Ensuring fairness

New military duty policy is the first for the University since the Vietnam War era.

The University has a new policy to ensure that students being called into active military duty before the end of a semester receive fair treatment. It's the first time MU has needed such a policy since the Vietnam War.

"When we say fair, this applies to finances as well as academics," says Gary Smith, director of Admissions and Registrar. "For instance, we would hate to see students lose grant money or other forms of aid."

The Faculty Council approved the plan Jan. 31. Students called to active military duty as part of a reserve or national guard unit during an academic term have three options:

- They may choose to withdraw from school, in which case they will be given a full refund of all academic fees. No course numbers, titles or grades will appear on the student's academic record.

- A student and instructor can consider the use of the incomplete grade under appropriate circumstances. The time such students spend in active duty will not be included in the one year's time allowed for the removal of an "I" grade.

- A student and instructor may choose for the student to complete or have completed all the course work and receive a grade before the student reports for active duty. This arrangement is subject to the approval of the professor.

Not all options apply in all cases, notes Irv Cockriel, professor of education and chairman of the council's student affairs committee. The third, for instance, would work only near the end of the semester. "And receiving the incomplete could save the student money and all that class time later," he says. "But again, you'd have to go through the bulk of the semester to make that option work for you." Students withdrawing now would be advised to take the first option.

No such options exist for University employees called

Public meetings set for provost hopefuls

Four candidates for provost will interview on campus this month. The four will be interviewed by Chancellor Haskell Monroe and the provost search committee, made up of faculty, staff, students and alumni. The University community is invited to public meetings that will include a presentation by the candidates and a question-answer session.

Marilyn V. Yarbrough, dean of law at the University of Tennessee, will be on campus today, and an open meeting will be at 2:30 p.m. in 5 Law Building. Gerald T. Brouder, deputy chancellor and interim provost, will interview Feb. 12, and an open meeting is scheduled at 11 a.m. that day in the Memorial Union Auditorium.

The two other candidates will be on campus later in the month. Times and dates will be announced.

into military service. The School of Medicine, University Hospital and Clinics and the Truman Veterans Hospital all have faculty and staff in the reserves, and a total of 68 have been called into active duty. This includes 18 from the School of Medicine, 20 from University Hospital and 30 from the veterans hospital.

"Basically, it's a case of fewer people working harder," says Herbert S. Goldberg, associate dean of research and academic affairs at the School of Medicine. "We're meeting all our classes and we're doing everything we need to do. But it has put a strain on us."

Goldberg says most of those called are serving at bases in the United States, replacing the regular base medical personnel who have been assigned to the Gulf. "It will get worse if there are casualties from the war, because more of our people will be called," he adds. "But we'll manage."

Ted Turner, lead fire inspector for MU, won the Chancellor's Staff Recognition Award in the crafts/maintenance category in 1990.

To the rescue

Award-winning fire inspector says University's recognition event gives staff a boost.

Ted Turner can really jangle some nerves when he's on the job. Turner is MU's lead fire inspector, and he spends every Thursday crisscrossing the Mizzou campus, ringing fire alarms in every building to make sure they're working.

There's more to his job than simply testing 86 different fire alarms each week. Turner is on call around the clock as a troubleshooter for malfunctioning alarm systems. Twice a year he checks all 3,500 fire extinguishers at MU. He also works with construction inspectors to develop fire safety plans for new buildings, and he routinely inspects all campus buildings to check for fire hazards.

One of the biggest cases of jitters during his 30 years at the University came last April. As one of four winners of MU's Staff Recognition Awards, Turner had to get up in front of a crowd at Jesse Auditorium to accept the award. But the recognition for a job well done was more than worth a few nervous moments.

"It was quite an honor. It's nice to know that people do recognize your work," Turner says. "There's so many people on campus that sometimes you can think your work goes unnoticed."

And that pat on the back came from Turner's peers. The awards are sponsored by the Staff Advisory Council, and from beginning to end they're an effort of staff members on campus. Faculty, staff and students can nominate a staff member for an award. Then a volunteer committee of staff from around campus reads through the stacks of nominations and interviews the candidates to narrow the list to four winners — one from each of the four job classifications on campus.

Each winner receives an award of $1,000, and the ceremony to honor them is the highlight of the annual Staff Recognition Week, which will be held the week of April 8 this year.

Nomination forms were sent out last week through campus mail, and the Staff Council is asking for nominations of staff members that help make a difference at MU. The forms should be completed and returned to the Staff Council office at 305 Jesse Hall.

In addition to the four recognition awards, nominations are requested for the Barbara S. Uehling Award for Administrative Excellence and for the Mick Deaver Memorial Award. The Deaver Award recognizes a staff member for fostering good relations with students.

But the Staff Council is asking for help. Volunteers are needed to help read the nominations and to interview the candidates. The readings are scheduled for Feb. 27 and 28, and the interviews for March 5. Volunteers also are needed to help with the other events scheduled during the special week. To find out more about helping out with the awards, or any of the other special events to honor MU staff, call 882-4269.

PROMOTION, TENURE TO BE DISCUSSED

The MU chapter of the American Association of University Professors will sponsor an informational session this week for candidates in the academic job market. The event, "Principles and Procedures of Promotion and Tenure," will be at 3:40 p.m. Feb. 8 in 22 Tate Hall.

Gil Porter, professor of English and chapter president, says the session will be directed to graduate students and to instructors and assistant professors looking to move up in their departments.

HOW DO YOU GET THE INFORMATION?

Those interested in the public's access to information — or the lack of it — in connection with the war in the Persian Gulf may want to attend a symposium next week sponsored by the School of Library and Informational Science. The event will be at 4 p.m. Feb. 14 in Townsend Auditorium.

Speakers for "The Middle East Crisis: Implications for Information Access" include Dean Mills, dean of journalism; Mary F. Lenox, dean of library and informational science; William Fisch, professor of law; Mary Jo Neitz, acting director of women's studies; Diane VomSaal, director of the Program for Excellence in Teaching; and Manouchehr Hosseinzadeh, a doctoral candidate in journalism. With questions, call 882-4546.

POSTER CONTEST HONORS BLACKS

Win prizes including a $30 gift certificate from Dillard's, meals from the campus McDonald's and 32-ounce drinks from Campus Dining Services by taking part in a poster contest at Ellis Library.

The contest, a part of Black History Month, challenges you to identify 16 black Americans in the poster. The poster, contest rules and a list of prizes are located on the first-floor concourse of the library. The contest ends Feb. 28.

DEADLINE NEAR FOR FELLOWSHIPS

The deadline is Feb. 8 to nominate faculty for the new William T. Kemper Fellowships for Teaching Excellence.

Regular full-time faculty who have been at MU at least three years and have demonstrated outstanding teaching ability are eligible. This year, 10 Kemper Fellows will be selected, each receiving an award of $10,000. Faculty, departments, schools or colleges, and recognized campus organizations may nominate individuals. For information about the format nominations should take, contact Vice Provost Jeff Chinn's office at 882-6598.

Council amends academic calendar for winter 1992

The 1992 winter semester will begin Jan. 21, the Tuesday after Martin Luther King Jr. Day, according to a change in the academic calendar approved Jan. 31 by the Faculty Council.

Russell Zguta, professor and chairman of history and chairman of the council's academic affairs committee, said his group was suggesting the change after receiving complaints on the proposed calendar. The 1992 winter semester was scheduled to begin on Friday, Jan. 17, and resume the next Tuesday, following the King holiday on Monday, Jan. 20. That is similar to the calendar observed this semester.

"But everyone has been urging us to start the semester after the King holiday," Zguta told the council. Under the amended plan, Stop Day will be on Saturday, May 9; final examinations will begin Monday, May 11, and commencement will be on Sunday, May 17. The council approved the changes without dissent.

The council also approved, without dissent, an active duty policy for MU students called into the military during the course of the semester (See story on Page 1). The plan was written by Gary Smith, director of Admissions and Registrar, and forwarded by the council's student affairs committee.

In other matters, the council: ■ heard a report from David McIntire, vice chancellor for Student Affairs, concerning possible campus consequences from the war in the Persian Gulf. "We don't know where students stand on things like major demonstrations, rallies, or the whole notion of stopping school," McIntire told the council.

"If the war continues, the council may need to address these issues. We don't have the answers now, but we should be thinking about this."

■ endorsed the concept of a new Environmental Affairs Council, proposed by council member Shankha Banerji, professor of civil engineering. The group would be made up of faculty, staff and students and would address various environmental concerns, Banerji said. The council referred the matter to its special projects committee.

■ briefly discussed a tax increase-education reform package introduced in the Legislature Jan. 24 by state Sen. James Mathewson, D-Sedalia (See related story on Page 3). Council Chairman Allen Hahn, professor of veterinary medicine and surgery, noted that Mathewson and others welcome comments on the package. "I'm sure we'll be talking more about this in the future," Hahn added.

University System may need to freeze wages, raise tuition

The University of Missouri System may need to raise tuition more than previously expected for the 1991-92 academic year to meet state funding shortfalls, UM System President C. Peter Magrath told the Board of Curators at a meeting Jan. 31 in Jefferson City. He added that a freeze on faculty and staff salaries is another possibility.

In July, the board approved a 5.8 tuition increase for the 1991-92 academic year. But tuition may need to be increased by as much as 12 percent to meet the system's financial needs, Magrath said. "The bottom line is that we've got subtraction going on here," he added.

Under Gov. John Ashcroft's proposed budget, the UM System would receive no increase in appropriations. At the same time, the system faces rising costs for Social Secu-urity, insurance and the opening of several new buildings. The net result could be a budget that is $500,000 less than this year's budget, Magrath told the board.

Administrators need to study the matter further, and Magrath said he will make a recommendation at the board's next meeting in March. "But there almost definitely will be a tuition increase," he added.

The board approved other fee increases for students. Residential hall fees will increase 5.5 percent in the fall; facilities and activity fees will rise 16.5 percent; and a new student health fee will cost $47.50 a semester.

The board welcomed three new members: John C. "Woody" Cozad, of Kansas City; and James McHugh and Cynthia Thompson, both of St. Louis. Cozad is a 1972 graduate of the School of Law.

Charles J. McClain, Missouri commissioner of higher education, says curators must 'ask the right questions.'

McClain: Voters demanding more quality in education

State leaders and the public alike want assurances that Missouri's higher education system will be improved before they will support a tax increase, says Charles J. McClain, state commissioner of higher education.

"Business and community leaders want to hear about quality and performance, not just cost," McClain told members of the Board of Curators at a meeting Jan. 30 in Jefferson City. "Your single most effective task may be to ask the right questions, such as: How many students are we graduating in fields that are vital to our future? Do our teacher education graduates rank high in national comparisons? How competitive nationally are our graduate programs? What do employers say about our graduates?"

"And then we must ask: What is the evidence? And what data can we use to show that we are meeting our goals?"

McClain told the board that he supports the tax revenue-educational reform package introduced Jan. 24 by state Sen. James Mathewson, D-Sedalia, provided that the reform portion "will assure Missourians that improvements in higher education will occur." The package proposes a variety of tax measures to raise about $490 million a year for education, of which about $294 million would go to higher education. The new money would be tied to reforms, including the requirement of student assessment measures and a plan for distribution of degree programs in relation to the needs of the state, business and industry.

McClain noted that the state's Business and Education Partnership Commission filed a report last month that calls for about $300 million in new annual funds for higher education, as well as a package of reforms. "I stand by their recommendation," he told the curators. "There are some differences between Sen. Mathewson's package and the commission's report, and in the next few months I hope we can work them out."

"We're in a process that can't be rushed. I would urge us to hang together so we can endure this campaign."

McClain said the quality of Missouri's educational system — elementary, secondary and higher education — will continue to be stressed as discussions continue on tax and reform measures. "It used to be that more students and more money alone added up to success," he says. "That may have been fine for the early 1960s, but the 1990s do not lend themselves to that idea."

A moveable feast

Campus Catering serves not only the University, but the Columbia community as well.

For Doug Frankel, catering means exactly that. Not just delivering food, but catering to the customer's request.

Frankel, manager of Campus Catering, says his department's mission is to serve the Columbia community as well as the University. "There is very little we can't do to make your event exactly what you want," Frankel says.

At an open house a couple of weeks ago, more than 100 people passed through an intricate display of the latest offerings from Campus Catering. At a flambe station, cooks demonstrated flaming desserts such as cherries jubilee and bananas foster.

There were tables filled with the different hors d'oeuvres available for catered functions anywhere in the Columbia area. This moveable feast also featured other items on Campus Catering's menu: wedding cake, an ice carving, as well as an assortment of complete dinners — from lobster tail to roast beef — presented under aspic.

"Many people and organizations have catering needs that require capabilities we are uniquely able to meet," Frankel says. By investing in state-of-the-art food service technology, Campus Catering has expanded the services it can offer customers. For instance, two new temperature-controlled transport carts can each carry up to 160 complete dinners at just the right temperature.

The new carts are among the innovations that are making a difference at Campus Catering, says Mark Segobiano, the chef who oversees food preparation. In the past, anyone wanting table service for a party of more than 25 guests might have had to settle for a buffet-style dinner or order hot food that was served cold. "These transport carts, along with our three delivery vehicles, enable Campus Catering to prepare entire meals in the catering kitchen and transport them to the location the customer specifies," Segobiano says.

W.R. Miller

Miller stepping down as dean, will stay to teach

W.R. Miller, dean of education, will step down from that position at the close of the 1991 summer session. He says the timing of the decision is related somewhat to his perception of the well-being of the college.

"The quality of graduate and undergraduate students, faculty and staff and programs is at an all-time high," he says. "Collaborative efforts with other MU schools and colleges, as well as state and local education agencies, are extensive and effective. Alumni involvement in a variety of ways, including financial support, is substantial. And the college has a strategic plan in place to provide programmatic and fiscal stability for the coming decade."

Miller, a member of the faculty for more than 30 years, is not retiring. He plans to continue at MU as a professor of industrial education, and will develop a publication for beginning college teachers that deals with teaching, learning and evaluation. He is completing his fifth year as dean after a 10-year appointment as associate dean and nine years as a department chairman.

"I deeply regret Dean Miller's decision that he feels he must relinquish his duties as dean of education," Chancellor Haskell Monroe says. "He has led his college splendidly, and the University, as well as the entire state, has benefitted richly because of his fine work."

Q&A

Q. Are there any plans to improve the east entrance to campus between Schlundt and Schweitzer halls? There is one low area in particular that is always flooded or muddy.

A. Plans for this area have been identified in the Campus Master Plan for physical improvements, says Phil Shocklee, assistant director of Campus Facilities. Shocklee adds that funding has been requested to correct the low area, along with numerous other sidewalk repairs on campus, but says it is unlikely that the money for these repairs will be received in the near future.

Walter Johnson on Macintosh: "I like it, I like it a lot."

The spreadsheet capabilities of the Mac are fantastic; that to me is very important. The spreadsheet Excel has been and continues to be state-of-the-art.

Another thing that is very important to me is that I got a Mac within two months after they came out, and it is sort of fun to realize that all of my software built to apple specifications is still usable.

The operating system has been continually revised, however Apple is concerned about the investment of the Macintosh user in software and want that investment in value retained for the user. That to me is important.

My software is designed so that I can work on my Mac Plus at home or on a state-of-the-art Mac II. I like that. I like it a lot.

Availability of service is also important to me. On the campus we've got rapid turn-around, high quality of service, and reasonable prices. It's hard to beat that.

Why do people love Macintosh? Ask them.

COMPUTER SPECTRUM

FOR THE RECORD

CLARIFICATION: A story in the Jan. 29 Mizzou Weekly stated that legislation sponsored by state Sen. Jim Mathewson, D-Sedalia, to provide more funding for higher education would require the signature of Gov. John Ashcroft before it could be placed on the ballot for voter approval in November. Mathewson's legislative package, called the "Economic Survival Act of 1991," consists of two bills. One would mandate certain reforms in higher education and would require the governor's signature to become law. The other part of the package is a tax-increase bill that was introduced as a referendum measure. That bill would have to be approved by Missouri voters and, according to the Senate communications office, would not require the governor's signature to go on the ballot.

STAFF RESOLUTION: The Staff Advisory Council endorsed the following resolution at a Jan. 24 council meeting: "Whereas the United States is involved in an allied offensive involving our students, faculty and staff, and being aware that the campus is a community of great diversity reflecting the backgrounds, cultures and religions of many countries, the MU Staff Advisory Council urges respect and understanding for all individuals on campus, and publicly announces its support of those individuals involved in our military efforts."

KEMPER LECTURE: The Enid Jackson Kemper Lecture in International Affairs will be at 3:40 p.m. Feb. 18 in Jesse Auditorium. The speaker will be Kim Dae-Jung, president of the Party for Peace and Democracy in the Republic of Korea. He will speak on "Korea Today: Human Rights, Unification and the Prospects for Democracy." He also will be a panelist for a symposium the next day, "Economic and Political Prospects for Korea and Japan." That event will be at 9 a.m. Feb. 19 in the Memorial Union Auditorium.

GRANT FOR RENOVATION: The National Science Foundation has awarded a $1.45 million grant to the Department of Biochemistry to renovate Schlundt Annex. MU will provide matching funds for the renovations. The annex will be upgraded to house existing programs in plant and animal biochemistry and to provide space for new faculty working on protein structure.

POSITIONS AVAILABLE: Stenographic Services, a temporary secretarial pool to MU departments, is hiring temporary office assistance employees. Qualifications include: the ability to type 50 words per minute with no more than five errors, a knowledge of general office procedures, and a pleasant personality. Some computer experience is helpful but not required. Full-time, permanent MU employees are not eligible. To apply, you must fill out an application in Personnel Services, 130 Heinkel Building, and take a typing test.

OPEN HOUSE: University Hospital will have an open house from 11:30 a.m.-1 p.m. Feb. 11 at its new surgical suite on the third floor. The suite is composed of seven new operating rooms that will handle open heart, vascular, orthopedic, urological and general surgery. Each room also is equipped for laser and microsurgery capabilities. When the project is completed in June, the suite will include a total of 12 new operating rooms.

FREE SCREENINGS: Diabetics concerned about kidney disease may want to visit MU's Renal Laboratory, N403 Medical Center. The lab is offering free urine screenings for adult diabetics between 30 and 65. Diabetics are at risk for kidney disease, and urine tests can detect the disease in its early stages. The lab also offers a free treatment program for those identified at risk by the tests. With questions, call Vicki Knaus, nurse practitioner, at 882-4893.

Perfection on display.

THE IBM 8515 DISPLAY.

When you're looking for the perfect display to complement your IBM Personal System/2, the 8515 is clearly the one you should choose.

VGA NOW. XGA ON DEMAND.

Right now you may only need VGA, but as your needs change so can the 8515. In fact, this display can easily handle picture-perfect high-resolution (1,024 x 768) graphics, either through XGA or an 8514/A Adapter card, depending on what suits your needs best.

QUALITY BY DESIGN.

The 8515 is an affordable 14" display that was designed to be more reliable. It has fewer parts and that leads to fewer problems—it's that simple.

Add to that a striking contrast-enhancing background and you'll experience clarity and color richness like you've never seen.

Plus, you'll also be looking at almost 50% more viewing area in about the same footprint as our popular 12" display.

The IBM 8515 Display: now all the reasons to choose it are perfectly clear.

Find out more. Contact your IBM Authorized Remarketer or marketing representative. For a remarketer near you, call 1 800 IBM-2468, ext. 913.
