Quality at a savings

University's new medical plan offers comprehensive care at a lower cost to employees.

University employees and retirees are receiving detailed information this week on a new managed-care medical insurance plan that offers quality care, and at a lower cost. "We're delighted to be able to offer this package to the campus community," says Jim McGill, UM System vice president for Administrative Affairs. "Not only can employees and retirees count on receiving first-class care, but they will pay less for it — both in monthly premiums and in out-of-pocket expenses — than with our current plan."

The new plan offers three options: a health maintenance organization, with care provided by University Hospital and University Physicians; a point-of-service plan, with care provided by those two groups, along with Boone Hospital Center and a network of Columbia-area physicians; and a catastrophic plan, designed only for those who wish to insure against major-cost illnesses. Packets also will include information on a new prescription drug plan and a new mental health care plan.

As an example of the cost savings, McGill cites the case of an employee, spouse and their children. Currently, with the $250 deductible, that family is paying a premium of $136.58 a month. Under the HMO, they would pay $114.20. Or if they chose the POS, the monthly premium would be $131.40 (For more details, see the chart on Page 2). They would pay $5 per office visit in the HMO, and $15 in the POS. In the case of hospitalization, HMO participants would be covered at no charge; POS participants would have a $150 copayment, then pay 20 percent of the charges after that.

Officials emphasize that one aspect of the plan, that dealing with the Columbia-area physicians who have signed on to provide care under the POS, is still being developed. "New doctors continue to be added to the networks," says Mike Paden, director of Faculty and Staff Benefits. "While there are a limited number of Boone Hospital physicians listed in the current directory, more will be added as the weeks go on."

To find out whether your doctor is a part of the HMO of POS plans, call 1-800-627-0607. GenCare Sanus also will be happy to contact physicians about participation.

Paden points out that the University's current medical insurance plan expires at the end of the year. "Employees and non-Medicare retirees who want coverage with us must sign up for one of the options," he says. "There is no automatic rollover, except for Medicare retirees enrolled in the University's current plan." Enrollment forms are included in the packets, and employees and retirees may enroll anytime between now and Nov. 15. Coverage is good for one year, with the option to continue coverage or change plans after that.

Those with questions are being urged to attend one of several open meetings. The first is scheduled at 8 a.m. Oct. 25 in Jesse Auditorium. (See the complete list below.) Arrangements are being made to offer evening meetings as well; times and places will be announced.

20 to receive awards

MU Alumni Association honors distinguished faculty and alumni.

The MU Alumni Association will present its Distinguished Service Award, Distinguished Faculty Award and 18 Faculty-Alumni Awards at 7 p.m. Oct. 22 at a banquet at the Reynolds Alumni Center.

The Distinguished Service Award will be given to John Kenton Hulston, whose $1.25 million endowment is the largest gift in the School of Law's history. Because of his continued support of quality education at MU, the new law building bears his name. The award, the association's highest honor for an alumnus or alumna, recognizes outstanding service by an individual whose sustained efforts and support have added to the excellence of Mizzou.

Receiving the Distinguished Faculty Award is Bill Bondeson, professor of philosophy and of family and community medicine. This award recognizes a faculty member whose sustained efforts in teaching, research and service have added to the excellence of the University. The award also places special emphasis on the faculty member's relationship with students.

At MU since 1964, Bondeson has been the director of both the Honors College and the special degree program, positions that require substantial one-on-one interaction with students. He is the faculty representative to the alumni association, faculty associate to the provost, the Curators Distinguished Teaching Professor and the director of the University Chamber Music Series.

Faculty-Alumni Awards honor faculty members for their work as teachers, researchers and administrators, and alumni for their professional accomplishments and service to their alma mater. Recipients are pictured above.

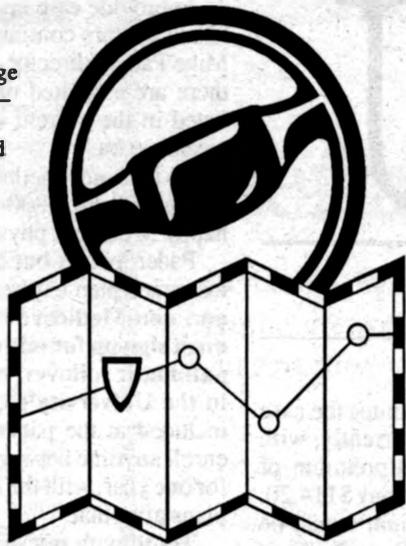

UNIVERSITY GARAGE CONTRACTOR SERVICES

Effective Nov. 1, the University Garage will be operated by a private contractor — Lee Stidham, owner of Lee's Tire Co. in Columbia. The name will not change, and the garage will continue to provide essentially all services now available for official University vehicles.

University Auto Leasing will not be affected by the new contract.

Current IDO blanket orders for servicing department-owned vehicles will not be in effect after Nov. 1. Departments should set up new blanket purchase orders with the new contractor through MU Procurement.

New hours of operation for the University Garage are 7:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. For an appointment, call 882-3251.

W.I. DESCRIPTIONS ARE ON INFORMU

Faculty who advise students can access the writing-intensive course descriptions via INFORMU, the "electronic bulletin board" on MU's mainframe computer, MIZZOU1.

The descriptions are useful in helping students plan their schedules. They include the number of credit hours given for the course, the professor's name and a brief paragraph about the goals of the course and required readings and writings.

Before registration begins Oct. 25, department heads and academic advisers will receive instructions on how to access the course descriptions using INFORMU. With questions, call the Campus Writing Program at 882-4881.

SEMINARS COVER COMPUTER RESOURCES

MU Libraries will present a series of seminars on computerized resources in the next few weeks.

Beginning Oct. 28 and continuing through Nov. 10, the seminars will emphasize new tools such as the Internet, Lexis/Nexis and Statistical Masterfile. The series is designed to help faculty, staff and graduate students with their teaching and research.

Space is limited. For more information, call 882-4692.

Some specialists slow to sign on

Some Columbia area specialists seem reluctant to provide care under the University's new point-of-service plan. But officials point out that more continue to sign up for the networks.

"We are encouraged with our progress in developing a provider network in Columbia, and continue to talk with additional primary care physicians and specialists," says Tom Zorumski, executive director of GenCare Health Systems. "While our experience over the years has been that some physicians tend to be cautious initially about managed care, our network growth clearly indicates that physicians are increasingly satisfied with participation in a managed care network."

In packets sent to University employees and retirees this week, 11 primary care physicians with the Boone Hospital Group are listed. But those represent just the physicians who had signed on by Sept. 24. Since then, an additional 14 doctors have joined the network. They are family practitioners Jeffrey Belden, Mark Loeb, George Price, Carola Westerman, Kenneth Weston and Gary Upton; pediatrician Delia Matias; obstetricians Elizabeth Bartlett, Ross Duff, Robert McDavid, A. Frederick Williams, Lee Trammell and William Trumbrower, and physical medicine and rehabilitation specialist Alexander Lising.

Since GenCare Sanus was established in 1985, the provider network has grown from 600 physicians in the first year to 3,500 today, Zorumski adds.

Chancellor briefs deans on planning process

The University's new strategic planning process, which focuses on "unique niches" within units and how those strengths can be linked with others across campus, has the potential to establish MU as a model university in the United States, Chancellor Charles Kiesler told the Council of Deans Oct. 15.

"The process requires departments to ponder the question, 'How can we be among the very best in what we do, and what will it take to get us there?'" Kiesler said. "Most departments, schools and colleges aren't used to thinking that way. Instead, they're wondering, 'How can we do better than we did last year?' That's not good enough."

"Deans are in a critical position of intellectual leadership in this process. I hope you all will step up and fill that role."

The chancellor said part of his reason for wanting to address the group was to correct some misconceptions that had arisen over the planning process. "There are no deadlines," he said. "We're not expecting you to turn in anything by, say, the first of the year. But if you want additional funding, you will need to make your case."

"Also, we're not requiring lengthy, bureaucratic proposals. One or two pages would be fine."

Niche planning requires faculty to take a significant role, the chancellor said. "I want your best minds to be at work here. Faculty can and will get excited about being drawn into a process that demands we explore new, innovative ways of doing things. That excitement is what separates the great universities from those on the next level. It draws the very best students here and attracts other top-notch faculty members."

Successful niche planning, Kiesler added, will increase productivity, attract research and private dollars, address state and national concerns, and strengthen relationships with state legislators and citizens. "I want the University to become a problem-solver," he said. "When agencies or individuals are struggling with particular concerns, I want them to think, 'Let's check with MU, because they've been successful in finding solutions to problems like this.'" One current example, he added, is the effort by MU's Health Sciences Center and associated units to address rural health issues. "We have a real chance to step out in front on this and become a national leader," Kiesler said.

Niche planning requires each department to conduct its own reallocation process. Identifying some programs as real strengths also indicates the ones that are less productive and could be candidates for reduction or elimination. "For too long, people here have been living life at the margin," the chancellor said. "When financial crises have arisen, it's been unclear what we should do. Niche planning will lead to a longer-term perspective of where we want to go and how we can get there. We will be better prepared for funding shortfalls."

He urged the deans to be "in an active planning mode," and told them, "when you have something exciting, come and see us. We want to hear from you. You can help make MU one of the nation's truly great universities. And that particularly is significant in these days of limited resources."

In other business, the deans: ■ heard a brief report on faculty leaves from John McCormick, interim vice provost for research and dean of the Graduate School. Over the past four years, he said, only 111 faculty members had taken sabbaticals, development leaves or research leaves. Provost Gerald Brouder bemoaned the low number and said MU needs to make a stronger effort in encouraging faculty to take advantage of the leave policy. "We'll review this and see if we can't improve it in some way," he said. "The regeneration of our faculty members is an essential part of the University."

■ were told of a new UM System policy that will allow faculty to employ plus-minus grading if they wish, effective in fall 1994. "It is not required," Brouder emphasized. All UM System campuses must use the same plus-minus scale, which does not allow an A-plus or an F-plus. Brouder noted that a number of questions remain on the topic. "I'm sure there will be more discussion over the next several months," he added.

Y helps variety of folks

With offices in Brady Commons, the University Y is a United Way agency that offers programs to people ranging from children to grandparents.

Julie Alexander took over the position of executive director four months ago and immediately was placed in charge of organizing Camp Mudd, the Y's summer day program for children ages 5-12. Her experience as an MU student volunteer and as a member of the Y board, as well as seven years working with children as a recreation therapist at Charter Hospital, helped to prepare her for the experience. "The camp was a success," she says, "and with donations, we were able to give out 75 scholarships to allow kids to attend."

Other Y projects include the campus chapter of Habitat For Humanity, CommUniversity, the Boone County Tenants Association and Grandsharing.

Habitat For Humanity is designed to make housing affordable to families that otherwise might not have the opportunity of home ownership. Volunteers help raise money, then build homes locally, which are sold at the cost of the materials with a no-interest loan. This year, the organization and several student groups, including more than 30 fraternities and sororities, worked on building a house as part of Homecoming. "We had a house party, raising more than $15,000," says Alexander. "That money turns around and goes toward helping the community."

CommUniversity allows volunteers to teach in an area where they have specialized knowledge. Classes in sign language are currently being taught, and other courses are also available. The classes are open to everyone in the community and are taught at various locations.

The Boone County Tenants Association offers free information and advice, plus a hotline, about tenant-landlord issues. In Grandsharing, volunteers can become friends with elderly residents at the Boone Retirement Center.

The student volunteers number about 20 and play a major role in organizing events. Cindy Beale, a part-time staffer, completes the office.

The Y's programs are detailed in a monthly newsletter. For a copy or for additional information, call 882-1550.

Campaign begins strong

MU's 1993 United Way campaign is off to a great start, organizers say.

Figures from the first report meeting Oct. 13 show that the University has raised $73,928, or 32 percent of its goal of $233,111. That constitutes a 7 percent increase over the first report last year. In addition, 18 percent of faculty and staff have responded thus far, a strong 11 percent increase over last year.

"We're very pleased that so many people have responded to the United Way in a timely fashion," says Meg Jablonsky, one of the campaign's tri-chairs. "The needs that the United Way serves can hit at any time, as demonstrated by the flood this year."

The increase in totals may be due partly to an emphasis on payroll deduction. Faculty and staff are encouraged to donate to the United Way through this process. "Payroll deduction is such an easy way of giving — and whether it's $1 or more, it's all effective in helping the organization," Jablonsky says.

The campaign closes Nov. 5.

Look At Us Now The New Ellis Fischel

Cancer care has changed dramatically over the years and so has Ellis Fischel.

Dr. David Ota from M.D. Anderson Cancer Center brings leadership and vision as our new medical director — and joins a team of more than 25 highly qualified physicians.

is mid-Missouri's largest and most comprehensive early cancer detection program for both men and women. All screenings are performed at one location and personalized to meet individual needs.

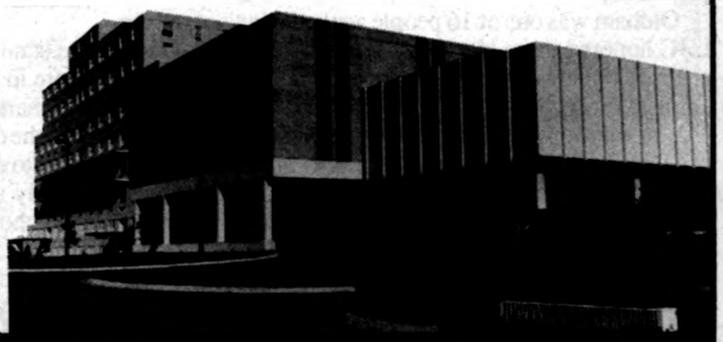

Our new technology is helping Ellis Fischel provide the latest in cancer care and treatment options. And many renovations throughout the cancer center provide a more comfortable environment for patients and visitors.

Designed for people without cancer symptoms, our new Cancer Screening Services

But what hasn't changed is our caring and compassionate staff. We treat the whole person, not just the disease, by offering support groups, individual counseling, rehabilitation, wig fitting, breast prosthesis and cosmetology services. And Ellis Fischel remains the only hospital in Missouri dedicated exclusively to cancer care.

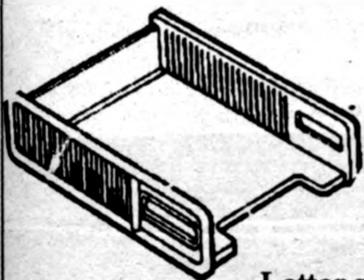

Today, there's a great deal of hope in treating cancer and restoring quality of life to cancer survivors. And Ellis Fischel Cancer Center is leading the way.

MU's Legion of Black Collegians celebrates its 25th anniversary.

Marian Oldham says she was never more surprised than in 1977, when Gov. Joseph Teasdale asked her to be a member of the Board of Curators. Some 30 years before, Oldham, a black woman, had been denied entrance to MU because of her race.

"Certainly, I never thought anything like that would happen," Oldham told more than 300 people assembled for a special Legion of Black Collegians' 25th anniversary convocation Oct. 17 in Jesse Auditorium. Oldham noted that she accepted Teasdale's invitation and went on to serve 8 1/2 years on the board. "But we had racial problems then and we still have racial problems now," she told her audience. "There is a lot of unfinished business out there. Let's all work together so that in the next 25 years, we will have that unfinished business behind us."

Oldham was one of 16 people accepting awards as the LBC honored those black men and women who tried to enter MU between 1935 and 1950, and were denied admission based solely on their race. (See listing above.) The 16 who appeared at the ceremony were among a total of 89 identified by the University. MU is believed to be the first University in the nation that is recognizing those blacks denied admission, which was legal at the time under the country's "separate but equal" law.

Another who was denied admission, Lawrence Nicholson, thanked the University for recognizing the group. "This dramatizes the desire of the University and the state to change," he said. "It is a privilege for me to share in this observation."

Chancellor Charles Kiesler, who presented the awards, said the convocation symbolizes MU's renewed commitment to diversity. He noted that the University is working closely with the Black Alumni Organization, is bolstering scholarship support for black students, and is more actively recruiting black faculty, staff and students. "We are building toward a future in which the injustices of the past are truly in the past," the chancellor said. He declared the applicants honorary alumni, and told them, "We hope you will come back and visit us."

Arvarh Strickland, professor of history and MU's first black faculty member, told the applicants that "your rejection became your motivation." He added: "You began to enter other doors that were open to you, and you became successful in life." KC Morrison, vice provost for minority affairs and faculty development, told them: "Personally, whatever I am, you helped make me that way. And whatever the University is in the corporate sense, you laid the groundwork."

Also addressing the group were Mark Miller, president of the BAO, and Jaso LBC. Miller said a number including Keener Tipping students to MU over the director of Student Finance Battle, Columbia educator students into their homes Aretha Jones, BAO coordinator putting together the special noted that funding for the Chancellor Charles Kiesler

Variety of events mark special Homecoming

While the Oct. 17 convocation was the highlight of the LBC's silver anniversary celebration, it by no means was the only event of the week. LBC members and the campus community celebrated Homecoming at a number of activities put together by the Black Alumni Organization.

Events kicked off Oct. 14 with a multicultural extravaganza in Jesse Auditorium. A total of 25 acts, representing groups ranging from the Indian Students Association to Delta Delta Delta, performed musical selections, readings and dance numbers.

A parade through campus and downtown Columbia opened the festivities Oct. 16, with Norris Stevenson and Mel West serving as grand marshals. The University's first black scholarship football players, they were halfbacks on the 1959 and 1960 Orange Bowl teams. Following the parade, Anita Estell spoke at a Black Alumni Organization brunch at the Black Culture Center. "Racism has never been and will never be an adequate excuse for failure," said Estell, an MU law graduate and vice president of Van Scoyoc Associates, a Washington-based government affairs firm. She told the students: "You can get through this school and do whatever you want to do."

The LBC and Lincoln University gospel choirs sang at Faurot Field before the football game with Oklahoma State — a game the Tigers won, 42-9. Attendance was 36,865. And that evening, the LBC Reunion Choir gave a benefit performance in Jesse Auditorium for the Black Alumni Scholarship Fund.

The significance of the group from Lincoln University coming to MU was not lost on Mark Miller, BAO president. "It used to be that our students would go down to Lincoln for homecoming," Miller said. "Now their students are coming here. I think that's terrific."

of the BAO, and Jason Hill, current president of the Miller said a number of people deserve thanks, including Keener Tippin, who recruited many black students to MU over the years; George Brooks, retired director of Student Financial Aid; and Elliott and Muriel [unclear], Columbia educators who welcomed many black students into their homes. He also praised the work of [unclear] Jones, BAO coordinator who was instrumental in bringing together the special weekend activities. Miller said that funding for the activities came largely from Chancellor Charles Kiesler's office, the Office of the Provost, the Office of the Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs, and the MU Alumni Association.

Mable Grimes, president of the Black Faculty and Staff Organization, gave the benediction, and the Rev. Ladell Flowers gave the invocation and led the LBC reunion choir in two numbers. Columbia Mayor Mary Anne McCollum presented Kiesler with a proclamation in honor of the occasion. "The city of Columbia is not without its problems either, and we're working to correct those as well," McCollum said. "We salute you for honoring those who paved the way for so many others at the University."

University CLUB NEWS

Bring a bunch to our Football Brunch

Regardless of whether you're Cycloning or not on Saturday, Oct. 30th, you may wish to brunch with a bunch of your friends at the Club. It's a good deal: $9.25, inclusive. And inclusive means an almost endless selection from our buffet, along with beverages. Should you wish something to drink with a bit more backbone, the cash bar opens at 10:30 a.m. Brunch starts at 11:00. Music, thanks to Mini Mizzou, starts at 10:45. Again, everyone is welcome. Just call 882-0844 for reservations.

November Birthday Buffet

...a day early

We are creatures of habit. So, if you plan to birthday buffet it with us in November, note that lunch will be served on Wednesday, Nov. 3rd, rather than the usual Thursday. Everything else is the same: unlimited amounts of festive and seasonal food, $6.25 for everything, open to anyone in a celebratory mood. Call 882-0844 by Nov. 1 for reservations.

U Club Luncheon features International view

"Internationalizing the University" will be the topic of John Heyl, Director of the Center for International Programs and Studies and featured speaker at our University Club luncheon scheduled for Tuesday, Nov. 16, at 11:40 a.m. The cost of this provocative hour is, as always, $8.50, inclusive. The luncheon is open to anyone and reservations may be made by calling 882-0844 by 5 p.m. on Friday, Nov. 12.

Guests on Campus...Bring Them to Visit Us Also

Complimentary continental breakfast hours are 7-9 a.m. Monday through Friday. Lunch is 11:30 a.m.-1:30 p.m., Monday through Friday. Dinner is served 5:30-8:30 p.m., Monday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Limited menu available on Tuesday in the Lounge. Our lounge opens at 11 a.m., Monday through Friday and at 4 p.m. on Saturday. For reservations for lunch and dinner, call 882-0844 Monday through Saturday after 8 a.m. Located on the second floor of the Donald W. Reynolds Alumni and Visitors Center.

Our reservation policy... fair, but definite

Like all dining establishments, we do have occasional problems with people making reservations, then not honoring the time reserved or, occasionally, not showing up at all. Our policy is this: we will hold a table up to 15 minutes after the time the reservation has been made. If we have not heard from you indicating a problem, we will cancel your reservation. We will always do our best to accommodate you if you do arrive late, but we cannot guarantee seating.

For your convenience, a new Pub Menu

For those of you who would like to dine early and lightly, we are introducing a Pub Menu. Composed of sandwiches, soups and salads from our regular menu, the Pub fare will be available from 1:30 p.m. till 5:30 p.m. on Mondays, Wednesdays, Thursdays and Fridays and during normal dining hours on Tuesday when the Dining Room is used by the 235 Food Service class. Pub food will be served in the Lounge or, possibly, the Joe Kirkwood Room.

Other menu changes on the way

In the near future, you'll see revisions in our regular lunch and dinner menus. Our seafood entrees will change completely for dinner, along with the introduction of new sauces and a number of new desserts. Nothing drastic, just some touching-up to make our offerings more interesting. Let us know what you think.
