Pauletta King, council vice chairwoman and a supervisor in Accounting Services, said the issue is generating a lot of staff discussion. "My phone has been ringing on this one more than any other issue," she said.

Council members also heard a report from

Lisa Wimmenauer, administrative associate in Business Services and chairwoman of the staff benefits committee. The committee has been considering ways to poll staff on the need for University-sponsored day care facilities.

Wimmenauer said the committee recommended that the council not sponsor a day care survey aimed only at staff. "We should offer our assistance to the chancellor to form one campuswide group to look at day care instead of having different groups looking at it from different angles," she said.

Staff Advisory Council

WORKING FOR YOU

In other action, the council:

- was informed that staff recognition awards have been increased from $750 to $1,000. The awards are given to an employee in each of the four staff categories during Staff Recognition Week in April.

- heard that several guests would speak at upcoming council meetings. Athletic Director Dick Tamburo will attend the Sept. 28 meeting. A.J. Schnack, president of the Missouri Students Association, will be at the Oct. 12 meeting. State representatives Chris Kelly and Ken Jacob of Columbia will attend the Oct. 26 meeting.

Faculty urge separate computers

Faculty Council went on record Sept. 14 in endorsing a plan to purchase a new academic and business computing system for MU, separate from any operated by the University of Missouri System.

Gordon Kimber, council chairman and professor of agronomy, noted that discussions over purchase of a new computer system have been under way for several weeks. "There will be more meetings next week," Kimber told the council. "I think we should offer our opinion."

Kimber said Mizzou was considering the purchase of an IBM 3090-180E series computer system this summer, when UM System officials suggested that a larger unit, an IBM 3090-300E series, be purchased and shared by the two concerns. "But it appears that this would give them control," Kimber said. "And I believe most faculty members on this campus would want us to have control over our own computer. This is another case of the System not allowing this campus to develop to its full potential."

Bill Plummer, director of Campus Computing, told the council that the shared computer system would cost about $4.9 million, while a 3090-180E unit for MU and a 3090-200E unit for the UM System would cost a total of $5.2 million. "So there's not really that much of a cost difference," he added.

Kimber stressed that the 180E series is a strong computer. "It would increase our capacity 2 1/2 times over what we have now," he said. "But it's not just that. It would enable us to address academic computing needs that cannot be addressed now. It could put us among the top 100 universities in the country in terms of academic computing."

The council voted to endorse the plan for separate computer systems, and Kimber said he would send a letter to Chancellor Haskell Monroe, with copies to IBM and to UM System President C. Peter Magrath.

On other matters, the council:

- was urged to submit nominations for honorary degree recipients for 1990. Walter Daniel, director of the College of General Studies and chairman of the honorary degrees committee, said the deadline for nominations is Oct. 31. "We would especially encourage the nomination of strong minority candidates," he told the group.

- learned that Faculty Council will meet with the Board of Curators on Oct. 13. The board is scheduled to meet at MU Oct. 12 and 13, and its session with the council will likely take place over breakfast, Kimber said. "Let us know if you want to discuss a particular topic, or if you want it to be a general discussion of issues," he added.

A warm welcome

Black Faculty, Staff Organization holds reception for new black faculty members.

Members of MU's Black Faculty and Staff Organization welcomed new black faculty members at a reception Sept. 13 at the Chancellor's Residence.

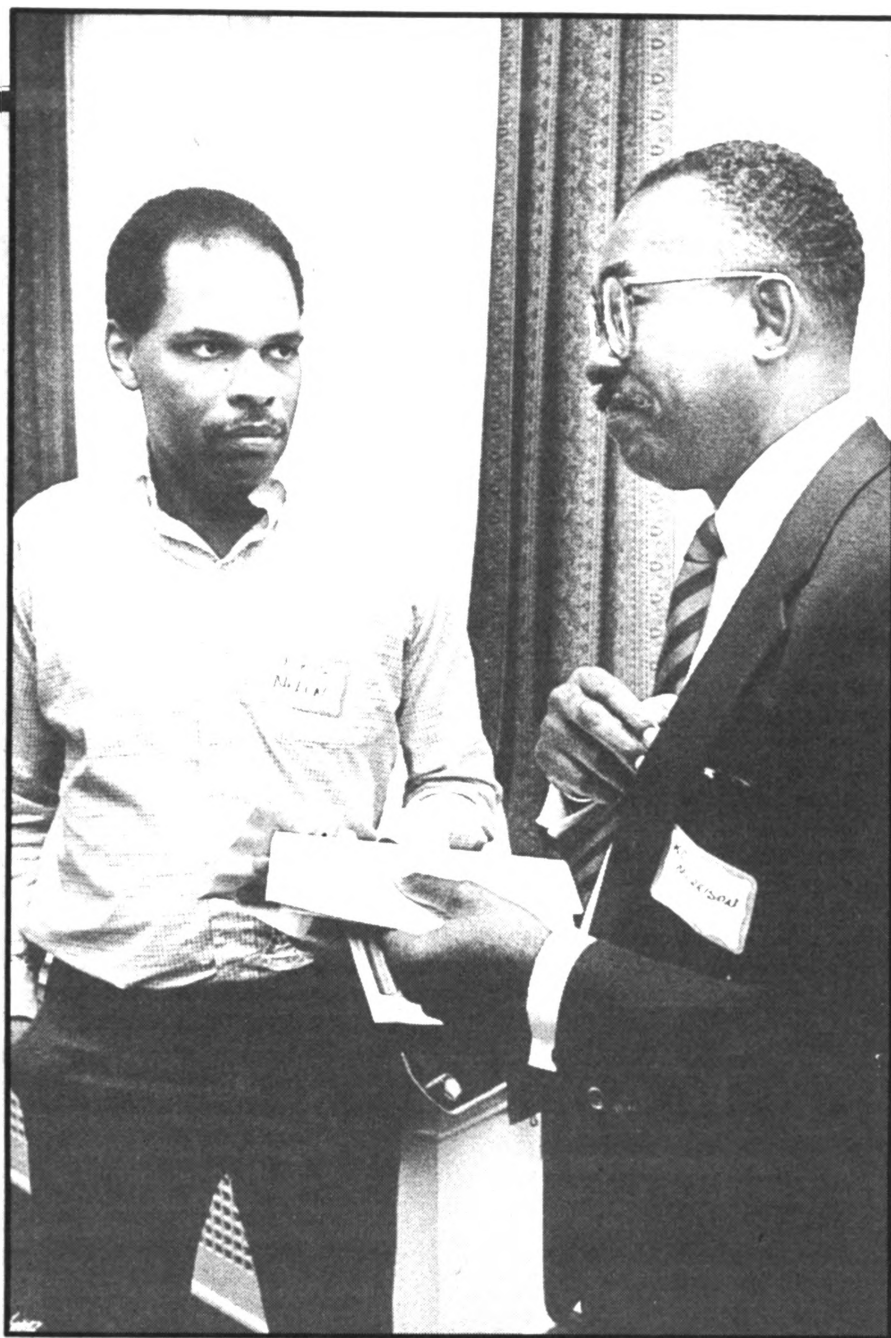

Chancellor Haskell Monroe told the group he was encouraged by an increase in enrollment of black students at Mizzou, from 808 last year to 875 this fall. "It is not a huge increase, but I am proud it is going in the right direction," Monroe said. "We will need your help and advice to keep this going."

KC Morrison, vice provost for Minority Affairs and Faculty Development, told organization members that MU faces a number of important issues. "The University of Missouri-Columbia is like a number of other universities," he said. "It is groping with a wide range of issues and opportunities, trying to sort out an appropriate way to integrate minority people into the full University community."

Carolyn Dorsey, associate professor of education and president of the Black Faculty and Staff Organization, says the reception gave members a chance "to meet and get to know the new people on campus." She says the group was formed to communicate the concerns and interests of black faculty, staff and students and to advocate increased recruitment of blacks at MU.

"One purpose of the organization is to call attention to the impact certain policies can have on a certain group," Dorsey says. "We do have issues we deal with. Last year we were very concerned about the raising of admission standards. We were concerned that black students could be shut out who could be successful here."

Charles Sampson, associate dean of the Graduate School, says 49 minority graduate students are enrolled at Mizzou this fall, compared with 30 last year. In addition, the number of minority professional students has increased from 18 to 26.

Since last Oct. 31, MU has hired 11 blacks for full-time teaching and research positions. They are: Yves Colon, journalism instructor; Lillian Dunlap, assistant professor of journalism; O. Kevin Faulkner, assistant coach, Intercollegiate Athletics; Robert Hinton, visiting assistant professor of history; Kenneth Hornbuckle, intern, Department of Veterinary Medicine and Surgery; Marion Latimore, assistant coach, Intercollegiate Athletics; Adiel Mbabu, research associate, Department of Rural Sociology; Gregory McDonald, assistant professor of microbiology; Johnetta Morrison, assistant professor of human development and family studies; Charles Nilon, assistant professor of wildlife biology; and Cyd Thomas-Williams, post-sophomore fellow, Pathology Department.

Race relations forum set

Mizzou's Cultural Heritage Center has received a $1,485 grant from the Missouri Humanities Council to present "The Sharecroppers' Voice," a symposium on race relations.

The event will be at 2 p.m. Oct. 14 at the new Corner Playhouse at University Avenue and Hiitt Street. It commemorates the 1939 Missouri highway demonstration, which saw more than 1,200 sharecroppers and tenant farmers stage a protest over exploitive economic and working conditions. The symposium will feature black labor activist and folk singer John Handcox, whose poetry and music mirrored the mood of the period leading up to the uprising. Handcox, who is in his 80s, will perform some of his music.

Also participating on the panel will be Donald Lance, professor of English; David Roediger, associate professor of history; Arvarh Strickland, associate vice president for Academic Affairs for the UM System and professor of history; and Professor Emeritus Archie Green of the University of Texas. With questions, call 882-6296.

Monroe is finalist for post

Chancellor Haskell Monroe has been selected as one of five finalists for the position of president of the University of Florida at Gainesville. Interviews will be conducted soon, and a decision is expected in early November.

"I did not seek nomination for this post, but naturally I am honored to be considered among the national pool of candidates to lead this great university," Monroe says.

"Let me, however, take this opportunity to underline my complete commitment to the University of Missouri-Columbia and to the people of the state served by MU for 150 years. I feel privileged to lead the state's largest and most complete university, one that attracts Missouri's best and brightest students and is home to many of the nation's most distinguished faculty, dedicated staff and loyal alumni."

The University of Florida at Gainesville, with 35,000 students, is the flagship institution among Florida's nine public universities. Another finalist for the job is Marguerite Ross Barnett, chancellor at UM-St. Louis.

'New' Bingham art gallery features exhibit of works by former members of Mizzou's faculty.

When Missouri painter George Caleb Bingham was selected the University's first professor of art in 1877, he started a long tradition at Mizzou of the artist as teacher.

That tradition is highlighted by an exhibition of art work by former members of the MU art faculty. The exhibit includes portraits and engravings by Bingham as well as 40 works by more than 30 former MU art educators.

The art work is on display through Sept. 24 at the George Caleb Bingham Art Gallery, formerly the Fine Arts Gallery. Chancellor Haskell Monroe formally renamed the gallery at a dedication ceremony Sept. 10. Monroe shared the podium with Mizzou theater student Bob Adams, who presented a dramatic reading of a Bingham essay on the ideal of art.

The exhibit took nearly a year to put together, says Robert Bussabarger, professor of art and chairman of the committee that developed the display. "We wanted to have a good variety," Bussabarger says. "It took a lot of work finding out where these items were."

The George Caleb Bingham Art Gallery

Grounds crew, Quad Squad members honored

Thirty-five members of the Maintenance and Grounds Department, along with members of the "We Love the Quad Squad," were honored with a breakfast Sept. 13 at the Chancellor's Residence.

"We want to thank you for the work you do," Chancellor Haskell Monroe told the group. "So many people have told me that the campus has never looked better, and I believe you are to thank for that. Especially, the people who have worked to restore the Quad deserve two gold stars."

Members of the Maintenance and Grounds Department on hand were LeRoy Bealmear, director; Tom Flood, superintendent of grounds; Hugh Barnes and Charles Paxton, supervisors; Frank Cheatom, Ken Mason, Gene Nelson, Steve Parker, Don Quinn and Jim Via, lead groundskeepers.

Bill Adkisson, Roger Casadei, Harold Ehler, Bill George, Jim Gibbs, Ronnie Jefferson, Rick Jones, Barb Keith, Scott Keith, Bob Poe, Connie Sharp, Ralph Stull, Herman Klippel, Jim Turner and Harris Wiggs, groundskeepers; John Stone, groundskeeper II; Louis Allen and Leon Grant, equipment operators; J.W. Cook, Harold Laroc and

Robert Smith, drivers; Marvin Grant and Steve Held, trades helpers; and Kermon Neff and Tim Phillips, small engine mechanics.

Maintenance and Grounds is a component of Campus Facilities. Also present were Alan Warden, assistant vice chancellor and director of Campus Facilities; and Kee Groshong, vice chancellor of Administrative Services.

Members of the Quad Squad on hand were Chris Koukola, assistant vice chancellor for University Relations, chairwoman; Ann Patton, research assistant in Institutional Research and Planning; Shirley Delbert, coordinator in Visitor Relations; Patsy Higgins, manager of business and fiscal operations in Business Services; Emily Claassen, communications coordinator in the College of Engineering; Terry Jordan, editor of Mizzou Weekly; and Phil Shocklee, assistant director of Campus Facilities.

In an effort that began in April, Quad Squad members distributed "I Love the Quad" stickers and urged walkers to stay on the concrete. Chain fences and signs were put up, and the dirt paths were seeded. As a result, green grass covers Francis Quadrangle once again.

"We must remember that the University exists for the students," Monroe told the group. "If the students find this a friendly and pleasant place, they will do a better job. You are helping to make this a friendlier and more pleasant place."

Approximately half of the 45 paintings, drawings, prints and sculptures came from private collections. The rest were loaned by the Museum of Art and Archaeology, the State Historical Society, the School of Law and the Memorial Union.

As a footnote to the retrospective, researchers documented the history of Mizzou's Art Department from its earliest days, when Bingham taught art to four students in a studio in the English and Art School, a frame building on the northwest corner of campus. "Obviously, George Caleb Bingham is the star performer because his work is compelling," Bussabarger says. "Aesthetically, the works in this exhibit are quite varied."

While Bingham's work might stand out, there is a variety of other art work representing the 122 years the school has provided art education at Mizzou. There are reproductions of anatomical drawings done by Conrad Diehl, who took over from Bingham in 1879 as MU's second professor of art; landscapes of the Colorado Rockies by John Ankeny, professor of art from 1901 to 1935; and a portrait and pencil drawings by Fred Shane, who retired in 1972 after spending 42 years on the art faculty.

The exhibit is sponsored in part by MU's Sesquicentennial Celebration. Hours of the gallery, at the southwest corner of University Avenue and Hiitt Street, are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday and 2 to 4 p.m. Sunday.

Board OKs additions

The Board of Curators, meeting Sept. 8 and 9 in Kansas City, hired an architect to design $6 million in additions and renovations to the School of Journalism. Curators also approved an architect's preliminary drawings for a $17.5 million addition to the College of Veterinary Medicine.

The board hired Shaughnessy Fickel and Scott Architects Inc. of Kansas City to prepare a preliminary study of the journalism additions at a fee of $35,000. The firm also is to provide professional services for the project at a fee of 7.5 percent of construction costs.

The additions are to include the Lee Hills building, made possible through a Knight Foundation challenge gift of $2 million in honor of Lee Hills, former MU student and chairman emeritus of Knight-Ridder Inc. Although a definite location for the new building has not been determined, Associate Dean George Kennedy says the assumption is that it will be built on the north side of the existing journalism school complex at Ninth and Elm streets.

"The building will primarily be the new home of the Columbia Missourian," Kennedy says. "However, it is expected to include other things, such as a new and expanded area for our photojournalism sequence and probably some of the professional programs, such as Investigative Reporters and Editors and the Penney-Missouri Program."

The Lee Hills building is only part of the school's master plan of renovation, Kennedy says. Additional money will be used to modernize the older structures and tie them together with newer buildings.

The board also approved plans prepared by the Christner Partnership Inc. of St. Louis, in association with FLAD & Associates of Madison, Wis., for the proposed veterinary medicine building addition. The two-story teaching hospital will be built just south of the college's administration building. The General Assembly has approved line-item funding for the addition, although the majority of the money will come from sales of a bond issue.

In other business, curators: learned of plans to continue efforts that have resulted in more than $30 million in internal reallocation over the past four years. The University System plans to redirect more than $4.6 million from lower to higher priority programs in 1989-90. Reallocation in fiscal 1990 will include phasing out the Sinclair Farm research facility. That move will save nearly $75,000 in fiscal 1990, and it could yield more than $300,000 in savings as research commitments are fulfilled over the next three years, UM System President C. Peter Magrath said.

*were told that external funding to the UM System increased 10 percent in fiscal 1989. The University System received $112 million in gifts, grants and contracts.

*were told the University System generated and spent more money in fiscal 1989 than was budgeted for general operations. The UM System budget was $399.5 million, but $408.8 million was raised and $405 million was spent. Higher-than-expected income from a variety of non-state sources was credited to the revenue increase, while expenditures from the general operations fund for necessary capital improvements were blamed for spending exceeding the budget.

*postponed discussion of designating Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday as an official University holiday. Richard Wallace, vice president for Academic Affairs, said more time is needed to study the proposal.

Mizzou honors housekeepers

MU's Building Services kicked off National Housekeepers Week Sept. 11 by honoring employees who have exemplary attendance records.

Building Services workers, including custodians, window and wall washers, movers and sign painters, attended one of two awards ceremonies held that day. The 190 employees in Building Services take care of nearly 3.5 million square feet of office space in more than 100 buildings on campus.

Custodians Paul Brown, Ronald Poe, Jesse Logan and Louise Coats all received plaques to commemorate 18 months of perfect attendance at work. In addition, each received a $25 gift certificate for a meal for two.

Q&A

Q. My telephone carries a recorded message through the VMX (Voice Message Exchange) system. But it continually frustrates me, as it only rings two or three times before the phone shuts off and the message is transmitted to the caller. Several times I've been in another part of the office and have run for my phone after hearing it ring, only to arrive too late. Is there any way the VMX system can be altered to allow more rings — five or six, for instance — before the message comes on? How much would it cost to do this?

A. The timing for telephones to forward calls into the VMX system is a campuswide parameter and is set between three and four rings, says Beverly Blackwell, manager of Telecommunications.

"We've had many requests to shorten as well as lengthen the time before calls are forwarded to voice mail," Blackwell says. "Since the industry average indicates most business calls are answered within three rings, we believe the current timing is an acceptable medium."

Blackwell says if the employee is in an office area where other phones are located, using the "call pick-up" or the "directed call pick-up" features should alleviate the problem. For assistance on specific problems or for more information, call Telecommunications at 882-1600.

Q. How is the search progressing for a new dean of the College of Business and Public Administration?

A. Provost Lois DeFleur says the search is continuing. "The search committee, with some new members and with Professor Lori Franz of management as chairwoman, has met and is already working hard on this recruitment. The search will continue during this academic year," DeFleur says.

Help Us Celebrate the Opening

Campus Computing invites University faculty and staff to an open house celebrating the opening of the new computing lab in the Arts & Science building.

Please join us on Thursday, September 21 from 10:00 am until 4:00 pm in room 10 of the Arts & Science building for a day of demonstrations and refreshments.

We'll have tours of the new site, demonstrations of a variety of computer applications as well as the adaptive computing equipment.

Brief sessions will be held in room 41 A&S on an "Orientation to Campus Computing" at 1:40 pm and an "Introduction to the Adaptive Computing Technology Center" at 2:40 pm.

We look forward to seeing you any time during the day.
